long to release MacDougall who was tied up in the next room. The cops arrested the three would-be snatchers, while the Baron steered MacDougall and me quickly to the outskirts of town.

Then I realized what had taken him so long before. Besides getting the cops he had also had a plane called from Boston in order that we could rush MacDougall to New Haven in time for the game.

MacDougall is so amazed that he can hardly talk, which is probably just as good. Anyhow, we hop right into the plane and streak toward New Haven. Time is fidgeting away. It's almost 2.30 by the time we land and I'm running a temperature of 1.10 plus. Not so the Baron. MacDougall runs for a cab just as soon as his feet get on the ground, and we're right behind him, and finally slither into the bowl on two wheels.

You should hear the cheer that goes up when the crowd sees us heading across the field escorted by a squad of cops. But I don't feel as well as I should because up there on the scoreboard there's a big 20 by Yale and a lousy little 6 by Harvard. MacDougall is rushed to the dressing room and put into a uniform. While he's still dressing, the half ends. Meantime, the Baron and I are heroes. Everyone is clapping us on the back and everybody else is shaking our hands. Turning to the Baron, I says, "Ain't this a swell feeling?" He merely answers, "Great and unselfish souls seek not applause. Virtue is its own reward." For once I ain't got a comeback.

Then the second half starts. By the time it's over I'm hoarse. Why shouldn't I be, when there's $10,000 riding along on that pigs hide stuffed with air. Up comes the last five minutes of the last quarter. Score: Yale, 20; Harvard 19. Little MacDougall grabs a pass out of nowhere, shakes off three tacklers and scores. I faint.

Later, much later, I says to the Baron, "Just think how wonderful it is to be honest. That brought us through today."

Says the Baron, "Rationalization is the resort of puerile minds. Genius needs no extenuation. Therefore, strive not vainly to clothe yourself as what you are not."

I'll be hanged if I know what he meant.

Dorothea Smith Chosen Outing Club President

At the last meeting of the Outing Club Council, Dorothea Smith was named president for the coming year. She is the second girl to hold this office and was preceded by E. C. Bailey '40. The other officers chosen for the year 1940-41 are: Vice-president, R. P. Davis '41; treasurer, C. W. Partridge '42; recording secretary, Frances Abell '42; corresponding secretary, Lucille Clark '42; and membership co-chairmen, Janet Dike '43 and D. V. Collins '41. The new staff became effective in office Wednesday, May 15.

Vermont Freshman Publishes Booklet On Calvin Coolidge

Not all the triumphs of young lives take place in the crowded city markets where people live in luxury from grain; nor at Monte Carlo, where those at roulette stake all to win or lose, and if fortune smiles, settle down in an existence that promises fortune. Some of these triumphs occur on the campus of our University where now and then some timid student brings forth his hidden talents.

It is no small task for a young man, not yet twenty years old, to publish a booklet of his own writings; yet such a booklet, the work of one of our own students, will be ready for the public next week. On June 1, Alfred F. Amee '43 will publish his booklet, Calvin Coolidge, "The Genius of the Average."

Alfred is a freshman in the University, enrolled as a Secondary Education student. As long ago as when he was in his seventh year of grade school, he developed a love for English and literature. He began writing, and throughout his four years in Randolph High School, he was a constant contributor to his school paper. Debating and prize speaking were also in his line, and he never lets a debate or a speaking contest pass without being present to at least listen, if not to take part.

Alfred's booklet, Calvin Coolidge, "The Genius of the Average," is his first real publication. It consists of sixteen copyrighted pages, including besides the essay itself, a full page photo of Coolidge and a piece of free verse which he calls Intimations of a Master. The cover is in green and gold.

In his introductory note to the booklet, Arthur Wallace Peach, Professor of English at Norwich University, writes in part, "Youth often sees clearly where older eyes are confused. Mr. Amee's analysis of a great Vermonter belongs among the interpretations that seek to find for us the true essence in the character of the Vermonter who, in going the long journey from a mountain farm home to the White House, found reality in and gave significance to the American Dream."

Vermont Places Fourth In Intercollegiate Meet

Tufts Wins Meet with Connecticut Second; Nichols Places First in Javelin Throw

By Bob Kenney

The University of Vermont's track and field forces managed to place fourth in a field of nine, in the Eastern Intercollegiates, at Worcester, on Saturday. Tufts College with Walter Hall and Ed Dugger leading the attack, placed first, assuming the championship which was held by Connecticut State.

Competition was keen in every event, however, Tufts had the edge all the way, starting with Hall's victory in the high hurdles and ending with Dugger's triumph in the 220-yard dash. The same story took place in the field events, for Pollard won both the shot and discus and Eddie Dugger leaped 22 feet 2⅛ inches to capture the broad jump.

The two dashes provided a thrill for the fans, for in both races a duel materialized between Gordie Smith of Vermont and Dugger of Tufts. Dugger managed to eke out a win in both events, but each decision was very close.

Davie Stowell running the last and fastest race of his college career, placed a close second to Charlie Rice of Connecticut, who took the event in 1 minute 58⅘ seconds. The same Rice took the mile easily in the comparatively good time of 4 minutes 24⅗ seconds. Freddie Webster of Vermont placed fourth in the two-mile run, which was won by Robbins of Connecticut. After a spurt which carried him from fourth place to first ahead of his teammate Wheaton.

Elmer Nichols of Vermont, surpassing any throw he has ever made, heaved the javelin 174 feet 3 inches to obtain the only Vermont first. In the other field events, Elliot Pearl took second in the hammer, Clarence Akley tied for third in the discus, Johnny Davis tied for second in the pole vault, and Bill Hunter placed fourth in the high jump to complete the Vermont scoring.

Only one record was equalled, this was done by Walter Hall, Tufts hurdler, who ran the 220 lows against a headwind in 24⅘ seconds. Eddie Dugger, Tufts' negro ace was expected to set a new record in the highs, however, he lost his stride on last flight of hurdles and had to content himself with a second, while his teammate Hall won the event.

The summaries:

120-yd. High Hurdles

Won by Hall (TU) second, Dugger (TU); third, Pratt (Col); fourth, Smith (WT). Time, 15 ⅕ sec.

220-yd. Low Hurdles

Tennis Team Bows To Middlebury Men

U. V. M. Netsters Receive 5-4 Defeat

The varsity tennis team lengthened its losing streak over the week-end by absorbing a 5-4 defeat at the hands of the Middlebury College racquet wielders. Previous to this on last Thursday, the Green and Gold netsters were rained out in their match with St. Lawrence, after being on the losing end of a 4-1 count.

In the Middlebury match Vermont won three of the singles matches and one of the doubles.

The summary—Singles:

G. B. Booth '40 (V.) defeated Crawford (M.), 6-4, 7-5.
McDowell (M.) defeated A. R. Wolk '41 (V.), 6-3, 9-7.

S. J. Foti '42 (V.) defeated Sprague (M.), 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.
Haines (M.) defeated A. Clark '40 (V.), 6-1, 6-2.
McDonald (M.) defeated L. F. Pine '41 (V.), 6-4, 6-3.

Doubles:

Crawford and Latham (M.) defeated Booth and Wolk (V.), 6-2, 6-1.
Simpson and Foti (V.) defeated McDowell and Sprague (M.), 6-4, 6-4.
Haines and Petterson (M.) defeated Clark and Pine (V.), 6-1, 6-3.

Kappa Phi Kappa Holds Annual Banquet

The local Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, honorary educational society, recently held its annual banquet at Grayrock Farm. There were about twenty members of the organization present. The dining room was colorfully decorated and a delightful meal was served.

After the meal Prof. B. C. Douglass and Professor Youngert talked on the future of Kappa Phi Kappa and the meaning of Education. Some of the other members offered a few words. The meeting was closed by presenting the Kappa Phi Kappa keys to the newly initiated members.

Last Saturday saw the Vermont trackmen travel to Worcester to the Easterns and saw them lose their undefeated season. Previous to this the Catamount cindermen had been unbeaten in all of their dual meets. . . . Tufts College took the meet, due mainly to the performance of one colored boy named Ed Dugger. The latter took three firsts and a third place for a sum total of 17 points. Dugger is no stranger to us as we remember him from way back in his high school days. At that time not only was he a one-man track team at Medford High in Massachusetts, but he was also All-State in football, playing at end. . . . However, it really was a surprise to us to learn that Dugger defeated Gordie Smith in the century march and in the two-twenty. The times were comparatively slow, too. Considering that Smith had run the hundred in 9.8 only a week before, the 10.2 by Dugger wasn't very impressive—although the fact that a strong head wind was blowing must be taken into consideration.

Charlie Webster's failure to even place in the mile event is no surprise to us. There is no doubt that he was out of his class (considering comparative times). His lack of experience was also a mean handicap to him. . . . Watch Hank Stoddard. He is liable to develop into the best miler that Vermont has had in a long time. The boy has the goods. All he needs is experience and a little polish. When Archie gets to work on his form, the boy will go places. . . . We understand that Freddie Webster ran a sweet two-mile race even if he did only place fourth. . . . A pleasant surprise was Elliot Pearl's second in the hammer throw. . . . Elmer Nichols took the only Vermont first place—in the javelin.

Coming to baseball we find ourselves in a funny predicament. The big games, of course, are the two St. Mike games which will decide the State title. The first game is scheduled for Monday afternoon. Our deadline is Monday morning. So that by the time this sheet comes out, the results of the first game will have been known. So one can well see that this column is up the well-known creek—without the well-known paddle. . . , But we do venture to say that Pesarik will take St. Michael's scalp.... Incidentally this is our final appearance.... Exams start tomorrow and people won't have time to read these pages. So we're quitting while the quitting is good. See you all next fall (?).

Sigma Gamma Holds Picnic at Milton

The Sigma Gamma Sorority held an all-day picnic at the "Cedars" in Milton, Sunday, as guests of Barbara McIntosh '41. The group of twenty left Morrill Hall at 7.15 and went to the camp, where breakfast was served.

Boating, fishing, and softball occupied the morning. After dinner most of the girls went in for milder sports, such as skipping stones. Grace Thompson '42 assisted Barbara McIntosh in planning the affair.

Museum Notes

There are two exhibits of special interest currently showing at the Fleming Museum. One is a collection of old colonial money of all sorts, including many old Vermont coins, in the Perkins room.

The other is a beautiful Japanese carving in the special exhibit case in the entrance hall. A statuette of a Japanese lady holding a baby, it was carved out of a solid elephant's tusk by Hakaritsu of Tokyo, Japan, and is considered his best work.

It would take a student 184 years to complete all the courses offered by the University of Pittsburgh.

Dartmouth Frosh Win In Exciting Game

Making a strong bid to avenge their week-old defeat at the hands of the Dartmouth freshman baseball team, Coach Fuzzy Evans' freshman baseballers lost a close decision by the score of 4-1.

The first game was lost by 14-2 with Dartmouth outhitting the Vermont frosh 12-9. Both teams committed one error. The pitching at this time was wild for Vermont. Alberghini and Hamilton did the pitching.

The second game was a considerable improvement over any of the previous games. The pitching, fielding, etc., all showed considerable improvement.

Short Courses Given At Summer School

Entertainments, Dances, Art Exhibit Planned

The 1940 Summer Session of the University of Vermont will open this year on Monday, July 8, and will continue for six weeks, closing Friday, August 16, according to the Summer Session Bulletin which has just been issued by the office of the Summer Session.

Registration will come first for Summer Session students, July 8-9 in the University gymnasium. The first classes meet Tuesday, July 9. First student assembly will be Wednesday, July 10, in the gymnasium. That evening Dorothy Canfield Fisher of Arlington, widely known American author, will speak.

Conferences or short courses of instruction are being held in several fields of public interest during the six weeks of the Summer Session. An Institute of Professional Relations in Education will be held on July 16 and 17 under the leadership of the State Committee on Professional Relations. A Parent-Teacher Leadership Training Course will take place on July 24, 25, and 26, under the auspices of the Vermont Branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. The theme will be "The Parent-Teacher Association in a Democracy." An Institute of Guidance will bring together specialists in the field of guidance to University faculty and students who are conducting guidance programs in schools. This will be under the chairmanship of Mr. Edwin W. Davis, director of Educational Research and Guidance of the Vermont State Department of Education. This is slated for July 30-31.

The fifth Vermont School of Family Life will meet at the Fleming Museum from August 6 to 9, with the theme "Utilizing Community Resources in Family Living." Community resources to be discussed will be health, recreation, cultural heritage, and religious and spiritual resources.

Demonstration schools, supplementing theory work for teachers studying in the Summer Session, will be held at the Burlington High School, with junior and senior high school courses. Elementary school demonstration teaching will be conducted at the Taft School in Burlington. The Peter Pan Nursery School, also of this city, will furnish demonstration teaching facilities for studying the preschool child.

Frequent educational and recreational trips are scheduled for the Summer Session, and the first is a shore picnic and boat ride on Lake Champlain with a tour of Ausable Chasm across the lake in New York State on July 15. Additional trips throughout the six weeks include several excursions, including trips to Fort Ticonderoga, Lake Placid, and Whiteface Mountain on July 20; expeditions to Mt. Mansfield, the White Mountains and Boston on July 27; and visits to Montreal and Quebec on August 2, and to the World's Fair in New York City, August 9-11.

Five special entertainment events, featuring some of America's foremost performers in music, dramatics, and dancing, will be offered to Summer Session students on five successive Mondays, starting July 15.

Several informal dances at the Southwick Building, a concert by the Burlington Military Band, the Graduate Club dinner, and a recital by the students of vocal music presented at the Southwick Building offer other forms of recreation.

Student actors of the Drama School will give an evening of one-act pays July 25, and a full-length dramatic production will be staged by the Drama School August 12 and 13.

Art students in the advanced painting courses of Barse Miller and Rex Brandt, Californian artists, will exhibit their work in the art gallery of the Fleming Museum August 7-14. A showing of fine and industrial art and art education will appear in the University gymnasium August 13-14.

Bennett C. Douglass, Director of the Summer Session hopes to make this year's program of a higher calibre than ever before.

Mott Leads Frosh To Easy Victory

Win Over St. Johnsbury And Lyndon Institute

Led by their "Galloping Ghost of the Cinder Track" Mott, the freshman track and field squad romped to an easy victory in a triangular meet held at Lyndon Center last Saturday.

The freshmen grasped first place by token of their 75½ points and were followed by St. Johnsbury Academy with 49 points, and Lyndon Institute, the host of the meet, was third with 18½ points.

It was Mott again who provided the punch necessary to start his cohorts on their winning ways. He totaled 22 points, taking three firsts, a tie for first, and a second.

The meet, however, marked the breaking of Mott's consecutive string of victories which up to the last event had stood at 19. It was in the broad jump that a St. Johnsbury man made a magnificent leap in his last try to pass Mott's best by three inches and thereby shoving him down into second position, a strange place for that "super-freshman" this year.

Mott did show his caliber by setting two new records, one in the 120-yard high hurdles, which he ran in 15.4 seconds and the other in the 220-yard low hurdles, which he maneuvered in 24.2 seconds.

This meet set Mott's record for the season at 96 points in twenty events, by virtue of seventeen firsts, two ties for firsts, and one second.

Not to be outdone by their teammates, two other freshmen performed their jobs very well. Harry Parker took a first in the shot and discus and a second in the hundred, thereby totaling 13 points, and Buttles took a first in the mile run and the javelin throw to bring his day's average to 10 points.

By virtue of their placing in every event, the frosh brought good news to Coach Roy Wietz and also gave Coach Post something to reflect on during the summer months.

Pre-Med News

Great enthusiasm has been shown by the Pre-Medical students this year and unusual progress has been made in the formation of their society. Recently an executive board composed of John Houpis '41, Don Gearing '41 and J. Diforia '41 was appointed, whose purpose is to serve as a connecting link between the outgoing and the new Pre-Meds.

Plans are already under way for a "bigger and better" society next year. Representatives will be appointed from each class to assist this executive board.

Many worthwhile meetings with inspiring and enthusiasic speakers have been held. A Pre-Med. Bulletin has been published twice a month for the last three months. Space has been provided for a bulletin board in Science Hall, especially for important notices of interest to those aspiring to the goal of Medical College. Dean Kemp's encouraging words have proved to be a great stimulant to medical aspirants. The society itself has served to unite many students having common interests and aspirations. Realization of the qualifications and responsibilities of this profession have become more clear in the minds of these students.

The officers of this society, as well as the members are seeking to make this group more vital and urge all Pre-Med. students to join and aid for the attainment of this goal in the coming year.

Professor Kennan To Leave Vermont

Accepts Fine Position As Executive Secretary

The University News Office announces the resignation from the University faculty of Richard B. Kennan, assistant professor of education. Professor Kennan will leave Burlington in June to accept a better, full-time position as executive secretary of the Maine Teachers' Association. His new home will be in Augusta, Me.

Professor Kennan is well qualified to perform the new duties which lie before him. After receiving his Bachelor's degrees from Clark University and his Master's and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia, he served as instructor and principal in elementary and secondary schools in Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New Jersey. Three years ago, he resigned as superintendent of schools in Georgetown, Del., to accept his present position on the University of Vermont faculty.

Concerning the work of his new position, which includes professional leadership, representing the teachers in the Maine Legislature, and the publication of a professional teachers' magazine, the Bangor Daily News says, in part, "Professor Kennan faces as important a task as has descended on the shoulders of one Maine official. They must be broad and capable shoulders to sustain it. The thousands of Maine teachers, through him, will make a deeper impression than ever before on educational policies. And if there should be a new program, developed step by step, by his guidance, it will make reading of real significance."

And so, after three years of meritorious service, Professor Kennan leaves the University of Vermont, taking with him the admiration and love and respect of all who know him.

A. J. Taggart To Head Civil Engineer Society

A. S. C. E. held their annual elections last week. A. J. Taggart '41 was elected president; H. Beauchemin '41, vice-president; O. R. Clark '42, secretary-treasurer; K. C. Holden '42, publicity chairman. Following the election Dean Eckhard gave a short talk.

Flower Show Held

Friday afternoon, the Alpha Chis held their fourth annual Flower Show at their house.

The flowers were divided into four groups:

A—Wild flowers.
B—Garden flowers.
C—Shrubs.
D—Miniatures.

Prizes were given in each class, the entries being judged on arrangement and balance, originality, and suitability.

The judges of the many attractive displays were Dean Harris, Miss Helen Nichols and Miss Margaret Whiting.

Tea was served, Mrs. E. E. Lineken pouring.

Methodist Group Holds Banquet

H. E. Thurber Elected Next Year's President

The Methodist College Group held its seventh annual banquet at the parsonage last evening with an attendance of about forty. Gertrude Burbank '40 was toastmistress.

R. I. Pestle '43 played a violin solo; Marjorie Smith '43 sang a solo; and Beth Lund '43 rendered a piano solo. Miss Burbank told an anecdote on the "Value of a College Education."

Evelyn Fuller '41 gave the history of the organization and F. P. Spaulding read the will. A prophecy was read by P. C. Rand, and Miss Burbank read parts of last year's diary. Appreciation for the work done by Mrs. Spaulding, Mrs. Holland and Doctor Reid was expressed.

The officers for the coming year are: President, H. E. Thurber '43; vice-president, Nena Kren; secretary and treasurer, D. P. Dana '42; entertainment committee, C. A. Wilmot '42 and Barbara McIntosh '41; publicity chairman, Grace Thompson '42; devotional committee, Kathleen Benson '43 and C. A. Webster '42; refreshment committee, Ada Selleck, Beth Lund and Udell Ainsworth, all of the class of '43; music chairman, Marjorie Smith '43; and speaker committee, F. P. Spaulding and Mildred McRae '42.

Katherine Ward '42 and Mildred McRae were in charge of the banquet.

There are 160 college cooperatives doing an annual business of $2,700,000.

Home Economics Club Elects Kay LeBaron

Monday, May 20, new officers were elected for the Home Ec Club as follows: President, Kay LeBaron; vice-president, Barbara Gallagher; secretary, Kay Kyle; treasurer, Joyce Kenyon; chairman of program committee, Lucille Clark and chairman of social committee, Madeline Greaves. A short initiation and business meeting were held after the mass meeting at Southwick, Monday evening.

Dancing Class Holds Semi-formal Party

The dancing class' semi-formal, held last Friday night, at Southwick, was very successful. The ballroom was beautifully arranged with flowers and a fire in the fireplace. To show their appreciation the members of the dancing class presented gifts to Mrs. Bickford, Miss Betty Gordon, Miss Jeanne Vogler, and Mr. Jerry Katz for their faithful work during the past year. The dancing class also appreciates all of the work done by the members of the various committees in charge of the party. Delicious punch and cookies were served.

Art News

The following alumni of the University of Vermont are members of the Northern Vermont Artists and have contributed to the paintings of the artists now on display at the Fleming Museum until May 28: Grace A. Webb '13, Francis Colburn '34, Everett H. Bridgman '06, Phyllis Edlund '31, Ronald Slayton '39, Chester M. Way '22, Dr. J. M. Blake 1898, Marion Guild '38.

The applied art class of Mrs. Mills has just completed making some articles of glass and also some articles of stenciled felt.

Some of the students in art are planning posters for the U. V. M. Summer School recreation program, which consists of excursions, dances, etc.

On Tuesday, May 14, the outdoor sketching group held its class on the broad lawn of Judge Cowles estate. Some sketching was accomplished but because of the springtime atmosphere, including the lovely flowers, lawn and view of the lake, much fun was realized also.

Class of 1915 Presents Late President's Portrait

Prof. Leon W. Dean Presents Portrait Painted by Former President's Daughter

At the alumni banquet on Saturday, June 8, Prof. Leon W. Dean of the class of '15 presented a portrait of the late President Guy Potter Benton to the University. The portrait was painted by President Benton's daughter, Helen Benton Minnich, and was a gift to the University from her. The following is Professor Dean's presentation speech:

Five years ago, on the occasion of our twentieth reunion, the class of 1915 presented the University with the flagpole on Centennial Field in tribute to those members of our class who gave their lives in the first World War. We were hopeful that the suggestion for class reunion gifts might be adopted by other classes. This year, on the occasion of our twenty-fifth reunion, we take pleasure, satisfaction and pride in presenting another class gift—an informal portrait of the twelfth president of this institution—President Guy Potter Benton. Such a gift comes appropriately from this class as our coming to the University was coincidental with his, making us peculiarly his class.

President Benton served as president of the University of Vermont for about eight years. He was the organizer who introduced the new order on which the University has continued to develop. Under his administration came the change from the old concept and conduct of education to the new. He was our distinguished war president, spending nearly two years overseas and culminating his valuable services to the Allies as Educational Director for the Army of Occupation in Germany.

We are particularly pleased and proud that the portrait of him which we are presenting today could have been done by his daughter, our classmate, whom we knew as Helen Benton, now Helen Benton Minnich. She writes:

> "In the name of my fellow members of the class of 1915 I desire to present to the University of Vermont this portrait of my father, Guy Potter Benton, its war-time president, as a salute to that memorable day twenty-five years ago, when we received our diplomas from his hand."

To the University of Vermont I now, in behalf of the class of 1915, present the portrait, requesting for it the consideration and honor that are its due.

Five Receive Honorary Degrees

Five honorary degrees were conferred Monday, June 10, by the University of Vermont at the exercises of the University's 136th Commencement. Recipients of honorary degrees were: Ozias Danforth Mathewson, principal of Lyndon Institute at Lyndon Center, Vt., who received a Doctor of Education degree; the Rev. Robert Leonard Tucker of Columbus, Ohio, Baccalaureate preacher at the University this year, receiving a Doctor of Divinity degree; Prof. Bertha Mary Terrill, head of the Home Economics Department at the University of Vermont, who retired at the close of this college year, Doctor of Science in Home Economics; John Godfrey Saxe, lawyer, of New York City, this year's Commencement speaker, Doctor of Laws; and Fred Tarbell Field, jurist, of Newton, Mass., Doctor of Laws.

During February, 1940, a West Virginia University librarian discovered, in checking out a book, that it had been used last in May, 1901.

Dr. Tucker Urges Graduates to Work

Ohio Pastor Decries Habit of Wasting Time

"This Persistent Habit of Majoring in Minors" was the theme of the Rev. Dr. Robert Leonard Tucker's baccalaureate sermon to the class of 1940. The Columbus, Ohio pastor decried the all-too-common modern practice of wasting time on non-essential details.

Before the assembled faculty, alumni, and members of the senior class in the Ira Allen Chapel, Doctor Tucker stated that a man can be happy even in these troubled times if he devotes wholeheartedly his attention and energies to some particular, worth-while ideal. He begged the graduating class to pick for themselves a soul-satisfying goal and to follow it with persistence and conviction. He added that as citizens of this country should aid in the movement towards re-establishing our thinking upon a rational basis, as opposed to the present emotional thought.

Prof. W. G. Kirby directed the choir during the service, Miriam Natilee Marston was the organist. The Rev. Evan Thomas served as chaplain; Prof. L. S. Rowell, marshal; Prof. G. G. Groat, faculty marshal; and the class marshals were Philip G. Merriam and Peter E. Patch, both of the class of '40.

Vermont Gives 42 Masters Degrees

Forty-two, a record number, received masters degrees at the University of Vermont Commencement, including fourteen who took Master of Arts degrees; twelve taking Master of Science degrees, and sixteen receiving the Master of Education degrees. This year's forty-two receivers of diplomas from the University's growing graduate division topped last year's figures of thirty-nine, the largest group of masters graduates up to that time.

Taking Master of Arts degrees were: In economics, Roland J. Delfausse, Ph.B., Vermont, 1935; in education, Loren O. Bishop, B.S., Vermont, 1939; Mary S. Carkin, A.B., Wheaton, 1936; Elmer L. Nicholson, B.S., Vermont, 1938; W. Dustin White, B.S., Vermont, 1935; Marion H. Witters, Ph.B., Vermont, 1924; in English, Elizabeth V. Davis, A.B., Goucher, 1923; Jeanne N. Dennis, Ph.B., Vermont, 1939; Dorothy B. Holmes, A. B., Vermont, 1938; Mary C. Waterman, A.B., Smith, 1937; in history, Arthur P. Silvester, B.S., Vermont, 1939; in mathematics, Charles E. Harmon, B.S., Vermont, 1939; Harriette L. Riddell, B. S., Vermont, 1939; in political science; Edward Jacobson, Ph.B., Vermont, 1939.

Taking Master of Science degrees were: In agricultural economics, Lorne T. Sonley, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College, 1939; in bio-chemistry, Paul F. Fenton, B.S., University of Rochester, 1938; in chemistry, Theis E. Aitken, B.S., Vermont, 1938; in cytology, John D. Dodd, B.S., New York State College of Forestry; in dairy husbandry, Robert Jenness, B.S., University of New Hampshire, 1938; Joseph G. Leeder, B.S., Ohio State University, 1938; Edwin J. Weatherby, B.S., Cornell, 1938; Hezekiah G.

Graduates and Friends Hear John G. Saxe Warn Against Totalitarian Ideas

Declaring that the war today was one of ideas of Totalitarianism versus Democracy, John Godfrey Saxe, counsel for Columbia University, told the 299 graduates and their friends of Vermont that the universities of our nation must take the lead in the enlightment of guidance. The eminent New York lawyer also urged that the American government be decentralized and that the democratic ideals be more widely spread in the face of the ever-increasing totalitarianism.

Mr. Saxe, upon whom the University conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws at its Commencement, warned his audience that the ideas sown on foreign soil are now held by many of "the best citizens."

"The Greater Importance of Our Universities in These Critical Days" was the title of the commencement orator's address in which he made the following statements.

Two Concepts of Government

"In all times, throughout all discussions of government, two different concepts of government have existed—one is compulsion. It was once called the Prussian System—more recently, the Totalitarian State. The other is Liberty. It is exemplified by our democracies.

"These two ideas of government have never been reconciled and they are irreconcilable. These Totalitarian States now seek to rule supreme and to impose their false ideas by ruthless force of conquest on the entire world.

"In other countries, including our democracies, earlier generations achieved freedom, but government has continually sought new power and greater control and free men must forever marshal their intellectual forces to preserve the blessings of Liberty.

"In times such as these, the importance of the American universities cannot be exaggerated. Their service is just as much a public service as that of the government. Indeed, America owes its greatest prestige to this public service of its educational and other benevolent institutions.

Institutions Must Teach Rights

"If American prestige is to be maintained and to be increased, we must rely firstly and foremostly on these institutions to teach the inalienable rights of free men.

"It is our great universities—such as the University of Vermont—which must fit your youth for their great venture. It is on this fine body of educated men and women that we must rely for our unswerving optimism for the future of our country.

"We, in this country, have every reason to be optimistic. We possess more fully the blessings of liberty than any other democracy in the world."

Mr. Saxe concluded his remarks by stating that all Americans must earnestly try to protect "the unbounded sphere of historic and inherited rights and privileges which constitute the Field of Liberty."

A record-breaking graduating class numbering 299, including degrees in course, masters degrees and medical degrees, received diplomas at the 136th Commencement of the University of Vermont, held in the University gymnasium annex this morning. John Godfrey Saxe, New York City attorney, who is the grandson of the famous Vermont poet of the same name, delivered the Commencement address. Prizes and scholarships were awarded to outstanding students. Five honorary degrees were conferred, with citations by Prof. Raymond A. Hall of the University English department. Music was by the University Orchestra, conducted by William G. Kirby, who has acted as head of the music department this year.

The biggest graduating class in the University's history surpassed its predecessors in almost all departments, with more undergraduates receiving bachelors degrees, more graduate students taking masters degrees, and more men earning commissions in the United States Army Reserves. Two hundred and twenty-three degrees in course, forty-one masters degrees and thirty-six degrees of doctor of medicine were conferred. Theresa O. Weiss of North Bergen, N. J., took two degrees. Forty-eight men received commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps of the United States Army. Of this number, twenty-two from the medical graduating class were commissioned as first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve, and twenty-six from the academic graduating class were commissioned as second lieutenants in the Infantry Reserves. Two more men will be commissioned as second lieutenants when they complete their summer military camp requirements.

Commencement Day started with a meeting of the University Trustees in the Billings Library at 8.30 a.m. Seniors, faculty and alumni joined in the academic procession, winding across the University campus to the gymnasium annex where Commencement exercises opened at 10.00 a.m. Following the close of the ceremonies, a luncheon for University Trustees and invited guests was held at Robinson Hall, one of the women's dormitories.

Phi Beta Kappa Initiates Twelve

Twelve new members of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary society for high ranking students, recruited from the class of 1940, were initiated Saturday, June 8, at the University of Vermont following their election by the University chapter. Ten members of the graduating class elected last December bring this year's total of new members to twenty-two. Election to Phi Beta Kappa follows the achievement of an unusually high standing in four years of college study.

The newly initiated Phi Beta Kappas are Heath K. Riggs, Richmond; Ruth H. Williams, Jericho; Elizabeth L. Myers, Burlington; Elizabeth E. Taylor, Burlington; John E. Thayer, Burlington; Paul C. Jenks, Burlington; Jean O. Butler, Burlington; Reid H. Leonard, Derby; Helen P. Towne, Milton; Justus B. Wheeler, Morrisville; Doris C. Kinsley, Montpelier; Herman Goodman, Hartford, Conn.

Elected to Phi Beta Kappa last December were Louis B. Zambon, South Ryegate; Ethyle R. Wolfe, Burlington; Jean E. Brehmer, Rutland; Lucien D. Paquette, Craftsbury; Mary C. Nelson, Woodstock; Mrs. Alta Plumb Slack, Springfield; Mrs. Marcelyn Heath Clark, South Burlington; Laura C. Dustan, Craftsbury Common; Harold Moskovitz, Burlington; Allan Y. Wolinsky, West Rutland.

Mortar Board Entertains

Margaret Crowley '41 was general chairman of the Mortar Board breakfast held at Southwick, Sunday, June 9, at 9.00 a.m. Shirley Gray '41 was in charge of the food, and the invitations were taken care of by G. Louise Mann '41. Elizabeth Gurney '41 acted as toastmistress.

There were several speakers on the program; among them were Jean Butler '40, president of this year's Mortar Board; Margaret Crowley of next year's Mortar Board; Dean Simpson and Mrs. Chester Way of Burlington.

The Class of 1940

The University of Vermont gave degrees to two hundred and ninety-nine last Monday in the one hundred and thirty-sixth Commencement at our University. These graduates go into a world torn by a horrible war that is rapidly involving increasing numbers of people. Although the chaos in the world they are now to face has made many things lose their value, this chaos has made more and more evident the great inestimable value of the freedom that we, as Americans, enjoy.

This year's graduates must be prepared to prove that the old ways of freedom can be translated into new terms without the loss of essentials. The proof must not merely be in words but in daily living, in working, in voting, in an interest in citizenship which the older generation has too often lacked.

This is a challenging task about which the graduate may rise and inquire, is it a job and will it pay enough to live on? The answer is a hard one to find. We hazard the opinion, however, that worklessness will soon be less a problem than it has been, and that willing hands and eager brain will find employment. For plainly we are now facing a call for the marshalling of forces—for peace, if possible—in which the hindrances to the full use of our human and our material resources will disappear.

It is a dangerous time in which to be living, but an exciting and a marvelous one. It is a time when every day will bring a new challenge to every citizen of our country and especially to those, the million and more new graduates in America. For them, the world will be what they make it, for their parents can offer them only peace—perhaps for a time—but not security.

This year's graduating class from our University have left many fine examples behind them which will furnish their followers with high goals toward which to aim. The class took honors in many and varied fields. Among the members of the class of '40 were scholars, athletes, writers, and a large number of students who might well be called "all-around leaders." This class like its predecessors has left a special gap in the undergraduate body of our University. With the members of the Class of '40, we feel, go the thoughts of many of the undergraduates who will watch with interest their careers.

We think that the following letter to the Class of '40 which Mr. Robert L. Duffus, noted writer for the New York Times, wrote for this editorial is excellent counsel and a most optimistic viewpoint for the Class of '40.

"Every age is an age of youth. This age is more so than most others. The adult world doesn't promise the college graduate a job. It would be foolish, in view of continuing unemployment, to do so. Yet I do believe there is a place in the world for every college graduate, and every young person, who will bring to the unparalleled problems of this generation a willingness to find and face the truth, a tolerance toward other persons, races, religions and ideas, and a determination to play some part in making the inevitable changes that are ahead peaceful, orderly and just. You young people are needed—desperately needed, if only you can bring a sane idealism into a situation where sanity and idealism are too seldom to be found under the same thatch. I think you will eventually find jobs but what one hopes most for you is that you will find something better—your own creative work to do, in Vermont or outside it, with your hands or with your heads, or, preferably, both. But please do keep your sense of proportion, your hospitality to ideas, your sense of pity and your sense of humor. You will need them all."

Conference Hears Prof. Dykhuizen

U. V. M. Philosopher Talks on Agriculture

Prof. George Dykhuizen of the philosophy department here at U. V. M. recently attended a conference at Massachusetts

PROF. GEORGE DYKHUIZEN

State College in Amherst, Mass., where he spoke on the Social Philosophy of Agriculture.

The conference, at which delegates from all parts of Massachusetts were in attendance, was conducted under the auspices of the United States Department of Agriculture. Professor Dykhuizen has worked with this organization in studying a number of problems of farmers and has attended several similar conferences, going as far as Illinois and Iowa.

A booklet on "The Philosophy of Soil Conservation," written by Professor Dykhuizen and published by the University of Vermont Extension Service, has been widely circulated, and a second booklet is being published by the government printing department in Washington.

Architects Show Final Plans For New Building

Final drawings and specifications for the new $1,250,000 building to be erected by the University of Vermont have been submitted by the New York architects, McKim, Mead and White, and have been approved by the Board of Trustees of the University. The building committee of the Board of Trustees is now ready to receive bids for the construction of the building. Separate bids for the general construction work and for the mechanical work to be done in the building are requested.

This $1,250,000 building will be the largest building on the campus and will be one of the largest and most up-to-date college buildings among New England colleges.

This memorial building will be situated at the corner of South Prospect and College Streets, replacing the music building, Campus House, and the residence of Dr. F. K. Jackson, thus the building will have a total frontage of 264 feet and a depth of 190 feet.

The architects who have been engaged to design the building are McKim, Mead, and White of New York. These are the same architects who designed the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, Ira Allen Chapel, Southwick Memorial and Slade Hall. The architects will design the building in a similar manner as the previous mentioned buildings, thus it will be of Colonial type architecture, with brick exterior and stone base, portico and trim.

Fundamentally, the edifice will be used as an administrative building, but its five floors will house many correlated activities. The building will house a recreational center for men supplementing the recreational center for women at Southwick, as well as electrical and mechanical engineering laboratories with research facilities and a 75,000 volume library.

A cafeteria, seating 500 persons will be installed which will be available for conferences to be held at the University. There will also be extensive faculty dining and lounging rooms. One room is to be specially furnished and designed and is to be known as the Waterman Memorial room. A dial telephone system with a central switchboard covering the whole campus will be installed in the building.

In the basement of this five story building will be the boiler room with two 150-horsepower water tube boilers stoker fired, and a smaller boiler, oil fired for summer use, also there will be the electrical and mechanical engineering laboratories, to be newly equipped with the most modern apparatus and machinery. Four bowling alleys, a workshop and various service rooms completes the plan of the basement.

The first floor will feature the student recreational activities where numerous game rooms and lounges will be placed. The giant cafeteria will also be centered on this floor as well as the elaborate kitchen and refrigeration rooms which are to be used for instructional purposes for the home economics students. The University store, various service departments, and offices for the dietitian, chief chef, building engineer, and janitors will also be stationed on the first floor.

Administration rooms will take most of the second floor as this floor will contain extensive offices and suites for the various departments of the college such as the president and his staff, the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, administration department, the Alumni Council, the university news office, and many other departments. This floor will also contain an archive room housing the historical treasures of the university, a group of conference and committee rooms and the beautiful Waterman Memorial room which will be in the form of a rectangle with a semi-circular end wall and which will serve as a meeting room for the board of trustees.

The third floor of the building will be devoted largely for teaching, with emphasis on advanced study and research. The facilities of this floor will include the 75,000 volume library with twenty private study booths, reading rooms, department offices, seminar rooms, a large lecture room and a fully-equipped psychology laboratory.

On the fourth floor will be a meeting room and dining room for the faculty, lounging, reading and game rooms, with enclosed and open air porches overlooking Lake Champlain. Adjoining the faculty rooms will be five rooms with baths for special guests. In the wings will be drafting rooms, machine design rooms, engineering offices, a blue print room, and a special laboratory for instruction in electrical communication and electronics.

This latest addition to the growing University of Vermont campus will have many new unique features; among them being the complete telephone system connecting all parts of the campus; the elegant donor's room with its distinctive features which are to be carried up through the library and faculty rooms; the archive room, where valuable old books and manuscripts and other historic items of the University will be kept and displayed; its photostat dark room; its psychological laboratory; the twenty correls for individual study in the two-stack library; its specially equipped laboratory for undergraduate and research studies in electronics; its numerous vaults and other fireproof safeguards; its stenographic and information services; its modern mechanical devices; its spacious corridors, lobbies and display cases; its soda fountain and other adjuncts to its dining and store service.

In addition to its initial $1,250,000 construction cost, substantial amounts are available for its equipment and endowment, making it one of the largest, best appointed, most modern educational units in New England. Originally the college trustees had intended to raise a $1,000,000 structure instead of the $1,250,000 proposed one, but improved market conditions have added approximately twenty-fice per cent to the value of the securities left to the University by the late Senator Charles W. Waterman and have permitted the trustees to revise the original for the erection of the new building. Most of the securities are stock from the National City Bank of New York and Great Western Sugar Company.

The Waterman building, containing 2,200,000 cubic feet of space, will be the largest structure on the University of Vermont campus. Three buildings will be razed on the corner site which it is to occupy. Of fireproof construction, built in the form of a main section with dual wings, it will set back over thirty feet from the two streets on which it is located, with attractive grading and terracing. It will have a parking lot 200 feet by 150 feet. Bee-line walks, connecting with other major buildings, will knit it into the campus scheme.

The new building will relieve the pressure on several other college buildings, releasing space for the expansion of their own activities. Among those to benefit will be the medical college, engineering and agricultural buildings, the Williams Science Hall, Billings Library and Old Mill.

The medical building and engineering departments will derive much benefit out of this building. Much-needed laboratory and research space will be provided in the medical college building as soon as the University's administrative and other offices are moved into the new memorial. Incidental to the erection of the new building, which will house many advanced engineering features, the present engineering building, with which it will cooperate, is undergoing extensive alterations. Its civil and mechanical engineering laboratories are being remodelled and modernized and new equipment is being added.

VALUABLE HOMES LEFT TO U. V. M.

Two important pieces of Burlington residential property have recently been acquired through gift by the University of Vermont.

All but a fraction of the estate of the late Mrs. Robert Roberts, widow of the Hon. Robert Roberts, long a trustee of the University, has been left unconditionally to the University. The bequest, which will be known as the Mrs. Edward Lyman and Mrs. Robert Roberts fund, includes valuable residential property on South Willard St. The full amount in which the University will benefit will not be known until after an inventory of the estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham have made a gift of their spacious colonial home and grounds, also on South Willard St., to the University. As with the Roberts property, the gift is unconditional. The property houses one of the prized art collections of the country and could readily be converted into a University art center. Mr. and Mrs. Winterbotham will continue to make it their home as long as they wish, but the gift will eventually provide the University with the use of one of the choicest properties in the city. It adjoins the college-owned residence occupied by Pres. and Mrs. Guy W. Bailey, and the two properties have a continuous frontage of approximately 500 feet on South Willard St. and 390 feet on Main St.

Advice Fo' Girls

Spring brings with her a thousand strange designs
And reckless dreams beyond the farthest reach,
And when, if none come true, no cause for sighs
Since after all a girl can always teach!

Students Honored at 136th Commencement

Many Students Receive Coveted Vermont Prizes

Prizes and awards went to outstanding students in many lines of study and in all four colleges at the University of Vermont at the exercises of the 136th Commencement.

In the Medical College, two of this year's graduates were named winners of the Carbee Prize for showing the greatest proficiency in the subject of obstetrics. They are John P. Magner, West Rutland, and Frederick W. Timmerman, Morrisville. The Woodbury prizes in medicine went to Lewis W. Barton, Lexington, Mass., for showing the greatest proficiency in clinical work in the senior year, and to Maurice Traunstein, Jr., Allston, Mass., for having the highest standing for two years of medical work.

Reid H. Leonard, Derby, won the Henry Edmund Seymour Prize for original research in horticulture; John S. Whitworth, Warren, the George H. Walker Dairy Prize, for conspicuous merit in dairy husbandry and for character; Florence I. Wade, East Dorset, the Elwin L. Ingalls 4-H Prize for outstanding merit in 4-H Club work, character and scholarship; Evelyn M. Fuller, Chester, the Thomas Bradlee Prize, for high scholarship and character; Robert B. Smith, Essex Junction, the A. Atwater Kent Prize in electrical engineering for progress in judgment, development of personality, and promise of success; Louis B. Zambon, South Ryegate, the Edmund F. Little cup, for excellence in mechanic arts; Jean O. Butler, Burlington, the University of Vermont French Fellowship; Jean M. Evans, Burlington, the German Literary Prize, awarded by the Goethe Lodge of Burlington for general excellence in German; Carl H. Schofield, St. Albans, the Fred T. Kidder medal, awarded for character, scholarship and leadership; Carl H. Schofield, the Russell O. Sunderland Memorial Trophy, awarded for qualities of character, leadership and persistence in overcoming obstacles; Gordon L. Smith, South Ryegate, the Wasson Athletic Prize, for scholarship and athletic attainment; sharing the Athletic Council Managerial Prize, awarded to that major sport manager deemed most proficient, were Richard W. Robinson, Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Carl H. Schofield, St. Albans.

Women receiving the Edward Page Butler Debating Prizes for proficiency in debate were Gertrude I. Johnston, Barre, first; Eleanor Brody, Brooklyn, N. Y., second, and Gwendolyn M. Blanchard, Newport, third. The Robert Lawrence debating prizes were awarded to Arnold H. Becker, Burlington, first; Julius G. Cohen, Burlington, second; and Harold A. Durfee, North Bennington, third. Judith Perry, Barre, won the Kirby Flower Smith Latin Prize, awarded to the student having the highest standing in second year Latin.

Honor Graduate from the department of military science and tactics was Justus B. Wheeler, Morrisville, and winner of the Loyal Legion Sabre, Richard M. Story, Jr., Yonkers, N. Y.

Class History

MARY COBB NELSON

On September 16, 1936, the 374 members of the entering class at the University of Vermont felt very important, for on that day, the opening exercises of the college were held for the express purpose of welcoming them. Many of us who are ready to leave college today, remember the inspiring address given by President Bailey when he talked of the great highway of life, and though we started college alone, we must meet it with faith and courage.

In its infancy, the class of 1940 started off to show its fighting spirit by winning the traditional fountain fight with the sophomores. The record in the CYNIC states that 1940 won the cane rush, too, and I assume that the hose fight resulted in the washing away of the sophomores.

By mid-years we were pretty well oriented but, of course, some had not been successfully introduced to the academic side of college, and there was the usual thinning in the ranks. However, most of us came through with flying colors, and 1940 had a good representation on the Dean's List.

Kake Walk claimed our attention immediately. Our very first one, which is always the most thrilling. After that we felt much more important, and when September rolled around again, we, too, could take part in showing the freshmen what it was like to be really collegiate. This we proceeded to do by winning the fountain fight, an event which upset all tradition. This is only one evidence of our remarkable career. Our sophomore year wasn't too exciting, as attention always centers on the freshmen, but later our dance, the Sophomore Hop, was held, a glorious affair no doubt, which most of us in all probability did not attend. With the end of the year approaching, we realized rather soberly that half our college days were over. In the spring of that year Huey Gasperini was chosen to edit the 1940 Ariel, and Lee Whitcomb was elected business manager. Our record of college days is an excellent book, and through its pages we may live again the happiest years of our lives.

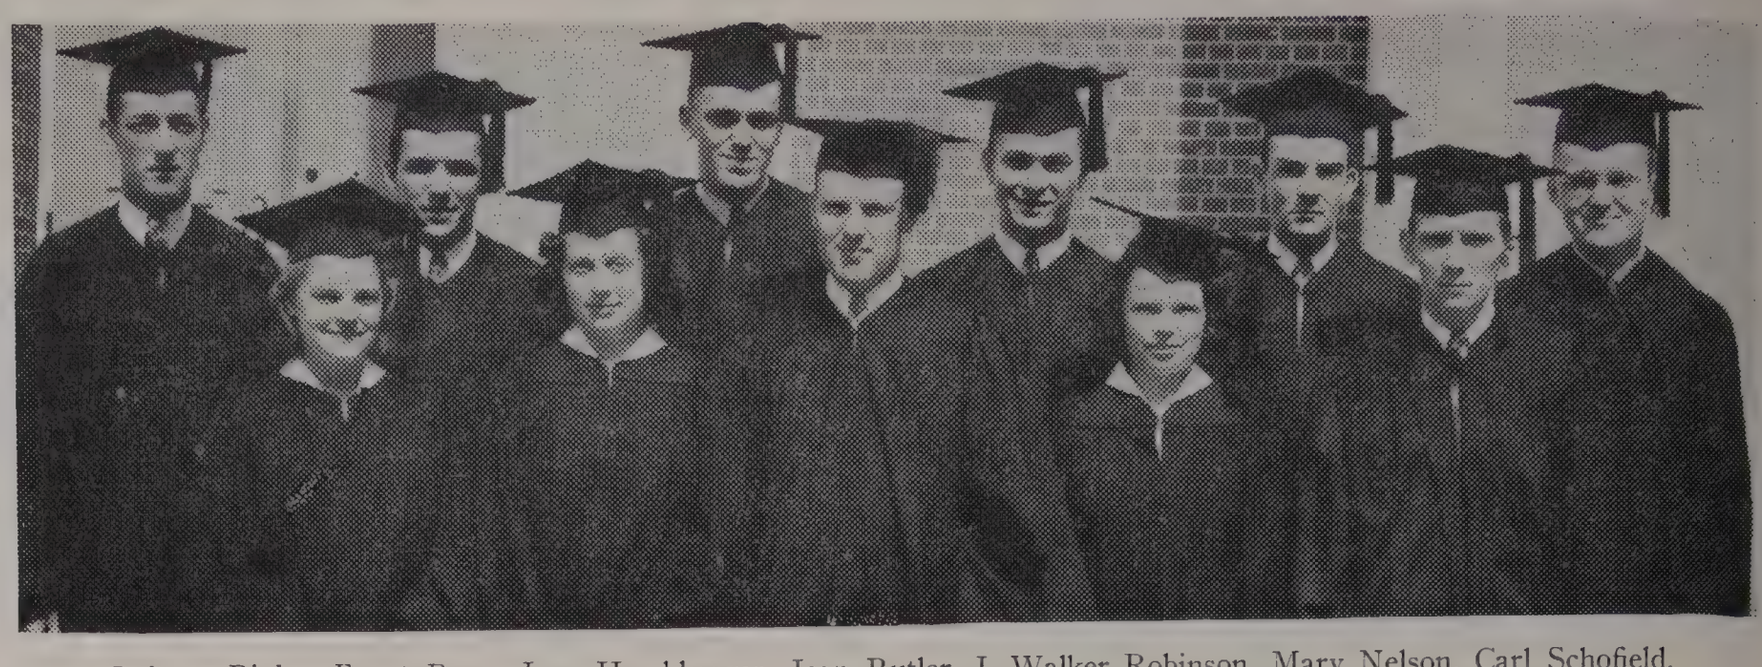
The class of 1940 took a prominent part in campus affairs during its junior year. Honor societies for junior and sophomore women were organized, and the members of the first junior women's honor society were selected from our class. After mid-years Carl Schofield was made editor-in-chief of the CYNIC. At the annual Kake Walk holiday, Claire Rock reigned over the festivities most graciously. Red Robinson was elected class president for our senior year. Elections for women's organizations took place also, and we realized that next year, members of our class were to hold positions of honor and responsibility. Phyllis McGovern was elected president of Student Union with Betsy Marlow as chief justice. Mary Howe was elected president of W. A. A., and Flossie Wade was chosen to head Y. W. C. A. Beauty was represented by Jean Harshbarger.

May 1 came all too soon, and we felt impressed with the seniors in caps and gowns, but we were glad we had another year of college. On Founder's Day the address was given by John Dewey, one of our most famous alumni. The honor societies were announced. Mortar Board elected Jean Butler, Mary Howe, Hester Kehoe, Betsy Marlow, Betty Myers, Phyllis McGovern, Flossie Wade and Mary Nelson, while Boulder Society chose Ev. Bailey, Bud Allen, Huey Gasperini, Red Robinson, and Carl Schofield.

Junior Week, our last celebration before exams will always bring pleasant memories. The affair was a great success from the Peerade to the Prom. Bud Allen and Bill Hunter were chairmen of this big week in our college life.

Lilac Day, sponsored by Staff and Sandal, junior women's honorary society, was given a new interpretation by the use of modern dancing and gave promise of the ceremony's being continued and developed.

With somewhat serious dignity, 1940 settled down to making its last year on the campus really worthwhile. In the fall, Boulder Society sponsored Pep with energy and effectiveness, culminating in hobo day and the decisive defeat of our rivals from Middlebury. Mortar Board started working on a point system for a more equitable distribution of positions among the women, which was announced in the spring. In December ten members of our class were elected to Phi Beta Kappa. This group with the addition of twelve chosen this morning represents the achievement of 1940 in high scholarship. Not to forget our social importance on campus, Jean Harshbarger was elected co-ed major.



Another highlight of the year was, of course, Kake Walk, headed by Carl Schofield and Red Robinson. "The best holiday ever" was the unanimous opinion on campus. Delta Psi and Sigma Nu took top honors in kake walking and stunts, respectively. Another pleasant event this year was the joint concert of the Harvard and Vermont Glee Clubs which was given at the Memorial Auditorium. This was followed by a reception at Southwick which the Harvard people enjoyed as much as we did.

Spring and baseball, headed by Lefty Pesarik weren't long in appearing and the season ended with the defeat of our big rival, Darmouth.

Another thing which we always think of with a great deal of pride and pleasure is the building program which has gone on during our years at college. Southwick building which has been used more and more, was new when we were freshmen, and now plans are being made for the new Waterman building which will soon be constructed. So we are very happy to know that the University will continue to grow in the future.

Such are the history and accomplishments of our class, 1940. I am sure that I speak for all of us when I say that we hope we have contributed something worthwhile to the University and that the faculty and administration will not regret our having been here. As we look back on the history of the past four years, and remember our fun, work and friendships, we cannot help but feel rather sad. However, with the faith and courage of which President Bailey reminded us when we were freshmen, we look forward to the future and promise that we of 1940 will be active, both individually and collectively, and not just 210 more cards in the files of the Alumni Office.

Address to the Undergraduates

JEAN O. BUTLER

It is a hallowed custom that every year upon this day some member of the illustrious senior class should shower a few words of paternalistic advice upon his younger college brethren. As a matter of fact, however, undergraduates on this occasion are chiefly conspicuous by their absence and must rely on the CYNIC account of these orations for their enlightenment.

You have heard the history of our celebrated class and, no doubt, are duly impressed. Perhaps in the past there have been many graduating classes who found it adequate counsel to merely bid the undergraduates to follow in their footsteps. Unfortunately, however, we of the class of 1940 are not sufficiently unaware of our own failings. In addition, today, many factors combine to rob the new graduate of his traditional air of confident expectancy and assurance. We who are about to leave the sheltering portals of our Alma Mater find too many sobering influences in the world, which is opening before us. Even on this happy occasion, we cannot help but be affected by current tragic events and by anxious misgivings for the future. For this reason, our parting words to you, the undergraduate classes, will necessarily be in a slightly more serious vein.

Rare, indeed, is the senior whose ambitions have not been altered countless times during his college course. However, despite this constant transformation of specific ideas, one general concept has gradually emerged as our main goal. This is the ideal of self-development. In college, we have an unequalled opportunity to seek this in all its many phases—an integrated personality, a sense of poise and a genuine intellectual stability.

Such personal development can only be obtained by living a well-rounded college life. Do not be satisfied with merely being listed in the college catalogue and with following the routine of academic life. Scholarship is an important cornerstone in this structure of self-development but, in modern life, it cannot stand alone as the whole edifice. Participate fully in college life, according to your individual abilities.

If you would reap the best harvest from this participation, you would do well to cultivate three special qualities. The first of these is enthusiasm, a talismanlike quality which enrichens and intensifies every experience. This quality is one which we all bring with us as freshmen but which far too many of us believe we must immediately discard. It is up to you to discourage that false theory of sophistication, which stifles this quality. See to it that you endeavor to preserve the fresh interests of the new class, which you will receive next fall. Foster the growth of your own enthusiasm and you will no longer be troubled by a waning school spirit and a lethargic student body.

Friendliness is the second quality I would have you attain. It is only natural that our strongest ties are formed with our closest associates. You must, however, seek to broaden the circle of your friendships. Seek to spread a feeling of cordiality between all groups, social and otherwise, on this campus. There can be no place for snobbery and bigotry in the collegiate world.

The final quality is responsibility. No character can be fully developed without learning to accept and successfully discharge responsibility. The student who would derive the maximum good from his college experience, must regard every task as a challenge, no matter how trifling in appearance or how slight in glory.

Self-development must not be regarded as merely the aim of an ambitious minority. It is rather an obligation resting upon every individual, who enjoys complete personal liberty in a land free from bondage and unbent by tyranny. We can best show our appreciation of these privileges by an intelligent use of our opportunities.

At graduation, we are given a unique perspective of our college days. Having not yet crossed the threshold into alumni membership, we can easily recall the very real anxieties and disappointments, which beset the paths of the modern collegian. On the other hand, from this milestone we can view the past four years as an entity and, in so doing, we find that most of the griefs faded into comparative obscurity. Like the ancient sundial, memories of our college days, will take heed only of the pleasant, sunlit hours.

Our associations with you have been most happy. In parting, we can only wish your college years as fine as ours have been. In the words of Dean Pearl Wasson, may you so act that Vermont's "good fame may live forever with her lake and circling hills."

Collegium Elects Corliss as President

Collegium brought its activities of the past year to a close on Sunday night, May 19, with a picnic which was held at the College Street Church, due to rain.

The following officers were elected for next year, and the other offices will be filled by incoming freshmen next fall: President, C. E. Corliss '42; program chairman, R. L. Clark '42; treasurer, R. S. Stockwell '43; refreshment chairman, Marjorie Smith '43; and publicity, Marion Roy '42.

Ira Allen Oration

PETER PATCH

For several years we have each wandered our many ways across this campus which has been our college home. Should we not, on this a day preceding our departure, pause for a moment with the one man who may be said to be responsible for our college and its pleasant memories.

More than a century and a half ago Ira Allen urged the legislature of the State of Vermont to grant a charter for a college which would benefit learning among the people of Vermont. It was not long after this time that such a charter was granted and the site appointed at Burlington, on a plot of land then well covered by stately pines and belonging to Gen. Ira Allen. This property, situated atop a ridge south of the Winooski River and overlooking beautiful Lake Champlain, held wondrous commercial value to Ira Allen the realtor, but as a result of his great interest in the promotion of education, profit was foregone and the property deeded to the State of Vermont as the logical site for its university.

Since that time much progress has been made, with changes of policy to fit the changes of economic and intellectual situations of the American states, physical improvements in the University property and increase in the curricula offered by the University. There have been many outstanding individuals in the history of our Alma Mater, some of them living and active today, but there is one man to whom we must all turn when we think of the college which today has become so dear to us, the Founder, Gen. Ira Allen.

Today there remain very few landmarks of 1791. We have a statue of our Founder, a chapel dedicated in his honor, both of which have been constructed recently. Though these structures stand well to impress upon us the debt which we owe, it occurs that these pine trees which now add to the beauty of our campus are perhaps descendants of some which at one time were the cherished possessions of Ira Allen. May we for a moment feel that these stately trees are by their presence true representatives of the nature of the Founder of the University of Vermont. For many a year these trees have viewed the activity, the progress in learning which was begun by him. At times they may have been lonesome as the college was weakened by the toll of wars, but each time that war has ceased they have once again been rewarded for their diligent watch. Students have returned and enrollment has grown to proportions never imagined by Ira Allen. They have seen the construction of buildings in honor of their master; they have become content when this replica of their master was given to them. From this time forward they will stand to judge the product, the fruit of this tree, the UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT.

Campus Oration

HENRY MIDDLEWORTH

The beauties of this campus, what it means to all of us, and the benefit derived from it by each of us are too obvious and numerous to mention. We all hold this glorious place dear to us and will keep it the same through all our lives.

The question that the guests of the 136th Commencement exercises are asking of us as well as each other is: What is to become of the members of the class of 1940 as it passes out into a disrupted world on June 10, 1940? My answer to this question is that we will achieve success. To my way of thinking there is only one way that peace and happiness can be secured and that is for leaders of men, such as ourselves, to maintain the strong democracy built by our forefathers at the least possible sacrifice.

In Washington and throughout the country today the cry is build our national defense walls so they will be invulnerable to attack of any sort. Hence, an enormous army and naval building program is under way and a drive to wipe out the American fifth column has been launched by our President. Everything is for defense and I ask why?

The allied armies in Europe are now suffering heavily and it appears that they may be victims of Nazi strategy. If this be the case and Hitler succeeds in destroying the British and French Empires, how will that affect us? Let us build a hypothetical case.

Germany wins the present conflict, several important British and French colonies are taken over, and among them those of the Far East. The need of Hitler would then be for an alliance with Japan. Now, if these two nations should bottle up the Dutch East Indies they would be waging an economic war on the United States. Rubber and quinine are only two of the important goods that we depend on that region for. I smile when I think of the billions of dollars that we will have spent for defensive purposes. Defense against what? Not an economic war.

The obvious climax to the stated hypothesis would be a war declared by the United States to gain these essentials that are held from us. We have to then convert our defensive materials, such as pursuit planes into attacking bombers and other offensive weapons. Germany, Japan, or any other power would have no cause to dominate us aggressively; they would merely wait for us to come to them and we will not be prepared!

We must protect ourselves at the least possible sacrifice, yet we spend for defense that must be renovated to fight aggressively. In this event the loss of man power, too, would be tremendous. I believe the least possible sacrifice would be to prepare ourselves now for an aggressive war. Then, while the allies are still strong we should support them in every way . I believe that merely the threat of our entrance into the present conflict would back Hitler down. Italy or Russia would break their present ties with Germany and make possible an allied victory—a victory that would mean our peace and happiness and ease at a convenient price. We need not send men, but we could train them, for merely the threat would be sufficient.

As we leave this campus we must strive toward making a better world! It would be nice to have this strife reach a conclusion without our sacrifices. But, if the sacrifice must be made it is only some that we make it as willingly as possible.

Boulder Oration

CARL SCHOFIELD

Nature and man have contrived to endow the Boulder with a rich fund of tradition. The significance of the Boulder does not lie in tradition alone—its significance is three-fold: traditional, historical, and symbolical. Let us proceed to examine each of these three qualities in chronological order.

History tells us that in 1846 construction of the Central Vermont Railway was being carried on at West Hartford, a typical Vermont hamlet near White River Junction. Because of the rocky nature of the ground at this point much blasting was necessitated and after one of the explosions an enormous pot hole seventeen feet deep was revealed. The fissure leading to the pot hole from the surface of the rock was approximately six feet in length. Two granite boulders lay side by side within the hole.

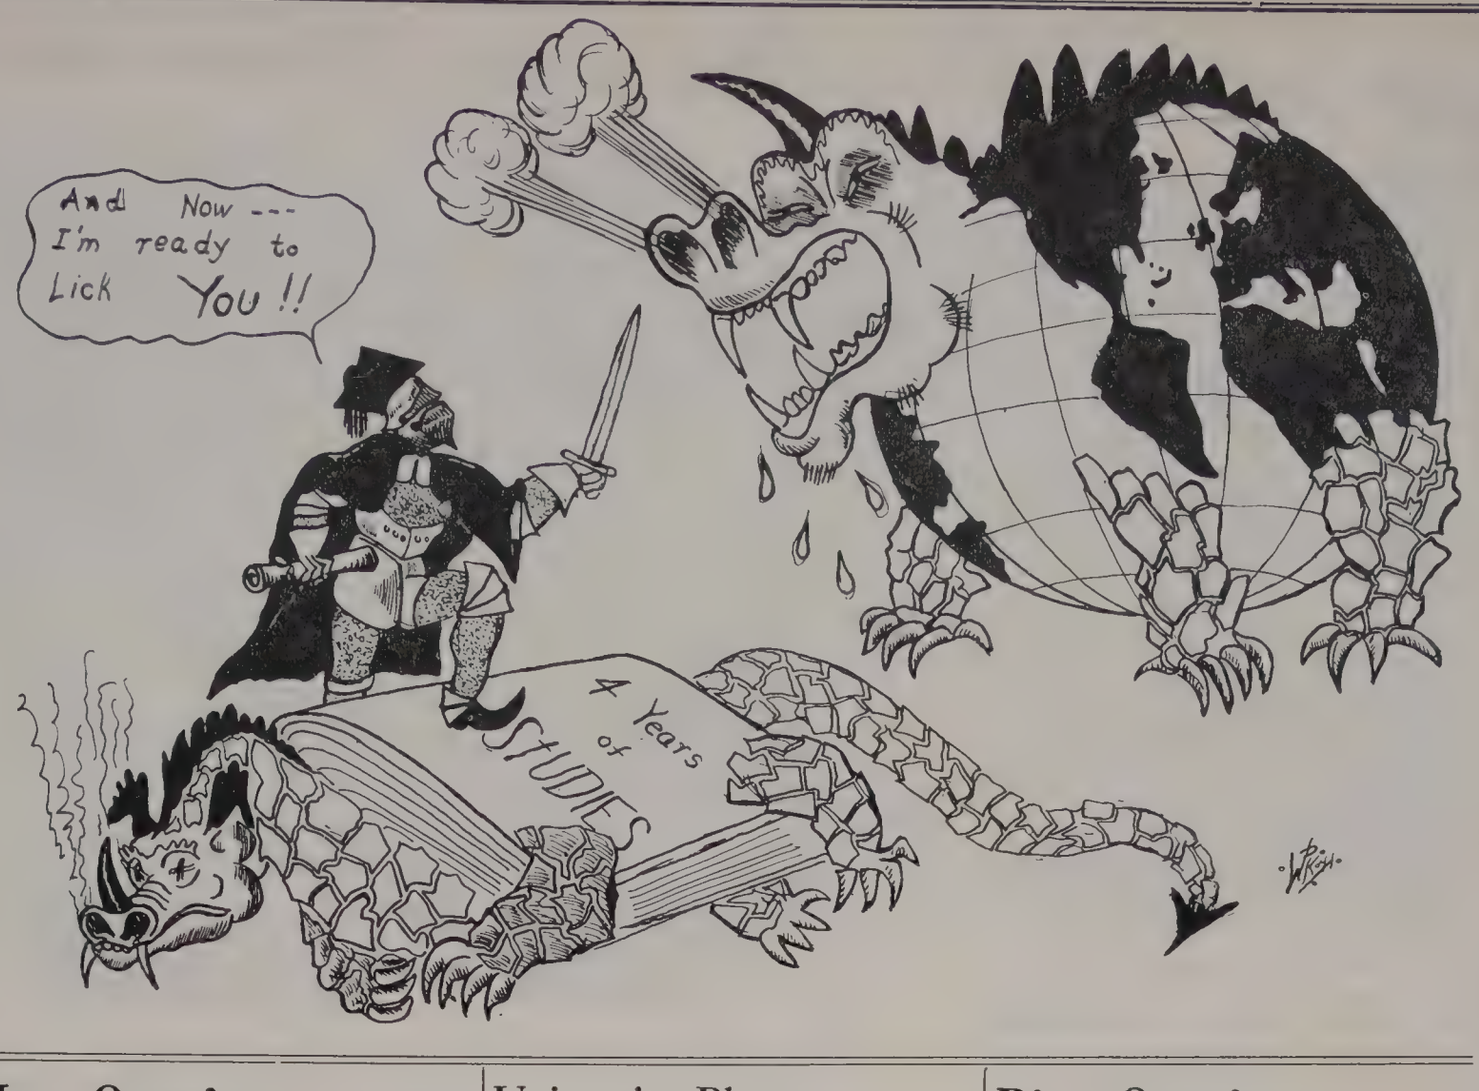
Countless ages ago the two boulders had been rounded into form by the action of water. Ignorant of their geological value a workman rolled them into a dump near by. Later their existence was made known to the engineers who were superintending the construction of the road. Fortunately the engineers were able to unearth them. One of them was a shapely sphere of granite two feet and four inches in diameter—the other, irregular in form, was discarded by the engineers. Professor Hitchcock, a renowned geologist, at that time was engaged as an instructor at Dartmouth College. He and his class paid a visit to West Hartford with the intention not only of examining the specimen, but also of moving it to Hanover. But fortune again was kind for Governor Payne, at that time president of the Central Vermont Railway, laid claim to the Boulder by right of ownership, and the weighty object was sent by ox team to Burlington and presented to the University of Vermont.

After the rough treatment administered by Mother Nature it would seem that the Boulder had earned by this time a long period of rest. But this was not to be for many a Hallowe'en night saw its repose disturbed by a group of student pranksters. On Hallowe'en night in 1896 it was moved to a position in front of the Commons, familiarly referred to by students as the Hash House. The site of the Commons was that of the Robert Hull Fleming Museum today. From there the Boulder was moved to a spot before the old Museum which at present is known as the Engineering Annex. Finally it was moved back to its original position.

There are other accounts describing the journeys of the Boulder. It is claimed that upon one occasion students started the sphere down Main Street. It gained considerable momentum and the students lost control of it. In pell-mell flight the Boulder bounded its way down the street stopping only after it had ricocheted into the waters of Lake Champlain with a tremendous splash. Once more it was returned to its original position and it was finally fastened securely enough to prevent any attempts to displace it by marauders. There it has since remained, but even then its peace was not secure. Time and again parties from the South and East paid the Boulder unexpected visits, leaving the sphere dripping under a well-administered coat of paint.

The tradition surrounding the Boulder dates back to that time when Governor Payne presented it to the University of Vermont. Gradually students came to look upon the Boulder as the essence of solidarity and honesty. Outlasting the ages, the rock remained to greet them in their daily rounds. The simplicity of the Boulder seems to inspire honesty, fair play, good sportsmanship and a host of similar qualities.

In keeping with this, in 1905 nine members of the senior class formed the Boulder Society and the society has added much to the tradition surrounding the aged rock.



Years ago one of my predecessors drew a simile which seems unparalleled in the history of the University. Despite the risk of an accusation of plagiarism it seems only fitting to mention it again today. My predecessor likened the formation of the Boulder to the progress of the student through college and there is much truth in this.

In its first form the Boulder was a crude block of granite but as the years passed constant contact with the other boulder in the pot hole slowly ground off its many edges until it assumed its present prefect shape.

The freshman, entering college, resembles in many ways the Boulder of long ago. Contact with instructors, students and others gradually rounds off many of the freshman's corners. This rounding off process does not cease with college days, but continues instead throughout life.

Therefore, we cannot hope at this time to have gained the perfection of the Boulder, but we can take a lesson from its formation. Just as it underwent severe treatment at the hands of nature we may hope, by contact with our fellowmen, to approach the Boulder's perfection.

Take heed also from the experience of that other boulder which underwent a treatment similar to this one. Do not let the contacts of life mold you and your character into a misshapen thing but, rather, profit by these contacts.

Ivy Oration

JEAN HARSHBARGER

The planting of the ivy is a symbol for each graduating class; some classes have it stand for tradition, others for the education we get at college. I would like to have the symbol for our class, that of 1940, be one of friendship and especially friendship in college.

We arrived four years ago and our roots of friendship were put tentatively into the soil; it was really a seedling then and apt to be transplanted at any moment. Some of our friendships stayed where they were planted and grew stronger and stronger because they were cultivated by daily attendance. Others were allowed to wither before they had got a stronghold in the soil. Still others were transplanted to other schools and other places. So the plant that was not moved went on growing higher and broader, getting more and more mature. But yet our friendship is a comparatively young plant. It has many more years to grow stronger; yet no other years will mean quite so much to the plant as those when it was put into the soil and cultivated. Those that have deep roots will grow on and on; the others may get weaker because they have not had the right kind of planting.

Ivy, once it has a start, is a hardy plant, so is friendship; it does not need constant daily attention to keep growing once it has established itself. Therefore let us plant our ivy well as we did our friendship four years ago, so that it will grow as our friendship has grown and will continue to grow.

I'd like to be a could-be
If I could not be an are,
For a could-be is a may-be,
With a chance for touching par.
I'd rather be a has-been
Than a might-have-been, by far,
For a might-have-been has never been,
But a has-been was an are.

University Players Elect New Officers

Officers for the year 1940-41 were elected by the University Players of the University of Vermont, at the meeting held Monday, May 20. The following is a list of new officers: President, Gertrude L. Mann '41; secretary, Barbara Butterfield '42; senior business manager, R. N. Snider '41; junior business manager, C. H. Marks '42; publicity manager, Dorothea Smith '41; senior stage manager, J. B. Ranney '41; junior stage manager, C. G. Miller '42.

President's Address

This afternoon there are gathered here many parents, alumni, faculty, and guests to enjoy these Class Day Exercises. It is my pleasure, as president of the class of 1940, to extend to you a hearty welcome to the 149th annual commencement at the University of Vermont.

Today we wish to express our thanks to those friends who have helped us gather so many pleasant memories in our four years at Vermont. Our professors, who have guided us in acquiring the knowledge which we must now use to face the future alone. Fellow students, with whom, in the classroom and on the field, we have worked and played. And President Bailey, whose untiring work has set for us such a fine example.

Four years ago we came to this university not knowing what was ahead of us, and today we are about to step into the world, hardly knowing what the future will bring. We have learned here the foundations of our professions and it is now up to us to apply the knowledge we have gained in order to become more successful. But this success will depend on our ability to improve our minds and broaden our experiences. Therefore, our diploma does not guarantee our success, but is only a stepping stone in helping us to reach this ideal.

May we as alumni continue with the fine spirit which we have tried to show while undergraduates at the University, and prove to these who have graduated before us that their standards will become our standards. The best of luck to you all.

Carnegie President Criticizes Colleges

New York, N. Y. (I. P.)—"All too frequently administrative contacts with a student are limited to the mechanics of admission and discharge, meticulous records of attendance, and the completion of term assignments," Dr. Walter A. Jessup, president of the Carnegie Foundation, in its Thirty-third Annual Report, writes.

"The technique of instruction consists of lectures, assigned readings, and specific laboratory or library exercise, with a short examination at the end of the term.

"After balancing the values between attendance, class performance, completion of assigned work, and the examination, credits are assigned and recorded. They are then ready to be drawn upon by the student either to count for a diploma or to be used for transfer to another institution.

"This done, the job is frequently over as far as the student and the institution are concerned. The system affords almost the ultimate in flexibleness, but it does not make for enduring or comprehensive knowledge within a given field.

Pipe Oration

KENDALL F. BEATON

Today we smoke the pipe, the time-honored symbol of comfort, good fellowship, and peace.

The pipe has been an expression of the gentleman's ease and peace of mind ever since that day when Sir Walter Raleigh's servant doused his master with water, thinking him on fire.

Tobacco and its use has been the unique contribution of the Americas to the comforts of the world's civilization. It has been a mellowing and stabilizing influence. In fact, the American aborigines regarded "the weed" so highly that its smoking became to them a formal function, to solemnize the execution of peace treaties.

To them, pipe smoking had come to mean what it means to us, comfort, good fellowship, and peace. Only this morning we had the chauvinistic sentiments of two faculty members showered upon us, but let us say to them that the class of 1940—going into the world in these troubled times—realizes the manner in which its fathers were duped to do battle for an empty phrase.

And let us say to them: the smoking of our pipes as we now do, has become a tradition at Vermont. It indicates that whatever enmities may have existed among us are now dispelled, and we smoke these pipes as evidence that we part at peace with one another. Let us also be at peace with the world.

Lafayette Oration

ROBERT LINSLEY

We pause briefly here today to pay a slight measure of respect to the memory of a great man—a man to whom the people of every other great democracy are greatly indebted. There is ample reason, indeed, for any honors that we may heap upon the head of Lafayette today.

His claim to honor rests not upon his name, nor upon his great inherited wealth, but rather upon the qualities and character of the man himself, a man who from his extreme youth was a crusader for those ideals upon which the very foundations of our State rest.

I think that most of us today are familiar with the highlights of Lafayette's varied and distinguished career as a soldier, a patriot, and a statesman. His great assistance in our own Revolution, and his leadership of France through many a troubled day are everlastingly written in the pages of history.

The period in which Lafayette lived was a stirring one in which a new and idealistic force was attacking the very foundations of every state in Europe and America as well. Absolute monarchy, tried on the scales of political experience and found to be wanting, was slowly and ungraciously yielding to the pressure of the common people. A new vision had arisen over all the western world promising the dawn of a new era, and it was slowly prevailing against the seemingly invincible old order. It was a period of unrest not dissimilar to ours of today.

Unfortunately the seeming route of the old order was merely a strategic retreat. The old order has staged a devastating counter attack and has retaken many of the strongest fortresses of free men. Not only have the principles of representative democracy, its ideals, and its hopes been mercilessly attacked, but they have been obliterated in many places.

If the great Marquis were to return again to the United States today and perhaps even be present with us this afternoon, I have no doubt that he would be immensely pleased with the great steps we have taken as a nation in the past 100 years. He would see us, nevertheless, faced with many problems which are every bit as menacing as those he faced, threats from without and threats from within.

This day, which should be one of complete happiness for all of us, is, in its background, tinged with a deep shade of doubt and sadness. Our nation has had many a dark day in the past and always the clouds have at last been swept away. We are still a great commonwealth, and despite what the prophets of gloom may preach, we are very wealthy, not alone in a material way but in a spiritual way as well. We still have faith in that heritage left to us by our fathers, and we do not intend to part with that heritage, come what may.

We, here, today, have a solemn duty before us, a duty that may be difficult and which may involve much sacrifice and danger. We must dedicate ourselves anew to the ideals, the faith, and the courage of the Marquis de Lafayette, and in the end we shall force those powers of darkness to their knees. The tyrants of today may be feared and are despised, but eventually they will be conquered by that same spirit that filled the soul of Lafayette, the power of God and the watchwords of democracy everywhere, Liberty, Equality and Fraternity.

Sports Cast

By the Co-Editors

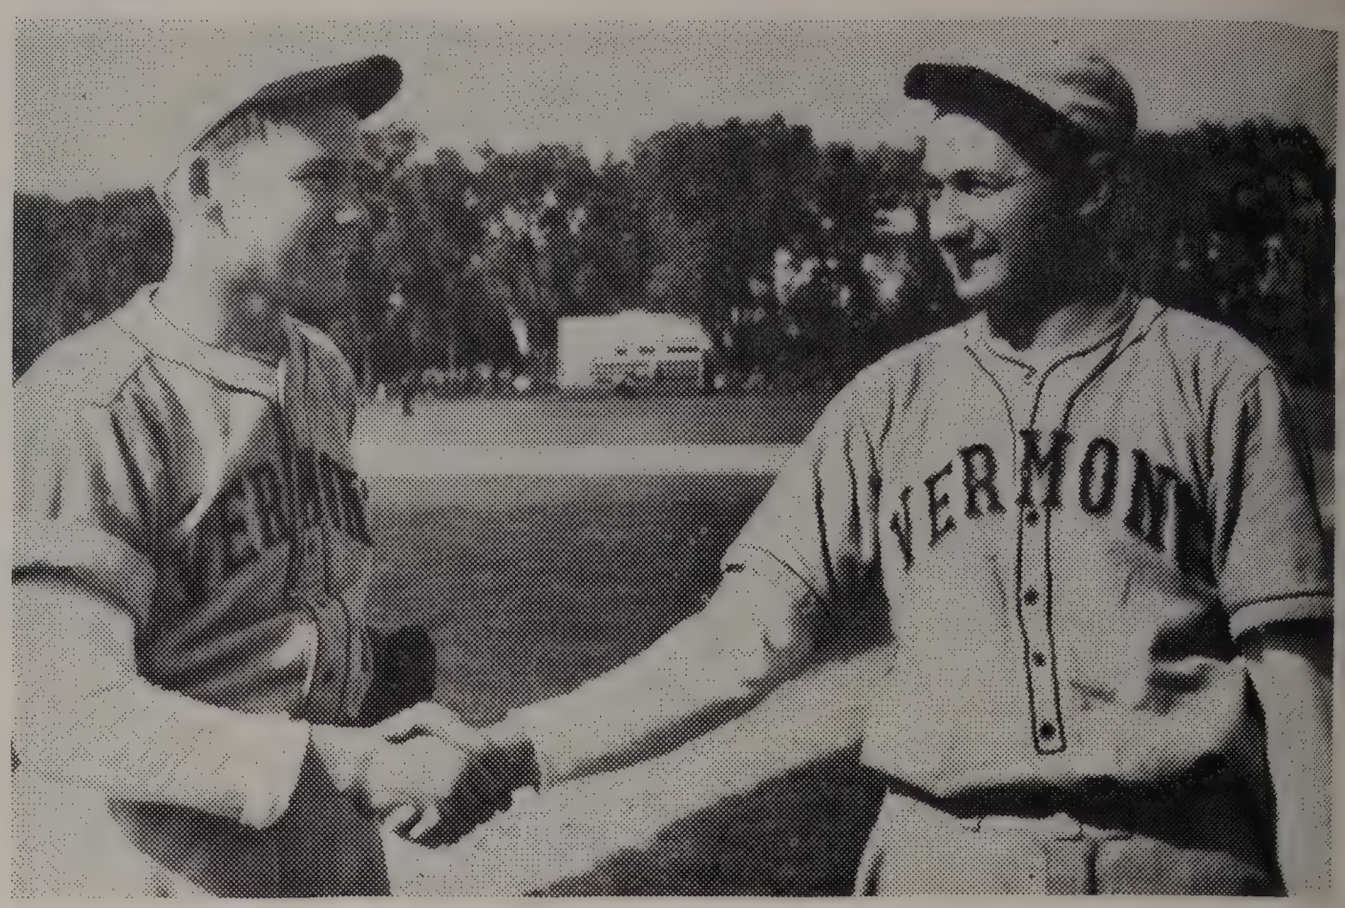
Year's End

It's been a couple of centuries since mid-years and then again it's just been a minute. Yesterday we were writing our first sports cast; today we are writing our last for this school year. And looking back we recall a lot of little incidents—trivial—yet worth remembering because it's the little things we peg our memories on. All of which adds up to a very queer start for what should be a sports column. Philosophical ramblings always seems to be our destiny at the end of the year and it carries over into this department. But thinking of little things again do you remember—

Mental Driftwood

Johnny Spasyk running back that punt in the Middlebury game for Vermont's first score. That opening grid victory over Amherst. Ironman Carlson playing sixty minutes of pretty nearly every ball game last fall—a game but tiring Catamount eleven holding off Union and their Little All American threat till the last quarter when they lost gloriously—the snappy Catamount five that almost did beat Dartmouth—that gave Fordham such a battle—Anse Belardinelli, cool and nonchalant—Don Maley, all over that back court like three guards instead of just one—Dick Healey, spark plug—Frank Taylor, speed and coordination—Paul Corley, step-shot artist—and that Archie Post track squad that took all its regular meets—Gordie Smith, mowing them down in the dashes—Nichols first at the Eastern Intercollegiates—Larry Gardner's crew beating everything in the way of state opposition and a little more besides—that decisive victory over Dartmouth.

Little things—that make a season good or bad—that spell plenty of fun, plenty of struggle, and plenty of pleasant memories.



Of course, this should be a sort of résumé of the year but more than the above we cannot say. For what is there to say—we could go over all the records of the individual teams but it still wouldn't add any more to or detract anything from the individual's impression of the season. Games won, games lost, points scored—those are the return of a punt; a smile between opponents; sweat and driving bodies—these are the little things that mean so much.

Last Words on Sleep

So we file another sport year away. So we come to the end of another Sports Cast. Someone once remarked that whoever wrote these things must be awfully tired, as all they did was talk about sleep. Well, they weren't far from the truth. Sleep and rest and indolent ease—that we adore. So if someone will loan us a palm tree we'll put an end to this meandering and drift off to Lotos Land. What, no palm tree . . . . well a pine will be even better . . . . oh skip the tree, we'll do without it. HAPPY VACATION.

Marty to Lefty, "Congratulations - -Farewell"

Thus Vermont's senior battery greeted each other following Vermont's 7 to 2 victory over Dartmouth at Centennial Field. Both Marty Boucher, catcher (left), and Lefty Pesarik, pitcher (right), rounded out their college careers, Pesarik winning his seventh straight for an undefeated season. Boucher was behind the bat every time Lefty pitched this spring. Vermont will miss this veteran combination when another season comes around.

Taylor Elected to Third Captaincy

Fine Athlete to Head Baseball Men Next Year

Francis M. Taylor, Brattleboro boy who came up to the University of Vermont to achieve a phenomenal athletic performance, has just been elected captain of the Vermont baseball team for next year, giving him his third team captaincy. Taylor, the second man to win letters in four major sports, is the first to captain three major teams. He captained basketball last winter and will captain football next fall.

Frank M. Taylor

The baseball team that Taylor will captain next year from his center field position has twenty-seven games scheduled, an increase of five over this year's schedule. On the schedule are Princeton, Yale, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Virginia, Navy, Villanova, Maryland, Wesleyan, Williams, Trinity, Amherst, Colby, Bowdoin, Bates, and half a score of others.

Taylor, captain-elect of the team, finished the current season with a .408 batting average, getting four hits and a walk against Dartmouth in his last game. A sensational outfielder, remarkable for his coverage and the deadly accuracy of his throwing, he will play with the Burlington Cardinals of the Northern League this summer. With him will be Captain Pesarik, of this year's team, who won all of his seven starts this spring, effectually silencing the Dartmouth big guns in his last encounter.

The Vermont team will be intact next year save for its battery. Three pitchers, Pesarik, Hart and Belardinelli, will be lost by the diploma route, as will Boucher, veteran receiver.

Ransom O. Slack of Randolph Center was elected manager of next year's team, with H. A. Durfee of North Bennington named freshman manager. Assistant managers will be F. P. Logan of Springfield, Mass., and Robert D. Paterson of Barre.

A divinity student named Tweedle,
Wouldn't accept his degree,
'Cause it's tough enough being called Tweedle,
Without being Tweedle, D. D.

Cats Down Dartmouth In Last Game of Season

Pesarik Tops College Pitching Career With 7-2 Victory Over Dartmouth

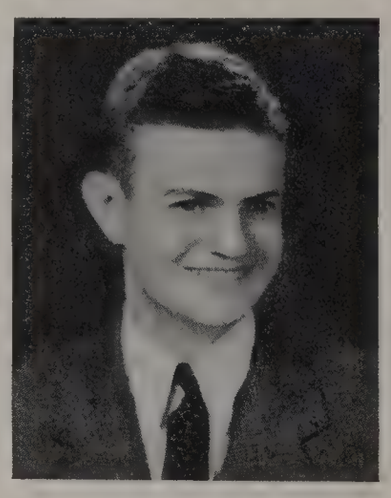
Alex Pesarik, captain of the University of Vermont baseball team, closed his college pitching career Memorial Day with his best performance of the season as he hurled his seventh straight of the season to top the performance of the snarling Catamounts' 7 to 2 victory over the Indians from Dartmouth. An estimated 3,000 fans were at Centennial Field to see the senior southpaw from Windsor silence the big guns of Jeff Tesreau's crew with as masterful a chore as the field has witnessed in several seasons.

It was a long-awaited and long-welcomed victory for the Little Green over the Big Green, for it had been five years since Vermont had known the spoils of victory over the eastern intercollegiate team from Hanover, N. H. It brought the Vermont season to a more than satisfactory close, for on the previous Saturday Pesarik had stopped St. Michael's to bring the state crown to Vermont.

But Pesarik was not alone in receiving compliments for the neat execution of Dartmouth. Frankie Taylor's big bat boomed four times out of four official trips, and the smooth-working centerfielder hoisted his season's final average to .408. Excellent support from all quarters was afforded Pesarik, who worked easily on a five-run lead built up in the first two innings. Outstanding support came from little Johnny Spasyk at second base, who raced hither and yon, here and there, to all sections of the outfield and infield to record eight putouts and three assists.

While Vermont was getting all its runs, Dartmouth could do nothing with the pitching of Pesarik. The fierceness of the Vermont defense, the abandon and ease with which it made difficult stops look easy, only served to accentuate the apparent helplessness of the Indians at the plate and in the field.

Dartmouth's only threat came in the eighth inning, when two unearned runs crossed the plate. Sommers walked, Sexton flied to Taylor, and Parmer was safe on an error by Wood, who let the double-play ball get away. A line-drive single by Broberg scored Sommers, Parmer moving to third, from where he scored after the catch of Orr's long fly in deep right field. Pesarik tightened up and ended any further Dartmouth scoring threat.



Thus closed another college season and the careers of four U. V. M. players. Pesarik, Boucher, Belardinelli and Hart. It was a great victory to salt away in the record books as a fitting climax to a successful season.

Ohio State University students spend an average of 95 cents a month for soft drinks.

Bob Kenney Elected New Track Captain

Seventeen Men Receive Varsity Track Letters

Robert P. Kenney of Auburn, R. I., has been elected captain of the University of Vermont track team for the next year. In electing Kenney the team broke precedent by selecting a non-letter man from the current season. Last year he was a state championship hurdler, but this year, handicapped by illness, he was unable to make his letter. His effort and willingness to try, however, plus his recognized ability, won for him the votes of his teammates.

Robert Kenney

Six letter men will be lost by graduation from this year's state championship team. They are: Captain Smith, state record holder in the 100-yard dash; Dave Stowell, outstanding half-miler; Bill Hunter, holder of the University high jump record; Bud Allen, ace hurdler of the present season; Johnny Davis, pole vaulter; Ed Pearl, weight man.

Letters have been awarded to seventeen men on the basis of their season's record. They are: Clarence V. Akley, Lyndonville; Harold A. (Bud) Allen, Jr., Burlington; Arnold H. Becker, Burlington; John W. Davis, Brattleboro; William E. Hunter, Randolph; Robert E. Johnstone, Burlington; Frank H. Livak, Rutland; Herbert J. Long, Oakfield, N. Y.; Elmer L. Nichols, Westminster; Edward D. Pearl, Swanton; William A. Pratt, Rutland; Edward F. Roby, Montpelier; Gordon L. Smith, captain, Burlington; David E. Stowell, Bellows Falls; Francis M. Taylor, Brattleboro; Charles A. Webster and Fred H. Webster, Orleans.

Baseball is Top Sport at Vermont

Larry Gardner Coaches Another Fine Season

At the University of Vermont another successful baseball season has just been completed under the tutelage of Coach Larry Gardner. For fifty years Vermont baseball teams have figured conspicuously in the baseball history of New England. Other colleges have seen a shift of interest to the highly colored autumn spectacle of football or the swift moving court game of winter, but baseball still remains the pre-eminent, traditional sport at the University of Vermont, carrying the University's athletic prestige.

Baseball is built around the Vermont temperament against the Vermont background. A sport that can be played on any country field or village school ground with no more equipment than a ball, a glove and a bat, dependent on individual initiative rather than an elaborate system of team work, it fits the Vermont situation and is played from one end of the state to the other wherever nine men of any size or shape and a playing field of any degree of smoothness can be brought together. For generations it has been the major sport of the state, exacting its loyal following from every community. From the hillside pastures and the lowland meadows these boys come to the University as naturals and some of them are to be found listed every spring on the baseball roster of the college.

To appreciate baseball popularity at Vermont one has only to note the long spring schedule of twenty-five or thirty games and the quality of the opposition which it includes. Vermont is the only small college in New England that for years has consistently included an annual southern itinerary in its program. Next year a total of twenty-seven games will be played. The games include four of the Eastern Intercollegiate League teams, the entire Little Three, two members of the Southern Conference, three teams of the Maine Conference, besides regular state opponents and others.

The game, under the tutelage of Larry Gardner, himself a former big league prod-

Frosh Netmen Have Undefeated Season

Under the tutelage of Coach Paul Rand the Freshman tennis team completed an undefeated season with victories over Burlington High and Rutland High, two ties with Green Mountain Junior College and Bellows Free Academy of St. Albans, and three cancelled matches because of rain.

The same lineup was maintained throughout the entire campaign, with R. L. Swift, W. A. Towne, W. A. West and P. N. Sutton in the number 1, 2, 3, 4 singles positions, respectively, while in the doubles Swift and West held the number one spot with Sutton and Towne in the number two spot. These four men carried the burden in all the matches, offering a very well-balanced array of talent against the opposition and will furnish Coach Carpenter, varsity coach, with some promising material for next year's team.

W. A. Towne was elected honorary captain, and M. J. Levin next year's Freshman manager.

Bert Mott Chosen Honorary Frosh Captain

E. Bertrand Mott, Jr., of Morristown, N. J., who leaped, jumped, hurdled and ran his way to 96 points in four meets this season has been named honorary freshman track captain at the University of Vermont.

Harry Parker of Johnson, another strong freshman contender who will help fill vacancies in varsity ranks, took ten first places during the season. His specialty is the weights, where the varsity needs bolstering.

The sixteen men who received class numerals on the basis of their season's performances are: J. L. Buttles, Burlington; R. M. Caccavo, Northfield; M. A. Cozzolino, Hamden, Conn.; W. T. Elliott, St. Johnsbury; J. P. Goss, Wilder; R. P. Grosvenor, Winchester, Mass.; L. Harrington, North Wilbraham, Mass.; G. E. Little, Jr., Burlington; W. H. Milne, Barre; E. B. Mott, Jr., honorary captain, Morristown, N. J.; U. W. Otto, Greenfield, Mass.; H. C. Parker, Jr., Johnson; E. F. St. Mary, Jr., Springfield; H. C. Vreeland, Rutherford, N. J.; J. W. Williams, Northampton, Mass.; and Harold P. Wood, Salisbury, Mass.

48 Vermont Students Receive Commissions At Commencement

Twenty-two Medics Are First Lieutenants In Medical Reser

Forty-eight men, most of them graduating from the University of Vermont this year, received commissions in the United States Army Reserves at the Commencement exercises. Twenty-two are Medical College graduates, and will receive commissions as first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve, while twenty-six are from the Academic Colleges of the University and will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Infantry Reserves. Two men will receive their commissions as second lieutenants when they complete their required summer camp training. They are Elliott F. Hawkins, Williston, and Lester H. Mitchell, Manchester, N. H. All of the commissioned men will be expected to spend about two weeks at military encampments this summer.

Commissioned first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve are: Howard H. Allen, Greensboro; Sidney Alpert, Lakewood, N. J.; Lewis W. Barton, Lexington, Mass.; Sanford R. Bloomenthal, Burlington; Joseph T. Bottamini, Brandon; John H. Browe, Burlington; Roy V. Buttles, Burlington; Paul M. Choate, West Barnet; Howard R. Clement, Newport; Raynald T. Cooney, Burlington; Max Harris, St. Albans; Clarence W. Harwood, Rupert; Jay E. Keller, Burlington; Roger A. Kenworthy, Middlebury; John P. Magner, Rutland, Philip G. Merriam, Maidstone; Richard V. Newcombe, Burlington; Russell S. Page, Jr., Hyde Park; William I. Shea, Burlington; Howard W. Stanley, Colchester; Frederick W. Timmerman, Morrisville; William Vilardo, Garfield, N. J.

Receiving commissions as second lieutenants in the Infantry Reserve are: Howard A. Allen, Jr., Burlington; Everett C. Bailey, Burlington; Edward N. Baldwin, Bennington; William L. Blanchard, Jr., Melrose Highlands, Mass.; Earl A. Cash, West Dennis, Mass.; Arthur DeWitt Clark, Burlington; Herbert W. Coburn, Newport; William G. Cole, Quechee; William H. Cross, Bombay, N. Y.; John W. Davis, Brattleboro; Roger M. Davis, Readsboro; William E. J. Hunter, Randolph; Edward S. Irwin, Burlington; David R. Jones, Schenectady, N. Y.; Cedric A. Lafley, Enosburg Falls; Henry V. Middleworth, Rockville Centre, N. Y.; Richard W. Robinson, Wilkinsburg, Pa.; Carl H. Schofield, St. Albans; Gordon L. Smith, South Ryegate; Richard M. Story, Jr., Yonkers, N. Y.; David E. Stowell, Bellows Falls; Earle R. Thomas, Westport, N. Y.; Charles W. Utter, Westerly, R. I.; William F. Vassar, Bristol; Justus B. Wheeler, Morrisville; Allan R. Williams, Jericho.

Sixteen Baseball Men Given Varsity Letters

Fourteen players and two co-managers have been awarded varsity baseball letters at the University of Vermont, marking the end of the playing season. At the same time eleven freshmen were awarded numerals.

The varsity letter men are Clarence V. Akley, Lyndonville; Anso Belardinelli, Norwalk, Conn.; Martin J. Boucher, Jr., White Plains, N. Y.; Robert L. Carlson, South Ryegate; George T. Hart, Rutland; Richard F. Healy, Lynbrook, N. Y.; Maynard J. Lawrence, Akron, N. Y.; Donald W. Maley, Great Barrington, Mass.; Alexander R. Pesarik, captain, Windsor; John J. Spasyk, Pittsfield, Mass.; Francis M. Taylor, captain-elect, Brattleboro; Hazen P. Wood, Randolph; and co-managers, R. W. Robinson, Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Carl H. Schofield, St. Albans.

The first year numeral men are Roy Alberghini, Orleans; J. Alpert, Newton, Mass.; J. F. P. Corbett, North Tonawanda, N. Y.; Roy G. Hamilton, Jr., Williamstown; Richard H. Iby, Burlington; Milton R. Kaufman, Mountaindale, N. Y.; Walter J. Koladza, West Haven, Conn.; W. O. Krupp, Burlington; F. M. Layden, Rutland; Richard H. Lincoln, Winchendon, Mass.; and R. C. West, Bridgewater.

Mildred Guttormsen Reigns Over Lilac Day

Carmen Laetum

EDITOR'S NOTE—The following is an excerpt from a poem by John Godfrey Saxe, the grandfather of the commencement orator, which he recited at Middlebury's fiftieth anniversary.

Recited, after dinner, before the alumni of Middlebury College at their Semi-centennial Celebration, August 22, 1850.

A right loving welcome, my true-hearted Brothers,
Who have come out to visit the kindest of mothers;
You may think as you will, but there isn't a doubt
Alma Mater rejoices, and knows you are out!
Rejoices to see you in gratitude here,
Returning to honor her fiftieth year.
And while the good lady is so overcome
With maternal emotion, she's stricken quite dumb
(A thing, I must own, that's enough to perplex
A shallow observer, who thinks that the sex,
Whatever may be their internal revealings,
Can never be pained with unspeakable feelings,)
Indulge me, dear Brothers, nor think me ill-bred,
If I venture a moment to speak of her stead.
I, who, though the humblest and homeliest one,
Feel the natural pride of a dutiful son,
And esteem it to-day the profoundest of joys,
That, not less than yourselves, I am one of the boys!

First as to her health, which, I'm sorry to say,
Has been better, no doubt, than she finds it to-day;
Yet when you reflect she's been somewhat neglected,
She's really as well as could well be expected;
And, spite of ill-treatment and premature fears,
Is a hearty old lady, for one of her years.
Indeed, I must tell you a bit of a tale,
To show you she's feeling remarkably hale;
How she turned up her nose, but a short time ago,
At a rather good-looking importunate beau,
And how she refused, with a princess-like carriage
"A very respectable offer of marriage."*

You see, my dear Brothers, a neighboring College
Who values himself on the depth of his knowledge,
With a prayer for her love, and an eye to her land,
Walked up to the lady and offered his hand.
For a minute or so she was all in a flutter,
And had not a word she could audibly utter;
For she felt in her bosom, beyond all concealing,
A kind of a—sort of a—widow-like feeling!

But recovering soon from the delicate shock,
She held up her head like an old-fashioned clock,
And, with proper composure, went on and defined,
In suitable phrases, the state of her mind;
Said she wouldn't mind changing her single condition
Could she fairly expect to improve her position;
And thus, by some words of equivocal scope,
Gave her lover decided "permission to hope."
It were idle to talk of the billing and cooing
The amorous gentleman used in his wooing;
Or how she replied to his pressing advances,
His oscular touches and ocular glances;
'Tis enough that his courtship, by all that is known,
Was quite the old story, and much like your own!

Thus the matter went on, till the lady found out,
One very fine day, what the rogue was about,—
That all that he wanted was merely that power
By martial license to pocket her dower,
And then to discard her in sorrow and shame,
Bereaved of her home and her name and her fame.
In deep indignation she turned on her heel,
With such withering scorn as a lady might feel
For a knave, who, in stealing her miniature case,
Should take the gold lettering, and leave her the face!
But soon growing calm as the breast of the deep,
When the breezes are hushed that the waters may sleep,
She sat in her chair, like a dignified elf,
And thus, while I listened, she talked to herself:—
"Nay, 'twas idle to think of so foolish a plan
As a match with this pert University-man,
For I haven't a chick but would redden with shame
At the very idea of my losing my name;
And would feel that no sorrow so heavy could come
To his mother as losing her excellent home.
'Tis true I am weak, but my children are strong,
And won't see me suffer privation or wrong;
So, away with the dream of connubial joys,
I'll stick to the homestead, and look to the boys!"

JOHN GODFREY SAXE, I.

Dean Simpson Gives Tea for Senior Class

A garden party and tea given by Miss Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women, in honor of the members of the Senior class, was held on the Redstone campus on Thursday, June 6, from four until six o'clock. The new members of Mortar Board and Staff and Sandal were in charge of the introductions and general supervision, and the new Sophomore Aides served.

Those in the receiving line were Miss Simpson, Miss Harris, Miss Bailey, Mrs. Swift, Mrs. Eckhard, Mrs. Kemp, Miss Terrill, and Miss Wheeler. The various house directors, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Towne, composed the committee on flowers. Some of the younger faculty wives and members acted as assistant hostesses.

Mrs. Dole, Mrs. Prindle, Mrs. Pope, Mrs. Carleton, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Nuquist, Miss Woodard, and Mrs. Maclay poured.

19 Men to Attend R. O. T. C. Camp

Military Men to Train At Camp Devens

Nineteen men will attend the summer Reserve Officers' Training Corps Camp at Fort Devens, Mass., opening shortly after the close of University of Vermont Commencement activities, June 10. All but one of these men are students just completing their first year of advanced military science and tactics training, and the summer camp will give them additional instruction. One June 10 graduate, Elliott F. Hawkins of Williston, who has completed the advanced course except for the camp requirement, will receive his second lieutenant's commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps at the completion of this camp work.

University of Vermont men who will attend the R. O. T. C. Camp at Fort Devens, starting Friday, June 14, and ending Thursday, July 25, are Herbert A. Chesney, Island Pond; Harry B. Coburn, East Montpelier; Warren M. Colehamer, Newark, N. J.; William A. Daniels, Bridgeport, Conn.; Sumner S. Firestone, Dorchester, Mass.; Edson E. Gifford, East Bethel; John S. Greene, Burlington; Edward A. Guilbert, Waterbury, Conn.; Bernard W. Hill, Bennington; Taze R. Huntley, Morrisville; Elliott F. Hawkins, Williston; John L. Kotuby, Rutland; Curtis A. Moore, East Dover; Gerald I. Palmer, Williamstown; James A. Root, Middlebury; George H. Stickney, East Thetford; A. James Taggart, Castleton; Donald W. Thayer, Burlington; Harold S. Willson, Bethel.

uct from the University, is still played at Vermont as a sport as well as a contest. Larry could win more games than he does, and some of the ardent fans wonder why he doesn't, but Larry has an old-fashioned theory that sport should be played essentially for the sport's sake and the good of the boys. So he tries to work it out that way, giving the boys a chance and working with them as a teacher rather than a dictator. The boys like his attitude and like the game as he plays it, and more than one boy with a reputation shows up in uniform at Vermont just because Larry is Larry and baseball is still the grand old game as played at the institution.

The baseball field itself, one of the best in New England, is indicative of the place the sport has on the University's athletic program. With its ample acreage, its smooth, moisture-absorbing diamond, its covered and open stands, its electric scoreboard indicators and cement dugouts, it forms the most pampered unit of the athletic field layout. Others can have their big football stadiums, but Vermont goes in for baseball.

During the last few years the formation of the fast Northern League, which has attracted college stars from many sections of the country, has been an added encouragement to the sport at the University. College players meet with approval in the Northern League, and League games in Burlington are played on the Vermont diamond. If a player has the class it is a natural step from a college uniform into one of the summer uniforms of the League. This year several players of the current and recent teams will be playing on the circuit.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"John Keats contrasts the lot of bird and man by describing the world of man as one 'Where but to think is to be full of sorrow.' There are three things that may be said in answer to this despair. First, it is encouraging that man can look out upon life and say of this or that 'It is not good.' Second, it is encouraging that the recognition of wrong challenges us to eradicate it. Third, it is encouraging to know that we can band ourselves together in the determination to place ourselves on the side of those forces that make for the progress of civilization." Western Maryland College's President Fred G. Holloway challenges the pessimists.

Large Number of Alumni Attends Fraternity Teas

Thirteen Sororities and Fraternities Hold Open House for Returning Alumni

Fraternities and sororities on the hill held open house Saturday, June 8, for returning alumni.

Kappa Sigma

At the Kappa Sigma house the following directors were elected for the coming year: Prof. B. C. Douglass of the education department at the University, Edward Beebe, Henry T. Way, Wesley T. Abell, Lyman C. Hunt, Joseph B. Johnson and Dr. George Kidder. The oldest alumnus member present was T. E. Hopkins of the class of 1895. Dr. C. E. Partridge was the alumnus who had come from the farthest distance. Doctor Partridge lives in Milwaukee, Wis.

Sigma Nu

Fifty-five alumni gathered at the Sigma Nu Lodge for a well-planned reunion. The house was decorated with lilacs, bridal wreaths and iris. Following the business meeting, in which Harry Barker of New York was elected president, Irvin Cobb of Bennington, treasurer, and A. K. Tudhope of Burlington, clerk, the visitors were served a buffet supper. Oldest member present was George Lamb '94 of Rochester. Don Gannon was the Sigma Nu's farthest traveling alumnus, having come all the way from Kansas City, Mo., to attend.

Alpha Tau Omega

A. J. Grout of the ATO's enjoyed a double distinction for he was not only the oldest member at this fraternity's reunion, being of the class of 1890, but also the greatest traveler with a trip all the way from his home in Miami, Fla. George C. Stanley was elected president, Robert K. Edgerton, secretary-treasurer, Prof. A. D. Butterfield of the Engineering College, collector, and Guy M. Page, legal advisor. Refreshments were served following the meeting to about twenty-five alumni and officers of the chapter.

Delta Psi

Saturday's reunion at the Delta Psi house marked the ninetieth year since the founding of the fraternity. A special ceremony honoring the founders was held prior to the business meeting. Officers elected for the coming year were: President, Max L. Powell; vice-president, E. L. Ingalls; and secretary-treasurer, J. H. Macomber, Jr. Thomas Reed Powell, distinguished member of the Harvard Law School and national authority on constitutional law, and Willard Mitchell, prominent New York lawyer, were among the alumni present. Mason Stone '83 of Montpelier was the oldest alumnus and Lawrence Doolin of Philadelphia was the alumnus who came from the farthest distance.

Sigma Phi

No officers were elected at the Sigma Phi reunion, but there was a large gathering of out-of-town members, including Harold R. Ward, Mound, Minn.; P. J. Ross, Scarsdale, N. Y.; J. G. Clark, Holyoke, Mass.; Roswell Farnham, Buffalo, N. Y.; S. H. Pease, Forestville, Conn.; E. R. Mott, Woodbridge, N. J.; Lieut.-Col. Richard H. Ballard of Texas; John Millett, Cranford, N. J.; Ralph W. Simmonds, Detroit, Mich. Oldest alumnus present was Doctor Wheeler of the class of 1874.

Phi Delta Theta

At the Phi Delta Theta reunion the following directors were chosen: John Patrick, Emory Mower, Frank Churchill, Lee S. Ramsey and Harry Gallup. George M. Sabin '96 was the oldest member present. Rockwood Brown of Billings, Mont., came from the farthest distance.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

The SAE alumni business meeting was held Saturday afternoon at the chapter house, and the following officers were elected: Foster L. Barry of Montpelier, president; David W. Webster of Burlington, secretary; C. Richard Congdon of Burlington, treasurer; Dr. Albert G. Mackay of Burlington, vice-president. Following the business meeting the members adjourned to the Park Café for dinner.

250 Visit Sororities

At the sorority reunions, approximately 250 alumnae and actives attended the dinners. The distinction of coming the farthest distance went to Mrs. Beverly Householder Wallace '30, of Beverly Hills, Calif. The oldest were sorority women of the class of '94.

Alpha Chi Omega

The roll call which opened the Alpha Chi Omega reunion showed that all the classes except five were represented since the sorority was founded in 1921. Following the June spread, a musical program was presented with Joyce Bone '43, violinist; Katrina Munn '32, pianist; and Elizabeth Cole '41, vocalist. Chocolates were passed in connection with announcement of the engagements of Dorothy Akers '38 to Gilbert Cole of Bradford, and of Rebecca Shippee '39 to Fred Taylor. At the conclusion of the program the following directors were elected: Mabel Miles, Jeannette Davis, Marjorie Perrin, Olufa Jones, Lucy Morgan and Marian Hinsdale. The officers for the ensuing year are: Mabel Miles, president; Marjorie Perrin, vice-president; Olufa Jones, treasurer; Marian Hinsdale, assistant treasurer; and Jeannette Davis, secretary.

Tokens of appreciation were presented to Miss Marjorie Perrin, who is relinquishing her duties as house director, by the active chapter and the Burlington Alumni Club. Louise Bosley of Washington, D. C., enjoyed the distinction of having come the farthest distance, and Miss Perrin, of the class of '21, was the only member of the charter group present.

Delta Delta Delta

Delta Delta Delta held its annual June spread at the chapter house, 143 S. Willard Street, which forty Tri-Delt women attended. The dinner followed the annual meeting of the Tri-Delta Corporation. Ivory candles and bowls of flowers decorated the tables. The members of the class of '40 were the honored guests, and were presented with corsages of pansies by Mrs. W. S. Appleyard of Burlington. Mrs. Eileen Russell Brickell '19 called upon several alumnae for impromptu remarks. Dorothy Ellis Gannon '25 of Kansas City, Mo., came from the farthest point.

Kappa Alpha Theta

Lambda Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta celebrated its fifty-ninth spread on Saturday evening in the chapter house with sixty-five alumnae and members of the college chapter present. The seniors were guests.

Florence Woodard, class of 1922, was toastmistress and the following gave toasts: Margaret Rice '31, president of the Alumnae Chapter, Louise Mann '41, Charlotte Hall '40, Helen Distelhurst of Alpha Kappa Chapter, Adelphi College, Mrs. Edward Robinson of Stillwater, Okla., Bernardine Kimball Simonds '15 of Detroit, Charlotte Plummer Perry of Alpha Mu Chapter, University of Montana, Betsey Wright Brown '94, Anna Ward Boardman '15 and Catherine Bassett Hagar '29.

The Mary Mills Deyett pin was presented to Marjory Esherick, the Emma Lane Ostey pin to June Swanson and the announcement was made that Charlotte Hall, highest ranking senior, was wearing the Mable Nelson Jacobs cap and gown during commencement.

Mary Bates '94 and Helen French '21 were in charge of the banquet.

Alpha Xi Delta

The Alpha Xi Delta reunion at East O' Lake marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of this sorority, and the alumnae presented the chapter with a silver gift in honor of the occasion. Mrs. Gladys Brooks spoke on the founding of the sorority and the active chapter presented several skits in keeping with the anniversary spirit. The seniors, honored guests, were presented with gifts from the active chapter. Fifty were present.

Three Y. W. Girls Visit Camp O-AT-KA

Three Y. W. C. A. girls, Shirley Gray '41, Gratia Pearl '42 and Betty Cooper '42, have been chosen to attend Camp O-at-ka at East Sabago, Lake Sabago, Me. They left Monday, June 10, and will spend a week at the camp. This trip was made possible through funds raised by people in the town and by the ladies and women of the faculty. Mary Letta Root '41 has been in charge of raising money and Shirley Gray is chairman of arrangements for the trip. While at Camp O-at-ka the girls will be enrolled in a conference program of worship, friendship, study, and consultation under the finest of leadership. There will be various study groups, and each U. V. M. girl will be in a different group.

Two of the principal speakers will be Prof. Henry P. Van Dusen of Union Theological Seminary and Dr. Richard Roberts who has served as moderator of the United Church of Canada and is a leader of the world movement for Christian unity. Prof. Van Dusen, in his series of daily morning talks, will present the central teachings of Christian faith in their relation to pressing personal and social concerns of our day.

Among the evening speakers will be Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, who will talk on the Christian's responsibilty to labor, and Luther L. Tucker, eastern secretary for the World's Student Christian Federation, who will speak on World Christian Communities.

The program is planned by the general committee of the Student Christian Movement which is made up of all the different religious organizations on New England campuses. Representatives from all New England colleges will be present.

Pi Beta Phi

The Pi Beta Phi dinner, planned by Mrs. Edward F. Crane '15 and Patricia Pike '43, was attended by sixty-five Phi Phis. Mrs. Arthur Crowley '10, Miss Emma Pollard '24 and Dr. Katherine McSweeney were the speakers. Mrs. Beverly Householder Wallace '30 of Beverly Hills, Calif., came from the farthest away from Burlington, and Mrs. Anna Bosworth of the class of '99 was the oldest Pi Phi present.

Sigma Gamma

Thirty attended the Sigma Gamma reunion at Oakledge Manor. Reports from the actives and the alumnae were heard. A gift was presented to Miss Elizabeth Brown, who is soon to be married. Seven seniors were the guests of honor, two of whom have been honored with Phi Beta Kappa keys, and membership in the Home Economics Society, Omicron Nu.

Officers for next year are: President, Mrs. Katherine Eckley Dopp '28; vice-president, Mrs. Mildred B. Williams '37; treasurer, Mrs. Dora Chamberlain Cady '23; and joint secretaries, Mrs. Eloise Erit '28 and Mrs. Katherine Knickerbocker '24.

Military Staff Augmented By Three New Officers

Lieutenant Schofield '40 And Lieutenant Fyfe '38 Join Captain Simpson

Col. Merrill E. Spaulding of the Regular Army, who has been professor of military science and tactics for several years at the University Vermont, announces that Capt. Francis P. Simpson, U. S. Army retired, is the newest addition to the staff of the Military Department of the University of Vermont. Lieut. Robert J. Fyfe, Jr., and Lieut. Carl H. Schofield, Officers Reserve Corps, have been called to active duty for a year's active service with the army and placed on duty with the Military Department of the University.

Formerly in Hawaii

Captain Simpson graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in August, 1917. He served in the American Expeditionary Force in France as a member of the Second Army from August 1918 to July, 1919. After the war, he served in various posts and stations in continental United States and also in Territorial Hawaii. Captain Simpson was retired from the Twelfth Infantry on September 30, 1934, for physical disability in line of duty, and resided near Bridgeport, Conn., until the present emergency required his recall to active duty.

Lieut. Robert J. Fyfe, Jr., graduated from the University of Vermont in 1938. He was a cadet captain in his senior year, his company being awarded the American Legion Trophy as the best company in the R. O. T. C. battalion at Federal inspection. He was distinguished in rifle

Frosh and Superiors Mingle At Mixer

U. V. M. Freshman Week was brought to a close Saturday evening by the Freshman Mixer, first event on the social calendar of the year. This dance, dedicated especially to the freshmen, was attended by that class, almost in a body. A large number of upperclassmen were admitted after 10.15 p.m.

The freshman women and men gathered at the Gymnasium before 8.00 p.m. and were admitted by showing their passes, those well-known little Freshman Handbooks. The evening opened with a program of singing led by Professor Millikan. School songs were followed by Vermont cheers. The dancing began with a grand march led by Professor Millikan and Elizabeth Gurney '41. The strains of the Catamounts provided the inspiration for dancing and the enthusiastic freshmen worked fast to become acquainted with each other before the admission of the upperclassmen, who also wanted to become acquainted with the freshmen.

The Mixer was sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and V. C. A. The committee in charge included K. W. Johnson '41, W. M. Colehamer '41 and Kathleen LeBaron '41.

Miss Woolley Speaks On Contemporary Christian Living

Mary Letta Root and Shirley Gray Take Part In First Vesper Service

The first vesper service of the new school term was held in the Ira Allen Chapel, Sunday, September 22, at four o'clock. The guest speaker, Miss Mary E. Woolley, formerly president of Mount Holyoke College, was introduced by Dean Simpson, who briefly spoke on the great work that Miss Woolley has accomplished toward education. She has been a life senator in the United Chapters' Phi Beta Kappa since 1937, is a member of the National Board Y. W. C. A., Massachusetts and National League of Women Voters, League of Nations Association, American Association of University Women, of which she was president from 1927-1933, New England Women's Press Association, is a director of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches, and was appointed a member of the American delegation to the Conference for the Reduction and Limitation of Armaments, Geneva. As author of historical monographs, Miss Woolley also deserves credit for the realization of "Early History of the Colonial Post Office," "Development of the Love of Romantic Scenery in America" and "History of the Passover Scandal" as well as numerous educational articles.

Modern Christianity

Miss Woolley titled her talk, "The Twentieth Century Christian." Leading up to the subject, she remarked that there has been a great change between the time when she was a girl and the present age. She stated that never in history has there been such a short and sharp reaction in the lives of people. However, Miss Woolley added that she felt encouraged today by one condition: That the students today are more earnest than students of the age after the World War. She termed a Christian as one who attempts to live in the spirit of Jesus Christ. As essential for the building up of a strong spiritual life, Miss Woolley listed three points to remember: 1. To provide food to give a rich store to life. 2. To live a controlled life. 3. To live an inspired life. She stated that the problem of the twentieth century is that we must learn how to live together. One of her closing reminders was that the world today needs men and women whose lives are inspired by the instilling of the eternal.

Sophs Victorious In Fountain Fight

Upsetting all predictions and expectations, twenty-six sophomore men succeeded in dunking twenty-nine of the 200 frosh who charged the fountain last Thursday evening to win the first of the three annual frosh-soph clashes. Unless the freshmen succeed in winning both of remaining struggles, the cane rush and the hose fight, they will be forced to wear those green caps until Thanksgiving.

The traditional enemies fought for seven minutes, and during that time twenty-nine frosh were hydrated and all twenty-six of the sophs likewise visited the depths of Ye Olde Fountain. After the battle the freshmen invaded the business district and tied up traffic with their snake-dance. The evening's tussle was organized and handled by Boulder.

Hygiene classes will begin September 27 at the Fleming Museum. Watch the Y Room bulletin board for assignment of hours.

President Bailey Explains Raise In U. V. M. Tuition

Increase in Cost of Education, Decrease In Charities Cited as Principal Reasons; Tuition Now Lower Than Similar Colleges

President Bailey, in an interview Saturday with a CYNIC reporter, stated that the University was forced to raise the tuition at Vermont to $335 this year because the amount of charities to Vermont has decreased and the cost of providing a college education has increased. Many other colleges, including Middlebury, Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan and Hamilton, have increased their tuition in the last two years. He stressed the fact that the tuition increase was payable the second semester in order to give the students time to raise the money. The President also stated that the University will lend money at a low rate of interest to any student who is absolutely unable to pay the additional amount.

Must Raise Large Amount

The price of educating each student at Vermont per year is $500. The University must raise $100,000 every year in addition to the tuition in order to meet the running expenses of the college. President Bailey also pointed out that in the present unsettled business conditions private donors are less and endowed funds do not earn the rate of interest that they formerly did. Increased income taxes have also made gifts to Vermont much less.

The University is not a state-endowed institution and unlike the University of New Hampshire, for example, it receives no appropriations from the state except ninety senatorial and fifty medical scholarships and a small fund which helps maintain the University Farm.

Others Increase Tuition

Middlebury raised its tuition last year from $300 to $350. The President also cited tuition increases at Amherst from $400 to $450, at Hamilton from $300 to $400, at Wesleyan from $400 to $450 and at Williams from $400 to $450. Tuition at Colgate is $400, at St. Lawrence $360, at Trinity $400 and at Union $400. Thus Vermont's tuition of $335 is one of the lowest in the country when it is compared to other universities which, like Vermont, are not state endowed.

Last year 596 Vermont students received scholarship aid amounting to $107,989 in addition to the 273 students who received $23,046 from the Wilbur Fund. President Bailey said that he is trying this year to increase the number of scholarships available to Vermont students.

Change In Faculty Announced For '40

Doctor King Heads Home Economics Dept.

The beginning of another college year finds sixteen new instructors taking over either the duties of old or filling newly created positions. A number of the faculty members are on leave for advanced study.

The teaching staff of the psychology department has been expanded with the addition of Dr. Henry Clay Smith, who comes from Maryland. A major in mathematics, he graduated with high honors from St. John's College, Annapolis. He took the doctor of philosophy degree in psychology from Johns Hopkins in 1939. Doctor Smith assisted in psychology at that college from 1936-1939; and this past year, as well as doing social work in Baltimore's department of public welfare, he taught in the evening high school of Baltimore City College. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and an associate member of the American Psychological Association.

The psychology department also augmented its list of courses. This year Prof. John T. Metcalf, head of the department, will give two one-semester courses

Czech Refugee Urges Aid To England Immediately

He looked amazed. "Interview ME? Why should you want to interview me? What for?" We explained that as a student refugee from German oppression now entering U. V. M., his life history and experiences as well as his impressions of America and the American way of life would be of interest to CYNIC readers, and thus satisfied, refugee Jacob Katz '43 answered our questions and spoke of himself easily and freely.

By way of background, though Jacob at eighteen has been in this country but six short months, he speaks English fluently and commands a vocabulary easily equal to that of the average college freshman, though he still retains a slight European accent. Born in 1922 in Saxony, Germany, about forty miles from the Czech border, Jacob came from Czech parents and accordingly regards himself as Czech and Czechoslovakia as his homeland.

Compares His and Our Education

His account of his early education offers an interesting comparison of elementary and secondary education here and abroad. There public school is but four years and high school is eight years. There during the eight years of high school, however, the average Czech student takes eight years of Czech, eight years of German, six years of English or Greek, seven of Latin, eight of history, six of geography, two of music, two of philosophy, eight of mathematics, four of natural history, two of zoology, two of botany, four of chemistry, two of physics, eight of gym, and an additional language is optional. He estimated that no more than 30 percent of the population ever finish high school there, and that but half of those ever attend a university. Jacob himself had four years of high school in Germany and two more in Czechoslovakia, but upon his arrival here the New York State Department of Education recognized his schooling as equivalent to our high school course.

The Katz family had been happy in Germany, but by 1937 they felt that life for them in Germany as Jews and as individuals opposed to the Nazi régime would become increasingly unpleasant, and so they moved to Czechoslovakia. While in Germany Jacob had been promi-

Dean Gives Tea For Freshman Girls

Guests of honor at the Dean's Tea last Saturday, September 21, were the girls of the class of '44, escorted by their upperclass "big sisters." They were welcomed by a receiving line in which stood Dean Simpson, Mrs. Guy W. Bailey, wife of the president, Dean Harris, Laura Hawley '41, president of Student Union, and Dorothy Emerson '41, president of Mortar Board. Members of Mortar Board and Student Union acted as assistant hostesses and Sophomore Aids served.

Pouring were wives of the three deans, Mrs. E. Swift, Mrs. G. F. Eckhard, and Mrs. H. A. Kemp, new Home Economics head, Dr. Frances B. King, Mrs. J. W. Marvin, Mrs. P. K. French, Mrs. J. H. Perry, and Mrs. P. A. Moody. Other wives of the faculty and women faculty members were guests at this annual tea honoring the freshmen women.

A meeting for all CYNIC scrubs, reporters, news editors and staff members will be held at Southwick, Tuesday, September 24, at 7.30 p.m.

Welcome, Class of 1944!

There that's done! You are settled in your new quarters, your schedules are mapped out and you've made many new friends. Now the real work has begun.

We welcome you, the Class of '44, to our Vermont campus. We know that Vermont with her 150 years of tradition has much to offer you. If you will give of your best, you will soon feel a loyalty for Vermont that will never wane. Perhaps at college more than in any other place individuals receive in about the proportion which they give.

A good doctor provides a varied diet for the young and growing. Wise educators prescribe the same in courses and human contact. Here, at Vermont, that good balance between an education in living, meeting all types of men and women, working in various extracurricular activities and the formal knowledge that comes from books, is found.

Although we aren't outstandingly wise, we've been ground through the Old Mill somewhat and we've learned a few things that we would like to pass on to the Class of '44. One thing that we students emphasize is a genuine feeling of friendliness, cooperation, and true democracy among all the students. Every student has the same privileges and is subject to the same restrictions.

Honest hard work and true sincerity in all your dealings (both academic and extracurricular) will bring the greatest amount of personal satisfaction and net results to you.

We've also learned that it's a good policy to concentrate the first semester on learning day by day the assignments that you will be given rather than putting off your work until the two weeks before mid-years. It is almost a hard and steadfast rule that students who don't begin to study until mid-years "loom large" come to a sad end—a very sad end.

Single out only one or two of Vermont's many and varied extracurricular activities in order that you may learn more about "the fine art of living" by working with other students in worthwhile projects. "Spreading yourself thin" is disastrous.

You, the Class of '44, should fully realize how fortunate you are to be able to have a college education when the young men of Europe of your age are being trained or are at the present time fighting for their countries. Make the most of your opportunity. Learn all that you can. As Dr. Mary Woolley, former president of Mt. Holyoke College, said in her fine address at the recent Vespers, "We are now passing through what many wise men think to be the most critical period in the history of the world." If this is true, then it is the young men and women of America who will have to answer the challenge to preserve the "American Way," the way of Democracy. We students of America will in the next generation be better equipped to meet these problems which are so vital to all Americans—and even the entire world—if we live and learn in a democratic way.

Vermont has much to give you—150 years of fine tradition, wise and understanding professors, many unique social events, such as our Kake Work, and the opportunity to live and work in a democratic way with a large group of Americans whose aims and ideals are similar to yours. Vermont will give you all these important, worthwhile opportunities. You, in order to gain from them, must learn to give your unlimited support and loyalty to all the things that we, at Vermont, cherish.

We welcome you and wish you the best of luck!

By PAT MOORE and CHUM REYNOLDS

Reversing the procedure of last year as the title might indicate, we will devote our bit of space each week to discussions as concerns the merits and demerits of the weekly crop of recordings—all the opinions presented being our own, whether you like them or not.

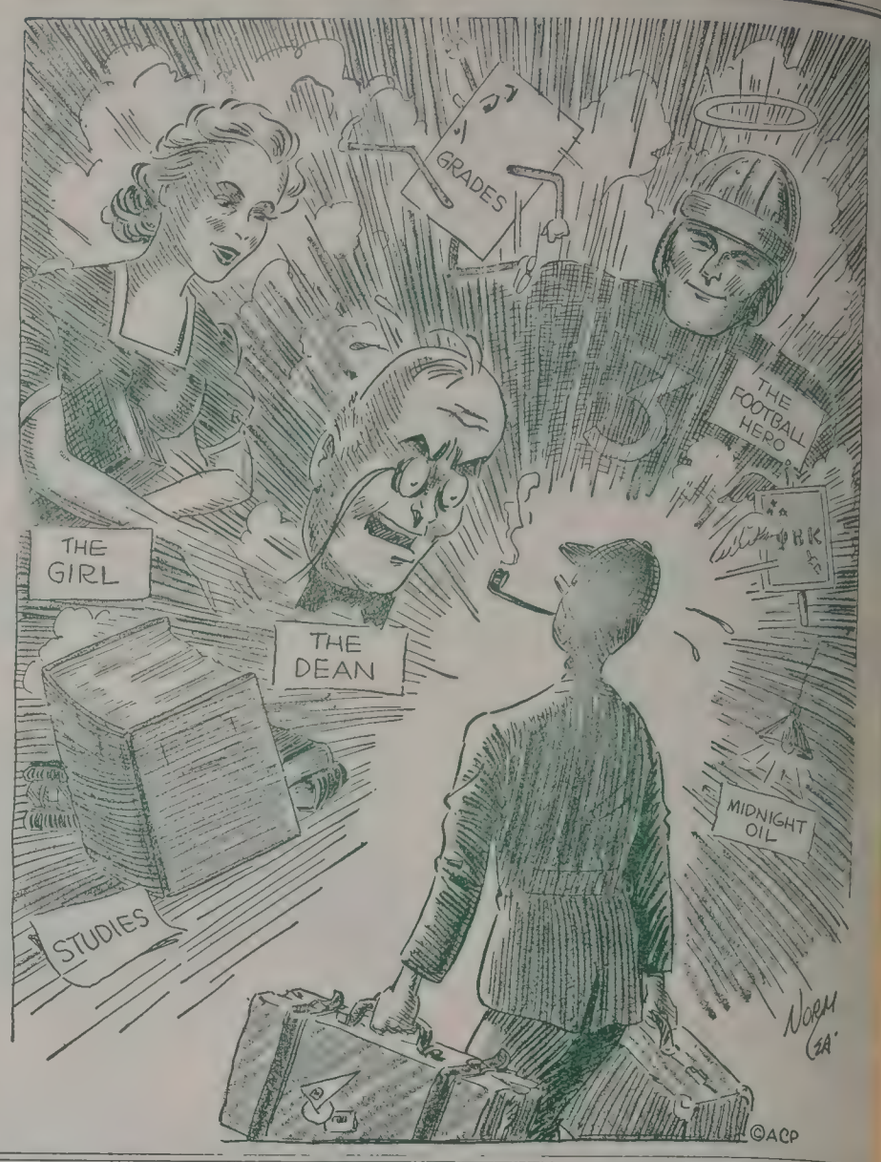
Of course, we can't possibly hope to comment on all outputs, but we'll try to catch the more outstanding ones.

WILL BRADLEY—Here is one band, quite new, which is putting out some really wonderful stuff. Their "Strange Cargo," on Columbia, is tops for sheer originality and fine taste. Tune is a weird blues introduced by the excellent boogie-woogie piano of Freddy Slack. With the tempo slow, Leader Will Bradley's trombone stands out very prettily. Also really solid is ex-Jimmy Dorsey drummer, Ray McKinley.

The same drummer man sings, very convincingly, a little ditty called "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar," parts one and two—also on Columbia. This is a novel tune and McKinley certainly does one original job on it. His style is easy and natural with no affectations. Bradley's sliphorn, Freddy Slack's boog piano, and Steve Lipkin's trumpet also stand out.

TOMMY DORSEY—On "You Think of Everything," Victor, Tommy's trombone, muted, carries the first chorus in his own inimitable style and Connie Haines takes it up from there. Chirping in a manner reminiscent of ex-Goodmanite Helen Forrest, she does a very neat job, all in all. The rhythm section, sparked by a full, rich bass, provides good lift throughout. "Hong Kong Blues," which backs it up, has a peculiar beat—sort of a conga rhythm, and consists of a whole side of "Skeets" Herfurt's singing, which is O.K. if you like it. It's novelty stuff, sporting lots of screwy brass chords.

JOHN KIRBY—Kirby's little band continues to amaze, showing a fullness inconceivable for a seven-piece aggregation. His "Temptation," on Okeh, sports a terrific slow beat, with the leader's bass thumping in fine taste. The disc is mostly all unison stuff, with bits of alto, trumpet and piano. However, with a band like Kirby's it is almost impossible to choose one outstanding man, since they all play with such finesse. The reverse side is a Kirby-Shavers original, "Jumpin' in the Pump Room," and plays up some neat, fast ensemble work, with some equally neat druming filling in behind. All seven men know what they are doing and the result is mighty easy to listen to.



DINAH SHORE—Now here's a gal with a voice that will make you want to quit school and take up the saxophone; man, she's solid! On Bluebird's "The Nearness of You," her full rich tone and marvelous inflection really thrill. Backed by good accompaniment, she reaches the high ones and the low ones with consummate ease and precision. "Maybe," on the other side, is taken at a nice tempo, with an interlude of tasty tenor sax, and the last chorus finds Dinah at her best, with a very pretty change of key at the end. Terrific.

JIMMY DORSEY—Two pops, "Once in a Lovetime," with Bob Eberly singing, and "While the Music Played On," with Helen O'Connell warbling, show off the typical Dorsey style of handling pieces of this kind. Opening with a full chorus of the leader's alto, it then proceeds to the vocal, and this done with, runs through a couple of choruses with everyone having a hand and winds up in a blaze of glory. Sounds all right on good pops, which these are.

DUKE ELLINGTON—Aha, the prize of the week! On "Jack the Bear" recorded for Victor, Duke really socks! Here is originality and creative genius without peer. Starting with alternate piano (Ellington) and bass (Jim Blanton), it rocks on through two nice bits of clarinet and baritone work, followed up by a tenor sax chorus. The five-way sax section really goes all the way through, coupled with some prodigious bass work at beginning and end. For sheer originality, here's one that will be hard to beat. "Morning Glory," which backs it, is raised to great heights by superb trumpet and valve trombone choruses, plus the wonderful phrasing that only the Duke's sax section can get. A really worthwhile record.

Well, this winds it up for this time. See you next week.

In 1890 Coe College students had to have permission from the president to leave town for the week-end.

"How to be a Good Freshman"

By DORIS JARECKIE '42

The freshmen definitely do not know their way around. This fact was well established last Friday, when many weighty observations were made both in and out of the classrooms. Freshmen were actually seen to sit back and take notes during the first day of classes, and to pretend to listen to the words of wisdom with which the air was thick—a thing unheard of as yet in the history of our University.

The upperclassmen, after carefully cogitating, believe that it becomes their greater maturity to take the matter in hand and right this great wrong. "The social status is in grave danger of collapse," remarked one of the more influential seniors, after observing the phenomenon, "and it is our duty, as those ripe with knowledge, to set gently before the offenders our established code of ethics. Males and females—this must not go on!"

(1) Never allow the number of your periods of sleep during class to fall below three times. Any amount less is rank heresy.

(2) Use bee-bee shot in a bean shooter for much better results than spitballs. Always use them on the guy who stands in front of the class and trys to tell you things you already know. The tip of the nose is a very vunerable spot, but hard to hit.

(3) Always lean back in your chair. It's a point of honor to work your chair legs looser than the other fellow's.

(4) Spike paperholders make very admirable substitutes for tacks. Ask one who knows.

(5) Glass marbles strewn up the aisle are quite effective, especially if the plaster is loose below. You can get them wholesale in large quantities.

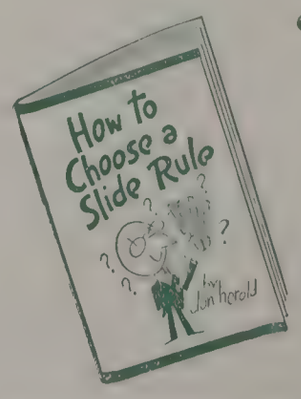
(6) Those who don't know the answer to highly intellectual questions are to be patted on the back. This is a high point of honor.

(7) Never fail to leave extinct chewing gum in places where it will do the most good.

(8) Don't ever be ashamed to walk into an exam without pen or pencil. This is important.

(9) Cheating at all times is to be applauded.

(10) So is singing off key (loudly) during study hours.



Don't think this is all—but it'll do for awhile. We hope.

All sophomore elementary education girls will meet on Wednesday at 4.15

Elementary education seniors will meet in the Engineering Building, Room C on Friday at 11.30.

New N.Y.A. Projects Include Improving The Back Campus

Parking Area, Tennis Courts to be Built. Many Apply for Work

Prof. A. D. Butterfield, Director of N. Y. A. Student Work Program, has announced several changes in N. Y. A. administration for this year. The first is a requirement on the student's part to satisfy not only an American citizenship status, as of last year, but also to swear an oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States.

The second change is a reduction in the allotment from 10 percent of the student body carrying a normal program, as of October last year, to 9.47 percent. This provides employment for approximately 225 students at an average wage of $15 a month, making an average monthly allotment of $1,875, or $16,875 for the nine months.

The nine-month college year is divided into three-month periods, and the director is obliged to specify the amount needed for each respective period at the beginning of that period and the actual amount expended at the end of that same period. Any allotted money not used must be returned to the Montpelier office. This means careful supervision on the part of the director and closer cooperation on the part of the students so that the financial standing may be determined at the end of each week.

Already approximately 400 applications for student labor have been received. Of these, not more than 175 are likely to receive assignments this year. Professor Butterfield's general policy is to make assignments to the greatest number with a minimum wage, rather than to a few with a maximum wage, and students should appreciate this as an act of interest and willingness to help on Professor Butterfield's part.

Many times during the college year, students are obliged to give up their student labor assignments. There are those who drop out of college; some find themselves carrying too heavy a schedule; or perhaps there are those who will find outside work which will bring them even greater dividends. This makes it possible to assign work to new students, and this is always done according to the order of their apparent needs, determined by the information filed by each and a personal conference.

A new project to be taken up this year under N. Y. A. supervision includes the grading and seeding of the back campus. Fill from the excavation for the new Waterman building was dumped there during the summer, and the work of the grading has already begun. When completed, the back campus will provide a fine recreational field.

At Centennial Field, work has begun on the new tennis courts. A larger parking area has been prepared. Similar projects will be taken up throughout the college year. All this work is being done through N. Y. A. assignments to University men.

1942 Ariel Plans Now in Progress

Throughout the summer vacation, plans for the publication of the 1942 Ariel have been in progress.

R. T. Hunting '42, editor, announced that Zamski Studios of New Haven and Philadelphia have been chosen to do the photography. The engraving is to be done by the Howard-Wesson Engraving Company of Worcester, Mass., and the printing by the Free Press Printing Co. Already much preliminary photography has been taken, as photographs of commencement time and campus shots. The preliminary dummies for the Ariel also have been set up. Plans are being made for something new in the color effect of the Ariel which promises to make this year's Ariel better.

A meeting of the editorial staff of the Ariel will be held Wednesday, September 25 at 7.30 at Southwick. The purpose of the meeting will be to organize the staff for the work ahead on the Ariel.

Sixty Men Attend Camp At Abnaki

Y. M. C. A. Entertains Entering Freshmen

Sixty men of the class of '44 had their first official contact with the University when they arrived at Freshman Camp during the afternoon of Friday, September 13. They were greeted by K. W. Johnson '41, W. M. Colehamer '41 and Mr. Powers, directors of the camp. Abnaki, the Vermont Y. M. C. A. camp, was the camp's site.

Athletics, boating and talks were scheduled. These talks were often of an informal nature designed to acquaint the new boys with different aspects of their coming college life. The counsellors, Professor Bickford, Professor Millikan, H. C. Tatro '41, J. M. Evans '41, G. L. Rood '42, J. S. Burgess '42 and H. W. Thurber '43, and the directors led these discussions on every phase of Vermont life. More formal speeches were given by Professor Prentice, Coaches Post and Wietz, Football Manager Ramsdell, Professor Burns and Deans Swift and Eckhard. The faculty found that the boys were more interested in discovering courses that were most often flunked than those which would benefit them most.

The principal speaker was the Rev. George Truman Carl of Chicago. He spoke on "The Meaning of an Education," "Developing a Personality," "Your Own Life—Love, Marriage, Family," and "Religion as a Vital Force in College." None who heard Doctor Carl failed to comment on the extraordinary force and understanding of his speeches.

CHOIR—Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7.00 to 8.00 (Chapel). Beginning Tuesday, September 24.

The average Williams College student sees three movies per week.

Columbia University's estimated resources are $158,314,167.

Music Department Has New Quarters

The Music Department which formerly had its quarters where the Waterman Building is now being constructed, has moved to a rather impressive building at 70 Williams Street. Although the renovations have not been completed, regular classes are being held. The music faculty is very pleased with the new building and its facilities. The sound proofing is superior to that of the old building and the rooms are more attractive.

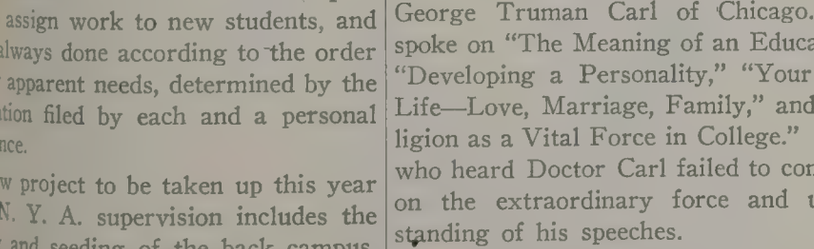
The new building will have an addition constructed in the rear which will house the main classroom and provide a place for orchestra and Glee Club rehearsals.

French Club Now Honorary Society

New Member Must Have High Scholastic Rating

New requirements for membership will be a feature of the French Club this year. In past years the membership has been open to all those interested in joining. This year, under the articles of the new constitution, admission will be by invitation and only those with an average of B in French will be eligible. Therefore, freshmen may not be admitted until after mid-years. No date has been set for the first meeting at which time new members who have been invited to join will be taken into the club. There will be an officers' meeting at chapel hour on Wednesday in Room 3, South College.

Plans for the year include lectures to be given at the meetings and several short plays to be presented by the club. No plans have been made as yet for a full-length play.



Officers of the club for the following year are: President, Gloria Oling '42; vice-president, June Hoffman '43; secretary, Marguerite Benoit '43; treasurer, Stanley Pike '42; chairman of program committee, John Evans '41; chairman of refreshment committee, Alice Needham '43. Professor Doane is the faculty advisor.

Sigma Gamma Leads In Scholarship

Sigma Gamma Sorority again placed first in the scholastic rating among the sororities and fraternities at Vermont with the Alpha Chis in second place. Tau Epsilon Phi led the men's fraternities placing sixth in the scholastic ranking. In second place for the men's fraternities were the Delta Psis.

The following list is the relative order of the scholastic rank of the seventeen fraternities and sororities: Sigma Gamma, Alpha Chi Omega, Pi Beta Phi, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Psi, Delta Phi Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Phi Sigma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Iota, and Sigma Phi.

Catamounts Get Set For Football Season

Thirty-five Men Report for Practice First Game Saturday

By Charles Katzew

Accompanied as usual by the full stock of rumors, muck-raking, and predictions, another football season at U. V. M. gets under way. With a phenomenally large squad of thirty-five working into shape under the direction of new Head Coach "Fuzzy" Evans and Assistant Coach Roy Wietz, the returning grandstand quarterbacks are faced not with the problem of where to play the waterboy, but whether to use team A, B, or C.

First indication of a generous-sized squad came the first day of training, two weeks before enrollment, when thirty-three men reported to Coach Evans, who this year replaces former Head Coach Johnny Sabo. Among these initial thirty-three were seventeen lettermen of last year plus another group of sixteen men made up of last year's frosh gridironers, and several upperclassmen who were either ineligible last year or who did not report for football previously. Temporarily absent on that day was Frankie Taylor, backfield star and four-letter man, who was busy at the time getting married to Co-ed Carolyn Bell. Permanently absent were two of last year's regulars, Ed Kodys, who was thrown for a loss by last year's finals, and Norm Dubie, who is not returning.

Pre-school Training

For the first few days the squad was subjected to physical conditioning at the field, afternoons, and mental conditioning, in "skull practices," at the gym, evenings. This double-session routine was cut to one a day at the start of classes, Friday. During the pre-school training period, training table was set up at the S. A. E. house.

With one of the toughest schedules in years ahead, Coaches Evans and Wietz will have all of last year's regular backs and almost two complete veteran lines on hand to work with. Add to this the fruits that blossomed from the frosh eleven and the prospect is not displeasing. It is expected that the rear-guard action will be fought mainly by Taylor, Spasyk, Corsonnes, and Herb Long, while these will be joined by "Iron Man" Shaw and Mickey Gilbert on the reconnaissance activities. Misty Rice is slated to be moved back from the front line to be converted into a blocking back.

Experimental Game Played

Last Saturday, at the finish of over two weeks of preparatory training, the Catamount squads emerged at Centennial Field to play a full-time game between the aforementioned A (the Blacks), B (the Whites) and C (the Reds). The teams, purely temporary combinations, played first as units then were scrambled experimentally. The final score: Vermont 6—Vermont 6.

The natural early season flaws were present—as was only to be expected. There were many offside plays, insufficient interference for the passer, etc., but each error in turn was immediately attacked by "Fuzzy" and Roy and were noticeably reduced in the following action.

To Meet Northeastern

The first game of the season will be played this Saturday at Centennial Field when the Catamounts face the eleven Northeastern Huskies from Beantown. Although the present Northeastern squad is mainly composed of sophomores, it is believed that Jimmy Dunn's men will prove a formidable threat to the Catamount triplets. The Huskies started their active campaign last Saturday and come here with the wounds of a 10-0 defeat at the hands of Rhode Island State still raw. Whether or not this is indicative of an off day or superiority of either team is still too early to tell. Different Catamount combinations will continue to be tested during the rest of this week as the starting line-up will probably not be definitely settled until Friday.

Sherry Fogg New Freshman Coach

To Handle Track, Football, Basketball

He's five feet, eleven inches tall, tips the beams at a mere 170 pounds, and is trim, neat, modest, unassuming, and yes, girls, he's handsome. In these few words may I introduce to the class of '44 your coach and to you upperclassmen the newest addition to the physical education department. He's listed on the staff as Sherman P. Fogg, but everyone calls him "Sherry."

"Sherry" was born on July 7, 1906, in Ashley, Mass., a quiet little town twenty-six miles from Boston whose only claim to fame lies in the fact that it is the starting point for the Boston Marathon. Most of his schooling, however, was obtained in Vermont, first at Underhill and later at Burlington, where he graduated from high school. While at Burlington High, "Sherry" took a prominent position in athletics, being a member of the football, baseball, basketball, and track teams. Here his athletic career was well started.

In 1924 Sherman Fogg entered our own University where in his first year he played football, maintaining a position as halfback, basketball, and track. In the latter sport he excelled in the high jump, pole vault, and weight events. Sherry left Vermont in 1925 and attended the Art Students' League in New York City for two years.

In 1929 he entered the University of Wisconsin, which gave him his degree in 1933. While at Wisconsin he took part in track and even entered a new sport, swimming. He also coached freshman track while attending that university.

It was during this time that he coached a freshman in the weight and track events who was later to make a name for himself. This boy was "Champ" Siebold, now playing a guard position for the Green Bay Packers in the professional league.

"Sherry" next obtained a coaching position at Newport High School where he remained for some time before coming back to the scene of his first college days. He came back to Vermont where he coached baseball and track for one year. Then he transferred his attentions farther south and was made coach at Bellows Falls, where he remained for three years. "Sherry's" many years of experience have produced his coaching of such boys as the Bradley brothers, Dave and Steve, famous skiers at Dartmouth; Herb Stuewe, conference champ in the high hurdles; Henry Kleinschmidt, conference champ in the half-mile; Costin, a fullback at Norwich now; and Charlie Klapper, a back at Middlebury. He's coached men who have attended numerous universities all over the country, including Dartmouth, Boston University, Middlebury, Norwich, Cornell, Syracuse, Michigan, Wisconsin, Purdue, Notre Dame, University of Southern California, University of Alabama (five), Duke, and Vermont, his latest addition being "Sig" Sysko, Vermont's star outfielder.

"Sherry" has still more accomplishments to add to his record. He holds state records in Vermont in the high jump and pole vault, was a member of the New York Athletic Club track team, holds several local district diving championships, and reached the finals in the Olympics during 1932 in the fancy diving contests.

Once more Sherman Fogg, now the proud father of three children, one girl and two boys, returns to U. V. M. His hair is slightly gray, but he still maintains that trim athletic figure that was of such help in his own college days. He'll make a fine addition to a fine coaching and physical education department.

IMPORTANT NOTICES!

Regular gym classes will begin Wednesday, September 25. The first class will be held at Southwick. Girls come prepared to participate—rain or shine. Fees for golf and riding will be collected.

Yesterday: Fine.
Today: Fine.
Tomorrow: Gosh, better get that book back to the library.—The Ram.

Women in Sports

Saturday morning the first exhibition hockey game ever to be played at Vermont will be held. W. A. A. is sponsoring the match between the Mohawk Club of Albany, N. Y., which is one of the few independent active clubs of the New England section of the United States Field Hockey Association, and the girls of the U. V. M. hockey team. About nine girls are coming up from the Albany district and the game promises to be a good one.

The new clubs which have been formed by W. A. A. will soon be under way, and everyone is invited to join them as they are not limited to ability.

The Hockey Club, under the direction of Esther Gove, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4.50. Future plans will be decided at the first meeting, but at present the main point of interest is the game with the Mohawk Club of Albany on Saturday morning.

The Tennis Club will meet at 4.50 on Mondays and Wednesdays, right after the advanced tennis class. Theresa Coderre, the manager, is planning to have a round robin tournament within the club, rating the contestants, and inviting the men to mixed doubles matches.

The Archery Club will meet at 4.45 on Friday afternoons. Dawn Nichols, the manager, is planning a fall tournament within the club.

Swimming plans will be made the week of October 28.

The sports managers for the year are as follows: Hockey, Esther Gove; tennis, Theresa Coderre; riding, Catherine Shaw; golf, Virginia Mitchell; basketball, Catherine Peterson and Edith Libby; badminton, Kay Kyle and Alice Howe; bowling, Elizabeth Isham and Ruth Hopkins; volleyball, Sophie Gorney; dancing, Jean Finney; swimming, Virginia Amidon; ping-pong, Thelma Packard; skiing, Dorothea Smith and Barbara Burns.

Miss Eleanor Cummings will again be head of the women's physical education at U. V. M., a position she has so successfully filled for several years here. Miss Cummings graduated from Boston University and the Wellesley Physical Education Department of Hygiene. She has taught in Dayton, Ohio, and in Northfield Seminary, Northfield, Mass. She spent four summers studying at Harvard with

End of Summer

Back in the saddle after a summer which included everything hitch-hiking to politics, we find ourselves minus a colleague and ing ahead to a year which will include the writing of two so-columns every week. If that isnt something to throw anybody before he's even up, we don't know what is.

Right now we only "know what we read in the papers." Coach has already had the Cats in moleskins for a couple of weeks An a "believe-it-or-not" item when we state that almost forty hopefuls reported this year. That is one of the largest squads at Vermont Ethan Allen took Fort Ticonderoga from the British. It's certain great improvement over last year's outfit that was almost reduced t point of using volunteers from the stands as substitutes.

Experience seems to be a strong point in Vermont's favor this With a score of veterans returning including Taylor, Carlson, Spa Rice, Reed, etc.—the outlook is suspiciously rosy.

It Looks Now—As If

With Northeastern coming up on September 28 the Catamounts no time to lose. According to advance reports (which are abou reliable as yesterday's war communiques) Northeastern will fie strong, experienced squad. They are picked to break better than on a fairly tough schedule. The return of last year's veterans do hurt their chances any. But the way things are shaping up now Cats should be ready to give a good account of themselves by Sep ber 28.

From the Vacation Scrap Book

Rumor has it that Bud Kimball is being eyed by the Brool Dodgers. The Catamount combination of Taylor, Kimball and Pes did some fancy ball playing for the Burlington Cardinals, North League champions, this summer. Larry Gardner, Vermont's base mentor is down in the southern climes handling the United States tingent in the International Amateur Baseball League. Bob Car standout Green and Gold hurler last season pitched three hitless inn the other day for the same outfit. And that is that for our first tribution.

FRESHMEN! Here's One Rule Not In The Book

YOU may have to wear a freshman cap, but there's no rule against wearing Arrow shirts. No doubt you've discovered by this time that more college men wear Arrow shirts than any other brand shirt. There are reasons: The superb Arrow collar, the Mitoga cut, the anchored buttons, and the permanent fit (Sanforized-Shrunk, fabric shrinkage less than 1%). All these extra values plus authentic styling are yours for the small sum of $2.

a course on correctives under Norman Fradd, and has served on several committees of the National Association of College Directors. This past summer Miss Cummings studied health education at Cornell.

Miss Brenda Larson will be on the physical education staff this year, taking Miss Rosemary Hazard's place. Miss Hazard was married to Mr. John Ropes in June, and is now living in Stratford, Conn. Miss Larson graduated from the Boston School of Physical Education, received her degree from Columbia, and her master's degree from that same university this summer. She was head of the physical education department at the Brockton Y. W. C. A. and supervisor of physical education in the public schools of Shrewsbury, Mass., besides teaching in many summer camps. In New York, she studied dancing under the renowned dancers, Charles Wiedman and Doris Humphreys. Miss Larson also studied dancing under Mary O'Donnell, head of the dance at Columbia University, and Mrs. Sally Dietrich, also of Columbia.

Miss Barbara Crowe will be on the staff again this year. She graduated from Bouvé Boston School of Education, and received her B.S. degree at the University of Michigan. She has taught at the Bremmer School in Boston, Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., at the University of Michigan, and the Bouvé Boston School of Education, where she instructed sailing classes. Miss Crowe belongs to the United States Field Hockey and LaCrosse Association teams, is a national referee of basketball, and the state chairman of basketball in Vermont. She is also secretary of the Eastern District of the National Section on Women's Athletics.

First Vesper Service

During the vesper service, the responsive reading and hymn announcements were given by Shirley Gray and Mary Letta Root led the scripture reading and prayer. The 1940-1941 chapel choir, under the direction of Prof. Howard G. Bennett, made its first appearance.

All students who, at the time of enrollment last week, were unable to fill in the small information cards completely, or who have changed their address since filing these cards last week, are requested to call at Registrar's Office, Room 5, Medical Building, immediately, in order to make the necessary additions or changes. This information is needed for the University Directory.

Y. W. C. A. Entertains New Freshmen at Camp Hochelaga

The 1940 Freshman Camp for Women held at Hochelaga and sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. of the University of Vermont, proved to be "bigger and better" than ever. With Elizabeth Gurney '41 as director and Gratia Pearl '42 as assistant director, the 118 freshman girls were given their first glimpses of their future college life. There were twelve upper classmen who helped the girls get acquainted and who assisted in the carrying out of the program of varied interests. These girls, members of Y. W. C. A. Council and Mortar Board, senior women's national honorary society were: Shirley Gray '41, Laura Hawley '41, Kathleen LeBaron '41, Maywood Metcalf '41, Margaret Crowley '41, Mary Letta Root '41, Sally Rome '42, Betty Cooper '42, Janet Dike '43 and Joyce Gilman '43. Charlotte Perkins '38 was also there and helped wherever she could.

Friday night, after the freshmen had registered, a banquet was given in honor of their arrival and Dean Simpson, Dean Harris and Shirley Gray, president of Y. W. C. A. gave them warm greetings. After the banquet everyone enjoyed a miniature golf game in the Wigwam.

Saturday morning short talks were given by Margaret Crowley on campus life, Laura Hawley on studies and Miss Fairbanks, home economics state supervisor, on clothes. In the afternoon, hikes, shuffle board, volleyball and swimming were in progress, followed by a scavenger hunt and picnic.

Beautiful weather was enjoyed by all on Sunday and in the afternoon skits were given by each tent. After joining the group's buffet supper, Rev. John Henry Hopkins, guest speaker, contributed greatly to the Sunday evening service.

Monday saw the closing of Freshman Camp, but the girls gathered again at the Group Sing at Grassmount in the evening.

Changes In Faculty

in the history of psychology and systematic psychology. A full year's course in psychological tests and measurements will be taught by Prof. Rex. M. Collier.

Prof. Bertha M. Terrill, who resigned as head of the home economics department, has been replaced by Dr. Florence King. Doctor King had been connected with the federal department of home economics at Washington before coming to this University. She graduated from the University of Illinois, took her master's degree at the University of California and her doctorate at the University of Indiana.

Dr. Gordon Baylies Ray is taking the place of Prof. John DeForest for the first semester. Professor DeForest is on leave at Yale University. Doctor Ray, a graduate of Harvard, took his doctor of philosophy there in 1940. He taught French at Harvard from 1936-1939 and last year received the Rivers traveling fellowship, which he used in Mexico.

The place of Errol C. Slack, who will study this year in the University music department, has been filled by Dr. Stewart Lynde Johnston. Doctor Johnston has also been an instructor in French at Harvard. He is a graduate of Wesleyan in 1931 and he, too, took his Ph.D. degree from Harvard in June, 1940.

Prof. Winchester H. Heicher has joined the political science department, replacing Prof. Melvin H. Laatsch, who is on leave to study at Princeton. Professor Heicher has taught several years at New York University.

W. Howard Martin has become supervisor of agricultural education in the state, succeeding the late Prof. Kenneth Sheldon in that capacity. Taking Martin's place as assistant state supervisor is C. L. Park, Jr., a graduate of Vermont, who has taught agriculture in Thetford Academy.

Michael Anselmo, violinist, and Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, formerly assistant to the director of public school music at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, are new instructors in the music department. Mr. Anselmo takes over the violin instruction duties of Mrs. Charlotte deVolt Elder, now teaching at Lynchville College in Virginia. The teaching of public school music and orchestration and the conducting of the University orchestra will be the duties of Mr. Pappoutsakis.

Della M. Perrin is taking the place left vacant by the resignation of Miss Clara M. Wheeler as supervisor of student teaching in the education deparment.

James Waln has been replaced by G. Maynard Trafton, principal of the St. Johnsbury Vocational School. He will be teacher trainer for trades and industrial education.

Arnold Drew joins the English department staff as instructor taking the place of Miss Kathrina Storms. Mr. Drew took a master's degree in English at the University of Vermont and has already served as assistant in that department.

Sherman Fogg, who had previously worked in the physical education department for a year, and recently has been a coach at Bellows Falls High School, is freshman coach of football and basketball at the University and is instructor in the men's physical education department.

Blenda Larson is new in the women's physical education department, taking the place of Rosemary Hazard. Miss Larson is a graduate of Bouvé Boston School of Physical Education and has B.S. and M.A. degrees from Columbia.

Prof. Lester Prindle, head of the classical department, and Prof. Raymond Hall of the English department, are other faculty members on leave this year. Professor Prindle's study semester will be spent mainly in New York. Professor Hall will be studying at Columbia.

Freshmen who left clothes out at Southwick Physical Education Department are requested to come after them.

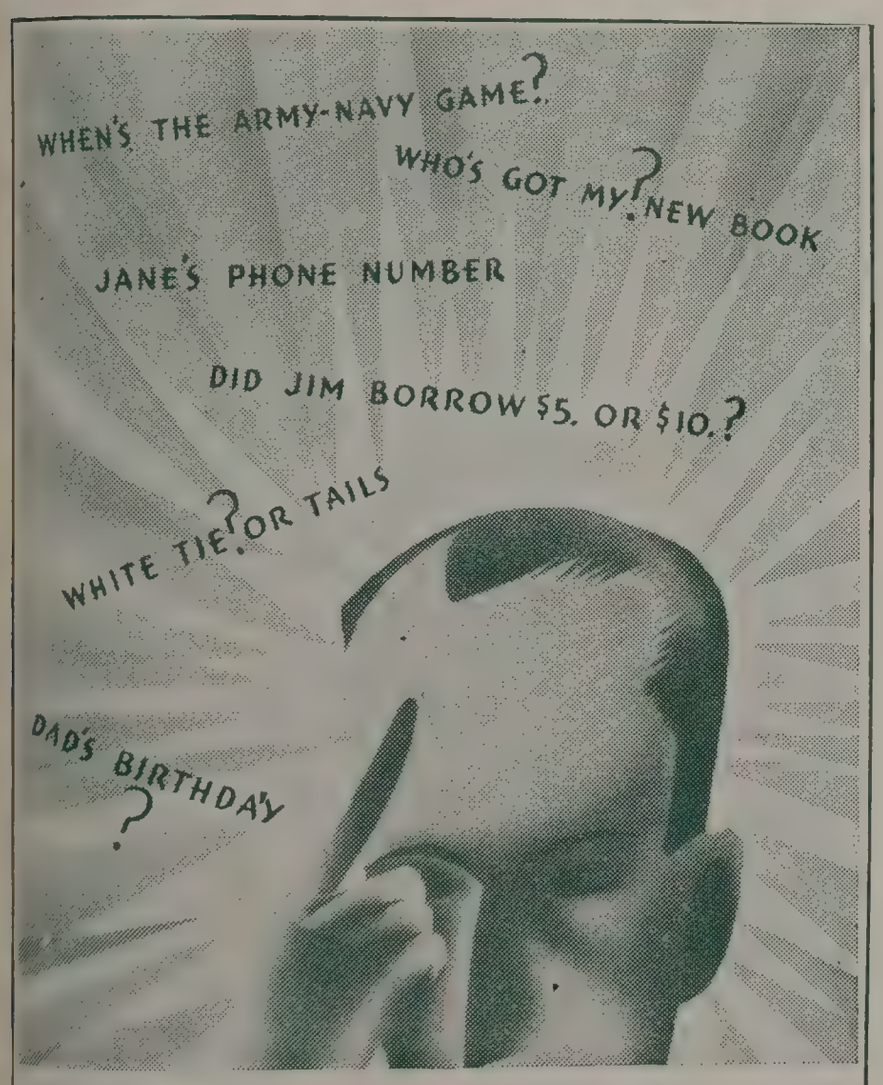
Speaks on Guatemala



"Guatemala" was the subject of a talk which Prof. Sara M. Holbrook of the University of Vermont education department gave at the opening exercises of Johnson Normal School last Friday evening. Professor Holbrook has traveled in Guatemala, Central America, where she observed the lives and customs of the inhabitants. Several students of the Normal school wore Guatemalan costumes to illustrate Professor Holbrook's talk.

New U.V.M. Student Is Czech Refugee

nent in the Jewish Boy Scout Movement, and once in Czechoslovakia he joined a similar Youth Movement, Zionistically inclined, called Young Maccabee.

Joins Young Maccabees

It was just prior to the tragic Czech crisis of 1938 that the movement put itself at the disposal of the Czech Government. Hitherto Germans had been employed as interpreters and translators in Czech telegraph offices, as many communications were received and sent in German. Fearing the Germans as Fifth Columnists, the government placed members of the Young Maccabee who, like Jacob, were refugees from Germany in these important posts as translators.

Jacob himself at the time was placed on station duty, where it was his job to maintain order, aid refugees, and to direct soldiers to trains. He was given power to evacuate families near his station in case of emergency, to take temporary possession of cars, and to travel on busses and trains at no cost. His gas mask was his constant companion. Members of his movement were on active duty eighteen hours daily, and it was early one morning while a group of them were resting in the compartment of a train that one of their number who was then on active telegraph duty rushed into the compartment with the dreaded news of Munich. As he blurted out his report filled with emotion, those in that car foresaw the doom of Czechoslovakia.

Jacob related vividly the story of that trying period—the crisis with mobilization, with border incidents, with demonstrations, with the speeches of various foreign ambassadors, and finally with the forced flight of President Benes. Then, of course, the redrawn boundaries and as a bitter example came the case of the boundary near Prague—the new boundary gave possession of the power plant which supplied the city of Prague with electricity to Germany, thus placing Prague at the mercy of Germany.

Hitler Enters Prague

Early in the morning of March 15, 1939, a friend breathlessly awoke the Katz family, now living in Prague, to tell them that Hitler himself would soon be there. At 8.00 a.m. Jacob, walking through the center of Prague saw German houses already bedecked with swastikas, but returning at 10.00 a.m. he saw that all of the windows so decorated had been smashed. Windows also had been smashed in the German Bank and the German University.

At this point we interrupted to query as to pictures which were published in American papers at the time, showing Czech throngs joyously greeting Hitler. At this, Jacob became perhaps a bit excited and told how he had seen throngs of Sudetan Germans transported to Prague by truck, placed in narrow streets, and thus photographed by the Germans. Czechs, said he, all stayed in their homes. Jacob also told of "another dirty trick" played by the Germans for the sake of propaganda: In Paris a huge throng was assembled by order and a voice over the loud-speaker asked how many did not understand German. Those who did not understand German were told to signify so by raising their arm, and while the throngs raised their arms the Germans photographed them and published the picture as showing Parisians giving the Nazi salute.

Jacob went on to tell of Gestapo visits to his own home in Prague and then how after months of travel alone he met his parents and brothers in England on August 1, 1939. While in London he worked for the Voluntary Czech Committee to aid refugees. Finally in April, 1940, he landed with his family in New York. He is now entering the University on scholarship, and while at Vermont will be the guest of the Phi Sigma Delta house. His parents and younger or "kid brother" as he terms it, are now in New York, and his older brother is a brilliant philosophy student at Stanford.

As to his impressions of America: He thinks it's great. Life, he says, is easier here, as people are not as politically minded and active as in Europe, but he says that that is understandable as we are not in such immediate danger as European countries. He places England's chances of winning the war now at "60 to 40," and urges that America give every aid possible to England NOW. He claims that England does not need more men, but that she does need more equipment and that "people like Mr. Henry Ford should be forced to turn out armaments."

Democracy Wonderful

Democracy here, says he, is wonderful, yet he voiced one criticism—the big business man harms democracy by disobeying laws, and as an example, cited the fact that he recently worked 52 hours a week for $10.00 in New York, decidedly contrary to the wage and hours law.

There are fewer co-eds in European colleges, related Jacob and, therefore, less co-ed social life, but there is a much wider and more active athletic program in foreign schools. Fraternities there are maintained mainly to encourage competitive sports.

Dates are also different "over there." There is little of "this going with a girl for a while and then going with another one and then another one." There the boy meets the parents right away and starts going steady. Jacob also observed that in Europe the boys always say "Hello" before the girl does.

Then we finally weakened and asked him what he thought of jazz. He grinned, stroked his chin, and then ventured that as he does not understand it he cannot enjoy it, but he also slyly added that it occasionally does give him a headache!—But not for long!

Eight Students Hold U. V. M. Fellowships

The University of Vermont has awarded Fellowships to the following students for the year 1940-41:

Channing Leach Adams, U. V. M. '40, physics; Burton Primrose Brown, Colorado '39, electrical engineering; Edward J. Cats to Open Season Against Huskies Here

Rapid Progress On Waterman Memorial

Completion Promised By September 1, 1941

Work on the new Waterman Memorial Building is progressing at a rapid rate, and the construction officials are confident that the building will be completed by September 1, 1941, thus assuring the opening of the structure for the students next year.

One of the members of the architectural staff stated that the roof would be on by Christmas which will enable the workmen to continue their labors throughout the winter.

Begun in July

Construction on the memorial was started the 17th of July and two steam shovels were employed steadily during the summer excavating 3,000 cubic yards of earth. The excavation has now been completed and the foundation is practically finished.

The Waterman Memorial will serve officially as an administration building with a complete set of offices for the officials of the University. The engineers will benefit greatly, however, as the basement will contain fully equipped electrical and mechanical engineer laboratories. In addition to these laboratories, the psychology department will be allotted space for experimental laboratories. Classrooms, guest rooms, and recreational rooms will be contained in the memorial thus promising the University of Vermont one of the largest and most beautiful college buildings on any campus in New England.

Credit for the style of the structure goes to the architectural staff of McKim, Mead, and White who designed Ira Allen Chapel, Southwick Memorial, Fleming Museum, and the Burlington City Hall.

THE CATHOLIC GIRLS' GROUP will meet Sunday, September 29, at 7.15, at the residence of Dr. Katherine McSweeney, 44 South Willard Street. All Catholic girls, especially the freshmen, are urged to attend.—HELEN WITHAM, SALLY ROME.

Faculty Invited To Football Game

Professors are Guests At Opener Tomorrow

Today the Faculty members are procuring tickets for themselves and their families to attend the Northeastern University-University of Vermont football game which will go on tomorrow afternoon at Centennial Park, starting at 2.30 o'clock sharp. At its September meeting the Athletic Council voted that this event would be designated as a Faculty Day game.

Save for a ten-cent government tax, there will be no charge for these tickets. They may be obtained at the Old Mill or at the Administration Building Book Stores.

Keen interest is being manifested in regard to this game. Not only is it the first of the season, but the sultry weather of the first week has given way to a briskness that extolls football activity.

On Display at Museum

Anyone visiting the Fleming Museum this week-end may see the magnificent display of Orrefors glass in the Oriental Room. It contains masterpieces of Swedish glass, lent by Blanche A. Byerley, and will remain at the Museum through September 30.

U.V.M. Dairy Teams Place In Contests

Win Cox Cup as Best Team in New England

University of Vermont students made a creditable record in the intercollegiate dairy cattle and dairy products judging contests held this week at the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield, Mass., under the auspices of the American Dairy Science Association. Twelve states sent teams for the cattle judging contests and ten states for the dairy products contest.

The two Vermont teams each placed fourth in the respective competitions including all five breeds of dairy cattle and the four dairy products, butter, cheese, ice cream and market milk.

The cattle team, besides placing fourth on all breeds, was fifth on Ayrshire, fourth on Brown Swiss and fourth on Jerseys. Also, it won the cup offered by the Charles M. Cox Company to the highest ranking team from the New England States only. The team was coached by Dr. M. H. Campbell and included K. J. Estey '41 of Hinesburg, who stood fifth among thirty-six individuals on the judging of all breeds and tied with four others for fifth place on Jerseys; G. H. Bailey '41 of Rochester; E. E. Gifford, Jr., '41 of Bethel; and E. F. Paquette '41 of Craftsbury, alternate.

The team which judged dairy products in addition to ranking fourth on all products was third on market milk and fourth on both cheese and ice cream. Members of this team were E. E. Gifford, Jr., who was ninth on all products and fifth on cheese, R. O. Slack '41 of Randolph Center and R. F. Evans '41 of Groton, alternate. The team was instructed by Dr. J. A. Newlander, coach, and Dr. E. O. Herreid.

Michigan won the contest with Connecticut standing second and Cornell third.

Pilgrim Fellowship

The first meeting of the year of the Pilgrim Fellowship was held Sunday, September 22, in the Parish House of the First Church.

Rev. Stanley Jones and Miss Hartpence gave greetings to the forty young people who attended. Hymns were sung and refreshments served at the end of the meeting.

Plans for next Sunday are not as yet completed, but will be posted on the bulletin board in the near future.

Fraternities Plan Saturday Dances

First Dances to Follow Football Game

The following social activities among the various fraternities on the hill are being planned for this week-end.

At the Delta Psi house there will be a Tea Dance following the football game from five to eight. E. F. Roby '41 is in charge.

Professor and Mrs. Witham will chaperon a Tea Dance from five-thirty to eight at the Phi Delta Theta house, also following the game on Saturday. J. W. Williams '43, W. B. Nestler '43, and W. J. Murray '43 are co-chairmen.

R. C. Steinman '42, N. H. Chernichaw '43, and P. M. Gold '43 will be in charge of the Tea Dance at the Phi Sigma Delta house. Professor Youngert will chaperon.

At the Sigma Nu Lodge, there will be an alumni super with Professor and Mrs. Gats of the class of '26, of Chicago, as special guests. J. D. Sawyer '42 is in charg of the affair.

The members of Lambda Iota Society will hold a Tea Dance following the Northeastern game Saturday, from five to eight. Music will be furnished by Red Dower and his orchestra, and Professor and Mrs. L. S. Rowell and Doctor and Mrs. W. A. Stultz of the Medical College will chaperon. H. E. Thurber '43 is in charge of the arrangements.

Among alumni expected to be present are W. E. Weston '82 of Montclair, N. J., Prof. H. E. Stryken '11 of the Physics Department of the University of Minnesota, and T. J. Mulcare '09 of Cambridge, Mass., President af the University of Vermont Alumni Council.

Engineering College Trains Machinists

Course is in Program For National Defense

Training in shop work which prepares young men for machinists' jobs in industry, aimed at providing more machine workers for the national defense program, has been carried on by the Engineering College of the University of Vermont during the past two months. The second of two groups of twelve youths who received the shop work training will complete their month's course this week (week of Monday, September 23), and for the present the program will stop. Not college students, the boys were selected by John E. Nelson, State Superintendent of Trade and Industrial Education in the Department of Education at Montpelier. The work was part of a School Training Program for National Defense, which is being carried on by the United States Office of Education.

The first group of twelve youths took the month of training in August, and the second in September. Receiving instruction in lathe work, drill press, and other machines, from A. E. Batchelder, instructor in shop work at the Engineering College, the boys, on conclusion of the course, are prepared to secure machinists' jobs in industries and machine shops.

Taylor and Spasyk Pivot Men in New Attack Huskie Squad Numbers Many Soph Reserves

Frank Taylor, stellar U. V. M. back, will kick off to a heavy Northeastern team tomorrow at Centennial Field to open the Catamount football season of 1940. The Cats, who line up three deep in each position, will flash a wide-open and exceedingly fast type of play. Basketball-wise Coach Fuzzy Evans will alternate one full team for another at each quarter and draw his reserves from the third team. This plan will give Vermont a blitzkrieg type of attack and should allow each man to go at full speed for his half game.

Fast Offense

In their first scrimmage the Vermonters looked ragged, but under the tutoring of Fuzzy Evans and Roy Wietz they have improved steadily. They have been equipped with a galaxy of plays and a clever quarterback, Johnnie Spasyk, to call the right play at the right time. Frankie Taylor will do a great deal of the pill toting and may also be called upon to do the passing. In the kicking department Fuzzy can call on any of five men, although Spasyk and Pullinen will probably do most of the punting and versatile Taylor will do the place kicking.

Coaches Evans and Wietz have a twenty-veteran nucleus around which to build their two-team attack. Only three men are missing from last year's varsity, and with the addition of last year's freshmen and several ineligibles the squad number has swelled to thirty-six men.

The Green and Gold will be faced by a Northeastern team which averages close to 180 pounds and which has already seen action in their tilt with Rhode Island last Saturday. The Huskies lost to Rhodie 10-0, but Coach Jimmie Dunn thinks that this defeat takes nothing away from the Beantown boys since this year's Rams are the strongest he's ever seen and their scoring consisted of a beautiful runback of a punt and a field goal. The Rams didn't buck their way to many first downs through the line, and fought the Huskies on even terms throughout most of the scrimmage.

Mostly Sophs

The Huskie eleven will be composed of three veterans, four lettermen, and four of last year's frosh. Their reserves con-

Y. W. C. A. Sponsors Membership Drive

Inaugurating New Service, Red Cross

Y. W. C. A. is holding its annual membership drive. Any girl on campus is eligible to be a member of the Young Woman's Christian Association. For the total sum of ten cents a girl may do active service in any number of different fields.

The following duties are but a few that one might do: The Burlington Settlement House, working at the handicraft club or with pre-school children, entertaining the Mothers' Club, amusing babies at the Elizabeth Lund Home, visiting at the Old Ladies' Home, and working at the Rock Point School.

However, if anyone is interested in doing secretarial work, the opportunity is given you at the Howard Relief Agency.

Y. W. C. A. is inaugurating a new field of service this fall, namely, working with the Red Cross. It is hoped that there will be a large enough group on the campus interested in knitting and in bandage making to warrant an instructor at our own college.

To be a Y. W. C. A. member bring your ten cents to Mass Meeting, October 2.

Lithuanian Girl Discusses Her Impressions of America

Perked up in a nice soft rocking chair like any modern American girl when this reporter called, it was very difficult to believe that Eva Maidenbaum has only been in America a little over a year. Attractive and vivacious, her lively sense of humor kept things humming during the entire interview.

It all happened about a year ago in Memel, Lithuania, where Eva and her family lived. Due to a little misunderstanding with Hitler (and who hasn't had one) it became necessary, although a little inconvenient, to leave town. Consequently it wasn't at all surprising that Eva and family should come to America and settle down in Hewlett, Long Island.

"One year in high school there taught me all the English I know," said Eva. "But I am trying very hard to get rid of my accent."

Incidentally the accent that is the object of Eva's affliction isn't as bad as she painted it.

"I happened to pick out the University of Vermont," said Eva, "because of its situation among the mountains, the lake and other bits of scenery, and since my sister went to a southern university I decided upon one in the North."

Some of the objects in America which proved to be surprises to Eva were her first glimpse of a little negro baby and some jitterbugs. "I could hardly believe they were dancing," she said.

"One of the first things I noticed about America," Eva continued, "was that people always seemed to measure artistic objects in terms of money. In Europe it was tradition that counted."

Shopping in America proved to be quite a success. In Memel it seemed that one picked out a piece of material, went to the dressmaker and had a dress made. It was all very convenient to go into a shop and pick out a ready-made dress.

"Besides," Eva said, "I think European women are better dressed than American. They don't wear a lot of junk."

Before indulging in an argument I left, but with a feeling of satisfaction when I was told that in Europe America was still "the land of the free."

Should College Men be Exempt from the Draft?

Pres. Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, stated yesterday that he did not favor "any exemption from the draft for college and university students as such." When a man who understands so well the problems of American undergraduates makes such a statement, it is of importance to all collegians. He is implying in his statement that the problem of defense is a national one—a democratic one—and one which all American men, whether they are fortunate enough to be in college or are in a C. C. C. camp, must accept alike and together.

Some will immediately ask, "Shouldn't students in college be exempt from the draft so that they can educate themselves to know how "to set the world right" when the war is over? Ideally—yes. Democratically—no! What is Democracy if it isn't a form of government in which every man has equal rights and, therefore, a government which every man should be willing to defend?

Harvard students, Kingman Brewster, Jr. and Spencer Klaw, speaking for the undergraduates in a recent Atlantic said, "We insist that America make itself strong enough to repulse any invader who might attack. It may be that our youth gives us an unreasonable faith in what America can do. But when we see all that man has achieved in science and industry for private gain alone, we have grounds for believing America can save itself by calling upon the tremendous material resources and the human genius for production which has made this nation the industrial leader of the world."

The most difficult of all the tasks of American youth, these Harvard undergrads say, is the job of renewing faith in our American ideals by making them real to more people. The project is a big one in which mere words will not be effective. "What will?" one asks. A good, working Democracy is the solution.

"But we choose the effort and the risk in national defense, for in them we see the only possibility of preserving what is now in the most real sense 'this last best hope on earth,'" declared the Harvard students.

No college would disagree with Doctor Hutchins or Brewster and Klaw if they would make their own creed like that of a leading statesman of today which runs like this:

"I believe in America because in it we are free—free to choose our government, to speak our minds, to observe our different religions; because we are generous with our freedom—we share our rights with those who disagree with us; because we hate no people and covet no people's land; because we are blessed with a natural and varied abundance; because we set no limit to a man's achievement—an able man, regardless of class or creed, can realize his ambition and because we have great dreams—and the opportunity to make those dreams come true."

No college man fully awakened to his responsibility toward America, fully aware of his good fortune in being an American citizen and fully instilled with a faith in the ways of democratic America should question Doctor Hutchins' statement that he did not favor "any exemption from the draft for college and university students as such."

We Are Not Alone

By Pooh

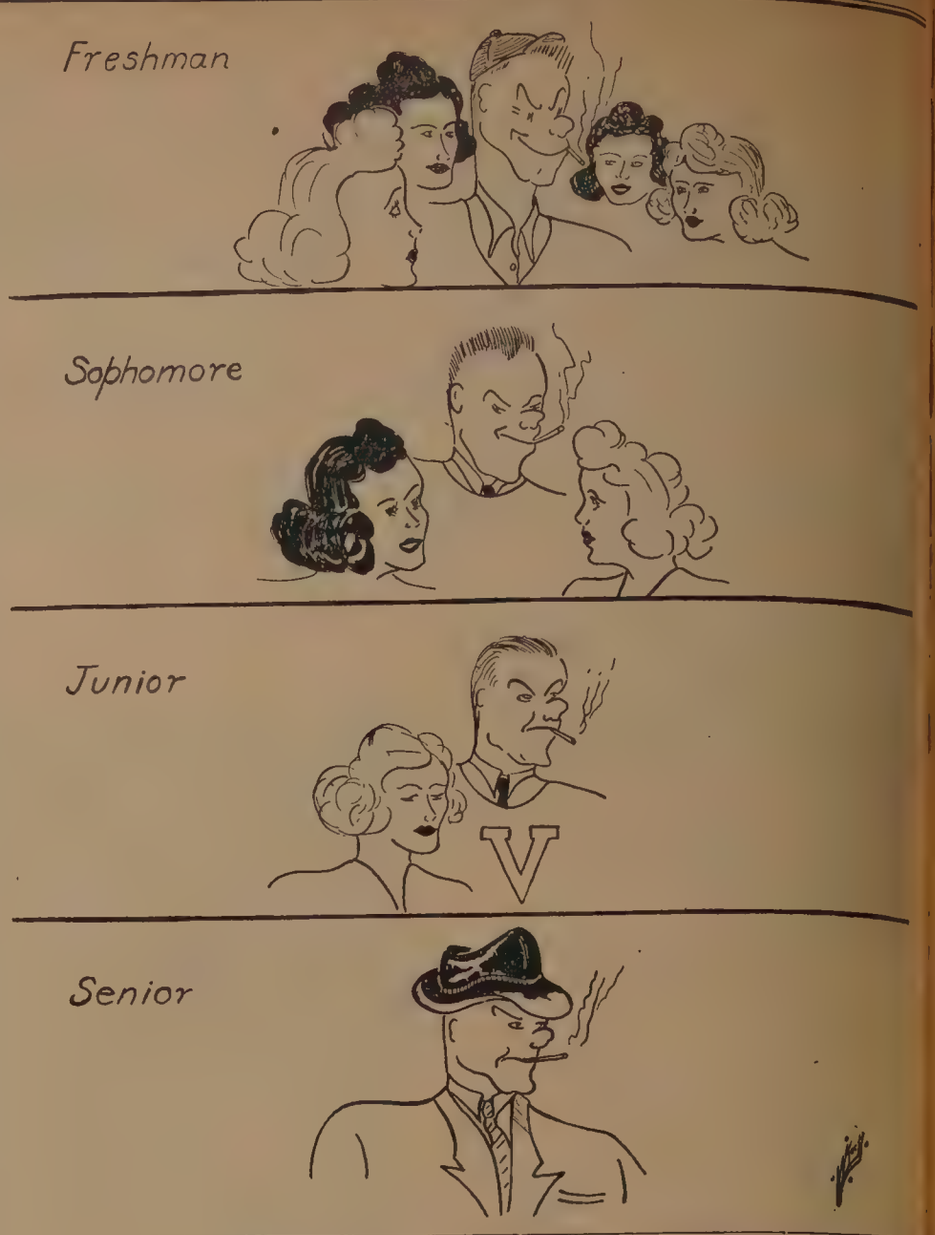
We are not alone—none of us are alone—in thinking that things, mundanely speaking, are in a pretty hash. We are not alone in regretting mistakes—not simply our own mistakes, but those made by people and countries utterly beyond our control. We can't blame ourselves, luckily, for these. We can't really blame anything or anyone. As a matter of fact, what earthly good would it do to blame anything? Regrets are stupidity. Words are a waste of time. And gloom is unbearable. But if you meet someone waltzing around making flippant gay remarks about the whole world mess—that's the person to squash down with one swift blow. It isn't anything to be flippant about. It's something to think deeply about; we should have started doing just that a year ago, two years ago, five years ago. We should have done more than think, we should have acted. But this isn't trying to be a contemporary history tract. It's simply trying to be an echo of the words of James Hilton: "Humanity Can Be Saved." This is another theory of world politics, one that brings them right down to the man in the streets. For humanity can be saved. Not by a change of presidents, not by a third term, not by a shake-up in all of the governments of Europe. Humanity can be saved right in your own walk of life, in your cities, in your tiny villages, in short, in yourselves. In other words, if we all get to work and get a revolution going in ourselves, if we all take a cosmopolitan view of the great "I" and think of it as "we," if we treat it as "we," and don't let it get away with a thing, if we preach to ourselves the Christian doctrine, the human doctrine of love . . . . then humanity can be saved. . . . To do this, and make a go of it, you have to be an idealist, as most of us are in some way or other, and you have to have the grit that it takes and, moreover, no one can drag in the other direction.

That is enough to stop almost anyone—that about dragging in the other direction. Because there is always someone, usually more than someone, usually quite a crowd who are out to stake their own claims, and woe to the rest. We have to expect that; we have to fight against it. The surest way of fighting against it is to build up a terrific resistance in ourselves. We have to start a landslide, a whole series of landslides. If we work hard enough, and make noise enough, our landslide will be so big as to bury them under.

Quoting James Hilton: "One thing is certain: the straightest jacket of regimentation cannot confine, nor can its loudest rantings drown out the silent self-scrutiny of man. . . . There can be no new quality in our civilization till there are new qualities in our minds and hearts. We must be born again as individuals before we can save ourselves as humanity."

Humanity can be saved.

Freshman Medics Face Tough Grind



The change from the regular academic college to the College of Medicine is very, very sudden and blunt.. The freshman medics who so commented for the Cynic requested that there be no names and no direct quotations . . . probably feeling that a quoted tongue is unhealthy.

The first day of med-school was like a hard blow; but a pleasant punch at that. For the work is entirely new, though stiff

Stiff . . . this word brings to the minds of these future doctors something new. Of corpse there is no need of explanation. They will be introduced to this phase on the 8th of October. But there are no chances for possible obsessions for there is little time to think. There is little time to think save on the immediate matters at hand; being the little matter of an osteology final exam within the next two weeks. Hot fomentations will not help this matter . . . only, as an upperclassman so quaintly put it: ". . . only an application of the seat of the pants to the seat of the chair."

The girls who will some day carry Hippocratic banners feel the same as the men in regard to their first year in medical college. And one stated that "you are treated no differently just because you are a girl."

Looking At Vermont

September 26, 1883

With this issue the Cynic again makes its bow to the public and starts off on the first year of its existence proper. Thus far there have been no ebullitions of affection between the two lower classes. Even the customary "rushes" seem to have been suspended, while "hazing" is apparently a dead letter.

October 21, 1893

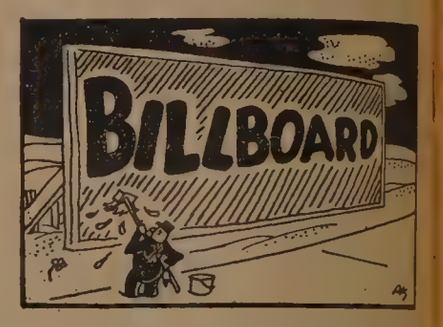
Ninety years ago the University first knew the presence of a senior class comprised of four members. This year the University bids fair to increase the number of students in all classes and departments to 500 or over. The freshman class is the largest in the history of the college and contains seventy-one members, twenty of which are women.

October 3, 1903

This is the centennial year of the University and 115 students have enrolled in the entering class. Engineering 46, literary-scientific 25, agricultural 15, classical 14, chemists 8, commerce and economics 4, special 3.

September 23, 1913

A record-breaking class of 189 new students marked the 123rd opening of the University.



The following rules for freshmen were put up by the sophomores.

1. Tip your hat to all professors and instructors.
2. Never walk on the north side of College Street.
3. There are walks on the campus. Use them.
4. Always wear freshman caps except on Sunday.
5. Wear no prep school insignia of any kind.
6. Don't smoke on the campus.
7. Never be seen wearing corduroy clothing.
8. Always wear dark sacks.
9. Be at every athletic game and smoker with lots of pep.
10. Be ready to work day and night for the good of the University.
11. Never make yourself obnoxious by shouting on the campus.
12. All freshmen must learn the words and music of all the school songs before November 1.

ENGLISH VIII, one hour elective, was accidentally omitted when the 1940-41 hour plan was prepared. Anyone desiring to enroll in the course should leave his name with Mr. Powers in the V. C. A. Office, in the Old Mill.

Generals Grant, Sherman and Sheridan were all considered mediocre when students at West Point.

"Miss Synthetique," a doll, demonstrated textile innovations to students at College of Mount St. Joseph.

THE OUTING CLUB will sponsor a hike to Butler Lodge on Sunday, September 29. Those desiring to attend will meet at the Gym for transportation at 9.00 a.m., with lunch, cup and 35c.

ALL UPPERCLASSMEN, men and women, interested in Debating are requested to meet in Room 4, South College at 4 o'clock on Monday, September 30.—Merrill D. Powers, Director of Debating.

ALL FRESHMEN, men and women interested in Debating are requested to meet in Room 4, South College, at 4 o'clock on Tuesday, October 1.—Merrill D. Powers, Director of Debating.

There will be a meeting of all those interested in working for Press Club, Monday, September 30, at 1.30 p.m. at 1 North College. Old and new members please come.—A. Ducas, President.

The first meeting of the Methodist College Group will be held Sunday evening, at 7.30, at the parsonage on Buell Street. Mr. Reid will speak. Freshmen and all others are invited.

The officers of the Methodist College Group are asked to meet tonight (Friday), at 7.30, at the parsonage.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

A student writer at Louisiana State University fears co-eds there are getting into a rut because they haven't come up with any new fads recently. To prove his point he cites the following fads that recently blossomed at the following schools:

At Smith College five girls appeared for supper in very short skirts, all exactly alike but in different colors.

California co-eds blossomed out in Chinese coolie straw hats and dickies leading to the suggestion that L. S. U. girls try frayed pickaninny straw hats.

At Vassar recently the girls went on a hairdressing rampage, cutting bangs and wearing harlequin glasses. At Smith a girl went to a dance with a single sapphire planted in a forehead curl. At Northwestern they have a special speech school bob—really just another version of the Florentine page boy.

At Wellesley a student borrowed a milkman's suit and wore it for study during exam week. Now the girls can hardly study without their overalls.

From Smith College also comes the craze for red flannel shirts and faded blue jeans. At Bryn Mawr they cram for exams in dungarees rolled to the knee and the wildest plaid shirts they can find.

Boulder To Sponsor Dance Saturday

William Pye '41
Chairman of Boulder Dance

The Boulder Society will hold a dance Saturday night, September 28, in the College gym. It is hoped that it will be a victory dance. The price per couple will be $.75 including the national defense tax.

The "Kittens" will provide the rhythm in place of the "Catamounts" who are playing at Green Mountain Junior College the same evening.

W. I. Pye '41 is in charge of the dance. Prof. and Mrs. Millington and Prof. and Mrs. Perry will be the chaperons.

Pep Rally!!

First Pep Rally of the year will be held this evening at 7:30 at the gym. Let's start a bang-up season with a bang-up rally.

Twenty-nine Frosh Out For Football

Vermont Junior College To be First Opponent

Responding to a call issued by Coach Sherry Fogg, twenty-nine yearlings turned out for the first day of practice. Not having any idea of his squad's experience and with no "ballyhooed" high school players to choose from, the first-year mentor must build his team from the ground up and the first few days' practice is being devoted to the fundamentals of blocking and tackling.

Two teams have been picked from the group, but no definite starting line-up is ready yet. These two teams have been running plays but have had no contact work as yet. The first scrimmage for the freshmen will be held Friday at 4.15 in a practice session with the football men of Burlington High. Much will depend upon the outcome for this is the first chance Coach Fogg will have to see his boys in action.

Then the boys must work furiously in order to build a team to oppose Vermont Junior College on Saturday, October 5.

The opener will pit a powerful veteran team against the Kittens and is only the first on a tough four-game schedule. In close succession follow Green Mountain Junior College, Norwich freshmen and Middlebury freshmen, with the latter being the only doubtful quantity as far as power and experience goes.

Ethan Allen's Sword Found By Society

A sword, once owned by Gen. Ethan Allen, and since travelled far afield, was found recently to be reposing in the care of the Kentucky Historical Society. The find was the result of a newspaper item uncovered by a researcher on the newspaper indexing project of the Historical Records Survey, Works Progress Administration, which, with the cooperation of the University, was engaged in indexing the Burlington Free Press.

The item, appearing inconspicuously in the Free Press of 1879, stated that the sword had just been presented to the Kentucky Historical Society by a Mr. T. A. Hornsey. Following this lead, correspondence between the newspaper indexing project and the society established that the sword was still in their possession. Information about the donor, Mr. Hornsey, was meager and, although the society stated that Mr. Hornsey was a "kinsman of General Allen," they were unable to say exactly how the gentleman was related to the general or give the details of the transfer.

The item from the old Free Press states that the sword had been sold to a relic hunter by a kinsman of General Allen and had finally come to Mr. Hornsey. The sword is described as "dirk-edged, the hilt surmounted by a lion's head encircled by the British Crown." The whole work, the item said, was English. So it appears that the English weapon of a Yankee commander found its destination in a capital of the South.

The schedule:

Oct. 5.	Vermont Jr. Col.....Burlington
Oct. 12,	Green Mt. Jr. Col.....Poultney
Oct. 25.	Norwich .....Northfield
Nov. 11.	Middlebury .....Burlington

Track Men To Meet Union October 5

Captain Livak to Lead U. V. M. Harriers

With prospects of a favorable season, Archie Post's harriers are already in a late stage of development and preparation for their first 1940 meet with Union College on October 5.

Lettermen returning are Capt. Frankie Livak '41, a very dependable and consistent distance man, Jack Burgess '42, and the Webster brothers '42.

Other veterans who will demand much attention are Dick Clark '42, a man who is coming along very fast in the preseason practices, and Len Harrington '43, a miler.

Also on the roster are Ed Corliss '42, an excellent miler from last year's varsity. Don Moran '41, Bob Steinman '42, Johnny Buttles '43, "J. P." Hoyt '43, Ernie St. Mary '43, Reg White '43, Russ West '43, Daan Zwick '43, Duncan Corliss '43, Dick Grosvenor '43, Kaufman '43 and Bud Otto '43.

With such a well-balanced squad representing us, we should be certain that U. V. M. will not be let down.

Jim Root is the varsity manager, ably assisted by Jim Stephen and Copeland Marks. Sophomore scrubs are Francis Haley, "Muscles" Goldman and Hy Ginsburg.

Any sophomores wishing to scrub varsity cross-country see Jim Root at the gym after 4.00 p.m. or freshman manager Bailey.

sist almost entirely of sophomores. The Huskie forward wall looks formidable with 195-pound Capt. Dean Williams at tackle, his weight-equal Dick Grey at center, and 200-pound Handler at the other tackle post. Coach Jimmie Dunn has a wealth of backfield material. As they lined up in Rhode Island it was Barry at tailback, Tubbs at spinning back, Sheridan at blocking back, and Ed Macfarland, the only sophomore to draw a starting assignment in the ball-carrying department, on the wing. Since the tussle with the Rams, however, the veteran backs have been hard pressed by the sophomores. Fran Murray, who took a wing position Saturday to give one of the regulars a rest, did so well that he was allowed to finish the game, and may draw a starting assignment against Vermont. He called signals like an expert and shone brilliantly as a triple threat man. Jim Shea, another sophomore, proved himself a worthy applicant for the tailback position along with Barry and Sakovitz. Another triple threat sophomore, Joe Dias, seems to be fully recovered from a leg injury received in baseball and will probably see action in Saturday's game.

The Huskies are coming to town sporting a fast and hard-running attack and an excellent pass defense, as evidenced by the fact that the Rams completed only one pass in five attempts. They have a host of fast backs to send against Vermont. However, they will be met by an equally fast and tricky pair of Catamount elevens out for their first blood of the season.

Sports Cast

Northeastern—Coming Up

The Catamounts aren't losing any time this year in getting underway. With only one full week of school completed, Fuzzy Evans is ready to send his cohorts against Northeastern. Frankly—we can't wait. Aside from the thrill which always accompanies the first game of the season, this year's opener is an especially tantalizing and promising dish. First of all it will give Vermont well-wishers a chance to see what effect a shake-up in the coaching staff will have on Green and Gold athletics. Coach Evans has given ample proof that he can turn out winning teams. Year after year his frosh have piled up an imposing string of victories. This year he will have the chance to demonstrate what he can do with varsity material. This department hasn't any doubt that he will do his customary good work. But there's always an element of doubt whenever a change is made in a system. So we look forward to the Northeastern tilt as an answer to our questions.

Secondly, the Northeastern game should give us some idea of what the prospects are for a winning season. As we said last week things look almost too good. If the Cats come through as expected, this should be a stand-out season. The line positions are three-deep in candidates The backfield is equally well stocked. Barring injuries (Cliche No. L072) which were the thorns in last year's rose bush, Evans will not be faced with the problem of finding capable reserves.

The Complicating Factor

Of course, all this is merely reckoning without Northeastern. There's the complicating factor. Are they good or are they bad? Well here's where we go on the fence. We really don't know for sure. Rumor has reached us that they were well stocked with experienced men and that they had the type of material which makes for a winning combination. Also (and this is not rumor) we have received the news that they dropped a game last week to Rhode Island State. Which leaves us where Moses was when the lights went out so far as any definite idea of Northeastern gridiron power is concerned.

No Predictions

If it wasn't for the fact that we are sad and disillusioned, due to years and years of experience with predictions that backfire, we would be tempted to bet on the Catamounts. But we won't. But we're not selling them short either.

Exhortation

And now we come to the painful portion (or shall we say the most painful portion) of this column. Every year it is customary for the Sport Editor to work himself up into a lather at regular intervals and urge the student body to turn out for athletic events. The exhortation usually goes under the heading, "School Spirit." Well this year we will content ourselves with merely saying that there is no time like the present—so let's begin Saturday and make this a notable year in Vermont athletics—not only on the part of the team, but on the part of the student body supporting it. So be at Centennial, Saturday, yelling your head off for the Catamounts.

Tennis to Start Intramural Sports

With the memories of summer still fresh in everyone's mind we launch upon another season of intramurals.

The first item of interest in this line is tennis, golf and horseshoe tournaments. Anyone interested is urged to sign up immediately in the physical education office. Also prospective entrants for mixed doubles see Mr. Post without delay.

Fraternity managers, please shape out your touch football teams so the season can get under way in short notice.

Freshmen interested in scrubbing the intramural sports report to Mr. Post or Cliff Joseph.

Twelve men reported to Coach Archie Post last week when he let out the call for freshman cross-country material. The squad members are: Webster, Crank, Beebe, Button, Goodell, Grant, Soule, Tremblay, Hogaboom, Carpenter, Katz and Helberg. This year's squad manager is George Bailey.

Scribes Calling Literary Freshmen

Professor Merrick To Attend Meeting

Scribes will hold its first meeting of the year on next Thursday, October 3, at Southwick, at 7.15 p.m. Anyone interested in creative writing, criticism, or discussion is cordially invited. Scribes is an informal literary club for both men and women, and its chief aim is toward spontaneity of discussion. Prof. Elliott Merrick of the English Department will be present at the meeting. Upperclassmen as well as freshmen are welcome, and manuscripts, though not required for joining, will be greeted with cheers. See your nearest Scribe for details.

Museum Exhibition Of Swedish Glass

Orrefors Products Internationally Known

Seventy-five objects of glass, made in Sweden at the famous Orrefors glass works, are now on exhibition in the Oriental Room on the first floor of the Fleming Museum at the University of Vermont. Opening September 17, this exhibition will be on view untll September 30. It is circulated by Blanche A. Byerley of Westport, Conn.

Table glassware, vases, bottles, and candlesticks, comprise most of the glass pieces shown. This is mostly crystal glass, of great purity and very gracefully shaped. Many of the pieces are somewhat heavy, without losing the liquid grace of the crystal. Engraved decorations of human figures, of fish, and swans, accent some of the pieces. Such decorations are realistic, not exaggerated or distorted. A few of the articles are of colored glass.

Glass, according to information coming with the Swedish exhibition, is classified in two categories. One is the hard and cheap soda glass; the other is the soft, highly refractory and ringing lead glass, generally called crystal. Engraving, as a rule, is executed only on crystal glass, since this procedure is rather expensive.

Starting in 1898, the Orrefors glass factory first manufactured mostly the cheap soda glass, making articles for table use, bottles, and some window glass. In 1913 the manufacture of crystal was started there, and in 1916 and 1917, with the coming of two artists to the Orrefors plant, the making of art glass became the chief business of the company. Today, according to art critics, this Orrefors glass is the best known in this country of all artistic works coming from Sweden. The Orrefors glass is also said to be unsurpassed by any glass now being produced in the world.

Pan Hellenic Council Holds Sorority Picnic

The Pan Hellenic Council sponsored a picnic supper for members of all sororities on September 23. The picnic was held above the quarry near Ledge Road and there were about 125 girls present, each bringing a boxed lunch. Dean Simpson was the guest of honor.

There was a large bonfire, and during the supper the girls roasted marshmallows. After the meal, the President of the Council, Elizabeth Isham '41, gave the rushing rules for this year and Dean Simpson talked to the girls.

At the closing, the girls stood in a circle and joined hands to sing "Champlain."

New Y. M. C. A. Director To Speak at Collegium

Collegium, of the College Street Congregational Church, cordially invites everyone, the freshmen especially, to its meeting and social Sunday evening at 7.30.

Mr. John Perry, a member of the faculty, and Mrs. Perry, a former leader of the group, are to be the sponsors this year.

An interesting program has been arranged with Mr. Clyde Hess, director of the local Y. M. C. A., as guest speaker. There will also be a get-acquainted social and refreshments. Everyone welcome!

Here They Come! The Class of 1944

Here they come—the class of '44—with banners flying high. They're a great class. They themselves told this member of the Fourth Estate that—and it's true. From an impartial point of view one notices no dearth of attractive co-eds and good-looking men in this class—and their enthusiasm for U. V. M. stirs the upperclassman's blasé heart. From all indications it seems as though these freshmen are going to have a record Phi Beta Kappa class. All of them, boys and girls, without exception, spoke sincerely of studying hard and the boys especially seemed very anxious to find out about the members of the faculty they would meet Monday morning in the classroom. It really sounded as though they were going to try a little applied psychology on the faculty before mid-year or even hour exams came up on the calendar.

During this past week, so hectic a time for the entering class, the girls frankly, laughingly admitted that they were in a daze, very happy, a little homesick—and all mixed up. The men swaggered a trifle and maintained discreet, masculine silence on this score. But when, a few times, one got behind the scenes, one found the boys in about the same mental state as their co-ed classmates. But Saturday night seemed to iron out all the wrinkles. No men even pretended that they weren't looking forward to the Mixer—and it looks as though more than one romance began with the grand march.

And so it goes. The wheel of time has spun another year, another fall, another class. Their ambitions are high. Just as ours were, once, when we were "frosh." They wax enthusiastic, poetic, eloquent about our college—as all Vermont men and women will always do. Recall all the hopes and dreams, the tears and fears of your own freshman year—and there's the picture of these "campus babies."

Here they are. The class of '44. Step back a little. Take them in. And most of all, watch them. These freshmen are going to write history on our college ledgers in bright bold letters!

Chapel Notes

The first regular Wednesday morning Chapel exercise was held September 25 in the Ira Allen Chapel with Rev. Vedder Van Dyck as guest speaker.

Rev. Vedder Van Dyck, minister of the Episcopal Church in Burlington, stressed in his talk that that which we want more than anything else is the life of our country. It is up to Christian men and women to help solve the great problem of saving our nation.

Open Letter

To the Class of '44

As the school year opens the campus becomes alive with green caps, though many of you frosh men no doubt are uncertain as to just why you are made to wear them. This ruling is enforced neither as a punishment or as a joke, but rather because it enables upperclassmen to distinguish you as freshmen, and thus they are able to cultivate your acquaintance and to assist you as is often necessary.

It has long been a tradition at Vermont that freshman men wear their green caps until they have won two out of the three interclass skirmishes—the fountain fight, cane rush, and hose fight. Should the freshmen fail to be victorious in at least two of these struggles, they are obliged to wear their caps until Thanksgiving recess. You men of '44 have already lost the fountain fight, but let's see you get to work and win the remaining two so that you may shed your hats in October.

The football season opens tomorrow. You have all come from different schools, where you expressed your school spirit in various ways. Now that you are a student at Vermont that spirit should be the "Vermont Spirit." Show that spirit by cheering at that game tomorrow. The boys on the team will be out there doing their part.—How about doing yours?

HARRY PARKER, President, Gold Key Society.

1940 Enrollment Increase Expected

Figures released the early part of this week by the Registrar's office show a total enrollment this year of 1,280 students. However, this number excludes enrollments after Monday, September 23; medical and graduate students. It is probable that once the records are completed the present student body will exceed last year's figures. Following are the figures released by the Registrar:

Seniors	228
Juniors	266
Sophomores	332
Freshmen	437
Unclassified	17
	1,280
Girls at Freshman Camp	118
Boys at Freshman Camp	57

R. F. Laramie '41 was recently pledged to Kappa Sigma fraternity.

House Committees Meet To Discuss Year's Plans

Wednesday evening the members of the dormitory house committees who have just been appointed for this year were installed by Miss Simpson at Southwick, with the members of the Joint Conference and Student Union Council present.

The functions of Student Union and the plans for the year were outlined, and an exploration of the rules was presented by Miss Simpson, Miss Nulty, chairman of the Joint Conference, and Margaret Crowley '41, chief justice of judiciary.

Society Notes

On Monday evening, September 30, from 8.00-9.00 o'clock, the Alpha Xi's are holding a coffee hour for their mothers and housemothers.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Marjorie Bell '40 was at the house over the week-end.

Carol Bell, formerly '42, was recently married to Frank Taylor '41.

The following members of the class of '39 met recently at Martha Rist's: Mrs. John Perry, Mrs. Jerry Gerard, Ruth Baxendale, Mary Shakespeare, and Mrs. Robert Bristol.

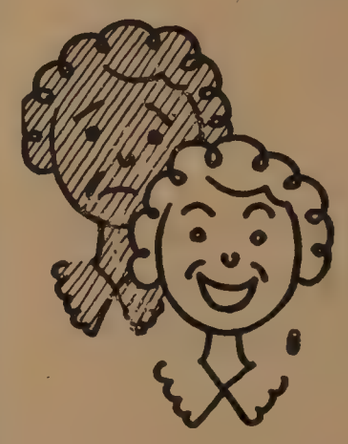
Burlington To Educate Aliens

Miss Hershberg Directs Americanization Class

A newly developed phase of the National Defense Program is the attempt to enroll all aliens in Americanization classes.

Miss Ida Hershberg who for the past two years has been in charge of alien education here, is to be director of the movement in this city. Up to the present thirty aliens have constituted her classes and there are three hundred registered in this city. These remaining numbers must be contacted. Her curriculum includes training in basic principles of reading and writing English and a fundmaental knowledge of the functions of American government.



Her greatest problem lies not in interesting aliens in American ideals, but in contacting them, informing them about these classes and interesting them in attending. She hopes, however, to be aided in this by local service clubs, churches and other organizations.

These classes play a major rôle in aiding aliens to adapt themselves to American ways and ideals. Miss Hershberg has found from experience that "the average alien with a little help and leadership becomes as good an American as the best of us, and would probably put many ostensibly good Americans to shame."

The first mass meeting of Student Union will be Wednesday evening, October 2, at Southwick. The upperclassmen are requested to be there at 7 o'clock for a short special meeting, and the freshmen will meet in the Gym at 7 for a W. A. A. program before the mass meeting.

Frats' Open Houses To Mark First Week Of Men's Rushing

Class of '44 Welcomed As Guests of the Greek Letter Socities

Greek-letter fraternities on the hill today went into the second day of their annual membership drive. Open houses for the freshmen are being held at all the fraternities. Free smokes, free use of all house privileges and rushing parties will be current until Thursday, October 10, when the offering and acceptance of bids will take place.

Effective this year will be the one dollar tax for all freshmen and non-fraternity men who accept invitations to rushing banquets. This tax, which was introduced last year, covers the fraternities' costs for entertaining the freshmen. By this means direct taxation, which until last year was the only method of paying the council expenses, will be avoided.

The committee for the control of rushing which is headed by R. Kenney '41, Interfraternity Council president, and includes senior representatives from seven other fraternities with Prof. D. B. Carroll as faculty advisor will have charge of the execution of the rushing and pledging and will report infractions of the rules.

Freshmen have been divided into groups as follows:

Group A. Men with last initial A through C.
Group B. Men with last initial D through H.
Group C. Men with last initial I through K.
Group D. Men with last initial L through N.
Group E. Men with last initial O through Q.
Group F. Men with last initial R through S.
Group G. Men with last initial T through U.
Group H. Men with last initial V through Z.

The visiting schedule will be as follows:

President Appoints Faculty Delegates

President Bailey has appointed Dean Swift and Prof. G. G. Groat to attend the annual meeting of the Association of Colleges in New England, which is to be held the second week in October at Amherst.

The Association includes fourteen of the New England colleges, and as the proceedings of these meetings are always confidential, no action is being taken. The president and dean of each college usually attend, but due to President Bailey's illness he has appointed Professor Groat to take his place.

To Coach at W. P. I.

THEODORE BUDZYNA '38

Budzyna Receives Position at W.P.I.

Will Act as Assistant Phys. Ed. Director

Ted Budzyna, famous at U. V. M. for the past six years as an all-around athletic star and trainer, has just been named as assistant in the physical education department at Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Bud's career in sports, starting in East Douglas, Mass., where he starred in schoolboy sports, has been a long and varied one, fully equipping him to be a great asset to W. P. I.

Before entering Vermont he coached at Bellows Free Academy for two years. At U. V. M. Bud's fraternities were Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Delta Psi, and he was a member of Key and Serpent. During his four years here he starred in football, baseball and track, with such honors as the following to his credit: Holder of the state javelin record, winner of the 1935 hexathlon and runner-up in 1936, and highest scorer in Cozen's test. He graduated in 1938 with a B.S. degree and after two more years of study, work as a trainer, and active participation in sports, he received his M.S.

Now at Worcester Tech he will serve as assistant to Prof. Percy R. Carpenter, head of the physical education department, and as assistant coach in football, will really show those engineers what a Vermont-trained man can do when it comes to gridiron maneuvers.

New Members Chosen For Choir

The following persons have been accepted for the University Choir which sings at chapel each Wednesday and at vespers—Sopranos: Theresa Coderre '43, Alice Cole '41, Gloria Farrell '43, Betty Hall '44, Nora Hill '42, Ruth Hopkins '41, Elizabeth Jenks '43, Earlene Jenness '43, Elizabeth Lake '44, Eleanor Langeway '43, Juliette Miller '41, Florence Smith '43, and Virginia Wright '44. Altos: Edith Libby '43, Shirley Mayforth '41, Marion Rhoades '44, Frances Rogers '41, Helen Sault '41, Marjorie Southworth '43, Doris Squire '43 and Ruth True '44. Tenors: S. Bassett '44, H. Bevins '41, M. Conner '44, R. Johnstone '43, T. Malone '41, R. Norton '44, L. Pichierri '41, P. Poulin '41 and W. Salmon '41. Basses: W. Barrows '41, O. Brawn '42, K. Calkins '44, P. All town girls urged to attend mass meeting, Wednesday night, at Southwick.

Vermont Men to Register October 16 In Compliance With Draft Measure

Students in Advanced R. O. T. C. Course Exempt From Registration; All Those Affected At U. V. M.

The American Council on Education of Washington, D. C., recently published the following Bulletin which is given up largely to citation and discussion of those portions of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, formerly the Burke-Wadsworth Bill, that are of particular interest to institutions of higher education. These provisions with quotations from the Bill include:

1. Sec. 3(a). All male students except advanced R. O. T. C. students as noted below, who on the day of registration "have attained the twenty-first anniversary of the day of their birth and who have not attained the thirty-sixth anniversary of the day of their birth" must register.

2. Sec. 5(f). "Any person who, during the year 1940, entered upon attendance for the academic year 1940-1941—

(1) at any college or university which grants a degree in arts or science, to pursue a course of instruction satisfactory completion of which is prescribed by such college or university as a prerequisite to either of such degrees; or

(2) at any university described in paragraph (1), to pursue a course of instruction to the pursuit of which a degree in arts or science is prescribed by such university as a prerequisite; and who, while pursuing such course of instruction at such college or university, is selected for training and service under this Act prior to the end of such academic year, or prior to July 1, 1941, whichever occurs first, shall, upon his request, be deferred from induction into the land or naval forces for such training and service until the end of such academic year, but in no event later than July 1, 1941."

3. Sec. 5(a). Students who are "cadets of the advanced course, senior division, Reserve Officers' Training Corps or Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, shall not be required to be registered and shall be relieved from liability for training and service" under this Act.

4. Sec. 5(e). Deferment is provided on the basis of dependents, physical, men-

Victory Dance Held At Gym, Saturday

The Boulder Dance, our first college affair of the year, at the gym on Saturday night turned out to be a victory dance celebrating our triumph over Northeastern. It was a colorful affair and about two hundred couples attended. Various colored lights shone from the walls, and banners and pennants hung from above. Red Dower's band of Burlington provided the rhythm, and made the evening a great success.

W. I. Pye '41 was the chairman of the dance. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Perry, and Professor and Mrs. Millington.

Women's Mass Meeting

The first mass meeting of Student Union will be Wednesday evening, October 2, at Southwick. The upperclassmen are requested to be there at 7 o'clock for a short special meeting, and the freshmen will meet in the Gym at 7 for a W. A. A. program before the mass meeting.

Many Eminent Men To Address Faculty

Dr. Lloyd Douglas Unable to Speak

Dr. Lloyd Douglas, clergyman-author of several best-selling novels, will be unable to speak at the first meeting of the year of the Men's Faculty Club at the University of Vermont October 14. The reception of the president and the deans of the University for new faculty members will be held at this meeting, which will also be observed as Ladies' Night. The club will meet at the Southwick Building.

Other speakers of the year's series will include Pres. Jesse P. Bogue of Green Mountain Junior College, at the Fleming Museum November 9; Dr. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay, pastor of the Baptist Church of Brookline, Mass., at Southwick December 7; Mr. Ralph Noble, State Commissioner of Education, at the Fleming Museum January 11; Prof. E. C. Jacobs, head of the University geology department, at the Museum February 8; Lieut. Gov. William H. Wills at the Museum March 8.

The Faculty Club will be guests of Pres. and Mrs. Guy W. Bailey at the December 7 meeting, when Doctor Lindsay will speak.

Speakers for dates in April and May will be announced later by the Faculty Club.

Mortar Board to Sponsor Semi-Formal October 5

Now that college is well under way many students are looking forward to the Mortar Board dance. This event occurs every fall and spring under the auspices of Mortar Board, women's honorary society.

The time of the dance is Saturday night; the place, Southwick Memorial. The dance is semi-formal and unique in that the girls will invite the boys. The traditional price is $1.10.

Louise Mann is general chairman, her committee includes: Elizabeth Gurney in charge of music; Shirley Gray, tickets; Maywood Metcalf, publicity; Mary Letta Root, posters; Margaret Crowley, programs; Dorothy Emerson, Laura Hawley and Louise Mann, decorations.

Sororities Vote Money for Relief

Pi Beta Phi fraternity at the organization's convention at Pasadena, Calif. in June voted $5,000 towards the relief and support of any European war refugee children who may be brought to America for protection. Refugee agencies set up by the American Red Cross will receive $4,000 and the remainder will go to similar agencies of the Canadian Red Cross.

Kappa Kappa Gamma gave $1,000 to be distributed in the British Isles. Gamma Phi Beta gave $500 to the American Red Cross and Delta Delta Delta gave $1,000 to the Canadian Red Cross.

Newman Club Meets With Dr. McSweeney

New Officers To Be Elected Tuesday Night

Sunday evening all Catholic girls were invited to a meeting of the Newman Club at the home of Dr. Katherine McSweeney. Several members of the faculty were present and spoke. Other speakers were the new chaplain of the Newman Club, Father Jeremiah Sullivan and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Langlois of the Burlington Catholic Worker, who gave inspiring talks. Miss Helen Witham, secretary of last year's club, introduced the speakers. Lunch was served at the conclusion of the meeting.

It was suggested at this meeting that there be discussion groups and important speakers during the year.

There will be a meeting for the election of officers on Tuesday night, October 8, after the Mission services, at Cathedral High School. Catholic students are urged to attend the Mission at the Cathedral, which will be for single women during the week of October 6 and for single men during the week of October 20; and were also urged to receive Holy Communion during this time. Other students are invited to attend the Mission. Special provisions are being made in order that students may go to Confession and to Holy Communion this Friday, which is the first Friday of October.

Why Not Have a Straw Vote

With the 1940 Presidential election only five weeks away the critical period of the campaign is at hand. On our campus enthusiastic rooters for Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt have been heard engaged in some heated arguments over campaign issues and platforms. Why not have an honest-to-goodness Presidential campaign here at Vermont which would give everyone an opportunity to write, deliver soap-box orations and vote for his candidate?

Such a mock campaign, if well-planned and executed, by the Republican and Democratic students would create an interest in the national campaign. It would also serve to acquaint students with party issues and keep everyone informed about the progress of the two candidates. Ballots could be printed in the CYNIC and voting held a week before the national election. Why not have some enthusiasm and effort displayed on the campus for the candidates in one of the most important (perhaps the most important) Presidential elections in American history?

The fact that most college students are ineligible to vote is not cause to feel that they have no voice, or should remain inactive on their campuses. On the contrary, the 1,600,000 American college men and women exert a compelling influence on: (1) Over 3,000,000 fathers and mothers (plus uncles, cousins, aunts and brothers). (2) The last three classes of alumni (1940, 1939, 1938). Most recent "grads" still correspond with undergraduate friends whom they have known in college. (3) The townspeople of the 2,000 college towns, and (4) The faculty.

The successful executing and special planning of a mock Presidential campaign on our campus would depend entirely on student response and cooperation. Willkie and Roosevelt enthusiasts would have to call rallies for their candidates and attempt to capture the votes of their fellow students. College divisions of both Republican and Democratic national parties are anxious to furnish campaign material about their candidates and their policies to help students who have interest enough in the campaign to take an active part in it.

Many issues are at stake in the coming election—an adequate national defense with the big problems of proper execution and sufficient armament production, the New Deal with its good and bad measures and the all important Third Term issue. Voters will cast their ballots for the man who can keep the American people out of war.

THE VERMONT CYNIC, in view of the fact that a so-called "straw vote" on the campus would necessitate a statement regarding its political status, feels that now is the time for such a statement to be made.

"Because we firmly believe that the Republican candidate has the ability to execute efficiently and rapidly an adequate plan for national defense, that he can effect changes beneficial to American labor and industry which New Deal measures have partially crippled, that no man should hold the Presidential office three times and that the Republican candidate could insure and execute the successful functioning of a liberal Democracy in this last free-hold of free government—the United States—THE VERMONT CYNIC will support the Republican candidate, Wendell Willkie, in his campaign for President of the United States."

Now that we have stated our political stand, why don't you show your political preferences by starting Willkie and Roosevelt campaigns here on our campus where there are almost thirteen hundred votes literally waiting to be won by the candidate that you favor?

Platter Chatter

Dance music is such a varied and flexible field, that you can find at almost any time, an excellent variety of recordings ranging from something smooth, easily danceable, to a knock-down, drag-out blues that will send the shivers up and down your spine. The selections listed below would seem to bear this out. Judge for yourself.

WOODY HERMAN—On Decca, the Herman crew offer two distinctive numbers, one of which is the band's closing theme. "Music By The Moon," an original by Herman and flugelhorn player Joe Bishop, is sort of a plaintive tune, full of lots of alternate clarinet and brass. There's a vocal by leader Woody himself which is done in easy style. Tasty piano fill-ins highlight the last half. Nice tune—nice theme.

Other side is another original labeled "Bessie's Blues." This starts off at a slightly-slower-than-medium tempo and has such a push behind it that it will raise whatever hair you do have on your chest. Blues it is with real boogie-woogie piano, a terrific unison sax and brass figure, neat guitar, a really gutty give-and-take vocal, and the swell flugelhorn playing of Joe Bishop.

Herman's band is by-lined, "The Band That Plays The Blues." This side should really convince you.

BOB CHESTER—This band (which could be much more interesting if it didn't ape Glenn Miller so much) records two pop tunes at excellent tempos for the Bluebird label. "Don't Let It Get You Down" is a very pretty tune taken at a slow tempo. Band sounds full and subdued at the same time. Dolores O'Neill lends her charming voice to the vocal in a somewhat husky manner. There's pretty phrasing throughout and more vocal at the end. Reverse is a typical swing arrangement of a pop tune. Fine alta solo and tasty piano figures help to offset a somewhat flat vocal chorus.

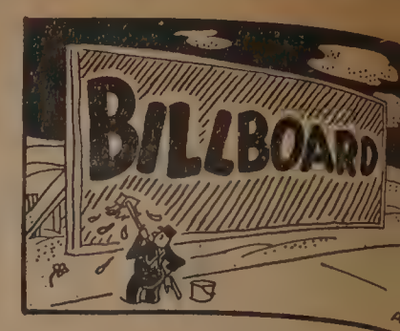
DUKE ELLINGTON—This aggregation seems to be in really top form these days, judging from the quality of music coming out under the Duke's name. On Victor, the band records a really swell pop tune, "There Shall Be No Night," backed up by a clever original, "Five O'Clock Whistle. "Night" has a beautiful sax chorus leading into one of the best vocals you will ever hear. Herd Jeffres, his name is, and his singing is as though he really means it. Catch the inflections in this fellow's voice! The background is equally fine throughout. "Whistle" is clever, two-beat swing at a slow, rock tempo. Ivy Anderson's vocal is adequate and backgrounds are tops. All the instruments seem to do solo bits throughout, but the delayed figures of the bass will make you fairly jump out of your seat.

HORACE HENDERSON and JOHN KIRBY—Both hands offer Okeh renditions of an old tune, "Chloe." Former is mostly a trumpet feature by Emmett Berry which, although it gets a little out of hand at the end, is not too bad. Very nice, slow, smooth tempo. Kirby's rendition is entirely different—faster and with more of the actual tune. Once again, the work is typical of this phenomenal small group with neat, precise ensemble work and standouts on muted trumpet, alto sax, and piano. If you like subtle swing coupled with real musicianship, you'll like this latest by Kirby.

TOMMY DORSEY—Here are two more pop tunes well executed by Dorsey's versatile bunch on Victor, "That's For Me" and "Our Love Affair." Former is a pretty little tune with alternating spots of good solo trombone and sax-section work. Connie Haines submits a grand vocal at a tempo which is ideal for her particular style. "Affair" is taken faster and offers more of the leader's trombone followed by a vocal chorus in the Frank Sinatra manner. There's a good sock at the end. What's really outstanding about this sort of T. D. stuff is its grand danceability. Listen and see if you don't agree.

BENNY GOODMAN SEXTET—Old tunes, but new ideas on Columbia's "Sheik" and "Poor Butterfly." On the latter, Benny's straight clarinet chorus is the essence of good taste. Following, in succession, are equally fine choruses by Lionel Hampton on vibes, John Guarnieri on piano, and Charles Christian's magnificent single string guitar. Everything is very subdued and tasty throughout. "Sheik" is full of grand improvisation by all instruments, but the standout is the backing given the solos by the high register bass playing of Artie Bernstein. What ideas! If you like real jam in a solid style, grab this one.

INTRODUCING



Louis Pichierri of Burlington, now a junior in the music education course of the University of Vermont. He was not one of those child prodigies in music. He wasn't even much interested in music until he was seventeen years old and well along in Burlington High School, but since entering the University, music has become his chief interest. He has been co-leader of a student orchestra, is the composer of music for a song, "Moonlight," has directed his fraternity chorus to first place in the Interfraternity Sing for two years, and last year he led the massed chorus of all fraternity groups at the sing. Louis has sung in two University operas, has been a member of the University Glee Club and Choir for three years, and has been made an assistant in music at Burlington High School. This will be a part-time job, because Louis is now in his fourth year at the University, and has another year of study ahead of him before he gets his Bachelor of Science degree in music education.

The Catamounts, the student dance orchestra led by Louis and Wayne Barrows of Burlington, has been in existence for about two years. It started when about six student musicians, including Louis, formed a band to play at the Westport Yacht Club one summer vacation. On returning to college, instead of dispersing the orchestra until next vacation, they made a permanent organization of it. Since then they have played for many a dance at the University of Vermont, and have also been to Norwich and Middlebury to furnish rhythm for various dancing parties. Last Christmas they filled an engagement at the Lake Placid Club.

The orchestra is a cooperative venture, with all members sharing in profits. Explaining that Barrows and he were selected as leaders, Louis makes it clear that all the members shared the work of forming the group and should share in the credit.

Louis says he expects to keep on with the Catamounts this year along with his courses at the University and his work in music at Burlington High School. He explains that the orchestra does not require so much time as might be expected, since most of the year the unit plays only one or two nights a week, and they usually manage with one rehearsal weekly. The spring season, Louis explains, may now and again bring a rush of business, since it is this time of year that orchestra jobs are most plentiful. Louis is preparing himself to teach high school music, a goal toward which his work at Burlington High School this year will undoubtedly aid him. But he has further ambitions in the field of music, as well, and says that he hopes some day to learn more about composing. His song, "Moonlight," to which the words by Erich Eichendorf have been set, has been sung several times in concerts by Donald Gage, Burlington tenor, who also studies in the Vermont Music Department, taking special courses.

That Louis has made a place for himself in musical activities of the University and the city is shown by the number of jobs in the musical field he has been called upon to perform. Most recently, the all-college sing, an innovation last year on the University campus, drew a large proportion of the University's undergraduate population, with Louis selected to lead them all as they raised their voices in song.

UNIVERSITY EMPLOYMENT BUREAU—Boys who would like to secure work by the hour, "odd jobs," are requested to fill out Employment Cards. After class schedules have been arranged call at the Employment Bureau in the office of the Vermont Christian Association in the Old Mill.—MERRILL D. POWERS, Director University Employment Bureau.

ALL FRESHMEN, men and women interested in Debating are requested to meet in Room 4, South College, at 4 o'clock on Tuesday, October 1.—MERRILL D. POWERS, Director of Debating.

Museum Notes

A new photomural is being installed on the wall in the Perkins room, in connection with the medieval material. The mural represents the city of Carcassonne in France during the medieval period.

A new exhibit of original drawings by a variety of different artists will be in the Art Gallery of Fleming Museum, beginning Wednesday, October 2. The collection is being loaned to the Museum by Mr. Joseph Winterbotham.

Receipts from a basketball game between a William and Mary honor fraternity and a faculty quint will be turned over to the Finnish Relief Fund.

Arts Faculty Meet

A meeting of the new members of the Arts Faculty was held Wednesday afternoon, September 25. There were fifteen present, including the new instructors of military science and Miss Larson, new assistant to Miss Cummings. At this time Dean Swift explained the rules and regulations of the University.

Freshman Travels From India To Attend the University

By MARGARET PALMER

"Oh, no," Ellen Stewart, a pretty sophomore with black hair and snappy eyes, protested sleepily, "What can I say?" But we are persistent when tracking down news. Arousing her from her sleep we began firing questions left and right. "It's an interview for the CYNIC. You've had some interesting experiences which you've got to share."

Born in Jehlum, India, her parents are American. Jehlum is a large British military station, and it was there that she spent her life until a year ago. Her father is president of Gordon College in Rawalpindi, where he also taught biology and botany. Her mother was dean of women. "A kind of family proposition," she smilingly said.

She received her education at Woodstock School for Americans in Jehlum. About four hundred other students also attended it and ten percent of the pupils had to be natives, so that a grant could be obtained from the British government. Here in this school she received the elementary education with which all of us are so familiar.

Donkeys or Snakes Entertain

Asked a little about life in India, she told of wandering minstrels, known as dubblas there, who would give shows with monkeys or snakes as the main features. They would come to your door and beat on a drum expecting a few annas in return for what they termed in their language as "the best show on earth." It's cheap, too, when you consider an anna is worth only two cents.

When she was there Gandhi didn't seem to have so much power. "Of course, I lived in the northern part of India, and then I haven't been there recently. Our letters are censored so I don't really know what is going on politically."

Then came the description of her trip. She and five other American girls who were coming here to attend college boarded a Japanese boat which took them first to Singapore, then to Hongkong.

They spent two weeks in Hongkong while waiting to change to an American ship. As Hongkong is British, she did not see much of the ruin inflicted by bombing as is so evident in other parts of China. The railroad tracks, though, were all bombed, probably to prevent the shipping of aid to the beleaguered Chinese. The place was flooded with naval marines who were mainly from the United States, Great Britain and France.

Boards Ship at Shanghai

She boarded an American ship there which took them to Shanghai, where they saw for the first time the complete demolition that is now so extensive in China. She visited the refugee camps, saw the war-ravaged fugitives who bore no hope for the future, bitterly disillusioned people, once used to culture and learning, now tasting the barbarism and cruel hardships of the war which they will never give up.

Everywhere buildings were completely devastated, and only the shells of what once were peaceful and happy homes were left standing. Looking upon the scene of wrack and ruin it was hard to believe that this could happen in a civilized world. One incident seemed to stand out most clearly in her mind. There was a sign standing near the road. It was a doctor's shingle. On it was the name Doctor Goldburg, and behind were the crumbled ruins of what had once been a small homely little cottage.

Leaving there they sailed for Japan, landing at Colby, where the Japanese were very unpleasant to them, believing that they were British. At the time relations between the British and Japanese were very tense over the Tientsin incident, which, as you remember, was caused by the Japanese blockade of British residents. The Japanese held them up at the customs and they were forced to take a night train. Thus they missed seeing the Japanese countryside.

But they had an exciting experience which made up for it in part. A blackout was staged and they had to eat their supper by candlelight. They didn't know whether it was practice or not but nevertheless it was exciting.

A few days were spent in Tokyo, where they were annoyed by the taxis refusing to carry them. All the Japanese were very cool to them. Still they saw the governor's palaces, which were very beautiful.

They then went to Yokohama, where they were to board their ship. The captain would not give the sailors shore leave so they went on a strike. He was afraid they might start trouble, especially in such tense times. Supper was delayed, so finally the captain gave in to the men.

An incident which annoyed them was when some Japanese soldiers stopped them and went through their purses. They said they were checking to make sure that they were not smuggling anything out of the country.

When the ship left at eleven o'clock not a light could be seen in the harbor. It was pitch black. The Japanese were staging another blackout.

Their trip across the Pacific was uneventful. They stopped one day at Honolulu, where she had friends who took them around to see the sights. At Waikiki Beach they saw Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler swimming.

Their ship docked at San Francisco and the long and interesting trip was finished. She entered Westminster in Pennsylvania, where she stayed one year, then transferred here for her sophomore year. When asked how she liked it she smiled shyly and said, "Very much."

Zoology News

This year the zoology enrollment will be more than doubled because Zoology 9 and 10 have been expanded. Doctor Moody will teach Zoology 9, which studies the science of evolution. Zoology 10, taught by Professor Perkins, has now been made a full year course for the first time.

Zoology 7 will meet for the first time on Monday, September 30.

During the summer many of the professors of zoology have been active in research. Doctor Moody has worked on blood tests and Mrs. Loudon and Doctor Tartar also did research work.

However, the members of the zoology department did not spend all of their vacations in doing research. Doctor Moody is an excellent photographer and spends much of his spare time at this interesting hobby. He also went on visits to several places.

Professor Perkins and Professor Rowell both have well-equipped workshops in which they do cabinet work. Professor Perkins and many other members have their gardens where they spend much of their spare time working there.

In July Professor Perkins, who is the head of the department, participated in a round-table discussion, "Children of Tomorrow," at the Harvard Summer School.

History Department Offers New Course

Gives Training in History Methods

A History Seminar, a new feature of the history department, is being offered to senior majors and graduate students of the University this year for the first time. Nine students have already enrolled in this course which is a two-hour class which will meet once a week. The purpose of the course is to train those majoring in history in the technic and method of doing research work, to familiarize them with bibliographies and to instruct them in the manner in which the historian does his work. The first semester will deal with American history and will be under the direction of Prof. H. E. Putnam while the second semester, under the direction of Prof. P. D. Evans, will deal with English history. The course was scheduled for last year but was postponed because of lack of entrants.

Professor Evans reports that the number of students taking history has remained about the same as in other years despite the change in world conditions. However, an increase has been noted in the Survey of American History course and the Medieval history while the class in contemporary history is filled to capacity. Professor Evans did not feel that this normal increase was particularly influenced by affairs in Europe but was rather an indication of the modern swing towards the social science course and the departure from the classics.

Douglass Addresses Educational Con.

Dr. Bennett C. Douglass, professor of education at U. V. M., is now acting as chairman of the Panel on Professional Preparation of Teachers at the Educational Conference being held at the Crawford House, Crawford Notch, N. H. This educational conference started Sunday and ends tomorrow. The problem of the Panel is "What Should Teacher Preparation Institutions Do to Provide an Adequate Preparation for Teachers Who Are to Educate Pupils for Living in a Changing World?"

On Friday, September 27, Professor Douglass delivered an address at the thirty-sixth annual conference of the Franklin County Teachers' Association held at St. Albans. The title of this year's conference was "Democracy in the Schools" and Professor Douglass' related address was on "Educational Needs in a Democracy."

Temple University gridders have names for their plays, instead of using numbers.

Agricultural College Sponsors Conference

The department of animal and dairy husbandry of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College is sponsoring the Annual Short Course Conference for dairy plant operators and milk distributors, which is to be held on November 6-7 at the University.

The conference, including all lectures and discussions, is open and free to anyone who may wish to attend. Several of national prominence will deliver lectures. Requests for programs should be addressed to Prof. H. B. Ellenberger, head of the department of animal and dairy husbandry, University of Vermont, Burlington.

Last year the registered attendance at this conference exceeded 200 exclusive of students and members of the department.

Former Student Publishes Book

Is Compared to William Saroyan

A graduate student of U. V. M. several years ago, Walter Van Tildberg Clark, is publishing a book with Random House in New York this fall.

Born in a cabin near Bucksport, Me., Mr. Clark seems to have touched almost every part of the country before he came to the University of Vermont. His boyhood was spent on a farm up the Hudson at West Nyack. He graduated from the University of Nevada at Reno, and did additional work at Stanford University in California. Finally, after touring 20,000 miles through the United States in a battered but loyal Ford, the erstwhile house painter, farmer and teacher became convinced that he wanted most to write.

Accordingly, he came to the University when he received a fellowship in the early nineteen thirties. The writer spent two years here studying philosophy and literature, and at the end of this time he camped and wrote for a year on the New York shore of Lake Champlain.

Mr. Clark's book, "The Ox-Bow Incident," is the quick-moving story of a lynching bee in a western cattle town in 1885. The interesting method with which he treated a "western" story has led the president of Random House to call the former graduate student one of the best new writers since William Saroyan.

Big Turnout For First Pep Rally

Coach and Captain Speak to Enthusiasts

The first pep rally of the year sponsored by the Boulder Society was held in the gym cage Friday evening, September 27, in preparation for the Vermont-Northeastern football game. Many songs and cheers rang through the cage; cigarettes were passed out; the R. O. T. C. Band under J. F. Lechnyr played; and enthusiasm among the students ran high.

Short pep speeches by Capt. Frankie Taylor '41, Coach Evans, Professor Butterfield and Coach Sherry Fogg, who is new at the University this year, were met with noisy approval as a most successful season, it is hoped, was launched. R. Kenney '41 of the Boulder Society was in charge.

After the rally in the cage the large crowd gathered around a bonfire to cheer and to sing songs.

Doctor Ladd to Speak

The Rev. P. C. Ladd of the College Street Church in Burlington will be the guest speaker at the second regular Wednesday morning chapel exercises, October 2.

Capt. Frank Taylor Skirting End for Gain of Twelve Yards With "Jumbo" CarlsonAs Interference

Catamounts Win First Game of Season, 7-0

Touchdown Made On Blocked Kick In Fourth Quarter

After three rather drab periods of fruitless play the Catamounts capitalized on a blocked kick that rolled into the Northeastern end zone to score the only touchdown and win their opening clash Saturday at Centennial Field. Taylor successfully converted for the extra point to make the tally 7-0.

Salmon Blocks, Northeastern Kick

The break came about three minutes after the start of the fourth quarter. Pullinen on the fourth down kicked from the mid-stripe to the Northeastern 25-yard line from where the ball was run back to the 28. On the first play Jimmy Shea, hampered by a bad pass from center, was caught behind the line by Bill Pye. When the second attempt ended in Tubbs' being stopped for a loss of another yard, the Beantown boys decided to kick. With Tubbs back, Dick Salmon and Pye sprinted in to block the kick. Salmon banged the ball back toward the end zone and Pye, Salmon and Tubbs went after it.

Pye Scores Touchdown

Although from the center of the stands it seemed that Tubbs was in the lead before all three dove for the ball, when the heap was unscrambled it was seen that Pye had covered the ball behind the line. With Spasyk holding the ball, Capt. Frank Taylor parted the poles for the seventh point. The remainder of the game saw no real threat by either side but held an outstanding bit of maneuvering by the Huskies. Tubbs, back for a pass, received a bad throw from center, dropped the ball, recovered it, faded, threw a long pass to Waltonen. Waltonen on being immediately encircled lateralled to Rose who went on for three more yards. The profit of this were immediately nullified on the next play however when Red Dorion blitzkrieged Charlie Patterson 12 yards behind the line.

Last Minute Rally

The Huskies in a desperate try to make up the loss tried a long pass which was pulled down by Taylor. Frankie clumped down the north side of the field for about 30 yards only to be knocked outside by Tubbs—the only man between the ball and the goal. Thurber then replaced Babits who was banged up a bit and the Cats pawed the ball for the remaining two minutes of the game.

GRID GLEANINGS

Outstanding—Johnny Spasyk's quarterbacking and punting that saved too many an awkward situation.

Standing out—like a Democrat in Vermont was the evident first game clumsiness in tackling and blocking that will take some working on. Several pileups, by necessity, were composed of about 8 Vermonters and one ex-Huskie.

Red Dorion, injected only in the last quarter, was in for the tackle on the first play and two later threw Patterson for a—12. Red, out for the firse time since he played freshman ball is a very promising fellow.

Micky Gilbert, on duty for the first time in two years was undoubtedly the fastest man on the field. He was in quicker for more tackles than anyone else.

It was a delicate situation for new head coach Fuzzy Evans and Roy Wietz who have had to re-train the old men to their new methods, polish up last year's frosh and, shall we say, mix proportionately before applying. Next week's game with Trinity at Hartford should be a Vermont victory without the necessity of a break.

Vermont To Conduct Basketball Clinic

Fine points of basketball, such as only come from an expert in the sport, will be explained, demonstrated and pictured to a large gathering of coaches and players when Chuck Taylor, rated nationally as a leading basketball authority, holds one of his series of nation-wide basketball clinics at the University of Vermont Gymnasium at 8 p.m., Monday, October 7. There is no admission charge.

The basketball authority, who is now making a national tour with his basketball clinic, is scheduled to give a thorough display of the game and it is expected that a record crowd of those interested in basketball will attend.

This will be the only appearance of Taylor in northern Vermont this year. He is now on his fourteenth annual tour.

He is rated as the greatest ball handler of the game in history, and prior to his present work he won an outstanding record as a player, both in school and with leading professional teams of the country. Taylor's clinics are chiefly devoted to fundamentals of the game, and his teaching methods are accepted by leading coaches.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"If an institution cultivates the policy of critical inquiry, of intellectual responsibility and integrity—as I believe is obligatory—it follows as a matter of course that controversial questions should be freely discussed. Young men and women are going to discuss the different social ideologies and theories, whether in or out of class. Why shouldn't they?" Antioch College's President, Algo D. Henderson urges free college discussion of all "isms."

U. V. M. To Give Cozen's Test

Test to Measure Men's Athletitc Ability

Freshman men are now able to take the Cozen's Athletic Ability Test for College Men given Monday and Tuesday, September 30 and October 1, Archie T. Post, assistant professor of physical education announced. Mr. Post stressed the fact that the test is optional and, "no one will be forced to take it," but last year, "an extremely high percentage of students took it by election."

The test consists of four indoor and three outdoor events, and is so arranged, "that the total achievement is scored by scientifically developed tables." The weight and height of each man is considered in the scoring.

The events in the athletic ability test are:

	Average Range
1. Standing Broad Jump for distance	7′ 4″ to 7′ 9″
2. Parallel Bar Snap for distance	5′ to 5′ 6″
3. Softball Throw for distance	156′ to 174′
4. Football Punt for distance	30 to 35 yds.
5. Dips on Parallel Bars	8 to 10
6. Dogging Run for Agility on Time	24.1 to 24.3 sec.
7. Quarter-mile Run on Time	68.6 to 72.3 sec.

The test is given during regular class hours, and the physical education department urges every student to take part. It is open to all who are physically able. Those freshmen who make the superior rating will be privileged to take electives in physical education along with the sophomores, while the above-average group will have a choice of one out of three electives. All other freshmen will be entitled to another "crack at the indoor or wet weather battery of tests" after the mid-year exams. This test consists of the four indoor events.

Mr. Post is looking forward to determining the capabilities of this year's freshmen with great interest. Last year his expectations for an interesting result were fulfilled when not one member of the present sophomore class gained a superior rating. In addition to this precedent setting occurrence, "an extremely high percentage" took the test by election, although in previous years it had been mandatory.

Eight Men To Play In Tennis Singles

In response to a call from Archie Post eight men signed up for the tennis singles tournament.

"The tourney will be moved quite fast and only poor weather will cause a match to be postponed," said Archie.

Contestants are warned to play their matches according to schedules, because any match not played per schedule will be cancelled.

In the horseshoe tourney the deadlines for successive rounds are October 3, October 9, October 12, October 15.

The intramural fall golf tournament matches have already been made, and Round 1 is to be completed by October 2. The deadline for Round 2 is October 4, for Round 3, October 8. All rounds in this eighteen-hole tourney will be held at the Waubanakee Golf Club.

Sports Cast

By the Sport Editor

Nice Day and All That

Well, it was a nice afternoon—for baseball. A few light clouds floated about in the azure blue and the sun was very hot. Frankie Taylor kicked off to Northeastern and Bob Paterson made the first tackle for Vermont. Everybody in the stands edged forward a little—the game was on. But shucks the boys out there on the gridiron seemed to have reached a gentleman's agreement not to get too excited about the whole thing.

Time Dawdles By

As the minutes slowly wended their way into the great unknown the Cats and the Huskies pushed each other around in amiable fashion. Neither got anywhere. And the spectators yawned. Early in the first quarter the Green and Gold (resplendent in new jerseys) threatened but it all came to naught because of a fumble. Another Vermont fumble gave Northeastern the ball near the Cat's goal line. Slight excitement in the stands—"Hold that line." The Cats do. Ho-Hum.

The Awakening

All through the first half (and the second for that matter) Fuzzy is substituting. And whadya know—the second team uses cruder methods but it is more effective than the first team. Maybe Fuzzy will just switch them around next game.

Once in the second quarter all the boys get confused and they take turns being offside, finally ending up in a very undignified scramble for the ball. But that is all—and so to halftime. Even the stretching period is boring—no cane rush, no parade by the band, just "Champlain." Pardon my yawn.

The boys come back all refreshed. So what. The third quarter is almost gone. When—Excitement Galore—(for two minutes). Pye blocks a Northeastern punt with his face. Salmon falls on it in the end zone. Vermont 6, Northeastern 0. Taylor kicks the point. And that is just about that. The rest of the game is merely superfluous. In the final quarter the Huskies get off a couple of nice runs but it's waste effort. Come on let's go home.

On Other Fronts

So the first game of the 1940 season is history. But it wasn't all as dull as it sounds—it did prove the Cats have a good line and a well-balanced backfield. Give them time.

And now for a glance at what has been happening to our future opponents. Middlebury pulled the surprise of the week by holding Williams to a six-point advantage. This seems to indicate that the Panthers have been underrated by the pre-season dopesters. At all events they'll bear watching in the future.

The Cadets, who according to all the experts, are the ones the Cats must trim for the state crown, spent a somewhat disastrous afternoon Saturday. Boston University took them to town in very rough style. However, Domina, the Norwich speedster, lived up to expectations by racing 90 yards for the Cadets' only touchdown.

Colby, due here October 12, showed great power in trouncing New Hampshire. The boys from Maine unleashed a passing attack of true "blitzkrieg" proportions.

If you ask us, the Cats have no breathers this year. It will take all the manpower available to come through unscathed. Here's hoping!

Ten Years Ago In Sports

With the schedule calling for a game Saturday at Amherst, Coach David L. Dunn has only a few days left to round his football players into shape for the opening contest of the season.

Rounding the boys into physical condition to stand the gaff, drill in precision of ball handling, and concentration on early season plays all has had to be packed into three weeks and one day in order that the team may make a showing against its first opponent.

For his twenty-two to twenty-six regulars which modern football requires for an efficient grid team, Coach Dunn has a nucleus of 12 "V" men from last year's team.

The total weight of the squad is 4,500 pounds and the average weight is 162 pounds.

Harvard, whose schedule the Catamounts open next Saturday at Cambridge, appears as a very formidable gridiron opponent, and gives promise of developing into one of the strongest elevens in the East.

Bump Levine, Bunny Prentice and Archie Post who are, in toto, our physical education department, spent the summer at Harvard learning more wily contortions to teach the soph and frosh gymnasts.

On a bleak and muddy field while the wind swept dismally through the bleachers and the spectators' frames, Doc Tully's patients hammered the Montpelier Seminary team to a standstill and won to the tune of 30-0.

In spite of the dismalness of the day, it was warming to see the Kittens pile up one of the biggest scores in years on the home gridiron.

Work has already begun toward getting the hockey rink in shape for practice, which will be held as soon as weather permits.

H. B. "Hi" Abraham was again engaged to act as coach for the 1930-31 Hockey season. The schedule includes

Vermont Outing Club Surveys Skiing Areas

Sunday's Outing Club hike turned out to be a veritable survey of the Mansfield skiing areas. Leaving the truck at the base of the Stevens Trail, the group went up the trail, divided at the top into several groups and, after spending some time gazing around New England, came down the Tear Drop, Sunset Ridge Trail, and the Nose Dive, meeting in the parking area.

The hike lasted the whole day and was marked by several highlights—one of them being the fact that two past presidents of the Outing Club were present, Nussbaum and E. C. Bailey.

The next hike will be announced in Friday's Cynic, so watch for it.

Doctor Dole Collects Rare Tropical Plants

Dr. E. J. Dole, associate professor of botany, is preparing a collection of tropical plants. These specimens have been donated, in part, to the University and the entire group will be classified and mounted. This process will take two or three months due to the wide variety and great number of the specimens. When the collection is finished, it is expected that it will be exhibited at the Fleming Museum.

FRATERNITY RUSHING RULES

As Adopted May 21, 1940
In Force 1940-1941

1. Beginning with the first day of Freshman Camp, no fraternity man shall entertain, discuss fraternity matters with, or extend an invitation to membership to any new Freshman or new student until the end of the neutral period after regular bidding time, except at rushing parties. The word "entertain" is interpreted as meaning accompanying at movies or any other regularly conducted entertainments, dinner engagements, out-of-town athletic contests or any other function which the Council may interpret as being similar to the above. No fraternity man may give rides to new Freshmen or new students.

2. No new Freshman or new student shall be allowed on any fraternity property except sidewalks between aforesaid dates, excepting open-house nights and rushing parties.

3. The Interfraternity Council has designated the following five evenings when, from 7.30 to 10.30 p.m., fraternities may welcome new Freshmen and new students to their houses: Monday, September 30 to Friday, October 4, inclusive. There shall be no refreshments nor formal entertainment. "Smokes" are permitted. Personal invitations may supplement the general invitations to all students.

4. For the convenience of new Freshmen and new students, a schedule of fraternities and visiting hours shall be published. By visiting the houses according to the schedule, the new men will be able to spend at least one hour in each fraternity house during the first three open house nights. The new Freshmen and new students may visit those fraternities which they desire to visit more than once on the fourth and fifth open house nights. On these two nights only may fraternities ask for rushing night preferences.

5. New Freshmen and new students shall assemble in the gymnasium at 7.00 a.m., Saturday, October 5, to receive rushing date cards from representatives of different fraternities, filling out the same as has been customary. At this time a rushing tax of one dollar ($1.00) shall be collected from each new Freshman or new student who shall accept one or more rushing date bids. A member of the faculty who is a disinterested party, yet competent, shall be designated by the Council to meet the new Freshmen and new students as a body and to make such explanations to them as are necessary before they go through the line.

6. Rushing dates, three in number, will be held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, October 7, 8, and 9. These dates will last from 6.00 to 12.00 p.m. No fraternity shall make more than one such date with any new Freshman or new student.

7. On Thursday, October 10, between 1.30 and 5.30 p.m., new Freshmen and new students shall go to the Political Science office, 37 North College and fill out, on a prepared form, their choice of fraternities in order of preference. If they have no choice they should write "undecided." Prior to 1.30 p.m. of the same day, the fraternities will submit to the Political Science office a list of men to whom they wish to extend invitation to membership. A disinterested faculty committee to be selected by the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Faculty Adviser of the Interfraternity Council shall match the preference forms with the invitation lists and inform each new Freshman or new student as to the name of the first fraternity on his list which has extended him an invitation to join. In case no fraternity on his list has extended to him an invitation he shall be so informed, and he may be allowed to add to his list, if he so desires, or he may write "undecided." This process may be repeated. The new Freshman or new student shall go to the house of the fraternity which has been selected at the conclusion of this process.

At 5.45 p.m. the committee shall present to a representative of each fraternity a list of new Freshmen and new students who have been selected by it and a list of those who have written "undecided" and received bids from that fraternity.

8. No fraternity shall pledge a man who has previously been pledged to another fraternity until seven months have elapsed from the date of the previous pledging unless the pledge is rescinded by the pledging fraternity prior to the expiration of the seven months' interval.

9. All pledges shall wear buttons, unless pledging shall be declared irregular by the Faculty Council; they shall be strictly honored by all fraternities. It is herewith expressly ruled that the Faculty Council alone shall have the power to declare a pledge irregular or unlawful.

10. Penalties for the infraction of rushing rules will be administered by a committee composed of the Interfraternity Council and five faculty members who are not members of fraternities having chapters here and have no sons who are active members of chapters here. In dealing with a violation the committee shall sit as a court with the offending fraternity as defendant and the President of the Faculty Council as a presiding judge. All the evidence shall be presented to the court by both the defending and prosecuting fraternities and a decision will be made by the five faculty members. A majority vote will convict.

11. Each fraternity that is a member of the Interfraternity Council shall post a bond of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) with the Secretary-Treasurer of the Interfraternity Council. This bond shall be forfeited if the fraternity be found guilty of violation of any of the above rules.

Any fine forfeited shall revert to the Treasury of the Interfraternity Council and may be disposed of in accordance with the Constitution.

tal, or moral deficiency and for "those men whose employment in industry, agriculture, or other occupations or employment, or whose activity in other endeavors, is found to be necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety, or interest."

5. Sec. 3(a). Any person between the ages of eighteen and thirty-six shall be afforded an opportunity to volunteer for the period of training and service (twelve months) prescribed in this Act.

6. Sec. 3(a). Foreign students (male aliens) must register, but only those who have declared their intention to become citizens are eligible for service.

7. Sec. 5(d). "Ministers of religion, and students who are preparing for the ministry in theological or divinity schools . . . . shall be exempt from training and service (but not from registration) under this Act."

8. Sec. 5(g). Any person "who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form" is not required, subject to approval of his claim, to be subject to combatant service but is subject either to non-combatant service or to "work of national importance under civilian direction."

Registration

The President has set October 16 as the date for registration. It will be conducted by election officials or such other individuals as the county clerk may appoint for each election district. The county clerk may, upon the request of a school or college, appoint a special registrar to conduct the registration within such institution. The student may register at any convenient place regardless of legal residence or domicile. The county clerk will mail his registration card to the local selective service (draft) board having jurisdiction over the area which the student indicates as his place of residence.

Classification

Each student (as well as all other men twenty-one to thirty-six) will be assigned a number and will be subject to call for classification. Prior to receipt of call he will receive a personal data sheet, one section of which provides for recording the individual's education and includes a specific question relating to attendance at school or college during the current academic year. If the student requests deferment and if his attendance during 1940 is verified by the college, his training may be deferred until July 1, 1941 or until the end of the academic year.

Although a literal interpretation of the Act, as worded, might exclude some students from its deferment clause, there is reason to think that the Act will be liberally interpreted through rules and regulations now being drawn, to carry out a policy of deferring those students whose major occupation is the pursuit of a program of studies leading to a degree or certificate. Local boards will have discretion in deferring students in educational institutions or in courses of study not clearly within the Act (see par. 2 above), and part-time students, who may or may not be deferred because of their course of study, or other occupation. Authority for classifying any individual, subject to the process of appeal, lies with the local board.

Reserve Officers' Training Corps

Some have felt that the exemption from registration of students in the advanced R. O. T. C. course will jeopardize colleges and universities without R. O. T. C. The following facts should be borne in mind: (1) The War Department does not contemplate the establishment of additional R. O. T. C. units. (2) In established R. O. T. C. units the number of men permitted to continue into the advanced course is only one in four of those who take the basic course (84,000 in the basic Army R. O. T. C. course, 19,000 in the advanced). (3) The young man who received his R. O. T. C. commission will be subject to active duty for such time after graduation as the Army or Navy may then require. (4) The War Department contemplates setting up officer training facilities in selected Army camps.

Teachers and Research Workers

The Act prohibits the blanket deferment of an occupational group in any plant or institution. However, the present wording of the occupational deferment clause is sufficiently broad to leave wide discretionary power to the local board to defer training and service for individual teachers and research workers whose work is essential to the national health, safety, or interest. Every effort is being made to conserve the continuity of basic social institutions.

Voluntary Enlistment

A student may prefer to take his year of training at a time when it will interfere least with the continuity of his program. On the other hand, indiscriminate volunteering should be discouraged and every effort should be made to avoid the development of the attitude that it is more patriotic to volunteer than to be called through the Selective Service Act.

OTHER MILITARY AND NAVAL SERVICE

National Guard

A student who is a member of a unit of the National Guard will be subject to the requirements for duty of such unit and does not come under the potential deferment clause of the Selective Service Act.

Reserve Officers

A student or faculty member in the Officers' Reserve Corps, although he would not come under the provisions of the Selective Service Act, may be selected on an individual basis for active duty as military needs and the circumstances of the individual may justify.

Engineering Schools

The supplementary appropriation bill now before Congress includes a request for $9,000,000 to be used to meet the cost of short engineering courses of college grade, pursuant to plans approved by the United States Commissioner of Education.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Several years have elapsed, but the story is still a good one. A Cornell University undergraduate, fascinated by the epic proportions of the feat, determined to pay his university bill of $243.50 entirely in pennies. Investigation at a local bank revealed that 24,350 pennies could be procured in exchange for bills. The resultant sack of copper coins was hauled to the treasurer's office and stacked before the proper window, whereupon an incensed treasurer informed the panting student that pennies in that sum were not legal tender and could not be accepted.

Undaunted, our hero returned to the bank, planning to deposit his pennies and get the cash to pay his bill. It seems, however, that the banks had an unfortunate rule to the effect that pennies could not be accepted for deposit unless wrapped, so in desperation the student was forced to hire a bank clerk to wrap the coins. For the small sum of $8 the clerk worked the greater part of the night, and by morning the pennies were ready for deposit.

Armed with the necessary cash a much chastened student returned again to the treasurer's office, feeling much relief at the prospective ending of an unhappy episode, only to find that an additional fine of $5 had been slapped against his account for late payment of fees.

Many Colleges Stress Academics

Chicago's President De-emphasizes Sports

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Echoing anew at scores of colleges as the 1940 football season gets under way is the white-hot pro and con argument about football. Is the University of Chicago on the right track in sharply de-emphasizing the sport, or should football as a big business be given even further impetus?

Scores of college editors have spoken out on the subject last term and this. Many are convinced Chicago's President, Robert M. Hutchins, has courageously struck out against a national evil. Many, but not all.

At the University of Illinois, the Daily Illini expressed opinion that "When President Hutchins told the world that subsidization of athletes was a prerequisite to gridiron glory, he crawled far out on a limb. The Illinois boys still win football games in the toughest league in the nation, and they seem to do it without the aid of the subsidies which President Hutchins implied they received."

The Purdue Exponent, while "admitting some faults and commercialization in football," declared it has "no desire that Purdue should ever 'follow' Chicago. Football contributes a certain 'something' to college life which we would not want thrown into discard."

Likewise, it is the opinion of the Washington and Jefferson Red and Black, that "collegiate football is of definite benefit to colleges, to students, and to numerous other interests alike. If, as Doctor Hutchins alleges, football is a major handicap to education, the Red and Black feels that the American system of higher learning needs more such handicaps."

Contrasted with these opinions are those of several college publications that believe steps must be taken to curb commercialization. Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Tech declares "the situation is so flagrantly non-amateur in both spirit and practice that the only logical thing to do is to abandon amateur intercollegiate football and declare it frankly as the professional occupation it is."

The Richmond Collegian poses for its readers the question, "Can we take the spotlight from football and put it on scholarship, where it belongs? Chicago had the courage."

The Rice Thresher agrees that "in subsidization we are defeating the whole purpose for the existence of football on our campus, a game of recreation for the students."

The Michigan Daily feels "it is just as well that Chicago saw fit to retire."

And at Chicago, the Daily Maroon itself expresses satisfaction with the Hutchins arrangement, saying, "Its educational function is the essential reason for a university's existence. It is true that not having football any more will make autumn duller for a few people. But even those few were not able to become very enthusiastic about the games."

We understand there are three kinds of co-eds on the Ball State Teachers College campus:

1. The beautiful.
2. The intellectual.
3. The majority.

Freshman Girl To Be Engineer

Dressed in a white work coat and calmly breaking eggs into a bowl in the Allen House kitchen, Betty Smith, sole freshman female mechanical engineer, looked more like a model Home-eccer than an avid lover of aeronautics. You've probably seen her around campus, especially the Engineering building—a tall pretty blue-eyed girl, with short curly hair, certainly as striking in appearance as in her main interest—engineering.

Betty was born in Deposit, N. Y., "which you've probably never heard of," she laughed. She lives in Jackson Heights now. In high school, mathematics was her favorite subject, and, since she was the only girl to take advanced math, and most of the boys were going to be engineers, she thought she might like to be one too. Most of all she wants to be an aeronautical engineer. At this point enter the international situation—Betty plans on a big opening for women in aeronautics in the event that the men might be sent overseas.

Betty's two pet hobbies, outside of engineering, are reading books—"light, light novels," and books on aviation (her mind certainly is in the clouds!)—and dancing. She hopes someday to know the ideal dancing partner, who will dance with her whenever she gets the urge—which must be quite often. As an afterthought, she added, "My telephone number is 4077."

Four Fraternities Hold Tea Dances

Tea-dances were held by four fraternities Saturday, September 28, after the Vermont-Northeastern game.

At the Phi Delta Theta house, Professor and Mrs. Witham were chaperons. W. Murray '43 and W. Nestler '43 were co-chairmen of the dance committee.

Professor and Mrs. Youngert were the chaperons at the tea-dance given by the Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. R. Steinman '42 was in charge.

E. Roby '41 was in charge of the dance held at the Delta Psi house. Mr. and Mrs. Leader were chaperons.

The Owls held a dance at their house after the game, at which Doctor and Mrs. Stultz and Professor and Mrs. Rowell were the chaperons. H. Thurber '43 was in charge.

Professor Buehler Teaches In Pennsylvania College

Prof. A. G. Buehler, formerly of the University of Vermont economics department, taught in the summer session here this summer. Professor Buehler is now professor of public finance at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. M. W. Maclay of the economics department spent part of his summer playing tennis at Basin Harbor and the other part studying the cooperative system in Nova Scotia.

Second Campus Sing Attracts Large Group

An enthusiastic group of U. V. M. students gathered together on the back campus last Thursday evening, September 26, at 7.30 to participate in the first Campus Sing of the year, which was sponsored by Professor Ladd. The Sing was conducted under the able direction of L. Pichierri '41, with Elizabeth Cole '41 at the piano, placed on a truck for convenience. Song sheets were handed out and all joined in singing the old favorites and Vermont songs.

Outstanding songs were "Little Brown Jug," "Roll Out the Barrel," "God Bless America," " Dixie," "Love's Old Sweet Song," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "East Side—West Side," "Goodnight, Ladies."

The enjoyable evening was brought to a close with everyone singing "Champlain."

Society Notes

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

On Friday, September 27, a tea was given by the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority for their house mother, Mrs. France, Rae G. Sheehan '41 was in charge of the the tea. Representatives from sororities on the campus were present.

Pauline Rowe, class of '39, spent the evening of September 25 at the Alpha Chi Omega house, after attending a convention at Twist O' Hill.

French Club Initiation

There will be a meeting of the French Club, Tuesday, October 1, at 7.30 at Southwick Memorial. A feature of the meeting will be the initiation of new members. Students who received a grade of B—or higher in French last year have been invited to attend. Freshmen who desire to join will have an opportunity after mid-years.

Short Men Form Unique Organization

NEW YORK CITY (ACP)—"The Little Man Who Wasn't There" is here, and here to stay— at least if Shikey Bard has anything to say about it. While busily engaged in research for a term paper in History at Yeshiva College, Bard noticed in the text which he was using that Napoleon had nothing on him —as far as height is concerned. Going back to the original sources, Shikey found in a text that not only he and Napoleon but neither John Paul Jones, Chopin, Beethoven, Keats, Milton nor Michelangelo were around when the extra inches were handed out.

Having thus justified the existence of his miscroscopic brethren, Bard has assumed the task of organizing these concentrated dynamos into one organization. The main purpose of this society is to insure the little fellows protection from being trampled underfoot.

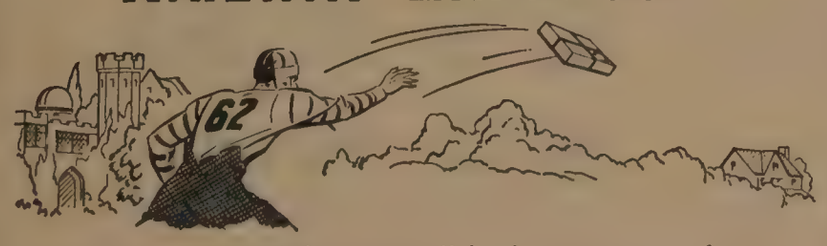
This "fraternity of the Little Fellow," as it has been named, has for its raison d'être the fact that the world which has had quantity for its standard must in the near future seek a new norm of quality. And who is a better representative of this new concept than the "Little Fellow," says Bard. The "Little Man Who Wasn't There" has sent a call to colors to all collegians who have stature not exceeding 5 feet 4. Bard hopes that since all "Little Fellows" are close to the ground they will be able to create a saner society, for unlike their long-legged brothers they will create conceptions which are "down to earth."

The motto adopted by the mite-y atoms is "By your feats shall ye be judged, not by your feet."

Men's Glee Club To Suspend Meetings

During the next two weeks Men's Glee Club and University Orchestra will be suspended on account of fraternity rushing. University Choir and Chapel Orchestra will meet as usual. Women's Glee Club will meet at 7 instead of 8 p.m. Wednesday evenings, October 2 and 9.

Next rehearsal of Men's Glee Club Wednesday, October 16, at 7 p.m., at the Music Building, 70 Williams St.



Next rehearsal of University Orchestra, Thursday, October 17, at 8 p.m. at the Music Building (full orchestra at 8 o'clock).

Sororities Begin Informal Rusing Of Freshman Girls

New Rules Restrict Dormitory Calling And Entertaining

The Greek-letter sororities opened their period of informal rushing Thursday, October 3, 1940. This is the time for all freshmen and eligible transfers to become acquainted with the various sorority houses and their members.

Rushing is governed by the Pan-Hellenic Council, of which Elizabeth Isham '41 is president.

Following are the rules set forth for rushing for 1940-41:

PAN-HELLENIC

Rushing Rules 1940-41

It must be remembered that the activities of any sorority member which violate the spirit of Pan-Hellenic reflect not only upon the character of the girl but also upon the character of the sorority to which she belongs.

Rules

1. No money is to be spent by sorority women to entertain Freshmen or eligible transfers (except for final parties).

No money is to be spent by Freshmen or eligible transfers to entertain sorority women. This rule is in effect from the opening of college until the second semester of the Sophomore year.

2. Informal Rushing: October 3-October 30, 1940. During this period visiting hours in dormitories, sorority houses, and private homes is permitted every day except Sunday from 4.00 to 7.30 p.m. provided no planned entertainment is provided.

Open rushing is permitted on Saturdays from 1.00-7.30 p.m. October 5 through November 10.

French Club Greets Many New Members

The French Club held its first meeting of the new semester on Tuesday evening, October 1, at Southwick. A large number attended, including a great many new members. The constitution of the club was read by the president, Gloria Oling '42, and June Hoffman '43 read a letter received from a French girl some time ago. Refreshments were served.

This year the club has a very extensive program. A French movie is to be shown, which any student may attend by payment of a small fee. A play, even bigger and better than last year's, is planned.

Membership in the club has been made honorary. All students who received an A or B grade in French last semester are supposed to have been asked to join. Any student who is eligible but who, for some reason, did not receive an invitation, may find out about it by seeing any member of the club.

Hose Fight—Free Sample

Eight Sophomore men heroically pushed back the Freshmen in yesterday's Hose Fight thus giving the Class of '43 its second victory in the annual Freshman-Sophomore competitions.

Homecoming Day To Feature Review

Fraternity Teas and Athletic Events Planned

An event very unique and different heralds the arrival of another annual Homecoming Day, celebrated this year on the week-end of October 11 and 12.

As usual, much has been planned to welcome back the alumni on their own week-end, but the special feature of this year's Homecoming is the presentation of the "Alumni Music Box Revue" on Friday and Saturday evenings, October 11 and 12 at 8.15 p.m. in the University Gymnasium.

The rehearsals for the show, directed by Win Danielson, theatrical producer of Lynn, Mass., are already underway, but all alumni of Burlington and neighboring communities are welcome to offer their talents for the show, or their services to Mrs. Isabelle Gallup, alumni secretary, at the University Medical Building.

The week-end will be an eventful one, including athletic events, fraternity reunions, and dancing, following the performance each evening.

On Saturday, the freshman cross-country meet with Dartmouth will lead off at 1.20 p.m., followed by the varsity cross-country meet at 1.30 p.m. At the half of the football game between Vermont and Colby, the freshman-sophomore cane rush will take place, The game is at 2.00 p.m.

Fraternity teas, scheduled at 4.30 p.m., will be followed by the second performance of the Revue and the final dance.

A great number of alumni are expecting to attend, and the week-end promises to be as pleasant as their memories of days at Vermont.

Formal Banquets To Climax Rushing

Accompanied by high-pressure sales talk by sleepy-eyed upperclassmen, men's rushing is on in full force this week, and will continue thus until next Thursday when the rushees will receive their bids. This week it is open house among the fraternities, with freshmen and new students revisiting those houses which struck their fancy earlier in the week.

Tomorrow morning at seven o'clock those students interested will assemble in the gym to receive and fill out rushing date cards. The rushing tax of one dollar will be paid then by those students who accept one or more bids. The rushing banquets will be on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 6.00 to 12.00 p.m.

On next Thursday the Interfraternity Council will match up the choices of the frats with the selections of the new students to determine the new pledges. These will be recognized by their buttons and that sleepy look which always accompanies rush time.

Aggie Club Welcomes Twenty Freshmen

The Aggie Club held a meeting in Morrill Hall on October 1 at 7.30 p.m. After the business meeting reports were given by members who attended the Eastern States Exposition the week of September 15. R. F. Evans '41 and E. Grifford '41 reported on the Dairy Products contests while E. Paquette '41 and K. J. Estey '41 spoke on cattle and Dairy Judging.

Twenty freshman members were present but the club hopes that even a larger attendance from the freshman class may be had in the future. Following the meeting refreshments were served.

Press Club Plans Work For Year

The Women's Press Club held a meeting Monday, September 30, at 1.30 p.m. in North College.

The club, headed by A. Ducas '41, is affiliated with the publicity department of the University. It contacts town and high school publications and sends them announcements of campus activities and supplies newspapers of larger cities with feature material.

At its first meeting on Monday the club decided to hold another meeting today, October 4, at 1.30 p.m., North College. Club officers will welcome any interested students to the organization. They are particularly eager for the enrollment of freshmen.

U. V. M. Sent Two Units To First World Conflict

It was the year 1916, and the University of Vermont was in the throes of final examinations. The distant war and its rumors had taken a secondary place in the minds of the students as they sat about with open books and open minds upon the topic of concentration and education. It was lazy June, and many a convalescent from spring fever was succumbing to nervous prostration over literature or science, whatever the case may be.

Suddenly, out of an apparently blue sky, came a thunderbolt. The United States, on the brink of war, had called out the National Guard.

For the fifth time in its history, the University of Vermont was called upon to send her young men to the defense of their country, and never before did so large a number respond to the call in so short a time.

Call to Service

Only the year before at the annual military inspection, the U. V. M. Battalion had made such a good showing that they were placed in the Distinguished Class of Military Colleges. Company C was given special mention and highest rank. How coincidental it was that this was the first company in the regiment to go to camp!

For the first time since the war of 1812, troops were quartered in the University buildings. The gymnasium annex was utilized as a barracks by Company M of Burlington. With the arrival of Company G from Winooski, a small army was instituted on the back campus. Within four days they were prepared to march to Fort Ethan Allen, where a daily program of drill and instructions was begun.

Few believed that they would ever reach the Rio Grande for service on the Mexican border, but by June 25 they were mustered into the service of the United States, and at 5.00 p.m. on June 27, the last train left, bearing them to Eagle Pass, Texas.

A Marching Regiment

Vermont, although one of the most northern states, was one of the first to answer the President's call by rendering efficient service as protector of our most southern border.

Excessive rain, or excessive heat, sand storms, infection bearing cactus plants, insects and a hurricane were nature's gifts to them during their stay. The rest lasted for a year and included an 18-mile hike each Saturday in heavy marching order,

Band Makes 1940 Debut At Northeastern Game

Well-balanced Instrumentation Is Keynote of Forty-eight Piece Outfit

Last Friday night at 7.30 the U. V. M. Band made its 1940 début at the pep rally held in the University cage. At the Vermont-Northeastern football game Saturday the band helped to bolster Vermont's school spirit with its lively marches and school songs. These two demonstrations show that the band is on its way toward a very successful year.

This year the military department has produced a bigger and better unit than last year. The band itself is mainly a University and not a military organization as most of its playing is done at functions not at all connected with the military department. The band does, however, play at federal inspection in the spring and in the Memorial Day parade. The members of the band are given credit in military science for their drill work but a great deal of credit should also be given them for the extra time they gave in practice for such activities as athletic contests, pep rallies and the Kake Walk.

After several days of tryouts, forty-eight musicians were picked to comprise the R. O. T. C. Band of the University. The band consists of 2 seniors, 3 juniors, 13 sophomores and 30 freshmen, all under the able direction of Mr. Joseph F. Lechnyr, with Israel Goodman '41 as assistant director and John Landry '43 as drum major.

This year's band boasts of a well-balanced instrumentation and, for the first time, an accordionist, John Hurst '44, has been included in the band.

The personnel of this year's band is as follows:

Cornets and trumpets: Goodman '41, Birmingham '44, Bennett '44, Carpenter '44, Stockwell '43, Bolton '43, Ouimette '44, Comings '44, Bonnett '44, Zigra '44; altos: Whitcomb '44, Lane '44, Cronk '44, Fuchs '44, Wallach '44; baritones: Rousseau '42, Alberghini '43, Saiger '44; bass: Kenfield '43, Dondes '44; trombones: Swift 43, Black '43, Grover '43, Waldo '44, Stockwell '44, Foster '44;

Vermont Debaters To Meet Bates

Opening Contests Set For October 15 and 18; Squad Numbers Eighteen

Many experienced speakers were among the eighteen students reporting for the first meeting of the Debating Club on Tuesday, October 1, in the Old Mill. From now on the meetings of the Debating Club will be held twice a week on Monday and Friday.

The women's team will open the season with a debate with Bates College at Burlington on October 15. Three days later on October 18, the men's team will meet Bates at Bethel, Me., for an exhibition debate for the high school teams. Both teams will argue the merits and demerits of the question, "Resolved, That the powers of the federal government should be increased." K. LeBaron '41, H. Durfee '41, T. Huntley '41, F. Bardossi '42 and J. Cohen '42 have had varsity experience.

For an understanding of the new international situation, one of the next topics will be, "Resolved, That the Western Hemisphere should form a permanent alliance or union for defense against foreign aggression."

Fourteen freshman debaters signed up for a new team but no definite plans have yet been made about the activities of the team. They probably will debate freshman teams of Middlebury, Dartmouth and St. Michael's College as well as the Green Mountain and Vermont Junior College in the course of the season.

Other varsity debaters, in addition to those named above, who attended the first meeting were: A. Caldwell '41, Janet Clark '42, Flora Fifield '42, B. Glass '43, Sophia Gorney '43, M. Levin '41, Faye Lipman '43, W. Musicant '42, Harriet Nelson '42, Jean Stewart '41, H. Zurck '44, D. Zwick '43 and Huddee Zwick '43.

Rev. P. C. Ladd Speaks At Chapel

The regular Wednesday morning chapel exercise was held on October 2 in the Ira Allen Chapel with the Rev. P. C. Ladd as guest speaker.

Rev. P. C. Ladd of the College Street Church in Burlington spoke on the three important times in college life. He used baseball for an illustration and in particular the World's Series. The first important time is the first inning, the second is the last inning and the third is the innings in between. He told the students to work out every play as hard and well as possible. His final advice was to always carry out the will of one higher than yourself.

Dean's Office Hours

During the college year, the office of the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences will be open week days except Saturdays from 9-12 and 2-5; Saturdays from 9-12.

Insofar as other engagements and duties permit, the Dean will be in his office at the above hours. Faculty may consult him at any time, but except in case of emergency or by appointment his office hours for students will be:

Monday 2-4.30
Tuesday 9-12; 2-4.30
Wednesday 9-12 (except during Chapel hour)
Thursday 2-4.30
Friday 2-4.30
Saturday 9-12

School Spirit?

Yes. The Sophomores did win the Hose Fight—all eight of them. One hundred and fifty students went to see eight freshmen hold (or try to hold) a large fire hose while eight equally heroic sophomores held another hose. Such a small representation from the two largest classes in school is certainly something for which neither class can be proud. We thought that the main object in staging the three Sophomore-Freshman tilts was to arouse a friendly rivalry between the two classes in order to create a feeling of spirit. If a representation of only eight men for each class is the largest number that feel any class or school spirit for these competitions, we feel strongly that such competitions should be indefinitely discontinued. For eight men to have to bear the brunt of an assault as powerful as that of a well-aimed fire hose is unjust.

We congratulate the sixteen men who so heroically participated in the Hose Fight. The Sophomores are to be praised for their victory but only the eight men who actually held that hose yesterday should feel proud of their victory.

Freshmen, Be Cagey!

It's on! The men's fraternities annual membership drive is now in its fifth day. Yesterday the formal rushing for women began. Freshmen now will be the guests of the fraternities and will be catered to in every possible manner. Much ado will be made about the freshmen. For the present they rule!

Selecting a fraternity to which one wishes to become affiliated is a serious task for either a man or a woman. We urge the freshmen to study carefully and in an unbiased manner the advantages which the various fraternities allege and to choose with discretion. Because a particular fraternity or sorority treats the freshmen more lavishly than another is no indication that it is the group to which one should pledge himself.

Each Greek organization on our campus has certain attributes which make it a separate identity. The purpose of all such organizations (as we see them) is primarily the same—to promote and develope one's permanent and lasting friendships among a group of people whose ideas, tastes, and ideals are congenial and to foster and develope one's personality and character by living, playing, and working with a small group of people with whom one is intimate.

To join a fraternity whose policies are not in keeping with one's personal beliefs is most unfortunate for everyone concerned. To learn after one is initiated that his heretofore solicitous rushers were insincere in their demonstration of good friendship is a sad mistake which no freshman, if he is smart, will make.

Vermont has some fine fraternities which fill a definite place on our campus. All freshmen who wish to join a fraternity should be able to choose an organization whose members are the type of people with whom they would like to be associated throughout their college life as an active and later as alumni.

Fraternity rushing is a difficult problem for both the over anxious members who are inspired by the need for new members and the freshmen who are often undecided as to which fraternity to select. We believe, however, that every freshman can solve the problem if he carefully considers all the phases of the issue and chooses the group whose purposes, ideals, standards, and members most appeal to him.

The World Front

By Fulvio Bardossi and Robert Wolfe

"Quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat"

If Mr. Adolf Hitler is well versed in the literature of the ancient world, he will be familiar with the above quotation; however, it is doubtful whether he ever heard of Euripides or Horace, to each of whom this philosophical commentary has been ascribed. It is even more doubtful that Mr. Hitler, if he be familiar with the aforementioned quotation, would heed the sage advice that it offers, for those who know him well state that he is rather stubborn and set in his ideas.

When in response to the sarcastic query of the British as to why the Germans were behind schedule in their invasion of Britain, Herr Hitler thundered the reply, "Ich komme (I am coming)," he gave every indication of being quite beside himself with anger. Now that is a bad state for Mr. Hitler to be in at the present moment. If we can judge by past performances, it means that Hitler, seeing red, will attempt to subdue Britain before winter, thus keeping his promise to his people. Yet, it would be a wiser military policy for the Nazis to swallow their collective pride, and admit the loss of the opening battle of Britain. A popular American belief is that such a delay will work to the advantage of Britain. Possibly, but not probably.

There are many factors that would operate in this period of delay. True, the fogs and storms over Britain and the channel would make an attempt at invasion well nigh impossible. But it would not prevent the terror bombing of London from proceeding. All winter the German Dorniers could fly over Britain by instrument, hiding in the fog, protected from British anti-aircraft and planes. The bombs might not hit any military objectives, but a navigator can tell quite accurately by instrument just where he is, and a bomb dropped on the east end of London would land somewhere in the east end of London. All winter the terror could go on, pounding at the British morale, making life in Britain a living hell.

At the same time, the Italians and Germans could proceed to attack Gibraltar and Suez, with a fair chance of success. Should the Axis powers succeed in cutting the British life line through the Mediterranean it would be a severe blow to the British cause. Then, when the spring of 1941 rolled around the Axis would be better set for a military invasion of Britain, and British hopes would be correspondingly weakened.

One British hope in a delay is the probability of increased American aid even the possibility of actual American military assistance. Such possibilities, however, received a severe check when the Axis pact with the Japanese, directed against just such American action, became public. With an eye toward the Pacific, many Americans who hitherto favored American armed aid to Britain in the cause of Democracy, are much less prone to worry about European affairs. Another advantage of a delay to the British lies in increased aid from her Empire; but that would have come one way or the other.

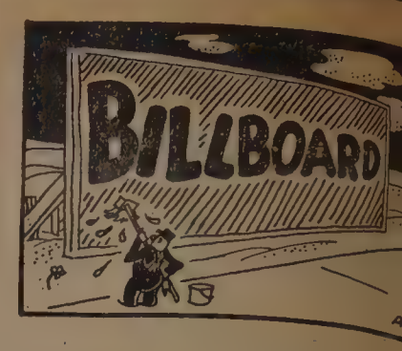
Let us turn to the possibility of an immediate (before winter, 1940-41) invasion of Britain. The channel has already become rough, and the fogs are beginning to gather over Britain. The British are keyed up to a fighting pitch which might slacken over the winter. The Nazis have already sustained severe losses in air personnel. The German people are already a bit perplexed over the failure of the British invasion to be the picnic it was expected to be. The highly publicized Ciano-Ribbentrop conferences, which were purported to preclude a policy of delay in the British invasion, have not lulled the British into letting up on defense preparedness. (Mr. Churchill's warning indicates the British were not fooled in the least, by this subtle propaganda.)

The British are ready, willing, and able, and favored by weather conditions.

It appears, then, that an immediate German invasion (which is still a definite possibility) would work to Britain's advantage rather than to her detriment. Should Herr Hitler, in his overweening pride, attempt an invasion this fall, he may quite possibly be struck a telling blow, so telling that it might weaken the strength of another invasion next spring. Mr. Hitler remembering that "whom the Gods would destroy, they first make mad," might well forget his anger and bide his time, utilizing the winter to make hay in the warm Mediterranean sunshine. R. W.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:



Recently various newspapers in this country have been declaring through their editorial columns their choice of the presidential candidates. People subscribe to these newspapers of their own free will and have the right to withdraw their subscriptions if they are dissatisfied with the policies of the paper. This is as it should be.

The Cynic, or certain people on the staff, has announced its support of Wendell Willkie for President. Just who it was who decreed that the newspaper representing the entire Vermont student body should support Willkie, we do not know. But we do know that the entire Vermont student body does not support Willkie. And yet the whole student body must pay for the publication of the Cynic through the Student Activity Fee. All of us must support Willkie, whether he is our choice or not. This is not as it should be.

Therefore we feel that it is the duty of the Cynic to be absolutely impartial in this presidential election.

English Department Divides Freshmen

Number of Sections Reduced This Year

Abandoning the plan which has been used in past years, the freshman English classes have been divided into just two divisions this fall.

Other freshman classes have been placed in three sections, A, B and C, according to their rating on the English placement test which is given to all incoming freshmen. The A division worked largely with literature, while the B and C sections were more concerned with grammar.

This year the English department, which is headed by Professor Tupper, decided to make only two sections of students after tabulating the results of the self-marking examination that was given to the class of 1944 on last Thursday afternoon.

One section is composed of the people who made a mark of 191 or over—the highest mark was 247—and in the other section are those whose marks were less.

each man carrying pack and equipment weighing from 40 to 50 pounds. The Vermonters won fame as a marching regiment.

However, by September the troops were recalled and by the twentieth of that month they had returned to Fort Ethan Allen. When discharged, Company C was given recognition for having a military record of the finest order. Not a man had been sent to the Guard House under arrest and the health of the men had been excellent.

To the University's credit it is well to note that when the call came to service, the University of Vermont was the only college in the entire country which sent two units fully equipped for duty.

In the spring of 1917 Congress declared war on Germany and classes at the University became seriously depleted with men steadily leaving college to go to the colors or others for other forms of war work. The War Department selected the University as a training school, determined to utilize the laboratories and other equipment of the institution to the best advantage. Vermont became the only university in the United States to have a second detachment of men for training.

College closed for the season 1917-1918 on the fourth of May in order to give students more time to work on farms, or an opportunity to enlist.

The gymnasium was being used by the Signal Corps with parts of Morrill Hall and the Old Mill. A Mechanical School was another military organization that appeared at U. V. M. at this time. This school trained men in blacksmithing, carpentry, and the care and driving of army trucks.

The University itself, however, did not reopen until October 23 because of the prevailing epidemic of influenza. A "Students' Army Training Corps" was created at this time, and the school seemed more like the mustering of a training camp rather than an educational institution. Then came November 11, 1918, and the Armistice was signed. Soon after this, the entire Corps was discharged before it had had a chance to even be fully organized.

However, quarantines due to the epidemic were heavily enforced and two of the fraternity houses were used to house whatever unfortunate students had caught the disease.

This closes for that period, the record of service played by this University in the first World War. It has been estimated that 2,231 men have been trained for war here. Vermont of the past responded to the call, and freely placed her resources "both human and material" at the feet of the nation. Who knows what the future may bring, perhaps even a sixth time?

Mass. State Limits Infirmary Stays

AMHERST, MASS. (ACP)—An increased awareness of how to stay in good health is demonstrated by students of Massachusetts State Colllege under a system of allowing each student a maximum of seven days in the college infirmary, according to Dr. Ernest J. Radcliffe, college physician.

Fewer bed patients were accommodated in the infirmary last year than in the year previous, he reported, while the attendance in the outpatient department was considerably greater.

Doctor Radcliffe interprets these figures to mean that "our students are slowly coming to the idea of having their illnesses treated in an early stage."

Without drawing definite conclusions, Doctor Radcliffe points out that the removal of the fear of medical expense has led students to report sicknesses in earlier stages than was the case under the system in effect prior to 1937 when students were charged infirmary fee for each day as a bed patient.

Cats to Tackle Trinity At Hartford Tomorrow

Blue and Gold Lacking in Reserves Catamounts in Top Shape for Test

Thoroughly dissatisfied with his team's blocking and tackling in their first encounter of the gridiron season, Coach Fuzzy Evans drove his charges hard this week in anticipation of a tough struggle with little Trinity College at Hartford, Conn., tomorrow. The wearers of the Green and Gold added plenty of gray hair to their coach's head, in the second half especially, when they were completely outclassed in all departments by a mediocre Northeastern eleven.

Fundamental Stressed

The early part of the week was devoted to the fundamentals of blocking and tackling in all of its known forms and Wednesday the team showed the fruits of their coach's advice when they scrimmaged against the freshman aggregation. The teams, A and A—there is no choice between them—will line up approximately the same with two possible exceptions. Dick Salmon, in view of his brilliant playing last week-end, will probably move up to a starting position, replacing Corbett, and Earl Reed, a mainstay of the defense last year, due to his experience will probably start at the center in place of Chesarone, although there is no doubt the latter, a sophomore, will see plenty of action before the day's skirmish is over. The rest of the team, including the backfields, will present the same front with the combine of Spasyk, Taylor, Gilbert and Parker probably taking the field first. There were no injuries in last week's game and the team is in great shape for the second gridiron battle of the year.

The Trinity eleven rested up Monday after taking a battering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute last Saturday, in a game that saw them beaten by the engineers to the tune of 13-7, but the only injury reported was that of "Big Ed" Killian, a regular tackle, who, although he has an injured leg, may see some action before the final whistle blows. This, by the way, is the first opening game defeat suffered by the Connecticut aggregation since 1932 and may be regarded as a mild upset since R. P. I. was not considered very strong this year.

Battle of Golds

The Blue and Gold has a definite weakness at the tackle positions since two regulars were moved to the wing positions and this may prove a great asset to a Catamount team which possesses two powerful lines.

The men from Trinity are also sadly lacking in reserve strength and this, too, will prove a boon to the players representing U. V. M.

With one defeat and a week of hard drilling behind, Coach Dan Jesse expects his Trinity eleven to show a 100 percent better team against Vermont tomorrow.

The battle of the golds, one using green to complete its color combination, the other using blue, will be a close contest with the game probably being decided by reserve strength and Vermont has plenty of that this year. It looks like the boys from U. V. M. will bring back their second victory in two starts.

Married Students Have Coop House

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. (ACP)—Four married couples on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California are learning that two can live almost as cheaply as one—and get an education, too!

They are members of Falkirk House, the first U. C. L. A. married students' cooperative dormitory. By pooling domestic arrangements, their savings run from $15 to $20 a month.

Falkirk House got its start last September when Lee Sterling Christie, a junior student, wanted to get married. He didn't know whether or not his finances would stand the strain, but he recognized that his problem was not unique. If he could find several other married couples, they could organize a cooperative dormitory.

He found them all right—three other couples, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Canham, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Mayfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. Leffert. They rented a two-story stucco house near the campus. The men do the heavy work around the house and yard while the women do the cooking and cleaning. All food is purchased through the U. C. L. A. Cooperative Housing Association. The cost of co-operative living is about $48 per couple each month.

The average age of the married students is twenty-two years.

"During the spring semester, four other couples applied for admission in Falkirk Hall," says Christie, "but we didn't have room for them. It proves that there is a definite need for this type of housing accommodation on the campus."

Intramural Sports In Full Swing

Fraternity Football Schedule Almost Ready

As the fall sports events begin to get into the swing of things, the back campus is blooming with athletes practicing to kick and pass the pigskin in view of the forthcoming events. Word has come from the athletic department that annual fraternity touch football competition will commence within a short space of time. However, a schedule has not been drawn up as yet because the councilmen from the respective frats either have been negligent in submitting the touch football rosters to the proper authorities or they haven't been elected.

Already some fraternities have been noticed to work out plays with first and second teams on the field in an effort to get the jump on their rivals. Since such keen interest in touch football has been expressed, the tardy frat men should take a minute off from rushing and delegate a councilman in order that their fraternity might be represented in the tournament. It is wished by the manager of intramurals, Cliff Josephs, that the matter be given immediate attention so that the campaign may get under way as soon as possible.

In reference to the tournaments, Archie Post wants to stress the fact, once again, that the deadline for signing up for tennis, horseshoes or golf will strictly be observed. Also, he urges those men who have chosen one of these sports will follow closely the schedule which has been posted.

Cats versus Harvard

With Harvard appearing as Vermont's number two opponent on the gridiron, the Catamounts are faced with anything but an easy task. Pre-season experts predict a strong aggregation to represent the Crimson on the gridiron.

By way of proving their power, the Crimson will in addition to Vermont tackle the United States Coast Guard Academy on the same day. The reason for this is obvious—the Harvard mentors want to conduct their squad through a thorough workout, and one game would not suffice.

The periods for the Vermont game, commencing at two o'clock, will be shortened to ten minutes with a 25-minute respite at the half. The Coast Guard game will have eight-minute quarters.

Freshmen Ragged

At the end of the first Frosh scrimmage, it is evident that Coach Tully has a stiff assignment to perform. The performance of the linemen did not meet with satisfaction in the eyes of the Frosh mentor. Their play was too ragged and they afforded little help for the fast plunging backs. In the backfield the outlook is more comforting as there are two quartets of equal strength.

First Golf Tournament

The first golf tournament under the supervision of the Physical Education Department is well under way with two rounds having already been completed. The Physical Education Department hopes to make it an annual event if this one proves satisfactory.

Frosh Gridsters To Open Against V.J.C. At Centennial, Sat.

Kittens' Defense Strong; Second Team Will See Plenty of activity

After ten days of intense practice the new edition of the U. V. M. freshman football team under the tutelage of Coach Sherry Fogg will square off against the Vermont Junior College eleven from Montpelier on Saturday afternoon, October 5, at Centennial Field.

Coach Fogg has about twenty-five players drilling, but the amount of experienced material is limited. The first team lines up with Tony Lewkowgi, blocking back; John Reed, wing back; Hal Mayforth, full back; Charlie Pacini, tail back; Jack Williams and Eddy, guards; Pulde and Sedlis, tackles; Paul Walgren and Barry, ends; and Charles Smith, center. This combination is strong defensely and rather ragged on the offense, but the latter defect can be remedied by hard work during the next few days. The line averages 176 pounds per man, whereas the backfield adds up to 157 pounds per man.

The second team, which is destined to see plenty of action during the oncoming campaign, has Bud Pierce, Edo Conedera, Stonewall Carpenter and Reno Conti in the backfield, with Carl Urie and Bobbie Otis, guards; Jack Baxendale and Fred Lawton, tackles; Fred Boardman and Kunken, ends; and Kehoe, center, on the line. Bishop McGill and Doug Riddle are among the promising reserves. The Kittens received a serious blow by the loss of Joe Margoles, 195-pound fullback from Meriden, Conn. An outstanding prospect, Margoles is no longer available because of an afternoon job.

Little is known about the opposition and no predictions are being made. The only information at present tells of a Vermont Junior College victory over a weak Spaulding High team by a 39-0 score.

Cross-Country Team To Meet Union

Webster and Hoyt Will Spark the Catamounts

The Varsity Cross-Country squad is en route today for Schenectady, N. Y., where it will open its 1940 season against the harriers of Union College. Coach Post will field a strong squad headed by the Webster Brothers, Charles and Fred and Charley Livak, team captain.

Chief newcomer on the squad is Bud Hoyt, standout member of last year's yearling team. Hoyt has been showing great speed in the time trials. On several occasions he nosed out C. Webster, who up to now has had a free hand in leading the Catamount harriers to victory.

Reports from Union indicate that this year's hill and dalers are not up to last year's standard. The loss of several veterans, due to graduation, has weakened them considerably. The Catamounts should have the edge Saturday and prospects are bright for an opening victory.

California University Studies Visual Purple

DAVIS, CALIF. (ACP)—Students at the University of California Agricultural College are undergoing a unique "vitamin A" test to see if they are getting a properly balanced diet.

Three hundred students were asked to volunteer in the series of tests conducted by the home economics department.

Eyes of the respondents are measured under a "regenometer" which measures adaptation of the eye to darkened vision.

Behind the test is the theory of "visual purple"—a fluid substance living around the outside of the retina which adjusts the vision to darkness.

Inadequacy of "visual purple" cause "night blindness," a factor which highway safety engineers say causes many traffic accidents.

The term "Americanism" is said to have been first used by John Witherspoon, president of Princeton University in 1781.

Dark Doings

The excitement of football has clouded all thoughts of cross-country. But we feel that it is high time that we turned our eyes on Coach Archie Post's harriers. News has reached us from reliable sources that a dire situation exists in this branch of University sports. Much as we would like to cover up the sordid facts, we feel that it is our duty to be honest and frank.

It seems that in their daily workouts the harriers pass by a certain orchard. Said orchard is resplendent with golden fruit, to wit, apples. Well, the flesh is weak when it comes to apples so the runners have been arriving back at the gymnasium loaded down with spoils of conquest. This, of course, has had a bad effect on Archie's temper and he has had to resort to confiscation of the acquired property.

The situation was really serious and fears were being entertained that the harriers would give up cross-country and take up piracy as a profession. But latest developments from the front reveal that the orchard proprietors have met the threat with signs reading—"These Trees Have Been Sprayed with Poison—To Keep Off Pests." So Archie feels that perhaps the danger of "Trojan Horse Activities" within his own forces has been checked.

Worry, Worry

With their opening game against V. J. C. scheduled for this week-end, the Kittens have plenty to do. Sherry Fogg, new Frosh mentor, has a full set of worries, already, for V. J. C. showed last Saturday that it has plenty of power, by taking Spaulding High over by a lopsided score. Such huskies as Chick Lapointe of Winooski make the boys from Montpelier a tough nut to crack. Sherry Fogg is faced with the task of sending his untried frosh against a team that has already had the advantage of working together in one game and shown its potentialities. Here's luck.

Sabotage

We have been betrayed. Last Saturday at the Northeastern game we were somewhat puzzled as to just who was responsible for the Cats' touchdown and so after the game we consulted with the gentlemen in the press box. The majority vote favored the theory that Salmon had blocked the punt and Pye had fallen on the ball over the goal line. And then they all treacherously doublecrossed us by giving Salmon all the credit. Sabotage, we calls it.

In Retrospect

In looking back on the doings at Centennial Field last Saturday the need for smoothing out rough spots in the football machine becomes very apparent. Another fact which stands out is that if Vermont is to knife undefeated through her schedule, it will have to unleash a far stronger offensive. Northeastern was no pushover but there is no doubt that there are teams still to be met who will show even more power than the Huskies. If that is so, the Cats will have to pick up momentum from here on and show an increasingly powerful brand of ball playing. We don't see any reason why this can't be done. But of course there is always fate. And the breaks. Tch, tch, no pessimism now.

How To Be Smart In Nine Lessons

Fremont, Nebr.—(ACP)—Hunting for a short-cut to a straight A average?

If you are, heed the following nine-point program to scholastic success—a program formulated for you by the ever-helpful editors of the Midland of Midland College:

1. Don't give your prof apples. Too obvious.

2. Find out his hobby and follow this up with well-planned questions to draw him out.

3. If the entire class walks out of the classroom when the prof is ten minutes late, be the only one to wait, even if it's half an hour. This procedure is good for a B-plus any day.

4. Always greet an instructor pleasantly, never using his first name, but a cheery "Good morning, professor."

5. When sitting at the faculty table in the dining hall or walking about the Administration building, always walk with your head down as if in deep thought, pondering some weighty problems in math or philosophy, for instance. This is highly recommended to get on the honor roll.

6. Offer to wash the professor's car, put up his storm windows or do any little job around the house, but don't accept any money for the work.

7. Apple polishing procedure in classrooms includes sitting in the front row, responding to professorial humor with loud, hearty guffaws and liberal use of big words. This is important—never use a two-syllable word where a five-syllable word will do.

8. Carry a lot of big reference books around. This is tremendously impressive and is worth an A minus in any class.

9. If you must close your eyes while in deep thought, wrinkle your forehead and otherwise look worried or the professor may get the wrong impression and grade accordingly.

Editor's Note: You might try studying, too!

Here comes the big event! Saturday and Sunday the Outing Club is sponsoring an overnight hike for all the daring "nature's babies" who want to take weather into their own hands and brave the elements.

The destination is Taft Lodge, up in the skiing area, and built high among the clouds. The truck will leave the gym at 2.00 p.m. Saturday and will deposit its wares at the foot of the mountain. If you're not so brave as you might be, there is a second truck leaving Sunday morning at 9.00, so the Mortar Boardites can work off energy.

If you're planning to leave Saturday bring a dollar, a cup, and a blanket (two if you want!) and if you're leaving Sunday, bring 35 cents and a cup. But do fail to come.

The chaperon will be E. C. Bailey.

College Students Win Big Prizes

Who wouldn't be as happy as the smiling trio in front? They have just received the three top awards in the nation-wide $30,000 China Essay Contest when this photograph was taken, while the three in the back row are the persons who had most to do with the running of the contest.

At the left front is Minerva F. Desing of Collingswood, N. J., graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania, who walked off with the first prize of $1,200 and a round-trip ticket to Chungking, China, via the China Clipper. In the center, front, is Richard E. Curl of Edison, Ohio, graduate student at Ohio State University, winner of the second prize of $750. Beside him is Helen Averitt of Pasadena, California, junior at Pasadena Junior College, who won the third prize of $500. This picture was taken in the Ford Motor pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

The subject of the contest was "Our Stake in the Future of China," and 70 percent of the accredited colleges and universities in the country had entrants representing 45 of the 48 states. In additional recognition of Miss Desing's victory the University of Pennsylvania received $300 in cash for the purchase of books on Far Eastern affairs. The Bachelor, student newspaper of Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Indiana, won first prize of $250 for best coverage of the contest in college publications. The second prize of $150 went to the MacMurray College Greetings, MacMurray College for Women at Jacksonville, Illinois. The Princeton Sunday News received the third prize of $100.

In addition to the three top prize winners, ten students were awarded $100 each and twenty students $50 each. They were from colleges as distantly removed from each other as Harvard and Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The man in ceremonial Chinese robes is Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews of Gobi desert and dinosaur egg fame. He was a judge. In the center, back row, is Pherbia Thomas Thornburg, contest director and sister of Lowell Tmomas, who presided at the award banquet held in the Executive Lounge of the Ford pavilion at the Fair. Beside Mrs. Thornburg is William D. Pawley, financial sponsor of the contest, who is president of the Intercontinent Corporation and a long-time resident of China. Pawley holds the record for crossings on the China Clipper, making fourteen such trips to date.

Among the distinguished speakers and guests were Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, Pearl Buck, Dr. James Rowland Angell, Anna May Wong and others. Fred L. Black, director of the Ford exhibit, welcomed the Contest's guests.

Looking At Vermont

Havit Dun, the campus snoop, reported no news today.

At the women's spring rally, May 21, there will be competitive class singing and competent judges will be present.

A "Petting Patrol" has been invoked at Missouri Valley College. The dean of women, the dean of men, and the college president made a round of the campus recently and what they saw prompted them to prohibit all campus after 7.30 p.m. A patrol will report the violators. The students say that this is an infringement of their personal liberties.

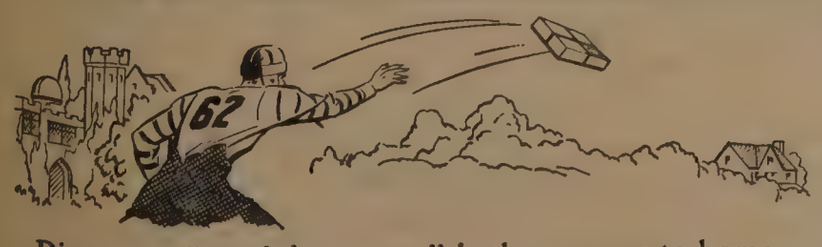
Illinois Students Have Time Trouble

CHAMPAIGN-URBANA, ILL. (ACP)—Summer students at the University of Illinois felt they were being "two-timed" as these rival twin cities waged their "battle of sixty minutes."

The trouble began when Champaign decided to go on Daylight Saving Time. Urbana refused to follow suit.

Hardest hit were U. of I. summer students living in Urbana. Although situated in that town, the university elected to go on Daylight Saving Time with Champaign.



The shift made it necessary for those living off the campus in Urbana to arise at 7, Urbana time, to make 9 a.m. Champaign time classes. Students living on campus had little difficulty, however, unless they attended some affair in Urbana which started on that town's time.

N. Y. A. Built 7,590 Buildings In '39-'40, Repaired 8,876 More

New Buildings Include Hospitals, Libraries, Schools and Shelters

Completion of 7,590 new structures, all for public use, and repair and improvement of 8,876 other publicly-owned structures and facilities, highlighted the construction program of the National Youth Administration during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams announced today.

Mr. Williams' statement was based on a tabulation of the physical accomplishments of the NYA out-of-school work program for the last fiscal year.

During the last fiscal year NYA youth contributed to education by building 312 new schools or additions to schools and repaired and improved 3,654 other school buildings. NYA youth built 129 other new educational buildings and repaired and improved 130 more. They completed 12 new libraries and repaired and improved 96 others.

Better health facilities have been made available in many communities as a result of the NYA construction program last year which accounted for completion of 9 new hospitals or additions and repair and improvement of 62 others; 31 new isolation buildings for communicable disease patients, and repair and improvement of 11 others; and 9 other new medical buildings, and repair and improvement of 120 others.

NYA youth last year built 406 new agricultural buildings, and repaired and improved 441 others.

The contribution of the NYA construction program in the field of recreation consisted of completion of 104 new youth center buildings, and repair and improvement of 227 more; 290 other new community buildings, and repair and improvement of an additional 353; construction of 694 new park and trailside shelters, and repair and improvement of 324 others.

Each of these projects was co-sponsored by a local public agency which paid part of cost and which will maintain it for public use. Not only have these NYA-built structures added to the wealth of the community in which they are located, but they have provided young people with the opportunity to secure valuable work experience, Mr. Williams said.

Dean Simpson Talks To Freshman Women

Social Director Also Gives Helpful Advice

The annual series of orientation meetings for the freshman women are being held this week at Southwick on September 30, October 1, 3 and 4, at seven o'clock.

At these meetings the freshmen are competently aided in the problem of adjusting themselves to college life by Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women and Mrs. Janet Bickford, Social Director.

Dean Simpson in her talk pointed out the various things the college has to offer to incoming freshmen and discussed various reasons for coming to college. Miss Simpson also gave excellent advice on the subjects of maintaining a high standard of health, acquiring proper study habits, and budgeting time in order to get the most out of college. She also stressed the fact that a person with potentialities of leadership is obligated to use those potentialities for the good of their college.

Mrs. Bickford chose as her topic the question "What Kind of Person Are You?" and discussed this question from the standpoint of appearance, personality and manners. Many practical suggestions and helpful pointers along these lines of social amenities were included in her talk. Mrs. Bickford is available at any time to anyone who wishes to discuss personal problems or any group wishing to organize a club.

New Y. M. C. A. Director To Address Church Group

The speaker at the Methodist College Group meeting Sunday evening will be Mr. Hess, new director of the Y. M. C. A. here. The group meets at 7.30 at the parsonage. Mr. Hess has had much experience with young people, with whom he is very popular. Not only has he been general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Newton, Mass., for the past nineteen years; but has also been director of Camp Day for boys. His own son is now at Cornell.

Last Sunday the first meeting of the season was held. H. E. Thurber '43, the president, introduced Reverend Reid who told about the group and gave a talk on his travels this summer.

Odds and Ends

And the Mortar Board Dance in the near-offing—with all the girls licking their chops in long-awaited anticipation of asking their Heart's Desire to this "swish shindig."

Every college has its flivver and we are no exception. With the wittir-than-average inscriptions emblazoned over its antidiluvian torso, we'll give this one till Christmas. After that, one good blast of the native winter weather ought to take all the rejuvenated "vim and vigor" out of the ancient conveyance and restore it to its former abode—(yes, you guessed it) the junk yard. You'll pardon our skepticism, but we're at least acquainted with Vermont weather.

It won't be long now before all the ski-minded girls will begin to diet frantically in order to wear, with their former grace and nonchalance, the sleek (and we do mean sleek) professional-style trousers so dear to the modern lassie. Of course, there's always a chance of starving to death in the process, but as one girl grimly remarked: "I'll at least die with my pants on."

Upperclassmen seem to be complaining that there are more strange faces in school than when they were freshmen. Maybe it's just the astonishing variety of physogs.

And then there's always the freshman who thinks Boulder is an honorary geological society, and Mortar Board the collegiate branch of the Hodcarriers Auxiliary of America.

We extend our deepest sympathies to the freshman, Walter Gherkin, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been in the Mary Fletcher Hospital ever since his arrival at U. V. M.—while the rest of us just go to classes and stuff.

As a preamble to this story, let it be known that one of the French 3 texts is "Practical French Composition" by W. W. Comfort:

Prof Johnston: The assignment for next time will be the first lesson in the "Composition."

Inattentive student: Would you repeat that, sir?

Prof. Johnston (with obvious impatience): Take the first lesson in Comfort.

Hitlers may rise; empires may fall; but people go right on getting married. . . . And have you noticed that U. V. M. seems to be no exception to this time-honord tradition?

Basketball Notable To Show Techniques To U.V.M. Athletes

Basketball Movies Of Major Tournaments To Be Shown in Gym

"Chuck" Taylor, noted authority on basketball, will conduct a basketball clinic in the University Gymnasium, October 7, at 8 p.m. For the past fourteen years, "Chuck" has conducted basketball clinics throughout the entire country. He has probably contributed more to the promotion of the game of basketball than any other individual.

The sole purpose of these clinics is to promote more interest in basketball, and to simplify teaching methods with the goal that young players as well as seasoned players can derive the most from the game.

Personal instruction will be given by Taylor on basketball fundamentals. These fundamentals will consist of how to pass and catch the ball, exercises for developing the technique of this part of the game, basket shooting, and screen plays. Proper balance or set-up for offensive team play will also be shown.

Probably one of the reasons for Taylor's success is that everything in his repertoire is fundamental, and in so being disrupts in no way any coaching system. Simplification is the motif of all of "Chuck's" fundamentals. A perfect illustration of this can immediately be noticed in Taylor's puzzling passes. A master at "feinting," there is no lost motion here.

In addition to his personal work, Taylor will show some interesting basketball movies covering the major basketball tournaments. There will be no admission charge.

Mothers and Sons Receive Texas Diplomas

HOUSTON, TEXAS (ACP)—Two mother-and-son combinations received diplomas at the University of Houston's last commencement.

When Mrs. Berta Dean and her 21-year-old son, David Boyd Dean, were handed their degrees, it climaxed what David called nineteen years of school for himself and forty years of teaching experience for his mother.

"I started school when I was two years old," David said. "My mother took me with her when she conducted classes."

The other mother and son graduated were Mrs. John K. Matheny and John K. Matheny, III.

Eight Freshmen Join Cheerleading Squad

Under the leadership of J. M. Evans '41, captain; R. F. Darling '43, assistant captain; P. D. Eisenwinter '43 and H. C. Tatro '43, eight freshmen are now perfecting their technic of "peppy" cheerleading.

Allen E. Boyden, C. Carver, and B. Gray of the new contingent together with the regular staff led the large crowd in songs and cheers in the pre-Northeastern pep rally.

During the Northeastern game, C. Carver, J. Goldberg, B. Gray, G. Holman, and the veteran cheerleaders attempted to have the student body and other spectators lend some moral support to the U. V. M. gridiators.

Other freshmen who will see active service in the very near future are A. Kepnes, M. Rubenstein, and H. Stroyman.

Pan-Hellenic Plan Gala Fun Night

Pan-Hellenic is offering the sorority and non-sorority girls an occasion to become better acquainted during the informality and gaiety of a fun night at Southwick on October 8 at 7.30 p.m.

The sorority women will entertain the freshman girls with skits done in pantomime. The skits will be in swing with the times, if one will pardon such a phrase—namely, each will have as its theme the title of a song of yesteryear or today.

Following the skits games and contests will be staged in the various rooms. Refreshments will be served after the program.

A fee of ten cents will be levied against every participant in the evening's fun.

Laura Hawley Leads Large Mass Meeting Of Vermont Women

Scholarship Chairman Presents New Plan To Improve Grades

The first Student Union mass meeting of the year met at Southwick, Wednesday evening at seven o'clock.

After the regular meeting Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women, spoke to a special meeting of the upperclasswomen asking for loyalty and cooperation in carrying out the Student Union rules. Miss Simpson stressed the fact that the upperclassmen set the examples and the standard on the campus which the underclassmen follow. In the meantime the Freshman women attended a W. A. A. initiation held in the gymnasium at Southwick

Joené Agard '42, at the regular meeting, gave a report on the scholarship record attained last year. Then Miss Simpson explained for the Freshmen the reasons for having a Student Union for the women. The meeting concluded after a short talk on manners by Mrs. Janet A. Bickford, Social Director at Southwick.

Football Dances And Alumni Review Set For Homecoming

Saturday, October 12 Day of Homecoming Cane Rush and Sports

The Alumni Music Box Revue with Win Danielson, theatrical producer of Lynn, Mass., is the feature of the Homecoming week-end and will be given Friday and Saturday evenings, October 11 and 12 at 8:15 P.M. at the University Gymnasium. There will be dancing afterwards. The show is already in rehearsal but there is room in the cast for more alumni. The women students at the University who attended the advanced modern dance class are among the features of the Revue.

This week-end is the alumni's gala homecoming time and every minute of the days will be crowded with activities. Saturday at 1:30 both the freshman and varsity track teams will be battling Dartmouth; and the traditional Cane Rush takes place between the halves of the Colby-Vermont clash. Following the spectacle of the pigskin, tea dances are being planned at the various fraternity houses. Last year the Alumni Bazaar was the feature attraction of the events—with games and booths in the cage, and dancing in the gym. People, many people, some old in years, some young, gamed around College Row, reliving their college years, and one and all enjoying it.

It was at their request that Homecoming Day falls in October's calendar, for the traditional time of reunion is during commencement week, or thereabouts. However, wanting to see the university functioning for the benefit of the entire student body, the change of date was made. Tickets to Danielson's Revue are selling for 50c for adults, 25c children's admission, and 75c for reserved seats.

Scribes Organize At First Meeting

The Scribes met at Southwick at 7:15 Thursday for the first meeting of the year. Professor Merrick was present. Many new members turned out for the meeting and afterwards refreshments were served.

Morris Jareckie '43 was in charge of the arrangements for the first meeting. Daan Brink '43 was appointed chairman for the next two meetings and Marilyn Powers '43 was made chairman for the following meetings. Huddee Zwick '43 was in charge of a permanent file for the news of the Scribes. She states that in the future the Scribes may publish a story page in the CYNIC and that the material will be used to furnish the material for this page.

At the meeting Thursday many of the stories were read and discussed. Many of the papers were about present world conditions.

The next meeting of the Scribes will be held in two weeks. Further details will be published in the CYNIC and posted on the bulletin boards.

Get Out And Root For Your Team To Beat Colby

U. V. M. Debating Teams Will Meet Bates Soon

The Women's Debating Team will hold its first debate of this year at Southwick, October 15, 1940, when the Bates College women's team will meet the Vermont women's team. The subject is: "Resolved: The power of the federal government should be increased." The Vermont team will take the affirmative side.

The Vermont men's team will journey to Bethel, Maine, for a debate on October 18, with the Bates College men's team. Vermont will have the negative side.

Other debates to take place soon are with Keene Normal School at Keene on October 25. On November 8 there will be a return debate with Keene here. Later in the season Vermont will go to Troy, N. Y., for a debate with the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute team and to Canton, N. Y., to meet the St. Lawrence College team.

Dr. T. H. Harwood Is New Director

Appointee of Dean Kemp To Head Dispensary

Hardy H. Kemp, Dean of the Medical College has announced the appointment of Dr. Theodore H. Harwood as a director of the Burlington Free Dispensary. Doctor Harwood, who is Assistant Professor of Medicine at the University College of Medicine, will be the first to manage the activities of the Dispensary under full-time management. He will have general supervision over all the medical activities carried on at the Dispensary. Arrangements have been made under his direction to see that each new patient will pass through an admissions clinic for diagnosis before being referred to other clinics for treatment.

New times set for clinics are earlier, in order that patients may be given more prompt attention. Doctor Harwood, in addition to overseeing the whole program of clinics, will have direct supervision of the medical clinic, which, according to the new schedule, will be held every afternoon at 2 p.m.

The Burlington Free Dispensary is operated by the City of Burlington through the Charities Department and the University of Vermont College of Medicine. Its schedule of clinics includes surgery, medicine, pediatrics, gynecology, obstetrics (pre- and post-natal), mental hygiene for children up to eighteen, orthopedic surgery, urology, dermatology, allergy, physiotherapy, eye, ear, nose, throat, syphilis, state clinics for chest diseases, and the new squint clinic for the correction of crossed eyes.

Kappa Sigma Initiates

Eight men were initiated into the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Kappa Sigma Sunday evening. The new initiates are J. F. Corbett '41, C. V. Akley '42, J. Zellinger '42, J. W. Lee '43, R. N. Cain '43, R. E. Hennessy '43, W. J. Black '43, J. H. Tooles '43. Following the initiation a banquet was held at the Hotel Vermont.

The Battle of Centennial

Student Poll Held On Conscription

Men Are for It Women Opposed

"Are you in favor of the Conscription Bill? Comment, if you will on your stand regarding this measure." A poll, so to speak, has been galloping about the three colleges, covering a cross-section of both the men and women. One hundred percent of the men were wholeheartedly in favor of the bill but there was dissension in the ranks of the women. Two, of the ten women asked declared themselves wholeheartedly against it; and of the remaining eight a few were not wholehearted in their approval. These latter deemed it a necessary evil.

Here are the comments quoted:

"I'm in favor of it. You wouldn't condemn a fellow who lived in a tough neighborhood for learning how to fight. . . . I think we are living in a tough neighborhood." J. J. SPASYK '42.

"Because I would like to see our country remain at peace . . . . with the world. . . . . I am opposed to the Conscription Bill. I feel that whatever we might lose by staying out of war, that loss would never be any way as great as a loss suffered if we did go to war. It may be too late to avert such a disaster but there must be a way to solve the problem of the world. . . . not by snuffing out the lives of people who want to live so much as we do and the way of the Conscription Bill." JEAN HALL '42.

"I'd be prejudiced because I've been hearing so much about it. I'm for it, all for it, definitely." KAY HOLDEN '42.

"I favor it. Sort of hard to say why you are for it. It will bolster the national defense, probably my canned opinion. My own opinion is that it is a good idea to have sixteen million and one-half trained men." P. MOORE '42.

Freshmen Will Choose Fraternity Thursday

The eighty-five men who received their banquet invitations last Saturday morning will state their fraternity preference on Thursday, October 10, from 1.30 p.m. to 5.30 p.m., in the Political Science office. The faculty committee in charge of the registration is composed of Prof. D. F. Carroll, Prof. L. W. Dean and Prof. G. L. Millikan.

This number of eighty-five men interested in fraternities is the lowest in many years. Two years ago 150 men pledged to Greek-letter organizations.

STUDENT SELECTIVE SERVICE—There will be a nation-wide broadcast to answer specific questions of students and faculty members regarding the Selective Service Act and potential military training over WCAX on Tuesday, October 8, from 10.15 to 10.30 p.m. E. S. T.

Marjorie Abell Chosen Sophomore Aides Head

The evening of October 4 marked the first meeting of the Sophomore Aides, when plans for Coffee Hour were made. The girls of the class of '43 elected Marjorie Abell as president, Barbara E. Burns as treasurer, and Janet Dike as secretary. It was decided to have Marjorie Abell act as president till mid-years, when another girl will be chosen for the balance of the college year.

Y. M. C. A. Director Hess Addresses Methodists

About sixty young people heard Mr. Clyde Hess, new director of the local Y. M. C. A., speak at the Methodist College Group meeting Sunday evening, October 6. He spoke about "Interruptions," which take many forms and must be met adequately if a person is to lead a useful and wholesome life.

After the meeting the revised list of officers for the year was read, as follows:

President, H. E. Thurber '43; vice-president, Nena Kren; secretary-treasurer, C. I. Rich; devotions committee, Kathleen Benson '43 and C. A. Webster '42; social committee, Barbara McIntosh '41 and W. R. Stoddard '42; speakers committee, Mildred McRae '42, and F. P. Spaulding; music, Edith Corliss; and refreshment committee, Hester Carver '41 and Elizabeth Isham '41.

Former New England Conservatory Director Is U. V. M. Instructor

One of the University of Vermont appointments for the academic year 1940-1941 of special interest to a large number of students is that of a new instructor in music. Mr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis will teach public school music to all the students enrolled in the Elementary Education curriculum. He will also teach elementary theory and orchestration and conducting classes. Mr. Pappoutsakis will also conduct the University orchestra this year.

Mr. Pappoutsakis is a graduate of the Boston Latin School, the New England Conservatory of Music, and has nearly completed the requirements for a Master of Arts degree at Harvard University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

He is well qualified for this position, having had practical experience in the public schools of Boston, Belmont and Newton, Mass., as well as in the teacher training classes at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston and the American Institute of Normal Methods at Auburndale, Mass.

Assistant to Francis Findlay

For several years he has been assistant to Francis Findlay, director of the Division of School Music at the Conservatory (who is well known in Vermont as the director of the all-state orchestra at the State Music Festival for many years), and a member of the faculty at its summer session. At the same time he has taught at the American Institute of Normal Methods. For some years he was head of the department of theoretical subjects at the Eastern Music Camp in Waterville, Me., of which Dr. Walter Damrosch was honorary president.

He comes to the University very highly recommended by professors under whom he has studied and by those under whom he has served during his broad experience. His public school work at Newton, Mass., gained for him especially strong commendation by Haydn M. Morgan, director of the city of Newton's music education department.

In addition to his activities in the public school music field he has been successful in conducting, having been conductor of the West Roxbury Sinfonietta, a civic orchestra of 65 players, and the orchestra of the Dramatic Department at the New England Conservatory; associate conductor of the orchestral class at the Conservatory; guest conductor of symphonic and oratorio programs in Boston, Providence, Portland and other leading New England cities. He has also directed choral music in three nurses' training schools choruses and orchestra at the Morgan Memorial in Boston; chorus at William Filene's Sons Company. He has been associate conduc-

"American Youth Speaks Up"

To every American youth between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four the results of Doctor Gallup's poll sponsored by the American Institute of Public Opinion to determine the attitude of young people toward life and our democratic institutions must be very gratifying. Like other Gallup polls this one was so controlled as to insure that every group and region was represented in proper proportion to make up an accurate cross section of the 21,000,000 American youths of the country.

"American youth is tough-fibered, loyal, and youthful. The young people believe that this country is a good country, worth working for and fighting for. They have faith in the future. They are not radical—in fact they are conservative in their views," says Doctor Gallup after taking a scientific sample of youthful views based on searching questions put to the youths themselves.

These frank compliments for the American youth are heartening for speakers, commentators and editors have been telling us that we are a flabby, pacifistic, cowardly, cynical, discouraged and leftist lot. No less personages than Walter Lippman, Dorothy Thompson and even President Roosevelt have delivered some scathing critism of youth's supposed attitude.

These indictments were undoubtedly based on the antics and the noise of groups of which the American Youth Congress is an example. Doctor Gallup states that such agitators speak for themselves as a strictly minority group.

"Do you think that you have as good a chance to get ahead as your parents had?" was one of the questions that were included in the poll. Forty-seven percent think that they have a better chance than their parents; an additional forty percent think their opportunities are just as good. Many said, "It's lots easier to get an education, and more people try to help young folks."

To the question, "Do you think that jobs are obtained on the basis of ability, on a basis of luck, or on a basis of 'pull'?" fifty percent said, "ability"; "pull" said thirty-one percent; six percent said "luck," and ten percent said that a combination was most effective.

Asked whether they would object to spending a year in some branch of the military service, seventy-six percent of the boys answered "No!" "If I'm likely to be called upon to fight, I'd like to know how," was a typical comment.

From these answers and those to other similar questions, Doctor Gallup concludes that Young America is ready to meet life on its own terms, cheerful and unafraid.

We Reply—

Vehemently criticized were we in a letter to the editor appearing in last Friday's CYNIC regarding the political status of the paper. The main purpose of the editorial on political issues was to point out to Vermont the benefits to be derived from a "Straw Vote." In order to stimulate interest we felt that some statement from the editorial staff would not be out of order since the whole procedure was "mock-serious."

Since the most striking characteristic of a newspaper editorial is that it is an expression of opinion, we felt that any political comment would be also accepted as merely opinion. No editor can have opinions which will be pleasing to everyone. He tries rather to study and observe a cross-section of the student opinion and to comment on current problems to the best of his ability.

The World Front

By ROBERT WOLFE and FULVIO BARDOSSI

With the announcement of the new Axis-Japan tie-up has come the statement by many that they had been anticipating this step. All recent developments in the Far East, these same people affirm, have pointed to the creation of a firm three-way agreement between Japan and her totalitarian compatriots in Europe. Frankly we cannot claim the same farsightedness. But one thing has been very apparent and is even more so now—the democracies and especially the United States have by their indefinite policy in the Far East contributed indirectly to the growth of Japanese imperialism and the present menacing situation in the Pacific.

Looking Back

In the years following the Nipponese invasion of Manchuria, the United States has done no more than protest against Japanese threats and aggressive actions. In short our policy in the Far East has been the traditional policy of America in other spheres—diplomatic action without the backing of force. We have been lavish in the use of protests but those protests have failed to convince Japan that we are in earnest, because we made it evident that we feared to resort to forceful action in the case of a showdown. Japan has profited by our scruples.

True enough, there have been times when we actually lacked the force to make Japan back down. Soon after the signing of the first naval treaty between Japan, Britain and the United States back in the gala days of naval disarmament we and Britain were in no position to tackle Japan in her own waters. The giving up of certain projected Far Eastern fortifications on our part and Great Britain's in order to get Japan's consent to a war ship ratio made Japan master in her waters. In subsequent treaties Japan led us on in the hopes of further limitations all the while making her own position more secure until finally in the last London Conference she refused to play ball at all.

Some Analyzing

But the invasions of Manchuria and China weakened her position and there was a chance for the democracies to strike a blow by the limitation of exports to Japan. There was the opportunity of unlimited aid to China. Hamstrung in this country by our Neutrality Act, we stood by while scrap iron went to Japan from our shores. We stood for violations of our rights in China by the Japanese and had to pass over the Panay incident with tongue in cheek. Hampered also by our inability to work in cooperation with Great Britain at a time when her navies were free to aid us in the Far East, we remained at home and watched the chain of events being forged which finally culminated in the recent totalitarian pact.

But granted that we have been weak and often times undecided in our Far Eastern policy, we must not add to our errors the fatal one of failing to recognize the true implications of this new move by the totalitarian powers. We must not allow the real facts to be camouflaged. Undoubtedly the major aim of the dictatorships is to draw all of America's attention to the Pacific and thus divert our strength from the aid of England. If the Japanese menace can be made to appear so great that we must devote all our strength and attention to it, naturally we will be less prone to assist England to our full capacity. Messrs. Mussolini and Hitler would like nothing better.

Her new alliance does not necessarily make Japan stronger in fact. It only makes her potentially stronger. Obviously when Germany and Italy have disposed of Great Britain, they can turn to the aid of their Eastern ally. But if Britain holds out Japan will have to go it alone, getting only moral support (if that's what you can call it) from her friends. It also follows that so long as Britain holds out, the United States will be faced by a threat in only one ocean. But once Britain collapses we will be faced by a threat in both oceans—Germany, Italy and Japan will be the pincers and we'll be the ones to be squeezed. So to fight the threat in the East, we must also oppose the threat in the West.

Never the Twain—

Therefore, it would seem that the United States should continue her policy of giving England all the material aid she can and at the same time be ready to act quickly in the East against further aggressions by the Japanese. To abandon England now and turn our backs to the West would be an act of suicide. In Britain only lies the possibility of averting the growing totalitarian menace.

Perhaps Kipling knew what he was talking about when he wrote:

"East is east, and West is west
And never the twain shall meet."

At all events, it is worth thinking about his words in connection with the present East-West partnership. F. B.

Conscription

"As a large representative of the Engineering College, I think we should have it. This country has always had a small Army and it's about time we got a large one. The training will make finer physical specimens, too." M. C. REYNOLDS '42.

"I think it's highly unfortunate, but I suppose it's necessary. It robs you of your civil liberties. They'll conscript people whom they consider dangerous to the public. . . . That will be a dangerous tool in the hands of unscrupulous politicians. Finger-printing, names, addresses will be convenient things to have when Mr. John Doe wants to turn in his neighbor for sedition and espionage. I don't see the way around that evil. If we have to fight, it's better to know something than nothing of military tactics." JANE LYONS '41.

"When I think of all the kicking we do about a 7:30 A.M. drill, I wonder how a year of training will be. But things are coming to where it's either 'put up or shut up,' and conscription is certainly necessary if we are going to 'put up.'" D. M. ZWICK '43.

"I think this (the Conscription Bill) is the best thing that has happened to our country since we went into the World War in 1917. Maybe this will make men of some of the 'things' called males. A year of training under discipline never hurt anyone." CLAIRE COFFIN '44.

"I am strongly opposed to conscription as a step towards war. And war is the admission of failure to practice even our most elementary ideals of decency and the American way of life. . . . It is so bitterly ironic to DIE for the things we want to LIVE for." MAROLYN POWER '42.

"I'm in favor of it, yes. I think it's a very good idea. It furthers Americanism. Of course you hear so many comments like this, but I think it's an excellent plan." F. J. FOWLER '43.

"I don't know . . . . it's just about all they can do. I haven't had time to think much about it." JULIA STRONG '43.

"Oh, my, got to start thinking. . . . It should be done just for the simple reason that we have to defend our country sometime so we might as well be prepared." JEAN SAUL '41.

"I'm in favor of it, due to the circumstances in Europe. I think it's a wise move so that we'll be prepared." D. NUTTER '43.

"It's a good idea and very necessary under the circumstances." G. ROON '41.

"Hurray-ee-ee! Good thing if you ask me." P. N. SUTTON '43.

"It's a darn good thing if you ask me . . . . good for the boys. BIBI DEMING '42.

"When I first heard of the Conscription Bill, I was deadly against it as the discussion between the Houses and the passing of it would prove to the other nations that the United States was really planning to eventually enter the war. Recently, however, I have decided that it might make the United States citizens realize the danger from across even to our nation regardless of our previous strength and power." MARJORIE ABELL '43.

"In a time like this I can see no reason for objecting to the bill. It's our duty to respond wholeheartedly to the call." W. TOWNE '43.

"Conscription in unusual times like these has my wholehearted approval." JANE THRESHER '43.

"I believe that conscription in these times is both necessary and practical." JANET HEATH '43.

"Conscription is necessary for the security of our country. If war comes or not, the discipline that the men will receive will be worth more than money can buy." J. MCGARRY '43.

There will be a meeting of the Photography Club, Wednesday evening, October 9, at 7.30, in Slade Hall. All those interested are invited to attend.

Trinity Upsets Vermont By Close Margin of 8 to 3

Taylor Kicks From 15-Yard Line to Save Catamounts From Whitewashing

Any thoughts or aspirations for an undefeated season for the Vermont gridsters were thrust into oblivion this past Saturday, when the final whistle found the Catamounts on the short end of an 8 to 3 count. Going ahead early in the third quarter with 3 points as a result of Capt. Frank Taylor's field goal from the 15-yard line, the defensive tactics of Coach Evans' men could not withstand the Hilltoppers' bid for a score and final victory.

The first two periods were scoreless with each team testing the other's defense. In the first period Trinity had permeated to the Vermont 28-yard line but an interception ended the threat. All of the action in the second quarter took place in the Hilltoppers' half of the field, but the Catamounts could not capitalize on their opportunity.

The second half opened with Vermont kicking off. Knurek of Trinity fumbled and Lawrence recovered on the Hilltoppers' 36-yard line. Johnny Spasyk made six yards on two line plays and then Gilbert unhooked a pass to Spasyk for a first down on the Trinity 10-yard line. Spasyk and Taylor carried to the six and three respectively, but there the attack faltered.

Charging through on the next play, the Hilltoppers smothered the Cats for a 5-yard loss. On fourth down Taylor dropped back to the 15-yard line and with Spasyk holding the ball booted a field goal for first blood.

Thereafter it was practically all Trinity for on the subsequent kickoff the Hilltoppers led by Dick Weisenfluh, sensational sophomore fullback, drove down the field 76 yards for a touchdown with Weisenfluh plunging over from the 1-yard marker.

As the fourth quarter opended Vermont gained possession of the ball on the Trinity 36 following an exchange of kicks. The Catamounts' final bid for victory was brought to an end when Weisenfluh intercepted Taylor's pass on his own 5-yard marker.

With the game drawing to a close Vermont resorted to a passing barrage but this time Knurek intercepted one of Taylor's passes on his own 48. After being stopped on the Vermont 45, the Hilltoppers punted over the Vermont end zone. An offside penalty against the Catamounts brought the ball back to the 15 and then Mill of Trinity crashed through the line to smear Taylor in the end zone for a safety and the ball game.

Cross-Country Team Scores Perfect Win At Schenectady

F. Webster Finishes First Followed by Six Vermont Men

A powerful and experienced cross-country team wearing the Green and Gold colors of the University of Vermont completely outclassed a green and inexperienced team from Union at Schenectady last Saturday and rolled up a perfect score 15-40.

Seven Vermonters crossed the finish line before two of the New Yorkers finally staggered across and these men were closely followed by another Vermont runner who took tenth place. Seven Union men then completed the grind.

Fred Webster, the lesser light of the famous brother team, finished the 4.7 mile grind in 27:08 to take first place five seconds ahead of "Bud" Hoyt, a very promising sophomore. Charlie Webster finished third 28 seconds behind Hoyt and directly after came Capt. Frank Livak and Jack Burgess. Ernest St. Mary finished sixth and Merle Crown completed the sweep by finishing in seventh place.

The race was Vermont's all the way. "Charlie" Webster led from the start closely followed by Hoyt, F. Webster, Livak, and Burgess. Three-quarters of the way around "Charlie" lost the course and Hoyt, taking advantage of the error, swept into first place closely followed by little "Freddie" Webster.

It was in the closing spurt that Fred nosed out Hoyt to take first and C. Webster, on the course again, followed with a closing spurt to take third place.

The opening encounter gave the boys a chance for some experience before they tackle a strong Dartmouth team here Saturday.

Kittens Drop First Game To V.J.C., 6-0

Kittens Show Power But Lack Scoring Drive

Capitalizing on a frosh fumble and aided by a favorable wind the Vermont Junior College eleven scored a touchdown early in the fourth period and eked out a 6-0 victory over the Kittens. Chick Lapointe, Junior College quarterback, scored the lone touchdown on a plunge through right tackle but Fabiano's attempted place kick for the extra point went wide of the uprights.

A pass from punt formation was the Junior College's most deadly weapon, out of nine attempted passes the Montpelierites hit the mark on five occasions while Vermont tried only two passes and completed none although Paul Walgren, frosh end, made a nice catch during the second quarter for a 20-yard gain only to have it erased by a penalty. The game was slowed up considerably by penalties for everything in the book.

The Kittens had little to offer in way of a passing attack but managed to outrush their opponents on the ground with Mayforth, Reed and Pacini doing most of the ball carrying.

Pessimistic Prognostications

Well, here it is Sunday night and we're kind of (vainly) hoping that when we open up those papers in the morning, that Vermont-Trinity score of 8-3 will read in favor of Vermont. But we know it's just wishful thinking. "What," we keep mumbling, "could have gone wrong?"

The Cats went into the game slight favorites against a Trinity team hampered by a lack of reserves. Yet it seems that fate was right in there blocking for the Blue and Gold. All of which brings up the question, can the Catamounts improve fast enough to surmount a schedule that from here on gets increasingly rough?

A rapid glance at week-end results shows a 14-0 victory for Colby over C. C. N. Y. The Mules have speed and plenty of power where it's needed. Capt. John Daggett, 152-pound whirlwind, is the big gun of the Colby attack and has a reputation for standing rival teams on their collective heads. Scoletti, fullback, is a definite threat in the kicking department. The Cats will certainly have a hard row to hoe when they tangle next week with the Waterville boys.

Following that game comes a string of lesser but equally dangerous opponents. R. P. I. 31-13 victor over Hamilton. New Hampshire 27-6 victor over Bates, and reputedly a far better outfit than last year's eleven. Union, far weaker than last year's Hammerstrom-guided steam roller but still no pushover if a 13-0 victory over Hobart is any criterion to judge by. Norwich, rapidly recovering from the B. U. blitzkrieg and back in the win column with a 7-0 victory over Arnold. And Middlebury, only possible breather but ruled out of that classification by a Panther propensity to upset the dope bucket when playing Vermont.

—And a Dash of Optimism

If this sounds pessimistic we're sorry, but there it is in black and white. Looking at the other side of the picture, this much is evident:

1. Football is the world's screwiest game. Anything can and does happen.
2. Teams sometimes are slow in starting but do amazing things when they finally get in gear.
3. The Catamounts have the men and the power if only it can be tapped. As Mandy Swift of "No Time for Comedy" would say, "The Catamounts have definite latent possibilities."
4. We may be all wrong and completely haywire in our interpretations. (This strikes us as the best hypothesis.)

It's all as clear as mud, isn't it? Thank you, we knew you would misunderstand us perfectly.

Plus Some Sunshine

Hurried phone calls reveal that varsity cross-country is this week-end's bright spot. It seems the Vermont harriers definitely crowded Union off its own course by getting seven men to the finish line ahead of their hosts. Big surprise of the day was the dethronement of Charlie Webster. Brother Fred, it seems, got tired of playing second fiddle so he just stepped up and grabbed the conductor's baton. Most promising runner of the week was second-place Bud Hoyt, who bids fair to become one of the Catamounts' top-notch harriers. Keep your eyes on Hoyt. He ought to be breaking some records in the near future. And here's to you, Archie. We don't know how you do it, but you certainly keep those Catamounts "in the running."

Equals No Regrets

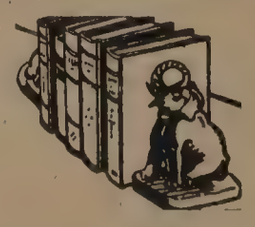
Having summed things up in this wise we will compose our minds and look forward to future contests with that which the cliche experts call "eager expectations."

"And so," to quote Pepys, "to bed." (Swell sentence that last one, don't you think?)

NOTICE:

The Colby-Vermont football game, scheduled on October 12, will start at 2.15 instead of 2.00 p.m.

This change is being made in order that there will be sufficient time for the cornerstone exercises of the Waterman Building, which will take place at 1.30 p.m.



The cross-country runs will start as originally scheduled at 1.20 and 1.30 p.m.

Mortar Board Gives Semi-Formal

Doris Doerffler '44 Sings Two Numbers

The 1940 fall Mortar Board dance clicked beautifully last Saturday night at Southwick with the ladies in their colorful semi-formal duds and the men beaming over their luck in being part of the chosen two hundred.

The chaperones were Dean Harris, Professor and Mrs. Witham, Miss Grace Burwash and Professor and Mrs. Bickford.

Dancing to the rhythm of the Catamounts were over two hundred couples, the largest number ever to attend a Mortar Board dance, which speaks well for the members of the senior women's honor society, the capable committee.

Guests were greeted on the stairs by Mr. Scarecrow, honorary member of Mortar Board, and pumpkins, ghosts, and corn stalks placed the ballroom in keeping with the current harvest season; also, cider and doughnuts were sold at intermission by members of Y. W. C. A.

For a special treat, the dancers heard Miss Doris Doerfler '44 sing two numbers, accompanied by the orchestra.

Student Union

June Hoffman '42, secretary of Student Union Council, will answer any questions regarding the meeting places previous to Wednesday. The Student Council are requesting that freshmen and sophomores study the Student Union rules prior to the meetings.

Women In Sports

The boat ride, sponsored by W. A. A. last Saturday, October 5 was a great success. Over 150 girls left the Burlington dock at 2 o'clock on "The City of Plattsburg" ferry. It was a sunny, windy day, and the lake was rather choppy. Upon arriving safely at Port Kent, the girls chose either to climb a small mountain nearby or play softball. Almost everyone climbed the mountain following several different trails. The colored scenery of the fall was beautiful, and from the summit of the hill, the New York coast on Champlain could be followed for quite a distance, and the Adirondack range looked very near. The return trip was a little more rough, with the spray of the waves flying over the deck, and the wind blowing at a stiff rate, but everyone was rather sorry when the lights of Burlington appeared so quickly. Perhaps W. A. A. has some potential sailing material!

The hockey game held September 27 with the Mohawk Hockey Club of Albany, N. Y., ended with a tie score, which both surprised and pleased our hockey team, who have never before played a professional team. The score was 2-2, Perkins making both goals on our side, Hitchcock and Roberts scoring for the opponents.

The game, beginning at 10:30, was played in quarters, to enable girls with classes to see at least a part of the game. Miss Larson was timekeeper. High school girls from Essex Junction, Burlington, Milton, Stowe, and Richmond were present.

The Albany team stayed at Southwick over the week-end, and attended the Vermont-Northeastern game as guests of Graduate Manager of Athletics, Sabin Abell.

W. A. Pierce '43 Wins Prize for Scholarship

Each year the faculty award prizes called the Howard Prizes for excellence in scholarship during the freshman year. This year the faculty voted to award these prizes as follows:

First prize, W. A. Pierce, Literary Scientific.

Music Box Revue Main Feature Of Homecoming Week

Other Highlights Are Football Game and Fraternity Tea Dances

On October 2, Pres. Guy W. Bailey bought the first three tickets to the Alumni Music Box Revue, feature of the Homecoming week-end which University of Vermont alumni will celebrate Friday and Saturday, October 11 and 12.

"I promise the students their money's worth and more! The Alumni Music Box Revue, which is taking place tonight and tomorrow night at 8.15 in the gym is superb. Both the assistants and cast alike have been cooperative and enthusiastic. Dancing to the rhythm of the New Vermonters Band will follow the two-hour show." These are the words of Mrs. Isabelle Y. Gallup, Alumni Secretary. Both the students and the alumni of the vicinity have been rehearsing in preparation for the two performances, Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.15 p.m.

Gym Prepared

Rehearsals have been in progress for more than two weeks. When Director Danielson, who is employed by Paramount, arrived in this city three weeks ago, he expressed keen disappointment in not having access to a suitable theatre. Now he has his theatre. Prof. L. S. Rowell is responsible for this. An elaborate stage and intricate lighting have been installed in the gym; and the echo has been eliminated.

Preparations have been completed for the rest of the week-end program which includes the Colby-U. V. M. football game at Burlington, fraternity tea dances, track meets, and the two dances, one following each performance of the Revue. Jack Collins' Band, which has been featured in Metronome and Downbeat, will play for the show as well as for dancing.

The Committees in Charge

Publicity—Prof. Leon W. Dean, chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Kennedy Slayton, Paul R. Stevens, David W. Howe.

Programs—Sabin C. Abell, chairman, J. Hervey Macomber, Jr., Prof. Howard A. Prentice.

Properties—James W. Marvin, chairman, Carolyn F. Hill, Mrs. Helen L. Holdstock.

Advance Ticket Sale—Mrs. Gladys Gleason Brooks, chairman, Mrs. Irene Abell, Mary E. Waddell, Mrs. Cornelia Collier Lockwood.

Reserve Ticket Window—F. Tobey Churchill, chairman, Frederick J. Reed, Norman H. Myers, Richard H. Holdstock.

Talent—Mrs. Dorothy C. Cox, chairman, Ed. Beebe, Mrs. Jane Parsons Reed, Mrs. Alice M. Marvin, Mrs. Lillian C. Samuelson, Mrs. Mae T. Rowell, Mrs. Barbara W. Wager, Mrs. Betsey Kimball Kidder, Mrs. Doris S. Webster, Robert Dalton, Harry Gallup.

Ushers—Frederick E. Cox.

Assistants to Producer—Prof. Lyman S. Rowell, chairman, William M. Lockwood, Kenneth H. Gurney, Clifton W. Price.

Tickets are on sale in the University Book Store at the nominal price of 50c, which covers both the show and dancing. Dean Simpson has announced that Saturday night's dance is recognized as a college function but says that any upperclassmen need only ask permission.

NOTICE REGARDING REGISTRATION FOR SELECTIVE SERVICE

1. All male citizens who on October 16, 1940, are between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-six must register with certain exceptions (see paragraph 2).

2. Juniors and seniors who are taking the advanced course in Military Service, Senior Division, R. O. T. C., are not required to register. Those taking the so-called basic course, however, are not excused from registering.

3. The date set for registration is Wednesday, October 16, 1940, from 7.00 a.m. to 9.00 p.m.

4. Students and faculty of the University whether residents of Burlington or not may register with a special registration board in the University Gymnasium. The chief registrar is Mr. Sabin C. Abell.

5. Students and faculty who are residents in Burlington, may register in the usual polling place of their Ward if more convenient.

6. Registration cards of students, not residents of Burlington, will be forwarded to the Governors of their respective states.

7. Registration of Sick.—Any student confined to his room or at a hospital, because of sickness, should have a competent person apply to chief registrar, Sabin C. Abell, to have a registrar assigned to the case.

8. Students and faculty should plan on about twenty (20) minutes in which to register.

Newman Chaffee To Lay Waterman Cornerstone

Thomas Cheney Will Deliver Main Address at Ceremonies Tomorrow

On Saturday afternoon, October 12, the cornerstone of the new Waterman building will be laid with appropriate ceremonies while all construction is halted for a half hour. As Saturday will be "Homecoming Day," all alumni as well as students, faculty and friends of the University of Vermont are invited to attend the ceremonies which will begin at 1.30.

Newman K. Chaffee of Rutland, a trustee of the University, will lay the cornerstone of the Waterman building following a brief address by Thomas Cheney of Morrisville, who is also a University trustee. When completed, this building will be one of the largest, best equipped and most modern college buildings in northern New England.

The R. O. T. C. Band will play at the ceremonies and the R. O. T. C. Battalion of the University will be present. Music will be contributed by the student choruses, under the direction of the music department. Also scheduled for Saturday afternoon is the Colby-Vermont football game which will start at 2.15 p.m., a quarter of an hour later than schedule, in order that the University students, alumni and guests may be present at the laying of the cornerstone.

An amplifying system is being installed at the scene of the laying of the cornerstone and the street will be closed to traffic during the ceremonies.

Professor Holmes Assists In Draft

Will Spend Two Weeks In Montpelier, Vermont

Prof. Ralph M. Holmes, head of the University of Vermont physics department, leaves Wednesday, October 9 for Montpelier and two weeks' duty with the State Headquarters of the Selective Service, soon to swing into action when October 16 brings registration for men between twelty-one and thirty-six. Professor Holmes is a Lieutenant Commander in the Naval Reserve. He will serve as one of two liaison officers for contact between the Navy Department and the selective service administration, working at the Adjutant General's office in Montpelier, where the Vermont administration of the Selective Service Act has its headquarters. Once before, last April, Professor Holmes was called to duty by the Naval Reserve. At that time he also worked on personnel procurement.

Professor Holmes is on leave of absence from the University of Vermont for the period of his Naval Reserve duty. Another University of Vermont faculty member has also been called. He is Dr. George Chapman Crooks of the chemistry department, a chemical warfare officer in the Reserve, who is on a year's leave of absence and has already left Burlington for his period of service.

The first coffee hour of the year will be held Sunday, October 13, from 2.30 to 3.30 in the south lounge of Southwick.

Rev. Pidgeon To Speak At Vespers

Montreal Pastor Also At Men's Faculty Club

The Rev. E. Leslie Pidgeon of Montreal will speak at a University of Vermont vesper service in the Ira Allen Chapel this Sunday afternoon, October 13, at 4 p.m. The Reverend Doctor Pidgeon will also be guest speaker at the first meeting of the Men's Faculty Club of the University, at the Southwick Building, Monday evening, October 14.

The Reverend Doctor Pidgeon is a former President of Rotary International, and has the distinction of being the first outside of the United States to fill that office. Previous to his presidency in 1917-18 he was vice-president of the organization for two years. He travelled extensively in America and Europe in the interests of Rotary International.

Pastor of the Erskine and American United Church in Montreal since 1925, the Reverend Doctor Pidgeon has also had pastoral charges at Markham, Ont., St. Thomas, Ont., Vancouver, B. C., and Winnipeg, Man. He has been a member of the Executive and Sub-Executive of the United Church of Canada since Church Union in 1925.

The Reverend Doctor Pidgeon contributed extensively to the legislative work leading to Church Union. He had charge of bills for the Union both at the Federal Parliament and the Provincial Legislature.

Among other posts of honor held by Doctor Pidgeon in Canadian educational and religious fields, he is a member of the Board of Trustees of Queen's University, Kingston, vice-chairman of the Montreal United Theological College Board of Governors, a member of the Montreal Committee of the National Council of Education, and a member of

Enrollment Figure Is Over 1400

At the end of three weeks, with students and faculty settling down to the college year of 1940-41, 1,459 students have enrolled at the University of Vermont. Of these, 818 are men, and 641 are women. This is the largest enrollment of women in ten years, and undoubtedly, considering the growth in enrollment in that period over preceding periods, the largest number of women ever to attend the University.

The freshman class had 456 students registered; there are 334 sophomores, 267 juniors, and 232 seniors. Unclassified students number 22. Enrollment in the medical college is 124.

The engineering college enrollment is 134 students. The agricultural college, which includes the agriculture course for men and the home economics course for women, has 255. The college of arts and sciences, including unclassified students and the department of education, has an enrollment of 922. There are 24 graduate students working in the academic colleges, and registration officials expect that this group may show a further increase.

Fraternities To Hold Tea Dances

Part of Homecoming Week Celebration

The Delta Psi fraternity will hold a Homecoming Week tea dance Saturday, October 12, at 4.30 after the Colby-Vermont football game. D. Thayer '41 will be in charge of the dance; Prof. and Mrs. Bickford will be the chaperones.

The Sigma Phis will hold a tea dance Saturday, October 12, from 4.30 to 8.00 along with an open house. J. Burgess '42 will be in charge. Prof. and Mrs. Evans will be the chaperones.

Saturday afternoon at the Sigma Nu Lodge Mr. and Mrs. Perry will be chaperones at a tea dance in charge of D. McRell '43.

The A T O's will hold a tea Saturday afternoon for Homecoming alumni, brothers and friends. R. Thayer '42 will be in charge.

The Catamounts will be a special feature of the S A E Homecoming Week tea dance to be held at the house Saturday afternoon, October 12. J. Noble '43 and P. Sundberg '43 will be in charge. Mr. and Mrs. Pond will be the chaperones.

A tea dance will be held Saturday after the Vermont-Colby game at the Kappa Sigma House. P. Corley '41 will be in charge. Prof. and Mrs. Witham will be the chaperones.

J. Williams '43 and J. Sudbey '43 will be in charge of a Homecoming Week tea

A New Era for Vermont!

It's Homecoming Day tomorrow! The day when former Vermont students come back to their Alma Mater. Friendships will be renewed, hands will be shaken, and spirits will run high. Every hour of Homecoming Day has been carefully planned by the Alumni Council. Cornerstone, football game, cane rush, fraternity teas, musical revue, and dance doubtless will make the second Homecoming Day a memorable one.

The laying of the cornerstone and the dedication of Vermont's new $2,000,000 Waterman Building will be the all-important beginning event tomorrow. When Mr. Chaffee lays the cornerstone, it will be a most significant occasion. That stone will symbolize a new era for Vermont. A new era of progress and expansion for the College of the Green Mountains.

Proud may we students be of our new building which will immeasurably increase the beauty and the educational facilities of the University. U. V. M.'s many returning alumni will also rejoice when they witness the dedication of the Waterman Building—a structure so large that twenty-six classrooms will be located on one floor.

Every plan, every vision and every dream must be executed before it is a reality. The execution must be done persistently, faithfully, and with minute attention to details. It is to our loyal and unselfish President that we Vermont students and the alumni should feel indebted for our Waterman Building. It was his plan, his vision and his dream for Vermont. Despite his illness he has devoted many long hours to the many details and the special planning involved in the construction of such a large building.

Much has happened at Vermont since that day so many years ago when General Lafayette laid the cornerstone of the Old Mill. Tradition and expansion have made the University of Vermont a progressive and fine institution of which we all are proud. Tomorrow marks the dedication of another building which will undoubtedly mean as much to Vermont in the next 150 years as the Old Mill has in the last century and a half.

About the Game—

Following the dedication ceremony Vermont's football team will meet the Colby team. We appeal to the student body at Vermont to support its team by cheering throughout the entire game. The chief reason that Homecoming Day is held at this time of year rather than at Commencement is to allow the alumni to see Vermont students at work and at play. If those students do not show more spirit and enthusiasm than they exhibited at Vermont's last game, we feel sure the alumni will think the students a rather lifeless and unspirited body. Let's all show the alumni how loud and how long a Vermont team can be cheered!

The success of U. V. M.'s second Homecoming Day will depend largely on the undergraduate body. We students are the hosts of the alumni. It is our job to welcome them back and to show them that the University of Vermont in 1940 is a truly excellent institution of which we all are proud!

The World Front

By Robert Wolfe and Fulvio Bardossi

Last week's Cynic carried on its editorial page an endorsement of Willkie as the next president of the United States. We believe that the editors have the right to define the policies of the paper but we also maintain our prerogative as columnists to express a contrary opinion. In other words, we are again' Willkie. In this and in subsequent columns we will set forth and clarify our reasons for opposing the Republican nominee. In so doing we wish to have it understood that we do not oppose Mr. Willkie on party grounds but because we feel that his policies as outlined in his own words and actions are not the key to America's present or future problems.

Before taking up our discussion of Willkie's shortcomings we would like to state that we definitely support President Roosevelt for re-election because we think that although he is not "indispensable" he is far and away the best qualified man to lead us through the present crisis. Here are our major reasons:

1. The Roosevelt administration has had the courage to face this nation's social problems realistically and has succeeded in finding a solution to a large majority of them.

2. The only fault that we can find with Roosevelt's far-sighted foreign policy is the fact that Mr. Willkie endorses it.

3. The "Good Neighbor" policy reached its culmination in the recent Havana Conference, where a degree of Pan-American cooperation hitherto unattained resulted.

4. The Republican party has been unable to offer us a better social and economic program than that which they are now condemning, nor have they been able to advance a better foreign policy.

5. Mr. Roosevelt stands today in the eyes of Americans and foreigners alike as the best representative of democratic American policies and principles.

Having set forth the reasons for our attitude in this campaign, we will proceed in future issues to discuss Mr. Willkie's policies and point out the fallacies in them, as they appear to us.

Doings At Southwick

Last week, Mrs. Bickford began her dancing classes that have proved so popular in past years. The boys' classes for those who have not attended any before, began on Tuesday night, October 8 at 7 o'clock and will continue for the following three Tuesday nights. On Friday nights at 7 o'clock, beginning on October 11, and continuing for the three following Fridays, will be classes for those girls who have not attended before.

At 7:30 o'clock on October 16, there will be a reunion at Southwick for all the people who have been to these classes previously.

Even if you know how to dance, but just want to make more acquaintances, come to the first class. Then if you really know how to dance, you will be changed to one of the more advanced classes.

If you wish to call Mrs. Bickford or, if you have any questions, she can best be reached at her home between 12:30 and 2:00.

Classical Club Holds Initiation of Members

The twenty members of the Goodrich Classical Club met Thursday evening, October 10, at the home of Prof. Lester Prindle, head of the Classical Department at the University of Vermont, to initiate the new members, joining the club by invitation, and to outline a program for the ensuing meetings.

Requirements for membership are the maintenance of a B average in either Latin or Greek for an entire year or an average of A for the first semester.

Officers elected last spring for this year are: President, Martha Baker '41; vice-president, Margaret Beattie '41; secretary, Miriam Fiske '42; and treasurer, Melvin Hawes '42.

Jessie Swan, program chairman, was in charge of the initiation.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In reply to a recent letter published in the Cynic in retaliation to an editorial regarding the political situation I wish to state the following:

1. It is the duty of every editor to determine the policy which his or her publication will take regarding matters such as this. The editorial in no way intimated that all Vermont students should support Mr. Willkie. It was merely the channel by which the editor could express what she thought the policy of her paper was to be.

This paper in no way represents the opinion of the whole student body. It represents, as I have said before, the thoughts and policy of the editor.

2. Vermont students are in no way compelled to read the Cynic. It is true that it is the sole publication of the University, but this situation exists in numerous cities throughout the United States, where the sole newspaper in that particular city is very partial. What are the citizens of that city to do? Are they to stop reading their home-town news and give up newspaper reading altogether? Are they so partial over such a matter that they will pack up their belongings and move to some other town? These statements are ridiculous, but they are no more so than the situation which exists here in our own college.

3. The student body has a right to make itself known and it may do so by expressing its thoughts through the "Campus Comment" column in the Cynic. The Cynic has in the past judged each letter written for such a purpose with an impartial attitude and will publish anything within reason. It has done so in the past and will continue to do so in the future.

The above statements have been my personal opinion and should in no way be taken otherwise.

Vermont Red Clover Given to Mrs| Rockne

When Mrs. Knute Rockne leaned over to accept the outsize bouquet composed of official flowers from the forty-eight states, which she received on October 4, there were Vermont native red clovers in it. The season for picking field flowers is nearing its end for this year, but when University of Vermont faculty women received an invitation to send a nosegay of the Vermont state flower to Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind., as part of the celebration of National Knute Rockne Week, Mrs. James E. Donahue knew where to pick a bunch of red clover, and she did it. Mrs. Donahue, an Essex Junction resident, is librarian in the Wilbur Library of the University's Fleming Museum. The clover was duly shipped to South Bend by air mail, arrangements being made through the office of Dean Mary Jean Simpson.

There will be a Fashion Show at the Theta House this afternoon at 4.30. Admission only five cents.

Class of 1944 Wants Hot Water

"The water's fine—come on in!" Well, maybe! However, it was slightly wet and somewhat chilly as several of the numerous spectators had occasion to find out.

To be sure, we're talking about the annual Freshman-Sophomore Hose Fight, which this year was victoriously won by the sophomores—all seven of them!

Although the day was breezy to say the least, a fighting group of sophomores and freshmen rallied to the cause and fought like veterans with the assistance of the Buringtin Fire Department and Boulder Society, who saw to it that the battle lacked nothing in the way of cold water.

The first encounter saw the teams evenly matched until something went wrong, with the result that the frosh team "bit the dust" as it were. After an all too long intermission, during which, each team tried valiantly to keep from freezing, the water was again turned on and both groups started swallowing gobs of water once again. The second encounter resulted in a rally staged by the frosh, but again, the sophomores succeeded in smashing their "green" classmates into submission. Save for a rip here and a tear there, both teams emerged slightly worn out and completely drenched.

Making the locker rooms in ten minutes flat, the frosh were found pulling off each other's water-soaked clothes. When asked about their defeat, they explained, "We just didn't hit 'em. I guess we weren't aiming right." As a reply to the query, "How was the water?" one said, "Just a little bit cold and am I wet!!" All of which reminds me that had one looked hard enough, I think a few icicles could be seen here and there!

Suddenly, in the midst of all the confusion in the locker room, came the vocal refrain of—"We want more water—HOT WATER!" After being thawed out by a hot shower, another frosh came forth with this view of the fight. "What we needed was more cooperation. There were too many fellow-freshman standing around watching and telling us what to do." Another frosh, when asked what he thought of the battle royal said, "It was CLEAN fun!" (Punny, no less!)

When asked whether or not they had though they would win, the group refused to comment, perhaps, due to the numerous victorious sophs who were standing around.

However, it came time for the frosh to ask the questions and the main one troubling them seemed to be, "Do we really have to wear our green frosh lids 'til Thanksgiving?" But, whether or not the next fight decides the issue, the frosh all agreed that they'd be in there fighting at the Cane Rush. That's what I call the fighting "spirit of '44."

Ten Fraternities Entertain At Rushing Banquets

Prospective Pledges Guests of Fraternities As Rushing Week Ends

The Sigma Phis entertained three freshmen at rushing supper Monday evening, October 7. Banquets were also held at the house Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

The T E P's formally closed their rushing season with a banquet at the Black Cat Café, Tuesday evening, October 8. Speakers from the alumni advised the freshmen to make a wise choice in choosing a group of men with whom they would be associated throughout their college life.

The Sigma Nus held a banquet at their house Tuesday evening, October 8. Archie T. Post and Robert Fyfe '38 spoke after the banquet. Sixty-three men attended. Wednesday evening, October 9, the rushing was formally closed by a banquet at Oakledge Manor attended by about the same number of men. Robert Ready, attorney-at-law of St. Albans, and Mr. Soules of New York City were the speakers.

The Hunting Lodge on Mount Mansfield was the scene of two unique rushing banquets by the Delta Psis Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, October 8 and 9. The men and freshmen, dressed very informally, came up the mountain in cars to "rough it" on top. Speeches were made by several officers and brothers of the fraternity.

The Phi Sigma Deltas held a rushing banquet Wednesday evening at their house, at which prominent alumni and fraternity officers spoke. Thursday evening a pledging banquet was given also at the house.

The A T O's held two rushing banquets at the Paragon Monday and Tuesday evenings, October 7 and 8. Prominent alumni of Burlington were the speakers.

The S A E's rushing banquets were held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Twist O' Hill Lodge. Distinguished alumni and fraternity friends were the speakers along with the fraternity officers. Wednesday night a delegation from the Norwich chapter of the S A E was entertained at another banquet.

The Kappa Sigma gave rushing banquets Tuesday evening at their house and Wednesday evening at the Hotel Vermont. Prominent alumni of Burlington and fraternity officers spoke to about sixty men each night.

Fraternity officers and well-known alumni were the speakers at the Phi Delta Theta banquets held at the fraternity house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, October 8 and 9.

The Owls' only rushing banquet was given at the Paragon, Wednesday evening, October 9. Prominent alumni and fraternity officers spoke.

the Protestant Committee of the Council of Education, Quebec. He is president of the Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada.

The Reverend Doctor Pidgeon will speak at the first meeting of the current college year of the Men's Faculty Club. At this meeting, Monday, October 14, will also be held the reception of the President and the Deans of the University for new faculty members. Ladies' Night will be observed.

Other Faculty Club speakers for the year are to be Pres. Jesse P. Bogue of Green Mountain Junior College, November 9; Dr. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay, pastor of the Baptist Church of Brookline, Mass., December 7; Mr. Ralph Noble, State Commissioner of Education, January 11; Prof. E. C. Jacobs, head of the University geology department, February 8; Lieut.-Gov. William H. Wills, March 8.

The Faculty Club will be guests of Pres. and Mrs. Guy W. Bailey at the December 7 meeting, when Doctor Lindsay will speak.

Speakers for April and May dates will be announced later by the Faculty Club.

See the fall styles at the Theta House this afternoon at 4.30.

Father George, O.F.M. Addresses Newman Club

There was a meeting of all girl members of the Newman Club in the Cathedral High School gymnasium after the Mission services on Tuesday evening.

Father Sullivan introduced as speaker of the evening Father George, O.F.M., who gave a brief talk on the Franciscan Order, telling facts about its founder, St. Francis, and the lives of the Franciscan monks.

Following this several girls were elected to serve on the committee for nominating officers of the Newman Club. On this committee are: Chairman, Margaret Crowley, M. Witham, M. Quinn, M. Germain, P. McCormick and C. Cioffi. The four members of the girls' executive board who will serve throughout the year are: Kay Kyle, Helen Witham, Barbara Gallagher and Sally Rome.

In the last week of October, during the time of the young men's Mission, will be the first joint meeting of the Newman Club with Doctor Schwenger of St. Michael's College the guest speaker.

Pan-Hellenic Fun Nite Big Success

Sororities Entertain With Original Skits

The Pan-Hellenic Fun Nite was held at Southwick Tuesday night, October 8, with about 200 girls attending. The committee in charge was Jeanne Woolley '42, Miriam Fiske '42 and Pearl Marvin '42.

As each girl arrived she received a colored ribbon to designate the class to which she belonged. The seniors wore blue ribbons, the juniors wore red, the sophomores yellow and the freshmen green.

The program consisted of skits put on by each sorority. They were as follows:

"I Didn't Know What Time It Was," Kappa Alpha Theta.

"Midnight in a Madhouse," Pi Beta Phi.

"I'm Sleeping Out With a Memory Tonight," Alpha Chi Omega.

"Little Old Lady," Sigma Gamma.

"In My Merry Oldsmobile," Alpha Xi Delta.

"Don't Give Up the Ship," Delta Delta Delta.

"Lost Chord," Delta Phi Epsilon.

Following the stunts there was dancing in the ballroom, roller skating, badminton and archery in the gym, and table games in the lounges. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts were served.

Museum Notes

Now on exhibit in the Fleming Museum is a collection of originals that have been loaned to the Museum by the Ferargil Galleries of New York and by Mr. Joseph Winterbotham of Burlington. Among the pictures loaned by Mr. Winterbotham are two particularly interesting items: Balinese Jungle Scene (in India ink) by a native of Bali and a picture of Chinese Thumb-Print Animals. The Chinese picture is unique in that the main part has been done by the impression of fingerprints, these prints being used to form the bodies of the animals.

In the upper left corridor of the Museum, as one up to the Art Gallery, hangs a collection of original pictures done by the masters. Among these paintings are the works of such well-known artists as Van Gogh, Cezanne, and Degas. These paintings are not copies—but the original pictures painted by these artists.

BLUESTOCKINGS — Women's Honorary literary society, first meeting of year, Tuesday, October 15, 7.30 p.m., at Southwick. Guest speaker. All members please attend.—MARGARET DRUM, President.

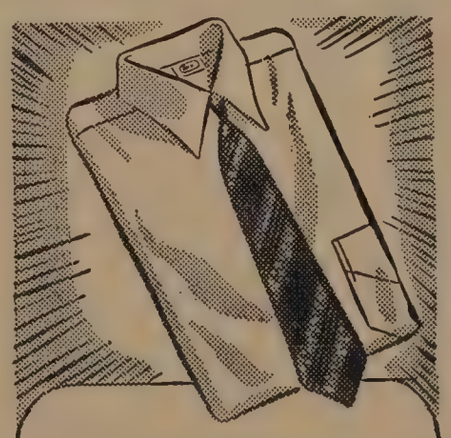
West Virginia University will have twenty-one visiting instructors from as many colleges at its summer sessions.

Elinor Elliott To Address Teachers' Convention Today

U. V. M. Summer Faculty Members Will Lead Art Association Conference

"Art in the Development of Personality and Social Growth" will be the subject of the address of Miss Elinor Elliott of Boston, speaking before the Art Conference in the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont this Friday, October 11. The Art Conference will be part of the annual fall Vermont State Teachers' Convention, occupying the attention of teachers from all parts of the State this Friday and Saturday.

Miss Elliott is a member of the University of Vermont summer faculty, and is described by Prof. Elizabeth V. Colburn, head of the University art department, as "one whose messages are always full of interest and vitality. As a brilliant speaker and leader in art education, her standing is unquestioned." Miss Elliott will speak in the Fleming Museum Art Gallery Friday morning, from 10.30 to 12 a.m. Chairman of the Vermont Art Association committee in charge of arrangements for the convention program is Francis P. Colburn, teacher of art in the schools of Barton and Orleans.



A round table discussion on "The Place of the Skills in the Creative Art Program" will be led by Miss Elliott in the art gallery of the Museum Friday afternoon, starting at 2 p.m. Those attending the afternoon art conference will also see a collection of colored slides titled "Vermont, the Year 'Round," shown by Eliot P. Beveridge, art director of Johnson Normal School. A moving picture, "Young America Paints," will round out the afternoon art sessions.

Mary Letta Root Leads Pilgrim Fellowship

Fifty young people attended the meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship at the First Church last Sunday evening. Mary Letta Root '41, led the discussion on "What Do We Want Most in Life?"

Next Sunday, October 13, the discussion will be led by Lawrence Partridge '42. The topic will be "Do We Know Our Friends?"

University of Wisconsin men have organized an interpretative dance class.

Rev. R. H. Fitch, Proctor Speaker at Chapel

"It is a known fact that people have selfish habits," Rev. R. H. Fitch of Proctor asserted at last Wednesday's chapel.

He also said that many people turn to some friend or acquaintance for revelation, rather than to God, who is vague and unreal to them. He illustrated this fact by telling how the young boys idolized Col. Charles Lindbergh after he had made his non-stop flight across the Atlantic. His final message was that in our hands is the power to lead to the highest possible attainment.

Agriculture Dean's List Is Published

Three Women and Two Men Make Top Rank

A recent announcement from the office of the dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Vermont shows that three women and two men in the Agricultural College made scholastic records of 92.5% or better in their work for the second semester of the last college year. Fifteen others followed with averages ranging from 89% to 92.4%, while thirty-six had grades averaging between 85% and 88.9%.

The five top-rankers were Laura C. Dustan, Craftsbury Common; Helen P. Towne, Milton (both graduates in the class of 1940); Kenneth J. Estey, Hinesburg; and Evelyn M. Fuller, Chester, members of this year's senior class; and Ray I. Pestle, Jr., Waitsfield, a sophomore.

In the next lower group, averaging from 89% to 92.4%, were Katherine E. Davis, Wilmington; Reid H. Leonard, Derby; Howard F. Nelson, East Ryegate; Lucien D. Paquette, Craftsbury; George H. Bailey, Rochester; Harold R. Cushman, Vergennes; Kathleen R. LeBaron, Waterbury; Ernest F. Paquette, Craftsbury; Douglas P. Dann, North Pomfret; Joyce Kenyon, Richmond; Pearl R. Marvin, Fairfax; Wilfred T. Elliott, St. Johnsbury; Irene M. Quimby, Barnet; Robert P. Story, Rutland; Ruth C. Walker, Cabot.

Interfraternity Dance October 19

ATTENTION Senior Women

Senior women, how would you like to win a career in Vogue's Sixth Prix de Paris? It can happen to you!

To you this contest means a chance to step from graduation in June into a ready-made career, if you like fashion reporting and feature writing. To Vogue this is a way to find new talent for the magazine's writing staff.

Vogue's Prix de Paris contest offers seven major awards. First prize is a year's position on Vogue's fashion staff. Formerly, this prize included six months in Vogue's Paris office, but due to world conditions, the winner will spend the full period in the New York office. Second prize, a special Vanity Fair award, is six months as a feature writer on Vogue's staff. The remaining five prizes will be awarded in cash for the best contest theses, which will be purchased for publication in Vogue.

"Honorable Mentions" will be awarded to contestants with papers showing unusual writing talent, and they will be interviewed by leading stores, advertising agencies and publishing houses.

The Prix de Paris consists of four quizzes based on articles on fashions and non-fashion features found in issues of Vogue from October 1 to March 1. If you pass these tests, then you are eligible to submit a thesis in competition for all prizes.

This sounds like a wonderful chance for Vermont women to gain experience in fashion reporting and feature writing for a fashion magazine. If any senior women are interested, a copy of complete contest rules with an entry blank may be obtained from the office of the Dean of Women.

Act now for the answers to the first quiz must be mailed before November 1.

Johnny Daggett, Colby captain planning to give the Catamounts a kick out of life.

Catamounts Ready For Colby Tilt

Sporting an undefeated and untied record, a powerful and experienced team from Colby College opposes the Vermont eleven tomorrow in a game that promises to provide the utmost in football thrills.

The co-champions of the Maine State series last year bring to town a squad of thirty-four players, which is regarded as one of the strongest ever to represent the Waterville, Me., institution.

The team presents power and speed from end to end and the backfield, led by Capt. Johnny Daggett, has shown its strength and finesse in their first two gridiron encounters. Colby proved its mettle when it eked out a 21-19 victory over a good New Hampshire eleven in its first gridiron battle of the season and then went on to smear a strong C. C. N. Y. team 14-0 last week.

This game featured the kicking of fullback Dan Scioletti, 200 pounds of dynamite on both defense and offense. It was his seventy-yard punt in the fourth quarter that paved the way for the White Mules' second win of the season. Smaller, but still as dangerous, is Captain Daggett, who lines up at the right halfback position. He has been the big gun for Colby in both games and this 152-pound bundle of energy and speed offers a threat in his every movement on the field of battle.

Seven lettermen form the nucleus of the Maine eleven and it boasts of a hard charging line averaging 173 pounds, a potent backfield with a 174-pound average, a powerful kicker averaging fifty yards, and a passing attack which boasts of both right- and left-handed passers. Speed and power is the offense which Coach McCoy's boys offer this season and it will probably prove very troublesome to a Vermont team which has shown some very good but more very bad playing in its first two games.

Coach Fuzzy Evans devoted the first part of the week to blocking and tackling, pathetically weak in the Trinity game, and also to sharpening up his passing attack. Tuesday the three teams spent time in scrimmaging and a great deal of shifting was done by both coaches in order to bring the Catamounts to their peak for this encounter. The rest of the week was devoted to passing and a defense against Colby plays with signal practice today ending the week's activity.

The game tomorrow will present an undefeated "powerhouse," sporting one of the best backs in the East, opposing an in-and-out team which may rise to the heights before the afternoon is over. Both teams will probably offer a wide-open passing attack and a variety of trick plays in order to "break" their stars into the open field. Probable line-ups:

NOTICE:

The Colby-Vermont football game, scheduled on October 12, will start at 2.15 instead of 2.00 p.m.

This change is being made in order that there will be sufficient time for the cornerstone exercises of the Waterman Building, which will take place at 1.30 p.m.

The cross-country runs will start as originally scheduled at 1.20 and 1.30 p.m.

Graduate Manager.

Intramural Sports

The 1940 annual intramural competition is well under way. A much-varied assortment of contests has been planned by intramural advisor Archie Post. These contests are held to round out the athletic program of those men not participating in varsity sports and provide the opportunity for everyone to receive the thrill of competitive sports.

Inaugurating the new intramural season we find the tennis and golf tournaments well under way. The golf finals will be held at the Waubanakee Golf Club, October 8. The match will bring together E. Keenan and L. Gallup in an eighteen-hole match play. And judging the calibre of golf evidenced in early rounds by the two finalists, a well-played match is expected.

The ever popular game of tennis has attracted some twenty-five contestants with five men remaining in the semi-final stage of the tournament. A. Simpson and Harvey are already paired for their match; however, L. Simpson will have to play the winner of the quarter final match not played yet. It is expected that the finals will be held during the week of October 13.

A horseshoe tournament has been well planned by Coach Archie Post. This tournament was the demand of some twenty students, but only five or six have shown up for the first round. A request by the coach that the players show up for competition, was supplemented by a statement that the tournament will be called off unless the contestants show up this week.

A schedule has been posted on the Athletic Bulletin Board of the games to be played in the interfraternity touch-football league. Rules have also been posted, and team members are requested to read them. The tournaments will be enlivened if spectators are on hand.

Cross-Country Team To Meet Dartmouth

Hope for Second Victory In Two-week Period

Coach Archie Post's cross-country team will be out to make it two victories in a row when they face the Dartmouth team. Dartmouth usually has a powerful team, and if the Vermont boys can defeat them it looks like a banner season for the cross-country squad. The team is led by Capt. F. Livak. Wednesday afternoon the team had a trial timing over the course and the boys finished the four-mile grind in this order:

	Time
1. F. Webster	22:19
2. C. Webster	22:33
3. Capt. F. Livak	22:57
4. J. P. Hoyt	23:22
5. E. F. St. Mary	23:35
6. J. Burgess	23:42
7. M. Crown	23:52
8. R. Steinman	24:30
9. D. Zwick	24:47
10. C. E. Corliss	24:52
11. R. West	24:55
12. D. Corliss	28:10

Schedule:
Oct. 12—Dartmouth at Burlington.
Oct. 18—Bowdoin at Burlington.
Nov. 2—Williams at Williamstown.
Nov. 11—N. E. I. C. A. A. at Boston.
Nov. 16—Middlebury at Middlebury.

Kittens To Meet G.M.J.C. Tomorrow

Defeated but not outplayed in last Saturday's engagement with V. J. C., the Kittens are going through the final touches in preparation for the tilt with Green Mountain Junior College at Poultney tomorrow. The team will be handicapped by the loss of three men, all of whom saw considerable action in the V. J. C. game.

Nate Pulde, Herb Sedelis and Len Kunken will be unable to compete in the game because of a religious holiday. Pulde and Sedelis are tackles and Kunken a back. The former two started in the inaugural game while Kunken filled in at end and backfield during the contest. All three will be missed, especially Pulde who played a crackerjack game last week, spending most of the afternoon in the invader's backfield.

Although none of the team suffered serious injuries from V. J. C. tilt, many of Coach Fogg's warriors are sporting minor injuries of one sort or another. Coach Sherry Fogg commented that the only major injury was to their pride, and you can be sure that he'll have the boys

Big Doings

Tomorrow promises to be one of those days when everything happens—for fate and the schedule makers have collaborated in making out a program which would rate in Hollywood as a "super-colossal" production. The program includes everything from dedication ceremonies and cornerstone laying to cross-country and musical revues. The only thing needed to make the day complete is a Catamount victory over the Colby Mules. And this is where you, the student body, come in. Start in tonight making tomorrow a big day by attending the Pep Rally in the gym. Follow this up by attending the game en masse. This will show the team that you're still behind them win or lose.

Sizing Them Up

Turning now to the game itself, it seems that the situation hasn't changed any since last week. The Mules are still stubborn and kicking. The Catamounts still have possibilities. And there you are. However, reports from coaching headquarters here at home indicate that violent changes may be expected in the Catamount's line-up if the first team doesn't show signs of revival tomorrow. Under the pressure of this threat and bolstered by the confidence which comes of playing on one's home field, the Catamounts have every chance to surprise the dopesters and throw the Mules.

Rumor has it that the Cats have been showing an entirely new spirit in practice—a sure indication that things are beginning to hum. We feel that credit should be given to Fuzzy Evans for the masterful way he is running things this year. His quick settlement of the fraternity rushing problem proves that he is a coach who will do everything in his power to help his players keep in top form for the tough schedule facing them. We hope to see an entirely changed eleven out there tomorrow—an eleven which will confound all critics who are already labeling them as underdogs. We have every confidence that the Catamounts, win or lose, will not disappoint the Homecoming Day fans.

Double Feature

Also to be seen in action tomorrow are the varsity and frosh harriers in a double meet against Dartmouth. We're looking for the strong varsity running team to nose out the Indians. This year the latter will not have the advantage of running on their own course and bunching up at the end as they did last year. The race will be decided strictly on speed and ability, not trickery—a factor which gives the Catamounts a great opportunity to stay in the win column.

As for the freshmen, they are as yet an untried quantity and it is almost impossible to tell what they will do.

Doubtful Note

The toughest assignment of the week falls to Sherry Fogg's charges, who journey to Green Mountain tomorrow to face a tough Junior College eleven. Though we hate to close on a note of gloom, we feel that the Kittens are due to be on the short end of the score when the final whistle blows. Last week's tilt with Vermont Junior College indicated that there is a lack of outstanding material on the squad and considerable work will have to be done before the freshmen can hope to break into the win column.

Having thus done all the crystal-gazing we can without losing our tired wits, we close up shop and adjourn to a quiet, quiet corner where we can go into a dreamless and thoughtless trance.

Hot off the Grid

By "MOOSE"

This column is dedicated to the effort of bringing to Vermont football fans the results of games played by our future gridiron opponents of the 1940 season.

Colby

This team will prove to be an admirable foe for the Catamounts, if the result of their game Saturday is any criterion.

Colby has 152 pounds of moleskin dynamite in the person of Johnny Daggett. Johnny lugs leather like nobody's business, and was a big factor in Colby's 14-0 defeat of City College of New York.

For three periods C. C. N. Y. held back the flood but a booming seventy-yard punt by fullback Dan Scolletti put Colby into scoring position. The White Mules showed real power by marching up the field twice in ten minutes for two tallies.

Abdo Hassan is another backfield threat for Colby and Melvin Baum is a bulwark of the front line in a guard position.

R. P. I.

Any team that can score 31 points in one half must either be good or else facing a mighty poor opponent. Be that as it may, Rensselaer scored its second straight victory Saturday much to the chagrin of Hamilton College, which could only put 13 points on the credit side of the ledger. R. P. I. appear to have a dearth of backfield material, and they all took turns in scoring. The final score was R. P. I. 31-Hamilton 13.

New Hampshire

Here is a school that looms up as another powerful U. V. M. adversary. They took Bates in tow 27-6 and flashed some real pigskin carriers in Stacey Clark, MacDonald, and Gordon. Substitutions were made quite frequently and they have a good place kicker in Matt Flaherty, who put three extra points through the cross bars.

Frosh Harriers Meet Dartmouth Tomorrow

The yearling harriers meet their first test Saturday afternoon against Dartmouth's freshman cross-country team. With only a few weeks to mould a team from an inexperienced but enthusiastic squad, Coach Archie Post has worked veritable wonders. Though unwilling to go out on a limb regarding the results of the contest, he praised the hill-and-dalers in regard to their spirit and cooperation. The results in the time trials held Wednesday are as follows: Goodie Goodall, 17:20; Lockwood, 17:40; Stan Cronk, 18:36; Henry Helberg, 18:47; Ray Tromblay, 18:49; Jack Grant, 19:05; Ralph Soule, 19:44; Curtis Webster, 20:19; Verle Hogaboom, 20:59; Carpenter, 21:00; Wilson Beebe, 21:12; Jake Katz, 21:12; Larry Button, 22:04. The manager of the team is J. Bailey '41; the assistant manager is C. Marks '42.

Norwich

This is a ball club that was a pre-season whirlwind according to all predictions, but received a sound lacing at the hands of a not-too-wonderful Boston University team in their opener. Saturday certainly did not put a feather in their helmet, as they just managed to eke out a 7-0 win over Arnold. Arnold is a small school that does not place too much emphasis on football. It appears to be a toss-up as to whether Arnold deserves much credit for keeping the score down by playing over their heads, or whether it was due to the defects in a mediocre cadet grid machine. Only time will tell.

Middlebury

If results of games played up to now can be used fairly as a basis for judging future games, it looks like Vermont to repeat for the State Championship in a breeze. But, of course, that is just a pipe dream at present.

Dean Harris Tells About Hobbies and Home Life

Dean Harris, Assistant Dean of Women at University of Vermont, plans and supervises the living arrangements of the girls attending University. Dormitories, private houses and homes where girls are employed are overseen by her. Dean Harris asserted that, in the future, she hopes to know the town girls better and to have the opportunity to meet their parents.

Skowhegan, Me., claims Dean Harris. She declared it is often referred to as the "end of the earth." Her summers are spent at her home and at camp with her family.

The Assistant Dean is an accomplished 'cellist. A year ago last summer she took 'cello lessons at Trinity College of Music in London, England. At present she plays the 'cello in the Chapel Orchestra. She chose this in preference to the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra, as she wished to be among the students and takes much interest in them.

Among her hobbies, Dean Harris admitted that sewing was her favorite. She enjoys and prefers making her own clothes.

"From my experience," Dean Harris continued, "I realize it means much to fathers and mothers to know that their children like to come home. I am unusually fortunate in the happiness of my family relationship. I enjoy being companionable with my parents and doing all I can for them, as they have done for me. My parents have always been particularly interested in younger people.

When Dean Harris left home, she began writing to her parents every Sunday. They in turn, did the same to her. Each still writes regularly each week. Concerning this inspiring practice the Dean declared, "It gave me a background of courage and confidence. The realization of constant interest is an encouragement to endeavor. Those students who have not cultivated this habit should, for they might discover that great happiness and a better perspective on life can be found in such intercourse."

Basketball Player Thrills Vermonters

Last Monday evening Chuck Taylor, one of the greatest basketball players in the history of the game, thrilled an overflow crowd at the U. V. M. gym with his effortless playing, spectacular passing and all-around fine exhibition of this popular sport.

Aided by ten members of varsity squad, among whom were Capt. Paul Corley, "Dick" Healey, and "Don" Maley last year's regulars, Taylor gave Coach "Fuzzy" Evans and his charges valuable pointers on feinting, shooting and other fundamentals of the game, topped off by a five-minute scrimmage in which "Chuck" himself participated.

Following the Clinic, pictures of the national tourneys at Kansas City and Denver were shown.

A fellow by the name of Art Harrison, who spends his afternoons in the Tufts Oval at Medford, Mass., gave the Middlebury Panthers a lesson in this modern game of football. For the first half Tufts treated the visitors quite gently, and the end of the half showed a goose egg for both teams' efforts. In the last two periods, however, the Tufts boys forgot their manners, and Art personally escorted the ball over the Middlebury goal line four times for a total of 24 points. Tufts racked up 13 points in the third quarter and in the last period ran wild to tally 25 points. The Panthers must have been sorry they did not bring their cages. Final score 38-6.

Frosh Football

gunning for victory number one tomorrow to even the score.

It is his hope to use two full teams and switch them in and out during the game. This would give the frosh mentor just that many more men with some experience under their belts for the subsequent two games.

The probable starting lineup will find Pacini, Reed, Mayforth and Lewkowicz tugging the pigskin; Walgren and Barry on the wings; McGill and Baxendale at tackles; Williams and Eddy, guards; and Smith plugging up the center of the line.

Results of the Green Mountain-Norwich game which the former won with ease 26-0, seem to point to tough going for the Kittens.

The squad consisting of about 25 players will depart at 9.30 Saturday morning.

Michael Anselmo Chosen To Succeed Mrs. Elder

The Department of Music at the University of Vermont is announcing the appointment of Mr. Michael Anselmo as instructor in violin for the academic year 1940-1941. Violin instruction at the University was formerly given by Mrs. Charlotte deVolt Elder, who resigned last June to teach violin at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va.

Mr. Anselmo started the study of violin at the age of eight under Prof. Mario Frosali, a graduate of the conservatory at Florence, Italy, and later professor at the Milan conservatory. At sixteen he made his début in Aeolian Hall, New York City, and was very favorably received. During the next three years he played recitals in Aeolian, Town, and Carnegie Halls, playing sonatas of Mozart, Tartini, Brahms and Beethoven, concerti by Goldmark, d'Ambrosio, Beethoven, Mozart and Paganini, Bach's Chaconne for violin alone and other famous compositions. He also studied piano, theory, solfeggio and chamber music, and spent two years under Prof. Leopold Auer, studying especially the concerti of Tachaikovsky, Glazounov and Mendelssohn.

In 1930 Mr. Anselmo joined the staff of radio station WOR as concertmaster and solo violinist under the direction of George Shackley, Philip James and later Alfred Wallenstein. In 1935 he became first violinist in the Cremona String Quartet and has continued in that capacity up to the present, having appeared with the Quartet at several summer school concerts at the University. He has made his home in Burlington for the past year, where he has established a violin studio. He will be remembered as soloist in the Beethoven concerto last sason with the Vermont Symphony Orchestra.

The New York Tribune said of his playing, after one of his recitals in Aeolian Hall: "Tone and technique were both satisfactory; the former was smooth, even where fireworks came thickest, and strong besides, while his technique dealt with the same fireworks so as to arouse the audience to break in on the music with applause."

Besides teaching individual students in violin, Mr. Anselmo, will have a class in violin methods, and will be concertmaster in the Chapel Orchestra and University Orchestra. He will also appear in faculty recitals during the year.

Sunday, October 13, the Outing Club will sponsor the fourth weekly hike; this time the destination does not lie on Mansfield, but on Camel's Hump. The truck will leave the gym at nine and everyone going should bring the regular thirty-five cents and a cup.

The previous hikes to Taylor and Butler have proved great successes and have made a good start for the amateurs. This hike is another starter—not for professionals in particular. It caters to all the trail loiterers, medium loiterers and burners available at the start, so why not pick yourself a little niche and come along.

Plans Formulated For Registration

Sabe Abell To Be Selective Service Head

University of Vermont men, students and faculty members who come under the provisions of the Selective Service Act, may register October 16 at a special registration board in the University gymnasium. Sabin C. Abell, graduate manager of athletics, is chief registrar of the University registration station, which was set up by officials in charge of the registration machinery after a count of University male students coming under conscription laws disclosed 248 men in this class. This does not include men who are taking the advanced course in Military Science and Tactics, Senior Division, because they are not required to register, but it does include men coming within the age division who take the basic course in military science, for these men do have to register. No count has been made of faculty men who will be included in the October 16 registration.

Registration cards of students who are residents of states other than Vermont will be forwarded to the governors of those states. Students and faculty members who are Burlington residents may register at their regular polling places if they prefer. Special arrangements with the chief registrar are provided for men who are confined to their rooms or to hospitals by illness.

Professor Heicher Is New Instructor Of Political Science

Among the new instructors this year is Winchester H. Heicher, Ph.D., who is substituting for Professor Laatsch of the Political Science department. Professor Heicher has a wide background and was modest about giving details to the CYNIC reporter. Born in Nagaski, Japan, where his father was a missionary, Professor Heicher came to this country at the age of five, coming by the way of the Suez Canal and lived in France for a short time while en route to this country. Knowing only Japanese, Professor Heicher stated that he began to learn English at the age of five when he arrived in the United States.

Doctor Heicher's home is really in San Francisco, and he is a graduate of Stanford University, was graduate assistant in history at the University of Oregon, spent a year at the University of Geneva in Switzerland studying international law. While in Geneva, he attended as a spectator the General Disarmament Conference in 1931-32, and was writing his thesis for his Doctor's degree at that time. On a graduate fellowship he entered New York University from which he received his Ph.D. and where he has taught for the past six years before coming here.

Professor Heicher is also interested in Political Geography, and is busy preparing a book that will be out in early spring or summer on Political Geography. He admitted that he also liked to collect maps, but that his collection was limited. Professor Heicher is also an enthusiastic gardener, and interested in athletics, especially skiing. His real interest in skiing came during his stay in Switzerland, and the professor said that he was glad to be so near the skiing centers of Underhill and Mount Mansfield.

When asked what his impression was of Vermont, Professor Heicher said, looking out of the window across College Green, "The natural beauty of Vermont impresses me very much, and I feel very much at home here, because it reminds me of the part of the West I came from."

Professor Heicher also said that after being in N. Y. U. where elevators are used, and it is so crowded the sense of ease and space here at U. V. M. seemed good.

The thing he is most proud of is the fact that in the summer of 1930 after graduating from college he and his roommate went from San Francisco to New York in a 1920 Dodge, took a freighter from New York to Europe, spent seven weeks in Europe returned home and drove back to San Francisco from New York. They were gone three and a half months, and each spent only $350 on the whole trip!

Honorary Educational Fraternity Meets Today

The annual fall meeting of the Alpha Lambda chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, the national honorary educational fraternity for women, will be held at Southwick on October 11. The business meeting will begin at six, and will be followed by a buffet supper at which the new pledges will be the guests. In charge of this meeting are the State President, Dean Simpson, and the executive committee. Delta Kappa Gamma members from all over Vermont who are here for the Teachers' Convention are invited.

Ladies Of Faculty Fete New Members

The first in a series of teas for the ladies of the faculty will be held on Friday, October 11, at Southwick. The first part of the program will consist of a business meeting and the reports of the officers. This will be followed by a reception for the new wives of the faculty members and the new women of the faculty. The guests will be received by Mrs. Metcalf, the president of the organization, and the members of the governing board, assisted by Mrs. Bailey, the president's wife, and Dean Simpson. Tea will be served from two tables with Mrs. Warren R. Austin and Mrs. Guy Page, wives of trustees of the University, pouring at one, and Mrs. Bailey and Dean Simpson at the other. They will be assisted by four of the younger wives of faculty members. All faculty women, house directors, staff members and wives of faculty members are invited.

Red Dower and his band will play Saturday, October 12, from 5.00 to 8.00 p.m. for the Owls' tea dance. The guest of honor will be Prof. Howard E. Stryker '04, professor of political science at Indiana University. Prof. and Mrs. Millikan and Prof. and Mrs. Stultz will be the chaperones. D. Peterson '43 and H. Howe '43 are co-chairmen of the dance committee.

COFFEE HOURS

Coffee hours will be held at intervals during the winter, at least on the Sundays when there are Vesper Services. From time to time, there will be musical programs and informal speakers. In charge of these Coffee Hours are the Sophomore Aides who will be assisted by groups of girls chosen from the freshman and sophomore classes. The first in this series of Coffee Hours will be held this Sunday, October 13, from 2.30 until 3.30. Faculty and students are urged to attend.

Sixteen Engineers On Dean's List

Second Semester 1940 Ratings Just Released

Sixteen engineering students at the University of Vermont, cited for excellence in their engineering studies during the second semester of the last college year, have been named to the dean's list, just released from the office of Dean George F. Eckhard. Outranking all other engineering students was L. B. Zambon, South Ryegate, a graduate last June, whose grades averaged in the 95% to 98% class.

Rating from 92.5% to 95% were W. E. Young, Barre; G. H. Stickney, East Thetford; and R. Marshall, Bennington. Classed from 89% to 92.5% were F. A. Johnson, Thetford Center; J. B. Wheeler, Morrisville; and G. B. Dunn, Craftsbury Common.

In the group averaging from 85% to 89% were R. A. Dudley, Bradford; W. P. Koch, Burlington; H. G. Carlson, Brattleboro; G. I. Palmer, Williamstown; H. H. Hubbard, St. Albans; R. R. Bielli, Barre; W. T. Chapin, Essex Junction; M. L. Riggs, Richmond; and J. H. Tennien, Pittsford.

Kappa Alpha Theta to Present Fashion Show

A fashion show will be held by Kappa Alpha Theta at the chapter house on Friday, October 11, at 4.30 p.m. Mary Jane Hammond '41 is in charge. Barbara Mann '41 is responsible for the posters, and decorations will be arranged by Janet Dike '43. The models are Dorothy Emerson '41, Kay LeBaron '41, Mary Jane Hammond '41, Nancy Jones '41, Barbara Mann '41, Kay Holden '42, Gratia Pearl '42, Janet Rust '42, Elizabeth Deming '43 and Katherine Shaw '43.

The clothes modeled will come from B. Turk & Co. of Burlington. Everyone who is interested is cordially invited to attend. There will be a small admission charge of five cents.

EVERYONE is invited to the Coffee Hour given by the Sophomore Aides in the South Lounge at Southwick from 2.30 to 3.30 next Sunday, October 13.

Zoology Department Acquires Mud Puppy

The Zoology Department has just acquired from the Free Press a mud puppy, which was found at the mouth of the LaPlatte River, near Shelburne. The person who found this animal turned it over to the Free Press, who, in turn, brought it to the Zoology department. It has been several years since one has been found in this region.

The mud puppy, water dog, or as it is sometimes called the mud eel (scientific name Menobranchus or more commonly Necturus Maculatus), is a species of salamander, growing to about fourteen inches in length. It can easily be distinguished by the long tough red gills on each side of the head, the dirty brown color, and the two feet with four toes each, located just below the head.

Students taking the advanced courses of Zoology are already preparing for the annual Christmas trip to The American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Professor Perry has been appointed by Dean Swift as a member of the Committee on Nutrition, which was requested by the War Department.

Dean Simpson Away

Dean Simpson will not be able to have office hours from Tuesday, October 15 until Monday, October 21, when she will be out of town.

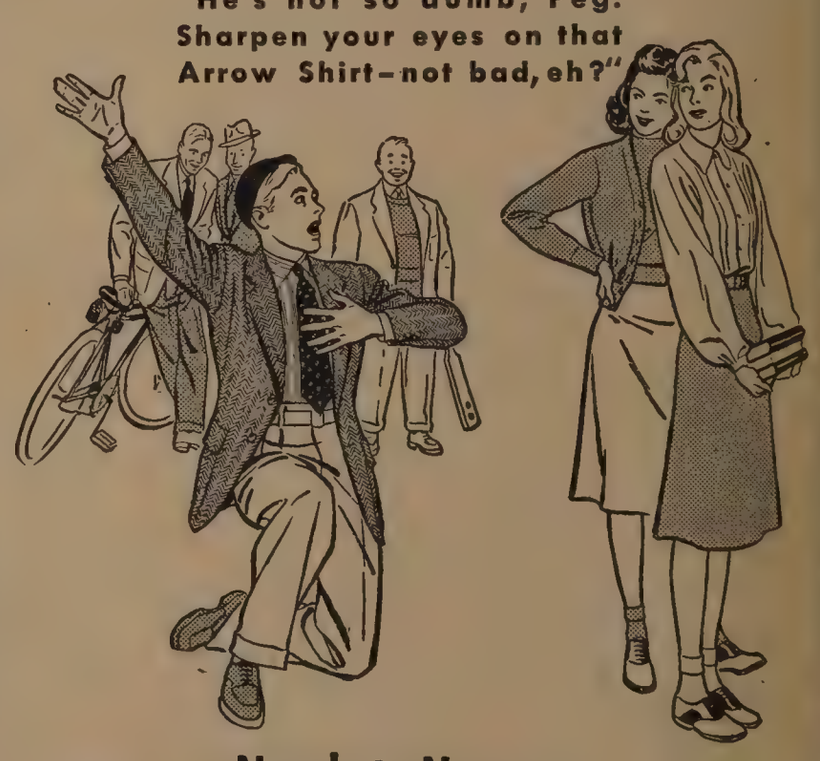
Dairy Meetings Set For November 6-7

Sessions to Take Place At Fleming Museum

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the Vermont Dairy Plant Operators and Managers Association has been set for November 6-7. All sessions are to be held in the auditorium of the Fleming Museum at the University of Vermont in connection with the Short Course Conference for dairy plant operators and milk distributors offered by the department of animal and dairy husbandry.

The officers and program committee are L. D. Ware, Richmond, president; W. L. Lobeck, Richmond, vice-president; H. B. Ellenberger, Burlington, secretary; and directors G. B. Douglas, Newport, M. A. Collins, Morrisville, T. H. Weed, Woodsville, N. H., C. H. Bowen, Bellows Falls and H. W. Boyden, Essex Junction.

Some of the outstanding speakers already scheduled include O. E. Reed, Chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, United States Department of Agriculture; H. V. Noyes, Commissioner, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets; Dr. John L. Rice, Commissioner of Health, New York City; W. A. Wentworth of the Borden Company, New York City; and Dr. A. C. Fay of H. P. Hood and Sons Boston.



Thurber to Speak

H. E. Thurber '43 will speak to the Methodist College Group next Sunday evening. His topic will be the New York World's Fair. The meeting will be at 7.30 at the parsonage.

The Pi Phis are having a Bridge and Fashion Show at Southwick, October 19, at 2.00 o'clock. Refreshments will be served. Student admission thirty-five cents.

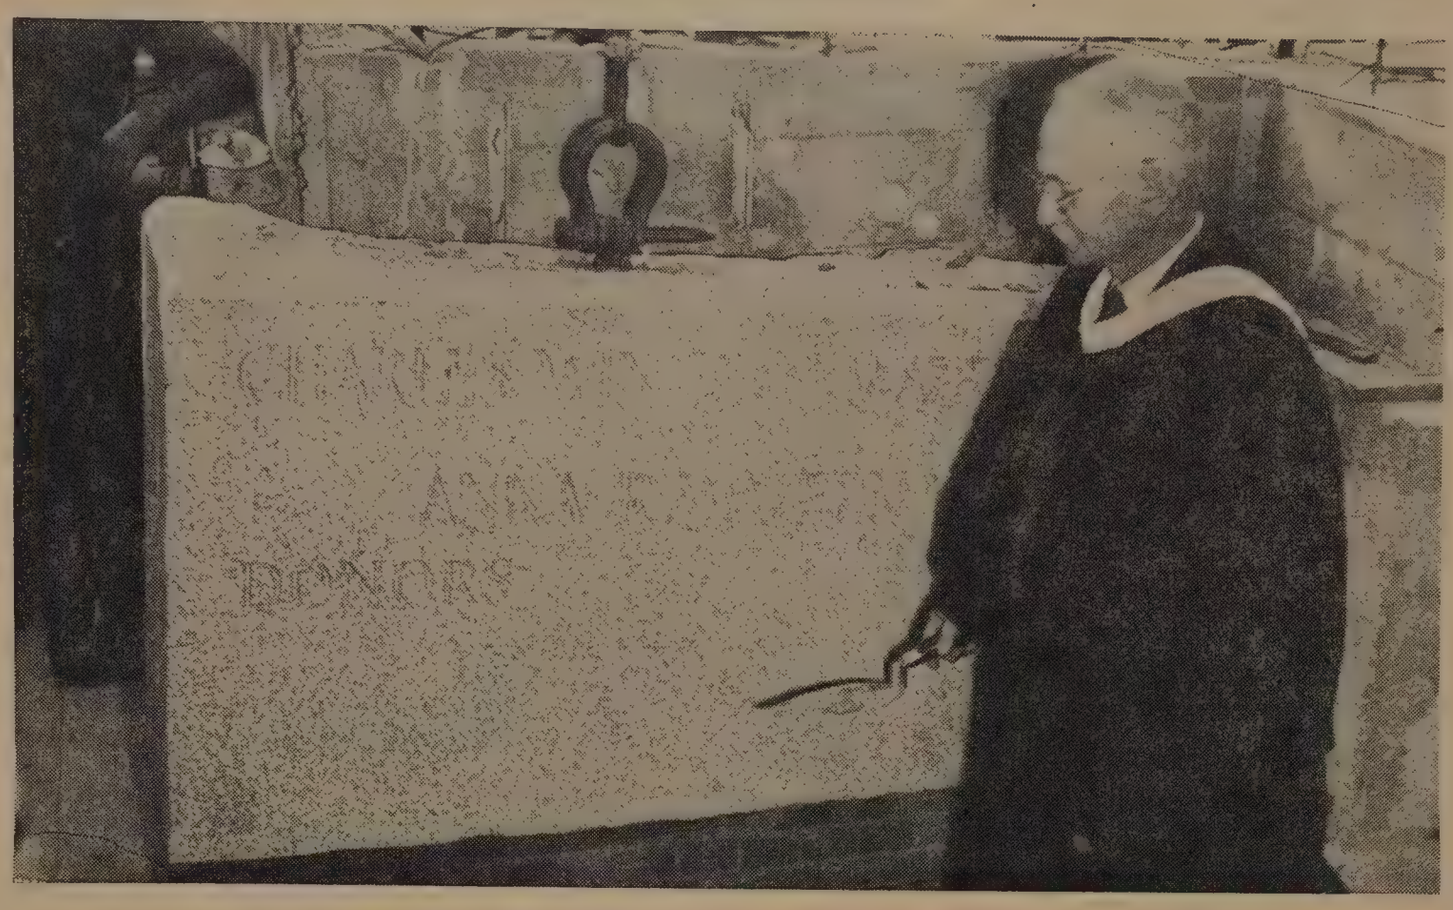
Seniors In Medicine To Have Long Year

Increase Is Needed As Progressive Step

Plans are now under way for the extension of the teaching in the fourth, or senior, year of the Medical College of the University of Vermont from thirty-two weeks to forty-four weeks, or from approximately eight months to eleven. Announcement of this expansion of the medical instruction at the University came recently from the office of Dean Hardy A. Kemp, of the College of Medicine, who stated that the plan will go into effect June 1, 1941.

"There is a strong and well-substantiated feeling in medical education," said Dean Kemp, that the rapidly increasing amount of knowledge and skills in the medical profession demand more time for study than is allowed for in the four years. In short, the four-year course of thirty-two weeks each is no longer adequate for the training necessary and available to the medical undergraduate and unless some plan is evolved for allowing a medical student full opportunity to acquaint himself as fully as possible with all of modern medical practice before he is thrust into it as an interne, it must be admitted that the medical schools are falling short of their duty."



Two Schools Have This Program

The new plan is not altogether an innovation, in that two other first-class medical schools are operating under the same program. New York University's Medical College, formerly known as the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, has been operating under this plan for some time.

"The underlying idea of the lengthening of the senior year," explained Dean Kemp, "is to arrange for a more orderly use of the medical student's time between the close of the third year and the beginning of his interneship. Investigation has shown that almost all medical students spend their summer between the third

Professor Lindsay Investigates Story

Writes Letter to Paper About Indian Article

Prof. Julian I. Lindsay of the University of Vermont English department, in a recently published letter to the literary supplement of the London Times, adds a word from Vermont to the scholarly investigation of a narrative appearing in a 14-volume work, printed by Whittingham and Wilkins of England, and now owned by the Billings Library of the University of Vermont. In the eighth volume of this publication of an English society, which appeared in England about 1863-64 and has since crossed the ocean to the Vermont library, there is an "Account of an Annual Religious Ceremony Practised by the Mandan Tribe of North American Indians," attributed to one George Catlin. Professor Lindsay furnishes in his letter information on the subject which is available in the 14-volume "Miscellanies of the Philobiblon Society," Vol. VIII of which includes Catlin's narrative.

Professor Lindsay has been for more than a year engaged in research for a History of the University of Vermont. The 14-volume "Miscellanies" to which he refers in his letter is part of a collection of 3,000 volumes, assembled and handed down by the famous Whittingham printing family of England, and given to the University of Vermont in 1899 by Benjamin Franklin Stevens, an alumnus of the class of 1857 and a famous bibliophile, who had married a daughter of the Whittinghams.

Professor Lindsay in his letter reveals that the fourteen volumes of the "Miscellanies of the Philobiblon Society" once belonged in part to Lord Delamere, a member of that Society and a great personage in England of that period. Coming into the possession of Charles John Whittingham, they were added to the Whittingham Collection, the nucleus of which has been called "one of the best printer's libraries in Europe." (Arthur Warren, "The Charles Whittinghams Printers," N. Y., Grolier Club, 1896.)

Mr. Briggs in Charge of Military Registration

Mr. Alton Briggs will replace Mr. Sabin Abell as registrar in charge of the University registration for military service on October 16 according to an announcement made recently by Dean Swift. The change is being made because objection was raised by the City Clerk to Mr. Abell's appointment because he is a Reserve Officer.

Mortar Board Has Breakfast Meeting

A breakfast meeting of Mortar Board was held Sunday morning at Kappa Alpha Theta house. At this meeting plans were discussed for the coming year. Mortar Board will donate a cup to Student Union to be awarded for scholarship.

Mrs. Fowler, vice-president of Mortar Board National Council, will be a guest of the local chapter Saturday and Sunday. While she is here there will be a tea given for the past members of Mortar Board.

Non-Sorority Women Form Permanent Group

A large number of the Independent women on the campus attended their meeting held in the Fleming Museum, Monday evening, October 14, at 7.30 o'clock. This organization, which is new on the Vermont campus, at its second regular meeting of the year discussed the plans to be made to form a permanent group to meet the social needs of those women not belonging to a sorority. It was stressed that as the organization is only in the making that all the women should come and help organize so as to have it representative of what they want.

There will be a meeting of all those college men interested in reforming the Newman Club at 368 Main St., Sunday night at 8.00.

Physical Directors Attend Conference

Miss Cummings Present At New York Meeting

Miss Eleanor Cummings, head of the women's physical education department, attended over the week-end the meeting of the Eastern Society of Physical Directors of College Women, held at the American Women's Club in New York City. The Deans of Women of the different girls' colleges were also invited, so that a joint conference could be held.

Discussions were centered about the great possibilities for cooperation between the Dean's Office and the Physical Director's Office in helping the American college girl to obtain all she can from school.

Friday night a large banquet was held at the American Women's Club, and Dr. J. B. Nash, of N. Y. U., was the speaker. He discussed the great need of being prepared in every way for national defense—physically, mentally, emotionally.

Miss Cummings visited the physical education departments at Barnard College, where she watched several outdoor games of deck tennis and volleyball, and Columbia University, where in the Teachers College she saw Dr. Norma Schwenderer directing a group in Dutch folk dancing.

The schedules for winter sports will be posted soon, so everyone watch the bulletin board. Sophomore girls may elect their winter gym in any sport they choose.

The girls in the tennis tournament are requested to play off their matches the first part of this week, so that the semi-finals may get under way.

Charlotte Perkins Speaks On America

The Collegium meeting Sunday evening opened with the singing of negro spirituals led by Ellen Howe '44.

The speaker of the evening was Miss Charlotte Perkins, an alumna of the class of '38. Her topic was "God Blessed Americans," in which she emphasized the blessings bestowed on Americans with their democracy, and she urged all Americans to show more cooperation and to work to maintain our democracy. At the conclusion of her talk she read several selections from "The Prophet," by Kahlil Gebrun.

After the meeting refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

THERE WILL BE a meeting of the W. A. A. Council, Tuesday evening, at 7.15 at Southwick.

Homecoming Events Draw Large Number Of U.V.M. Alumni

Waterman Cornerstone Laying Big Feature Of Week-end Festivities

The Alumni Homecoming of 1940 is one that will not soon be forgotten either by the alumni or the students. Packed with fun and excitement, it was one of the most successful homecomings in U. V. M.'s history.

Festivities started Friday night with the gala Music Box Revue, which was repeated on Saturday night and acclaimed by a capacity audience to be one of the best shows ever to be sponsored by U. V. M. Under the able leadership of Mrs. Isabelle Y. Gallup, and directed by Win Danielson, of Paramount, a cast of nearly a hundred gave their all for the show and had such a wonderful time doing it that they were sorry when it was over.

Originality Shown in Revue

Things got off to a rather embarrassing start when Interlocutor William Lockwood had to explain that Professors Myrick and Tupper had developed a case of cold feet at the last minute and refused to black up, but their places as end men were amply filled by "scrub women" Dan Johnson, Jr., Elliot Cox, Prof. Hovey Jordan, Warren Austin, Jr., Johnny Potas and Dick Folsom, who started the first part of the program with a Tambourine Overture, assisted by the singing Alumni Ministrels. Soloists in Part I were Seth Johnson, that old negro policeman from the deep South, singing "Alexander's Ragtime Band"; "I Dream of Jeanie," by Tommy Malone; Banjo Selections by Warren Austin, Jr.; "Down on the Farm" by Dan Johnson; "You Tell Me Your Dream,' by Prof. Albert Blume, assisted by the Alumni Quartet, Tommy Malone, Harold Mayforth, Harry Gallup and F. A. Clough; and Sally Clark in two intricate tap dances. Mopey and Dopey told in a touching duo why they love their alma mater, after which they ended Part I by comparing their poetic ability with that of Elliott Cox and Robert Dalton.

Part II bore the caption, "Anything Can Happen"—and a little of everything did. A beautiful Chinese scene introduced by the singing and dancing Alumnae Magazine Girls, featured Marjorie Southworth, Betty Cole, Earlene Jenness, and a chorus of dancers. Later the scene changed to Spain for a Spanish dance by Arthalene Smith Rogers, and song by Marjorie Southworth, and a visit from that renowned bull who loves the flowers,

Prof. P. A. Moody Perfects Technique

Sensitive Tests Used To Distinguish Mice

Prof. Paul A. Moody of the department of zoology is the author of an article, on original research in the August, 1940 issue of the Journal of Immunology This research forms part of an extensive program of serological investigation on the relationships of rodents

The article describes the procedure in the experiment, and the conclusions drawn from the results of a technic developed from the Schultz-Dale test. The new technic, which Professor Moody perfected, was designed to fill the need for a more sensitive test to differentiate among the numerous species of white-footed mice within the genus Peromyscus, which was under examination in the course of studies of rodent relationships.

Mr. Johnson Leads New Aquarium Club

Will Meet at Museum To Study Tropical Fish

A new club, to be known as the Aquarium Club, whose object will be to study the many kinds of tropical fish, will hold its organizing meeting at the Fleming Museum on October 20 at 2.15 p.m. Mr. Howard Johnson, a Vermont graduate student, is to be the leader of the new group. Mr. Johnson's own aquarium with his private collection of tropical fish was recently placed in a hall of the museum.

The exchanging of ideas concerning the breeding, appearance and habitat of the interesting tropical fish will be one of the objects of the club. The organization will also buy the rare fish at wholesale costs for the purposes of study.

Mr. Johnson stated that aquarium clubs have become increasingly popular throughout the country. To zoology students tropical fish furnish excellent material to correlate with academic courses according to Mr. Johnson.

"The first balanced aquarium in the world is credited to a native Vermonter," Mr. Johnson stated. "It was owned by Mrs. Damon of Windsor, Vt., who got the idea in 1850 from an Englishman. Her aquarium was a quart jar containing a few plants, one tadpole and two tropical fish. From this modest beginning aquariums have become one of the country's most popular hobbies."

Mr. Johnson urged that all students or faculty interested in tropical fish attend the new club's first meeting on October 20.

Give and Let Live!

It's a football that is hurling through campus stadiums in American colleges, but in Europe it's a bomb! Realizing all the suffering and hardships that bombs cause, some schools and colleges throughout the nation have started a drive to enable American youth to dispatch their own ambulance fleet to war-torn Britain. Such a worthy enterprise should certainly receive the whole-hearted cooperation and support of the entire student body at Vermont.

Each institution, under the proposed plan, will carry on an individual campaign to raise from its own student body the $1,350 needed to purchase an ambulance which will bear the school's name. At Vermont such a large sum would be difficult to raise in a short time. However, if Vermont were to cooperate with another New England institution, we feel certain that the two could together raise the money needed for an ambulance.

Richard E. Wilbur, Yale '38, who is national chairman of the campaign at the headquarters of British-American Corps in New York City, said two weeks ago when the movement started that initial responses from the undergraduate councils of virtually all the schools approached indicated overwhelming enthusiasm for the drive.

"The youth of America can be expected to respond quickly to Great Britain's need for over 1,000 ambulances," Wilbur said. "I have just returned from meetings of undergraduate councils in several large colleges. They indicated a great deal of enthusiasm over this opportunity to 'do their bit' to help fill this critical need of a country fighting to defend the only concept of human decency that it and America can live by."

An ambulance on our campus would necessitate special planning in order to be effective. Such a drive could be instigated by the men's and women's honorary societies, but it would demand the whole-hearted support of every Vermont student. Some social function might be given from which the proceeds might go to the fund; dormitory students might go without their dessert a few times; every student might give up the price of the two movies which he generally would attend during a two-week period or all U. V. M. students could voluntarily contribute to the fund.

With the increasingly more extensive bombing raids on Britain, the need for ambulances to carry the victims is becoming alarmingly more urgent. The comparatively few ambulances now in Britain are unable to take care of the many calls that are received.

While British youth are struggling to avoid hurling bombs, we American students sit in big stadiums and yell and cheer over a hurling football. Why don't we who are so fortunate do something constructive now to help the British? Why don't we help in the drive to buy ambulances for Britain? Why not give and let the bomb-ridden British live?

Tropical Fish

A new club is being organized at Vermont on Sunday for the purpose of studying tropical fish as a hobby. Under the leadership of a graduate student, the "Aquarium Club," as it is temporarily named, will have money and facilities available for the members, whose headquarters will be located in the Fleming Museum.

Such a club will, undoubtedly, appeal to many students at the University. It will have an educational value in addition to the opportunity it will afford all students who are interested in tropical fish as a hobby.

Senior Medics

and fourth years in association with hospital or clinical groups. While the work done under such conditions is undoubtedly of considerable value, at the same time it is in no instance correlated with the teaching plan for the fourth year and in some cases works to a disadvantage as far as the student is concerned.

"The present plan at Vermont, then, is one based solely upon the idea of taking full advantage of the clinical training available to our students. The only difference, as far as their own personal programs are concerned, would simply be that the time they would ordinarily spend in other hospitals between their third and fourth years will now be turned over to a more orderly and thorough presentation of the problems of clinical medicine."

In Keeping With Progress

The Medical College dean stated that such a move, as far as the Medical College is concerned, is entirely in keeping with progress in medicine and in medical education. It is his belief that the University administration and Medical College, in taking this step, once more give every indication of their well-established feelings for a progressive policy in the medical school. It is apparent to those who are in close touch with medical progress, according to Dean Kemp, that other medical schools will shortly make arrangements of this sort.

"Whether they are swift or slow about making this change would make no difference as far as the policy of the University of Vermont Medical College is concerned," he asserted. "It is quite apparent that modern medicine has progressed and is progressing to the place where more of the colleges' time must be given to it."

Dean Kemp made it clear that this move is not to be construed as having any connection with speed-up plans for the national defense.

"There has been some agitation in a few isolated instances," he said, "for a shortened medical curriculum, the idea being to provide the national defense with more physicians than might be available at this particular time. Such agitation has come from the most uninformed circles. The present number of trained physicians is entirely adequate for the national defense and it is therefore not to be expected that the medical schools will engage in any speed-up plan for the production of undertrained physicians."

Dean Kemp pointed out that the lengthening of the senior year is altogether in keeping with changes that have come in medical education. A number of years ago the medical course was a matter of only a few months. Later these months were lengthened into years. Still later, college preparation was required until, at the present time, the medical course including college preparation is a matter of at least seven years. The present extension of the senior year to a year-around basis is an extension of this same development.

Prof. Heicher to Speak At First I. R. C. Meeting

The International Relations Club will hold its initial meeting of the year at Southwick on Wednesday, October 16, at 7.30 p.m. Following their policy of having as the first guest speaker the new political science professor, the club has invited Professor Heicher to speak. An open forum will be held after the meeting. Anyone interested in becoming a member is urged to attend the meeting and bring twenty-five cents dues for the semester.

AT THE THEATRES

By "Mac"

"The Westerner," starring Gary Cooper, and now playing at the Flynn, shows us, among other things, an old-fashioned saloon—a replica of that infamous liquor dispensary in which Judge Roy Bean of Texas held his court and ruled as the sole law west of the Pecos. Among the many drinks served in this barroom is the Bean specialty, a fiery fluid then popular under the brand name of "Canada Rye." And Cooper had to drink much of it—though it didn't affect him much, but would colored water affect anyone very much? The exhibits on the bar shelf, however, were the real thing. Beer displayed was the one-half-of-one-percent "near beer" of our own dear departed Prohibition era. This brew, incidentally, costs about thrice the price of the genuine article of today.

"Dr. Kildare Goes Home," starring Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore, starting a three-day run Thursday at the Flynn, is another Gillespie-Kildare thriller—bigger and better than ever. Ayres plays Dr. Kildare more seriously than former stories, Barrymore barks orders and draws laughs, and Shelton, a new discovery who "arrived" with Lana Turner in "We Who Are Young," handles his character skillfully. Note—About one more picture should get the young "doc" married off to his pet nurse.

"Spring Parade," starring Deanna Durbin, and now playing at the Strong, is a top-notch feature. Among the standout elements are the music generally, the Durbin rendition of the famous Blue Danube Waltz, and the characterizations of S. Z. Sakall as the baker and Henry Stephenson as the Emperor Franz Joseph. Deanna has given us some fine productions in the past, is giving us an even finer one now, and promises to give us greater ones in the future.

"Calling All Husbands," with George Tobias, Lucile Fairbanks and Ernest Truex, playing at the Majestic Wednesday and Thursday, carries plenty of laughs, love and excitement. An old story of a meek little husband and a nagging wife, ending with a domineering husband and a meek little wife. Fiction is stranger than truth, it seems!

"The Quarterback," featuring Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell, Walter Frawley and others, opens at the Majestic Friday night for two days. This is a snappy little football picture. It is interesting to note that the Trojans (U. S. C.) and the Bruins (U. C. L. A.) opposed each other in this show. During production the Trojan coach noticed that several of their pet plays were stopped cold by the Bruins; thus the Trojans were forced to think up some new plays for the forthcoming season. Let's see how they come out when they really go into battle.

Colby Mules Beat Catamount Team In Homecoming Game

Many Alumni Watch Their Alma Mater Lose In Last Half, 10-7

Before a large contingent of Vermont alumni the University of Vermont eleven went down to a 10-7 defeat at the hands of the hard-charging Colby Mules, who, although handicapped by the loss of their highly touted captain, Johnny Daggett, who sustained a fractured collar bone in the early minutes of the game, managed to push over one touchdown and score a field goal while limiting the Catamounts to only one touchdown, which came midway in the second quarter.

The opening kick-off was received by Captain Daggett, who caught the ball but hesitated slightly, fumbling, and the pigskin was leaped upon by Reed of Vermont on the Colby 20-yard line. Four plays were run off in rapid succession but little gain was made and the ball was awarded to Colby on their own 18-yard line. On the third play Daggett sliced off tackle and almost succeeded in breaking into the open only to be brought down from behind by Misty Rice, Vermont blocking back in a jarring tackle which resulted in an injury that will undoubtedly keep him out of the line-up for the balance of the season. Undaunted by this blow, the down-staters rolled down to the Vermont 12-yard line where a pass from LaFleur to Helin, easily the outstanding man on the field, netted 8 yards, putting the ball on the Vermont 4-yard line, where the Vermont line held for three plays but on the fourth Scioletti carried the ball over for a touchdown, followed by Loring's place kick which split the uprights, making the score read Colby 7, Vermont 0.

The Vermont touchdown came late in the second quarter when after an exchange of punts Vermont took the ball on their own 32 where Spasyk passed to Taylor who snatched the ball from the fingertips of Wendell Brooks, Daggett's successor, and dashed down the sidelines, evaded LaFleur, Colby safety man, by a neat reverse of field and crossed the goal line standing up and then Taylor dropped back and executed a beautiful placement for the extra point and the score stood at the half Vermont 7, Colby 7.

TOUCHDOWN—RUN

After the rest period Taylor kicked off to Colby and after a series of downs in which Vermont saw very little of the pigskin so deceptive were the Mules, Colby drove downfield for its second marker. Starting on the Vermont 34-yard line Bob LaFleur, Colby halfback, sparked the drive that brought the ball up to the 15, where Loring's placement was good for 3 points, putting the Mules in the van 10-7, which proved to be the winning margin.

The game then see-sawed back and forth until the closing minutes when a desperate Vermont attack carried to the Colby 8-yard line, where a double lateral touchdown play was broken up by Helin, closing the door to a Vermont victory.

Vermont should not be embittered at this defeat by Colby, an outstanding small college team of New England, and could they have capitalized a bit more on their breaks they might have pulled the game out of the fire, although the Maine boys must have felt the loss of their truly great climax runner, Johnny Daggett.

Defensively, Misty Rice and Swede Carlson were stalwarts in the Vermont cause, the former for his great backing up of the line, while the latter made himself a continual nuisance in Colby's backfield. Capt. Frankie Taylor, although hindered by a bad leg cramp which caused his downfall on one touchdown run, exhibited much better form than that shown in earlier games this season and can be expected to show plenty of his old-time skill in the remaining games. In Colby's cause LaFleur's great passing and ball carrying, coupled with Scioletti's punting and Helin's fine all-around play which marked him as one of the finest ends seen here in recent years, gave Colby a slight edge over Vermont manpower.

Dartmouth Runners Defeat Frosh Team

The frosh cross-country bowed to Dartmouth in their initial contest, which helped save face for the visitors, after their white-washing at the hands of the varsity.

Burnham of Dartmouth circled the course of over three miles in 17:01, to take first, while his teammate, Morse, clinched second in 17:09. Goodie Goodell, wearing the Green and Gold finished third, but a second later. Whiting and Blair of Dartmouth took fourth and fifth in 17:25 and 17:33, respectively. Bob Lockwood of U. V. M. completed the grind in 17:35 for sixth, and Jack Grant, also a Vermonter, placed seventh in 17:48.

The frashman hill-and-dalers have slightly less than two weeks to prepare for their encounter with the Vermont Aggie aggregation. The squad's defeat should not be accepted as a criterion of the future, for with seasoning, they should develop favorably.

Living Up to Expectations

Well, Vermont was warned that Colby had a fast eleven, and it wasn't a groundless rumor. Even without Daggett, their much-heralded captain, the Mules seemed to be doing all right Saturday. Two backs, LaFleur and Hayward, whom all the advance reports forgot to mention, were getting in the Catamount's hair all afternoon. All in all, Colby lived up to expectations.

For a team picked by many to lose by two touchdowns, Vermont didn't do so badly either. That last quarter march was a heartbreaker. Too bad that lateral play went wrong—then again it's all part of the game.

Most cheering note of the afternoon was Frankie Taylor's brilliant running. We don't think we've seen him in better form since his sophomore year. Taking a pass out in the open he raced sixty yards, reversing his field and throwing his last pursuer out of stride just before crossing the goal line. It was a typical Taylor run.

So far as we can see the Cats gave the Mules a good run for their money. In fact they came pretty darn close to taking them over. Only Colby's alertness and hard playing kept Vermont from a second score. We would have liked, however, to see better blocking on the part of the Catamounts. There were times during the afternoon when the Cats' ball toters were actually impeded by their own interference. A fundamental weakness such as this ought to be cleared up quickly or else it will be cropping up in every game.

Random Shots

Rice did some of the most efficient defensive work of the afternoon for Vermont. . . . Larry Gardner was in evidence well-tanned by the suns of Cuba. . . . The cheerleading squad, it seems, is going big time. That new pyramid trick of theirs is certainly a wow. . . . Whitey Killick, the man behind the loudspeaker, had considerable help from the spectators in calling plays. On several occasions he was firmly informed by the crowd that "so-and-so" had not made the tackle. . . . Herb Long got off one of the prettiest runs of the afternoon just at the end of the second half. . . . In the second quarter, LaFleur goes back to punt and slips for a considerable loss. Comment from the stands—"Yehendi get out of there." . . . The Cats should be due for a comeback next week.

Cross-country or the Webster Boys

It's getting so that every time we sit down to write about cross-country we have to mention the Webster brothers—Fred and Charlie (reading from left to right). Lately Fred has been making the news. Reports have it that Charlie waited around the Aggie building, Saturday, until Fred showed up and then the two sprinted for the tape. Fred hung up a new record.

With two victories already tucked away, the harriers seem to be due for a great season.

[And if this column seems as dry as yesterday's toast, blame a blue Monday for it. Things always look lifeless on Monday—lifeless as soiled laundry—even a bright column such as this is (not).]

Catamount Harriers Outrun Dartmouth

Fred Webster Sets New Course Record

The Green and Gold harriers, fresh from their first victory, swept onward to batter a strong Dartmouth team into submission with a score of 24-31. With Fred Webster taking the lead half way around the four-mile circuit, the Big Green was outclassed, although Fred Webster '41, Sid Bull, Dartmouth, and Charlie Webster hit the tape almost simultaneously.

In the last half mile Charlie Webster took the lead, being 50 yards ahead of the nearest competitor. He nonchalantly waited at the corner of Morrill Hall, with about 20 yards yet to cover, for his brother. Hands clasped, they made an effort to finish together; however, Charlie could not respond to the terrific pace and Fred sped away, annexing first but a second before Bull, while Charlie took third.

However, the race was not decided, since the victory depended on the men yet to finish. Bud Hoyt, a Vermont sophomore, helped settle the issue by taking fourth. Harmon, the second Dartmouth man to finish, placed fifth. Capt. Frank Livak '41 applied the coup de grace by copping sixth, fourteen seconds later, while Merle Crowne, who trailed at the last half mile, nosed out Gibbons for seventh.

The results of the varsity were:

1. F. Webster (V) 21:35
2. S. Bull (D) 21:36
3. C. Webster (V) 21:37
4. J. Hoyt (V) 22:11
5. P. Harmond (D) 22:33
6. F. Livak (V) 22:47
7. Trudeau (D) 23:12

G.M.J.C. Defeats Frosh Football Team

Kittens Swamped 13-0 In Second Game of Year

Despite undaunted fighting and plugging, the U. V. M. freshman football aggregation received its second setback this season by a more seasoned and developed Green Mountain Junior College eleven. The final whistle tolled a 13-0 defeat for the Kittens.

Early in the first period the Green Mountaineers moved steadily down the field to score. The attempt to convert for the extra point failed.

In the third quarter G. M. J. C. took the advantage of a freshman fumble to score again, this time the pigskin hitting its mark for the extra point.

In view of the fact that the freshman eleven are rapidly improving and with the return of Nate Pulde, Herb Sedlis and Lenny Kunken, who were unable to play in the G. M. J. C. game on account of a religious holiday, the prospect of finishing the season with all victories is highly auspicious.

The Kittens who started this game were:

Paul Walgren, l.e.
Bishop McGill, l.t.
Chassy Smith, l.g.
F. X. Eddy, c.
F. X. Eddy, r.g.
Johnny Baxendale, r.t.
D. Barry, r.e.
Charlie Pacini, q.b.
T. Lewkowicz, l.h.b.
Johnny Reed, r.h.b.

College Group Party

All members of the Methodist College Group are invited to a party at the Community Y. M. C. A., Thursday, October 17, at 7.30 p.m. Barbara McIntosh '41 and N. Stoddard '42 are in charge.

Sunday twenty members of the Outing Club hiked up Camel's Hump to see what they could see. They were well rewarded.

Next Sunday there will be an overnight hike to Butler, headed by Daan Zwick '43. It's sure to be the best of the season and it's worth the dollar and the cup you bring. So come along and carry your blanket or blankets with you. There's food, heat, cabin, mountain and scenery waiting for you and wanting to be appreciated.

The S. A. E. house was a scene of much activity Saturday afternoon when it welcomed many distinguished, or on the way to being distinguished, alumni at their tea dance and after-the-game festivities. Among those who returned were Walter Augustenovich '40; A. Tomasetti; P. Patch '40 and R. Locke from McGill Medical School; E. Burlando from Harvard Business College; R. Peggs of St. Lawrence; and G. McLeod of U. S. C. Their tea dance was chaperoned by Professor and Mrs. Pond and in charge of J. Noble '43 and P. Sundberg '43.

A formal induction is to be held for the T. E. P. pledges on Sunday, October 20, when all the pledges will be formally installed and freshman officers chosen. The Phi Sigma Delta house is delaying its meeting of pledges for the purpose of electing officers, until they feel the pledges have time to know one another. At all the other houses meetings were held on Monday night, at which the pledges were present.

ALL JUNIORS—men and women—are requested to make their appointments for Ariel photographs immediately. Sign up at the table opposite the Y. W. Room in the Old Mill, or call Stanley Pike, Tel. 947, or Nancy Goodwin, Tel. 3083. Pictures will be taken all next week.

Ferdinand, introduced by John Gallup, and then to Holland where Jane Johnson and Andy Gallup serenaded a dozen Dutch dancers by a little Dutch mill. Once we were even transported to the sea shore where Inman Reed and Dick Folsom were bathing with their glamorous girl friends, Dan Johnson, Jr. and Johnny Potas.

After the donation of presents (kisses, peanuts, and eggs) to the audience by some of the girls and boys, Eleanor Clerkin Dalton put her Ladies' Home Guard through a military drill, followed by baton twirlers Marie Lanou, Carol Provost and Peggy Durfee. The Village Choir, including Prof. Albert Blume, Tommy Malone, Harry Gallup and Seth Johnson rendered a touchingly beautiful hymn, followed by Prof. George Millikan's rich baritone in "Ol' Man River," and the riotous "Two Gobs on the Loose" by Potas and Folsom. After the presentation of bouquets to Mrs. Bailey, for the President, and to Mrs. Gallup for her splendid work in organizing the show, the entire audience joined the Alumni Minstrels in the grand finale, "God Bless America."

The group numbers, including the Chorus, Dutch and Chinese Girls, Magazine Girls, Presents Boys and Girls, Military Girls and Men featured the following: Mildred Akins, Marie Aldrich, Ruth Baxendale, Anne Barrette, Alice Brock, Jane Reed, Mae Rowell, Betsy Bacon, Ruth Boelson, Joyce Bone, Barbara Butler, Jean Finney, Gail Klinger, Morna Lang, Ginny Mitchell, Charlotte Scott, June Swanson, Miggy Warner, Doris Welsh, Sally Clark, Dorothy Cowen, Eleanor Dalton, Theresa Fayette, Anna Greene, Theresa Mimeau, Arthalene Rogers, Loris White, Keith Calkins, John Goss, Robert Goss, Ernest Stockwell, Alexander Warren, Tobey Churchill, George Kidder, Benjamin Ladd, Frederick Reed, Hubert Rogers, Lyman Rowell, Harry Stevens, Paul Stevens, Edward Erwin, Arthur Tudhope, Robert Fyfe, Rudolph Pappas, Bernard Hill, Taze Huntley, Christian Gronbeck, James Pickett, Carl Scofield and Stanley Quintin.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Tri-Delts gave a shower for Jean Butler Pye '40 on October 7.

Carol Westall '40 and Ruth Seaver '40 were week-end guests at the Tri Delt House.

Chaffee Laid Cornerstone

Another high spot in the gala week-end was the impressive ceremony for the laying of the cornerstone of the new $1,250,000 Waterman Building. After a brief address by Thomas Cheney of Morrisville on the life of the man in whose memory this magnificent edifice is being erected, Newman K. Chaffee laid the stone of what is to be one of the largest, best equipped, most modern college buildings in northern New England. The group was then led by the R. O. T. C. Band and the Glee Clubs in "Champlain," and the chaplain pronounced the benediction.

The next big event of the afternoon was the Colby-Vermont football game, at which U. V. M. showed forth that real fighting spirit for which she is famous, and although our team was defeated by a score of 10-7, it was a great game with plenty of thrills and excitement. In the Dartmouth-Vermont cross-country run, Vermont came out victorious (with a score of 24-31).

Fraternities Hold Dances

The fraternities held tea dances after the game in honor of the returning alumni and new pledges, and these were followed by the second performance of the Music Box Revue.

Festivities were brought to a close on Sunday afternoon with the first coffee hour at Southwick, sponsored by the Sophomore Aides and a vesper service at which the Rev. E. Leslie Pidgeon of Montreal was the guest speaker.

Touch Football Starts This Week

Archie Post Releases Interfraternity Rules

Now that school is well under way, the entire student body, fraters, pledges and independents alike, are looking forward to the coming interfraternity touch football contest. The inaugural game, between Lambda Lota and Phi Sigma Delta, takes place this afternoon on the rear campus field at 4.10 p.m. The remainder of the first division schedule is as follows: October 18, S A E vs. Delta Psi; October 24, Phi Delta Theta, bye, first round vs. winner of today's game; October 25, Tau Epsilon Phi, bye, first round vs. Winner of October 18 game; November 1 (semi finals), winner of October 25 game vs. winner of October 24 game. In the second division we have A T O vs. the Independents on October 17; October 22, Sigma Nu, bye, first round vs. Sigma Phi, bye, first round; October 29, Kappa Sigma, bye, first round, vs. winner of October 17 game; December 31 (semi finals), winner of October 29 game vs. winner of October 22 game. On a date to be announced, the winner of the November 1 game in the first division will play the winner of the October 31 game in the second division for the championship.

All those participating in this event will be interested in the rules governing this contest, since they must be strictly adhered to at all times. The rules are as follows:

I. Eligibility.
(See rules of eligibility contained in the Intramural Handbook. Your house president and your intramural councilman each has a copy.)
II. Rubber-soled shoes must be worn.
III. Shirts of contrasting colors shall be drawn from the physical education towel room by your team manager prior to game time, and returned to the towel room by him promptly after the game.
IV. Games shall start at 4.10 p.m. on days scheduled, and shall be played on the back campus field. Any team not ready to play on time shall forfeit the game.
V. The trophy (see Intramural Handbook for list of trophies).
VI. An entrance fee of $1.00 is required of every fraternity competing in touch football, and is due and payable to the director prior to participation.

ARCHIE POST,
Director of Intramural Sports.

The Pi Phis are having a Bridge and Fashion Show at Southwick, October 19, at 2.00 o'clock. Refreshments will be served. Student admission thirty-five cents.

U.V.M. Represented At Student Union Conference In Pa.

Laura Hawley '41 and June Hoffman '43 Go to Allegheny College

Laura Hawley '41 and June Hoffman '43 will leave Thursday, October 24, for Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa., where they will attend a conference of the Women's Intercollegiate Association. They will be gone about four days.

This conference is attended by representatives of about fifty women's colleges in the East and South. Laura Hawley attended the conference last year as representative of the University of Vermont, and was elected secretary for the present year. President is Mary Whipple of Allegheny College, and the treasurer is Nancy Sage of Blair College.

The purpose of this conference is to discuss problems of student government. Each representative tells about the program of government in her college, and they are all compared. At the conference last year the foreign situation was discussed, but this year, the entire meeting will be devoted to student union problems. Some of the major topics to be discussed are the "honor" system, the problem of town girls, the cooperation of the students, and the activities and influence of student government.

The first annual conference was held thirty-three years ago at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., and those attending at that time were charter members. The purpose, as set forth, was to unify student government in the United States and to discuss its relations to national and international problems.

Last year the conference was held at Hood College, and some of the important speakers were the President of Hood College, who was hostess, Dr. Olive Rettry, David Pauper and Lord Marley, a member of the British House of Lords, as guest speaker.

Vermont Faculty To Attend Convention

Engineering Staff Will Go to Connecticut

Seven members of the Engineering College faculty at the University of Vermont are planning to attend the annual fall meeting of the New England Section, Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, which convenes at the University of Connecticut in Storrs this Saturday, October 19. Dean George F. Eckhard of the Engineering College will be in the delegation, which also includes Prof. James A. Bullard, Prof. Roy O. Buchanan, Prof. Arthur D. Butterfield, Prof. Harry L. Daasch, Prof. Edd R. McKee and Prof. Howard G. Millington.

The morning session of the Storrs meeting will be occupied with conferences, sections discussing problems of chemical engineering, civil engineering, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, mathematics, economics and social studies, and English and engineering education.

Six Freshmen Have Odd Fifteen Dollar Vehicle

Just in case you've never seen a corporation on wheels—and running—it's time you took a trip to back campus, or just kept your eyes open around the hill. It's definitely worth the effort. The "corporation" under discussion might be called a "vehicle," and then again it might not. You can take your choice. If you have a good imagination, that leaves a lot of leeway.

The reason for its present perilous existence seems to have been to save the owners the trouble of walking to classes—and other places. And incidentally depriving U. V. M. of good track material. But that's beside the point. The point is that, three days after school started, six freshmen had an inspiration which led to a fifteen-dollar purchase. The purchase was a jallopy. Fifteen dollars didn't end the list of expenses. Six more dollars were squeezed together to pay for registering it, and three-fifty for much needed repairs. The car is supposedly owned by Paul Waldren, Lou Codding, and Tom Powell, but three more had to be added to the legion to pay for the registration—Bob Pulleyn, Dick Flynn, and Bill Shepard. They all got together on the timely decorations, and had a lot of fun doing it.

Accidents (don't crane your necks so hard) are apt to happen. The "corporation" isn't any exception to the rule! Once someone, in a fit of deviltry, decided the gas might go a little farther if water was added. It didn't work. And once there was a head on collision with a truck. This resulted in only two flat tires and a banged-up fender. But the thing that will remain an eternal mystery is how the "corporation," without any entangling associations whatsoever, managed to lose its wheel off twice. 'Ware the third time! Mayhe there's a little cement behind the rumour that shortly the valiant six might consider offering a bargain to the highest bidder.

Musical Organizations Elect New Officers

On Wednesday, October 16, the members of the Men's and Women's Glee Club chose their officers for the coming year.

Thomas Malone '41 and Paul Poulin '41 were chosen co-managers of the Men's Glee Club. An assistant manager, Mahlon Conner '44 was also chosen.

The Women's Glee Club elected Elizabeth Cole '41 as its president and Nora Hill '42 as its manager.

250 University Men Register For Draft

In accordance with the recent Congressional draft bill, registration of men falling in the proper categories took place over the entire country on Wednesday, October 16, 1940. Students, instructors, and professors at the University of Vermont, between the ages of 21 and 35, registered at the men's University gymnasium on this day.

Heading an efficient group which was in charge of registering at the gymnasium was Prof. Alton Briggs of the Commerce Department of the University. Working from 7 in the morning to 9 at night, the group registered a total of approximately 250 men. Although exact figures were not available at this writing, it is known that of this number most were directly affiliated with the University.

In frequent instances, students of this University, who live in Burlington permanently, did their registering elsewhere. This was done in the various ward registering places to which they were assigned.

Interfrat. Dance Saturday Nite 8:30

Fraternity Men and Pledges Admitted Free

Slated to be one of the finest informal dances of the year, the annual Interfraternity Dance will be held tomorrow night in the gymnasium from 8.30-12.00.

Each year the Interfraternity Council holds a dance in honor of the newly pledged fraternity men. Complimentary tickets will be distributed to the pledges through their fraternal organizations.

Music for this year's dance will be provided by a new formed, top-notch aggregation of Catamounts. Professor and Mrs. H. B. Bickford and Professor and Mrs. M. E. Witham will be the chaperons. In keeping with the spirit of the occasion, the gymnasium will be decorated with fraternity banners and colors.

The committee of Interfraternity Council members in charge of the dance are Bill Pye '41, chairman, Harry Noyes '41, Ed Guilbert '41, and Charles Kafzew '42

Staff and Sandal Elect New Slate of Officers

Staff and Sandal, junior women's honorary society, at their meeting Wednesday elected Joanna Metcalf '42 as presiednt, Helen Witham '42, secretary, and Barbara Butterfield '42, treasurer.

The society is going to serve on Sunday afternoon at a tea in honor of Mrs. Fowler, vice-president of Mortar Board Council, who is visiting the local chapter this week-end.

Educational Fraternity Initiates New Members

Last Wednesday night the Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa initiated R. O. Slack '41 and Hazen F. Wood '42 into membership in the fraternity. After the initiation proceedings a meeting of the chapter was held in the Education Office. Chubb Condict, a member of the Alpha Xi Chapter of Bucknell University, was guest speaker. Mr. Condict spoke to the brothers on life in Burma, where he was born and where he lived for many years, with particular emphasis upon the Burma Road, which is prominent in the news at the present time. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

An open meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa will be held in the Education Office on Wednesday evening, October 30, at 7.30 p.m. All Vermont men interested in any phase of education are invited to attend.

Twenty Students Take Pilot Course

Two Women Are Among Those Chosen for Course

Two girls will learn to fly in the Civilian Pilot Training Course being given this fall jointly by the University of Vermont and the Fli-Rite School of Aviation at the Burlington Municipal Airport. They are Norma M. Preston of Burlington, a junior, and Mary Eleanor Shandoff, Pittsfield, Mass., a senior. Eighteen men complete the enrollment of twenty. Rigorous physical examinations have been passed by the twenty, and they started ground work this week and will begin their actual flight instruction shortly. They must complete their training, and receive private pilots' licenses by January 15, 1941, when another flight class is due to start. Last year, the first of the civilian pilot training at the University, one class was trained, and during the summer another group found their wings.

The eighteen men selected for the flight training are Wayne R. Barrows, Burlington; Hiram O. Bevins, Milton; Clarence H. Brown, Rutland; John S. Burgess, Burlington; Carlo P. Domenichini, Readsboro; Frank D. Eddy, Burlington; Philip Eisenwinter, Winchester, Mass.; Donald F. Gearing, Bristol, Conn.; Ralph R. Goss, Burlington; Lyman C. Hunt, Jr., Burlington; Raymond Kallman, Woodmere, N. Y., Avery P. King, St. Albans; Frederick P. Logan, Springfield, Mass.; Curtis A. Moore, Londonderry; John A. Prybylo, North Walpole, N. H.; Myers J. Reynolds, III, Malone, N. Y.; James D. Sawyer, St. Albans; Donald M. Sheldon, West Springfield, Mass.

Three medical students are in the flying class, as well as seven seniors, eight juniors, and two sophomores from the academic colleges.

Fraternities Will Hold Tea Dances Saturday

The A. T. O. Fraternity are holding a tea dance at the house Saturday afternoon at 5.30. R. Thayer '42 is in charge, and Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell and Dr. and Mrs. H. Jordan will chaperon.

C. E. Corliss '42 is planning the Delta Psi tea dance which will be held at 5.00. Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond will be the chaperons.

The Kappa Sigma dance will be held from 6.00 to 8.00. Professor and Mrs. Kidder will chaperon the affair. P. E. Corley '41, R. L. Swift '43 and R. E. Hennessy '43 will make the arrangements.

The Sigma Phi tea dance will be under the direction of J. S. Burgess '42. Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter will chaperon the dance, which will last from 4.30 to 8.00.

Alpha Chi Omega Honor Founders

Alpha Chi Omega celebrated their Founder's Day and the tenth anniversary of the purchase of the sorority house Sunday evening. A supper was served by Margaret Wishart and Mary Germain to the active members and alumnae.

Miss Marjorie Perrin gave an interesting talk on the purchasing of the house and Joyce Bone played two violin selections. Chocolates were passed in honor of the recent marriage of Madeline Ainsboro to Robert Wellington Page. The program was followed by the traditional ceremony and a brief alumnae meeting.

T. Carpenter '44 pledged to the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, Monday night.

EDITORIALS

U. V. M. Alumnus Writes an Inside Story—

When a Vermont graduate and a former editor of the CYNIC writes a book it is news of special interest when the book is as good as S. Burton Heath's "Yankee Reporter." The 400-page volume, which was published last Tuesday, is an entertaining and vigorous account of the experiences of a "Vermont farm kid" who grew up and became the winner of last year's Pulitzer Prize. He was awarded the prize because of his distinguished service in compiling evidence against Judge Manton of the United States Supreme Court of Appeals which led to the imprisonment of the official.

"Yankee Reporter," which Professor Dean of the English department reviewed in Tuesday's Free Press, gives frank, authentic stories about important political and business leaders of America—Wendell Willkie, Mayor LaGuardia, Al Smith, and Thomas Dewey as a racket buster. In the opening sentence of the book Heath expresses his desire to return to Vermont and Lake Champlain on whose shores he wrote most of his autobiography last summer.

"Heath has a long, lean-jawed face, with questing eyes. He might in appearance be cast for the rôle of Sherlock Holmes. He is intelligent, persevering, painstaking, by nature an individualist, a reformer. In writing his book he has used a clear, vigorous, swiftly moving journalistic style that leaves no dullness. It is the fascinating and human story of a small-town boy who is swinging the trapezes in the big top but still would prefer to see green grass beneath him instead of sawdust," wrote Professor Dean in his review.

Newspaper reporting has played a large part in Burton Heath's forty-two years. As a school boy he wrote for the Bradford Opinion and later became the editor-manager of the Groton Times. He enlisted in the National Guard of Vermont at the age of nineteen and his war service brought him two wounds and two citations. In the "Yankee Reporter" Heath tells of his study at U. V. M. which, he says, taught him how to talk as well as write. Before Heath became famous as a World-Telegram reporter, he worked with the New Haven Bureau of the Associated Press and with the old New York Telegram.

We are proud that our distinguished alumnus has increased his fame and fortune this week by publishing his first book, "Yankee Reporter," which is being received with a large amount of praise as an "inside story" of the prominent men in contemporary New York history.

A "Jacking Up"—

Periodically complaints come to us about numerous things which Vermont students are or are not doing. The most recent complaint we've heard is that the majority of students here at Vermont are extremely careless and more or less indifferent about marring the appearance of the buildings on the campus by scribbling on the walls. Another citicism was made about the thoughtless way in which men dispose of their cigarette butts in the corridors of the Old Mill.

It should be pointed out that all the halls in the Old Mill were painted this past summer and it is strictly a high school trick to mar the walls by doddling. Visitors passing through the Old Mill get a most unfavorable impression of our college if they see corridor walls decorated not by paintings but by the initials and names of college men and women.

We have pointed out these two instances when we feel that Vermont students definitely need a "jacking up." We now appeal to the student body to cease from marring the walls of the buildings and to dispose of their cigarettes with care.

French Club Holds Initial Meeting

The French Club, now an honorary society of the University, held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday, October 1. At that time, the purpose of the club, and the constitution were clearly stated, and the new members were initiated.

Professor Doane, faculty advisor for the club, gave a short talk concerning the conditions confronting the people of France today.

June Hoffman read a very interesting letter which she had received from a friend in France. Refreshments were then served.

It is hoped that pictures by French artists will soon be exhibited at the Fleming Museum.

The Club will meet again next Tuesday night, at seven-thirty at Southwick, with Professor Myrick, head of the Romance Language department, as speaker of the evening. All members are urged to attend.

Large Reception Given For Y. M. C. A. Director

About 160 persons attended an informal reception held Tuesday evening from 8.00 to 9.00 o'clock at the Community Y. M. C. A. in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde G. Hess. Mr. Hess is the new general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and arrived here recently from Newton Center, Mass. After the reception, from 9.00 to 11.00 p.m., open house was held with members of Sigma Tau club showing visitors the facilities of the building. Exhibitions of badminton and swimming were put on by the members for the benefit of the guests. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. E. J. Spaulding.

Classical Club Holds Initiation for Six

The Classical Club met at the home of Prof. and Mrs. Prindle on Thursday, October 10.

A business meeting preceded the initiation of six new members. The new members are: L. Shores '42, S. Ziskind '43, H. Ginsberg '43, Alice Needham '43, Mary Butler '43 and Emma Abbot '43. The initiation took the form of identifying pictures from mythology.

After the initiation Latin songs were sung and various games played.

Scribes Review Book

"Thomas Wolfe" was the subject which Mr. O'Gara, graduate student in English, spoke on last night at The Scribes meeting held at Southwick Memorial. Prof. E. Merrick was present at the well attended meeting. Huddee Zwick '42 of Burlington was chairman. Refreshments were served.

There will be a short but important meeting of the University Players on Monday, October 21 at 4.15 in 1 N. College.

The Medical Admissions Committee would be very glad to have those premedical students who are in their third or fourth year and who wish to do so, take the Medical Aptitude Test whether they have taken it before or not.—HARDY A. KEMP, M.D., Dean.

There will be a meeting of all those college men interested in reforming the Newman Club at 368 Main St., Sunday night at 8.00.

Politics On Campus

Our campus has of late been buzzing with political dissension, and at long last the CYNIC has been made the central debating ground. It all started with an editorial which was assumed to be in favor of the Republican candidate. Letters have refused to let any stand be taken by the paper, and as a result the student body has awakened to politics and is resolved to be heard.

In a student opinion poll as to whether the CYNIC should take any active interest in politics by printing opinions on the issue, the majority seems to think that the more active interest, the better. Everyone approves heartily of having this opportunity of voicing and reading arguments on this timely topic. We quote a few specific answers given to our query on political leanings and the CYNIC's participation in the matter:

P. Healy '41—I think the CYNIC's active interest in this campaign is a good thing as so many students on the campus are eligible to vote. Around the part of the country where I'm from they're all for Willkie and so am I. We need a new and better man now.

Idora Cooley '41—It's a good thing to see students taking an active interest in such an important issue. As to my political leanings, I'd rather not say.

R. Hunting '41—My political favor goes to Roosevelt, because we really need an experienced politician in office in these times of stress.

Shirley Gray '41—I'm glad to see the students' interest in this big issue of the day. Personally, I'm all for Roosevelt. He's done a grand job so far. As for this third term and dictator talk, it doesn't hold water.

Laura Hawley '41—O dear, my roommate's such a staunch Democrat that I don't dare talk politics. I think Willkie is our man. He knows business and we've had enough New Deal trouble.

A. Kehoe '44—I'm all for the CYNIC's taking an interest in politics. I'm a Willkie-ite myself because it's a tradition in the family. That's not really my reason, though—I definitely think he's by far the better man.

Dr. Florence King to Be Nutrition Chairman

Dr. Florence King, new head of the home economics department at the University of Vermont, has been named chairman of a state-wide committee on nutrition, operating in connection with the National Defense Council. Other University faculty members belonging to this committee are Miss Lydia Tarrant, nutrition specialist; Dr. H. B. Pierce, professor of physiological chemistry in the Medical College; and Mr. J. H. Perry of the zoology department.

National in its scope, this nutrition program is to have committees in all states having land-grant colleges. It was initiated in Vermont by Dr. M. L. Wilson of the Federal Extension Service, nutrition adviser to Miss Harriet Elliot, consumer member of the National Defense Council. Miss Elliot asked Pres. Guy W. Bailey of the University of Vermont to set up a committee with a nucleus of University faculty members. Representatives from state organizations who are interested in nutrition problems are invited to become members. Already the Vermont Medical Association and State Public Health Association have been sent invitations to send representatives to the committee meeting, and other organizations will receive invitations in the future.

Telephone men know this piece of apparatus as the 108-A Amplifier. It is an "exploring amplifier," developed by Bell System engineers to identify pairs of wires in telephone cables—some of which contain as many as 4242 wires.

The cable man explores this mass of wires with the pencil-like probe. A tone sounding in the headphone tells him when he has found the right pair.

Ingenuity—special equipment—attention to details—play an important part in making your telephone service the clearest and fastest in the world.

Why not report "All's well" to the folks at home? Rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P.M. and all day Sunday.

Fantasy Overture—

As we turned the corner where the wind blows coldest at dear old Vermont, we met old "It's A. Hunch" and his pal, "Law of Averages," talking over the coming week-end. We sidled up to them and cautiously interviewed the two. This is what we got as answers to our questions:

1. Who will win Saturday, Vermont or Union?

"Wal," says old Hunch, "I figger that Union ain't so strong as Colby. I'm also figgering that Union ain't got that guy Hammerstrom this year. So Vermont should have a good chance to get in a win."

"Remember, too," says Law of Averages, "you can't keep a team down forever. The Cats after dropping two straight are bound to spring back on the victory heap sooner or later. Why not sooner?"

(We—"So you think Vermont will win?")

"Heck, no," says the cautious Hunch, "I just said Vermont had a good chance."

—In a Minor Key

2. Tell us more about Union.

"Wal, the Dutchmen have about sixteen lettermen in a squad numbering eighty-three men. Though not too flashy in beating Middlebury last week, they sport an undefeated record. The line-up is undecided as Coach Nitchman ain't a saying 'til game time who's starting. And that's all I know."

3. What about Vermont?

"Same as usual, I guess. Still working on those rough spots, still hunting for a winning combination.

(We—"Well, so far we haven't learned much. Come on shell out with some real dope.")

"Dag nab it and tarnation, quit pestering me. What do you think I am, a Messiah?"

Seeing that old Hunch was getting touchy we turned to Law of Averages, but that worthy individual was all wrapped up in a mess of statistics and muttering—"Now if team A beats team B, team C will be ten points better than D if team F doesn't"—

We left very hurriedly.

—Very Minor

And as we popped back around the corner again, the wind howled louder and louder. And our conscience (yes, we have one) started bothering us. "Look here, you can't kid your readers (quite a flatterer that conscience of ours) with that fake interview. Besides it doesn't say a thing."

"Oh, yeah," we shouted back. "Well, suppose you write them from now on."

"Thank you, but I have sunk low enough now without sinking lower." And the wind howled some more. [Exeunt omnes. Amen.]

This Sunday the Outing Club will sponsor a hike to the Stone Hut at the top of the Nose Dive. It's a grand chance to really get the lay of the land for the coming skiing season. The route will be up the trail by the Halfway House.

Daan Zwick '43 will be in charge and he really knows what he's doing because for several summers he has been the keeper of one of Mt. Mansfield's lodges. The price will be thirty-five cents and the truck will leave the gym at nine a.m. Don't forget your cup.

Frosh Gridsters Prepare For N. U.

The Kittens still undaunted by two previous setbacks, will leave for Northfield, October 25 to meet the Norwich Jayvees. To date, the frosh have been unable to score on any of their opponents, but it is hoped that a scoring punch will be developed by the time they meet the Cadets.

Coach Sherry Fogg was greatly impressed by their showing against Green Mountain Junior College last Saturday, but he claims there is still room for improvement, especially in the line where the blocking was poor.

There were no casualties suffered in the Green Mountain game, so that the frosh will meet Norwich at full strength.

The probable starting line-up will find Walgren and Barry at ends, Pulde and Sedlis or Baxendale at the tackles, Williams and Eddy at guards, and either Swift or Kehoe at the pivot spot. The backfield will be made up of Lewkowicz at quarter, Mayforth or Riddel at left halfback, Reed at right halfback, and Pacini at fullback.

Chuck Taylor World Champion Tells All

"I got the biggest thrill of my career the night they put the sweater on me that said 'World Champion.' That was with Buffalo." So said Chuck Taylor, famous basketball player and expert, when interviewed after his basketball clinic, Monday evening, October 7.

Chuck wsa born in Columbus, Ohio, in 1901. Because he doesn't stay put long enough, he hasn't been married yet.

He first started to play at a tender age—he doesn't remember when exactly, because "out there, as soon as you are born, they put a ball in your hand." Chuck attended public school in Columbus and played ball all the way through school. He played so well that when he got out of high school he went right into the professional ranks.

As he put it, "I played with Indianapolis, Detroit, New York, Buffalo, and anybody else that had any money." He neglected to say how he had played, that he had worked up through the ranks of basketball men until he became the basketball wonder of his day and finally a world-wide authority and expert on the game.

Chuck gave the impression of fame due to persistent striving to achieve his goal of basketball perfection and not through any desire for being in the public eye. Unless one knew him, one could never guess that this affable, unassuming man was tops in the world of basketball.

In 1921 he became associated with the Converse Rubber Company, and since then he has been endorsing their products and has been touring the country conducting basketball clinics for a living. He has never worked for another company or held a clinic under other sponsorship.

When asked to give a "golden rule" for basketball, Chuck said that it couldn't be done. But he tried to give a few rules. The main thing in the game is to "keep relaxed, be able to catch the ball, run with the change of pace, and throw the ball into the holes at each end of the floor." The main thing for anyone to do is to get in shape. Basketball, he said, is the most strenuous game there is besides ice hockey.

The biggest faults of beginners are not being able to catch the ball because of nervousness and over-anxiety and not understanding how to conserve their strength. Correction of these comes gradually with experience.

Asked what he thought of Vermont and the University grounds, he said, "It's a very beautiful place. I drove around about 7:00." He laughed. "But I really would like to live in Burlington during the summer time."

When asked how he would improve the game, Chuck replied that he would bring the center jump back. "It has evils, admittedly, but the present system has more. Basketball, as it is played today, is the only game in which a team is penalized for being good; that is, the team that makes a basket loses the ball. Also it wears the boys down and is too much of a strain for any player.

"You can quote me on this, too! The elimination of the center jump has opened the game so wide that coaches don't have to know too much about basketball. They can let the boys run harum-scarum, so that a lot of weak coaching is covered up."

Catamounts Get Ready For Undefeated Union Eleven

Union Not Defeated Since 1938 Season

Rebounding after a tough 10-7 defeat at the hands of the Colby Mules the Vermont footballers are practicing with renewed vigor this week in preparation for their coming tilt this Saturday with an undefeated Union College team at Schenectady.

Union lacks Sam Hammerstrom, the main cog in their great machines of 1938 and 1939, and should not be as tough as in those two years, although a new figure appears on the front in the form of Jack Vannier, veteran halfback, who is capably filling Hammerstrom's large shoes as an offensive whirlwind. Union bases a great number of their plays on line crashing and a place where Vermont has so far this season seemed quite vulnerable. The Schenectady lads have not lost a game since 1938; last year including among the seven victories was a 19-6 win over Vermont and so far this year they have vanquished Haverford 19-6, Hobart 19-0 and Middlebury 13-6.

One heartening result of the Colby contest was the sparsity of injuries. With the exception of a few minor cuts and bruises, which will clear up before Saturday, no complaints of any sort were filed. Harold Wood will return to his guard post and the entire squad is in excellent physical condition.

The glaring fault in Vermont's offense last Saturday was the slip-shod manner in which the plays were carried out; blocking was lacking and the time was poor. Work is being stressed on these errors and the scrimmages should iron out the remaining weaknesses.

Thus far in the season Vermont has had only mediocre results with one win and two losses, but with plenty of material, reserves and power the Catamounts should chalk one up on the winning side of the ledger, especially since the rebirth of Capt. Frank Taylor, who played a great game against Colby and is exhibiting all his old talent.

Women in Sports

The Tennis Club ran off several mixed doubles matches last Monday afternoon at 4.30.

Theresa Coderre '43 and P. Sutton '43 defeated Dorothy Arnault '44 and Barbara Webb '44 by a score of 6-3. Polly Clark '44 and A. Duque '44 beat Priscilla Perkins '44 and R. Pope '44 in a close match of 7-5. Jane Wray '42 and H. Hurst '44 were defeated by Louise Johnson '44 and C. Barber '43. More mixed doubles will be played again on next Monday.

Saturday morning at 10.30 there will be a Hockey Sports Day for High Schools. Six high schools have been invited: Burlington, Bristol, Essex Junction, Milton, Richmond and Stowe.

The girls will play games in round-robin style and will be coached rather than play for competition. A discussion of the rules will precede the game.

Green and Gold hockey practice will be held at 4.15 on Monday and Tuesday afternoons. This practice is to pick out the Green and Gold honorary varsity, and advanced players must come on Monday, rather than at their usual time.

The Waubanakee Country Club has offered a special rate on greens fees to students of the University. The price will be 35c, except on Saturday and Sunday. Girls are required to get a slip from Physical Education Department before they go to the Country Club.

W. A. A. will give a Demonstration Night at Southwick on Thursday, October 24. About five sports will be demonstrated and the managers will give short talks on them. It is hoped that many freshmen will attend.

Middlebury College has invited University of Vermont girls down on October 25 for a Play Day. These Play Days, which are annual affairs, are always very successful, and plans are already being made for transportation for the different teams.

It has been decided that the different sport clubs of W. A. A. will be for club members only, not open to girls who merely wish to make up gym periods.

The W. A. A. Council-at-large has been chosen, and will be announced shortly. A joint meeting of both councils will be held next week.

Varsity X-Countrymen To Pace Bowdoin

This afternoon at 4.30 the Varsity Harriers will run against the Bowdoin College Hill and Dalers on the U. V. M. course starting at the gym.

Last year, Coach Archie Post's charges defeated Bowdoin 28-27 with Charlie Webster setting up a new record for the Bowdoin course completing the run in 23:20.2. Fred Webster finished second and Ketcham, Livak and Burgess finished seventh, eighth and ninth, respectively to give Vermont the winning margin.

Coach Post expects to start his regular men with the probable addition of Johnny Buttles, last year's frosh star, who has been out of the line-up due to a bad leg.

Intramurals

The annual fall golf tournament held at the Waubanakee Golf Course came to a brilliant climax with E. Keenan '42 capturing the title of No. 1 golfer of U. V. M.

Keenan defeated Edo Conedera '44 in the semi-finals, then finished the tourney by disposing of L. Gallup '41, who was moved into the semi-final bracket through the default of C. Shortle '42.

Keenan throughout the whole tournament, played an impressive game of golf and ended up with an average of 80.

In the tennis tournament which is about to be completed, J. E. Simpson '41 is leading the field due to his victory over W. Harvey '43 in the semi-finals by a score of 6-1, 6-4. The other leading contenders for the tennis crown are William West '43 and L. A. Simpson '44.

While the tennis and golf tournaments are big successes, the horseshoe tourney seems to be in the doldrums. The request for entrants was met with a great and impressive response, but from this juncture, enthusiasm languished. Archie Post said that all the necessary facilities for horseshoe tournament are ready and waiting to be exploited.

Chapel Notes

Reverend Woodcliffe of Morrisville, Vt., asserted in chapel, Wednesday morning, that faith in God is the essence of a Christian life.

God preserves many who have faith in His protection, he said, and pointed to the fact that our forefathers who landed at Plymouth had that faith that God would preserve them when they dared their adventurous journey across the ocean.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

On Tuesday afternoon at 4.30 Alpha Chi Omega pledged Antoinette Salvator '42.

There will be a meeting of the Vermont Independents, Monday evening, at 7.30 p.m., in Fleming Museum. All freshmen who have not joined a fraternity are eligible to join and are invited to attend this meeting. Old members are asked to come and make this a real organization this year.

Miss Osborne To Advise Freshmen On Problems Of Charm

Campus Girls to Meet Personality Consultant From October 21-23

Miss Elizabeth Osborne, Consultant on Charm and Personality, will visit the Vermont Campus next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, October 21-23.

Miss Osborne, who has been coming to this campus for several years, describes herself in this way:

"I am not a Beauty Specialist, nor a Fashion Advisor, nor do I run a Charm School.

"The thought behind my work is this: For a satisfactory life, a girl must learn first how to be herself instead of copying someone else—how to develop her assets until she registers as a real person. And secondly she must acquire habits of beauty and good taste so that when she forgets herself and acts natural she will not offend the eyes, ears or sensibilities of her most critical associates. This is the underlying principle of a pleasing personality, charm and genuine popularity."

Miss Osborne will lecture to freshman women and transfers on Monday and Tuesday evenings, using models to illustrate her views on posture, dress, and grooming. At these meetings attendance is required according to the following schedule:

Monday, 7 p.m. at Southwick

Redstone	Mrs. Lawrence's
Roberts House	Miss McGettrick's
Robinson Hall	Mrs. McKenney's
Slade Hall	Mrs. Moody's
Mrs. Doane's	Mrs. Pratt's
Mrs. Farnham's	Mrs. Rooney's
Mrs. Griffin's	Mrs. Schildhaus's
Mrs. Tracey's

Tuesday, 7 p.m. at Grassmount

Allen House	Mrs. Carlson's
Dresser Cottage	Mrs. Coughlin's
Grassmount	Mrs. Crowe's
Gates House	Mrs. Davis's
Prospect Hall	Mrs. Dunn's
Sanders Hall	Mrs. Hulburd's
Warner House	Miss Gebicke's
Mrs. Allen's	Miss Isham's
Mrs. Baldwin's	Mrs. McCormack's
Mrs. Baxendale's	Mrs. Martin's
Mrs. Bayley's	Mrs. Smith's
Mrs. Blakely's	Mrs. Sullivan's

Town girls may attend either evening. Upperclass girls who missed the lectures last year are expected to attend according to the above schedule.

Groups of three to five girls may make appointments for personal interviews—upperclass girls on Monday and freshmen on Tuesday and Wednesday. Opportunity for new girls to make such appointments will be given following the lectures. Upperclass girls should make their appointments at the Dean's office this week.

The Sophomore Aides will act as hostesses to Miss Osborne, and will also serve as models for her lectures.

Engineers' Convention

buildings and points of interest on the campus will be made in the early afternoon. A Town Meeting style discussion of the Aims and Scope of Engineering Curricula, with Prof. T. H. Morgan of Worcester Polytechnic Institute presiding is scheduled for later afternoon.

Following the annual dinner, which will take place in the University dining hall, Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius, president of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, will speak on the Naval Factor of Defense.

Prof. Edd R. McKee, Dean George F. Eckhard and Prof. James A. Bullard of the University of Vermont are members of various committees of the New England Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

The Kappa Chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi announces the pledging of three new men on Wednesday afternoon: Albert Lieberman '44, Roxbury, Mass., Seymour Davidoff '44, Brookline, Mass., and Stanley Felsenfeld '44, Brooklyn, Mass.

Dr. Mackay to Conduct Red Cross Course

A Red Cross first-aid course will be given by Doctor Mackay of Burlington for a period of sixteen weeks, starting Monday, November 4, at 4.15. These courses will be held at Southwick and will last about one hour. Juniors and seniors are given preference in signing up—the list in Y Room is open to them until Wednesday, October 23, then sophomores may sign up.

This is a regular Red Cross course, awarding a Senior Red Cross First-aid Certificate if passed.

Faculty Welcomes New Members

Dr. Pidgeon Speaks at Reception at Southwick

The University Council reception, given by the Men's Faculty Club for the new members of the University faculty and their wives, was held Monday evening in the Southwick Memorial Building. The members of the Women's Faculty Club were guests.

Those in the receiving line were: Prof. and Mrs. E. O. Herried, the former being president of the Men's Faculty Club; Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Pidgeon of Montreal; Mrs. Guy W. Bailey; Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women; Dean and Mrs. Elijah Swift; Dean and Mrs. George F. Eckhard; Prof. and Mrs. George P. Burns; Dean and Mrs. Hardy A. Kemp; and Prof. and Mrs. Frederick Tupper.

Doctor Pidgeon was the guest speaker on "The Fruits of Skepticism." In his adress Doctor Pidgeon, who is pastor of the Erskine and American United Church of Montreal, emphasized the necessity for moral and religious training during childhood and adolescence, as a bulwark against the vicissitudes conflicting theories and temptations of life. He expressed his admiration and respect for science and scientists, but said that he doubted whether science was discovering the ultimate reality, a sound and satisfactory moral and social code and way of life. Rather, he said, it is the artist and the philosopher who are interpreting reality for us; science, art, in particular, is the unbridled expression of great and eternal truth, and an interpretation of the true nature and essence of man and events working through the medium of the subconscious mind which is truly attuned to nature and God. He, further, cautioned against a too radical manner of thinking with respect to social and political theories and practices and especially against a mental attitude which criticizes and tears down without having any constructive substitute or suggestion to offer. His address was enlivened throughout by witty anecdotes and stories.

The gathering heard a brief radio talk by President Bailey from his home. The president spoke of the responsibilities of the faculty to the students, and voiced his gratitude at being able to serve the University so long as its president. He also spoke about some of its future plans and activities.

The new faculty members and their wives were entertained by a Faculty Club Committee consisting of the following officers of the Club and their wives: Prof. and Mrs. L. B. Puffer, the former being the treasurer; Prof. and Mrs. J. E. Pooley, the former being secretary; Prof. and Mrs. D. B. Carroll; and Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Pierce, members of the program Committee. Introductions were in charge of Prof. and Mrs. G. W. Kidder and a group of faculty members assisted them.

Refreshments were served during the reception by Miss Helen Nichols, assisted by a group of college women who poured: Miss Mary Sullivan, Mrs. Hovey Jordan, Mrs. Mason Campbell, Mrs. C. H. Beecher, Mrs. E. C. Jacobs and Mrs. James Bullard.

The reception was followed by dancing.

Women Debaters Meet Bates College

Increase of Federal Powers is Debate Issue

The girls' debating team has already started the forensic artists along debating season by virtue of their contest with the girls' team from Bates College. This contest was held in the art library of the Fleming Museum last Tuesday night. The debating question for this opening event was, "Resolved: that the power of the federal government should be increased." The representatives from Bates in this debate were Florence Bolles and Marjorie Swan, who upheld the affirmative, while Jean Stewart '41, Rawal Pindi, India and Huddee Zwick '43, Burlington, argued on the negative side for the University of Vermont. This debate was conducted in the non-decision manner which is at this time the most popular type of college debating.

M. D. Powers is coach of the girls' debating team and Kathleen LeBaron '41 is the manager. Much interest in women's debating has developed on the U. V. M. campus in the last few years, and this interest was culminated last year when the girls took a long trip, invading many of the southern states. It is expected that the girls will have a busy season again this year due to the continued interest.

The men's team will open their campaign tonight at Bethel, Me., where the hosts will be the men's team from Bates. Mr. Powers is also coach of the men, while Harold Durfee '41 is manager.

Independent Women Meet

The next meeting of the new Independent Women's organization will be at Southwick, Monday evening, at 7.30.

This organization has been developed to form a permanent group to meet the social needs of non-sorority women. It has been planned on a democratic basis, and all the women are urged to take part in laying its foundation in order that each group and individual may be represented. This group will not only help toward making a more unified campus, but also will enable non-sorority women to become better acquainted with each other and with sorority women.

Will whoever took the Mortar Board from the pumpkin-headed figure on the Southwick stairs at the Mortar Board dance please return it immediately to Dorothy Emerson at the Theta house. It is personal property and cannot be replaced.

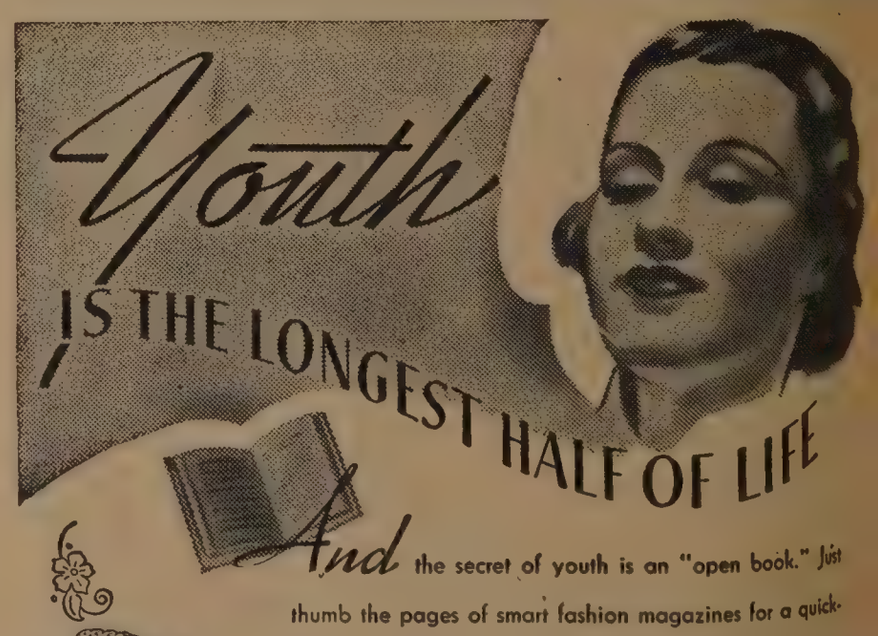
Pi Phis To Have Surprise Theme In Fashion Show

Mary White to Provide Eighty Costumes for Elaborate Show



Saturday afternoon, October 19, the Pi Beta Phi Chapter is having a Bridge and Fashion Show at Southwick. Bridge will be played from two until three-thirty o'clock and the fashion show, sponsored by Mary White, will be from three-thirty to four-thirty o'clock, after which refreshments will be served. The theme of the fashion show will be unique and is to be kept as a surprise to the guests on Saturday afternoon. The models are to be: Jeanne Wooley '42, Agnes Conley '41, Janet Hackwell '43, Janet Clark '42, Barbara Butterfield '42, Jane Allen '42, Maywood Metcalf '41, Barbara Evans '41, and some matron models who have not yet been chosen. The co-chairmen in charge are Jeanette Thompson '41 and Patty Page '43.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend and students who are not interested in playing bridge will be welcome at three-thirty for the fashion show and refreshments. At this time the admission price will be only 25 cent for students instead of 35 cents if bridge is played.

THERE WILL BE dancing and fun at Southwick this Saturday night for all students who want fun and like the finest in dance music. The admission will be slight—Ten Cents!

Gladys Swarthout Opens Hospital Concert Series

Voice of Talented Artist Thrills An Attentive Audience

Charming Gladys Swarthout, talented mezzo soprano of opera and movie fame, gave an excellent concert Sunday evening to a large, enthusiastic audience at the Memorial Auditorium. The artist, whose gracious poise and pleasing manner had a large appeal, opened the series of three concerts included in the Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary series.

Effectively gowned in a smart blue gown with a gold sash at the waist, Miss Swarthout began her varied program with a fine rendition of Handel's "Lascia ch'io Piango." Her voice, which has a warm, exquisite and intimate quality, was particularly pleasing in the middle register. Her delicate, clear tones and her dramatic interpretations which were full of feeling and expressiveness, brought large applause from the ever-attentive audience.

The five American songs on Miss Swarthout's program brought such persistent applause that she repeated Clara Edward's melodious, beautiful "Into the Night." Graciously responding to the applauding audience, the artist sang several encores, including "Tango" by Repper, "Havanera" from Bizet's "Carmen," "Comin' Through the Rye." She concluded her program with the effective and earnestly rendered Mallotte's arrangement of "The Lord's Prayer" which so impressed the audience that a brief, hushed response preceded the applause.

Stewart Wille proved himself an amazingly competent accompanist. His "Capriccio in F sharp minor" by Bortkiewiez showed him to be an artist of amazing technique and versatility.

High Standards Set In Emerson Contest

A Hundred Dollar Prize for Essay

This year again, as last, Professor Evans announces the competition for the Emerson Historical Essay Contest in honor of Professor Emerson, for many years professor of history here at U. V. M. A prize of one hundred dollars is offered by an anonymous donor.

"Last year the prize was offered but it wasn't awarded because no essay reached a high enough standard. We have hopes for this year," Professor Evans stated.

"It is expected that the essays will show evidences of historical scholarship with adequate references to bibliography and citations from historical facts. The History Department is willing to advise students on bibliography, but not on choice of a subject."

All essays must be handed to the office of the History Department before 6.00 p.m., April 15, 1941. The essay should be typed on regular-sized paper and double-spaced. A pseudonym should be signed to the essay and on a sealed envelope which contains the name of the author.

The length and subject may be determined by each entrant. The contest is open to all undergraduates.

Home Ec Club to Meet

There will be a meeting in the Brick Barn, Wednesday night, October 23. Mr. R. G. Herrin, the buyer for W. G. Reynolds Store, will talk on buying as a field for Home Ec students. It will be a very interesting lecture and all Home Ec'ers should be present.

Alpha Chi Omega initiated the following five girls into the sorority on Friday night: Harriet Woods '42, Waterbury; Lucie Pike, Irasburg '43; Alice Needham '43, Boston; Virginia Mitchell '43, Worcester; and Ellen Isham '42.

The initiation ceremony was followed by a banquet and theater party.

College Polls Show Willkie Favored

Foreign Policy Main Issue in Voting

The college students in the United States are showing an increasing amount of interest in both domestic and foreign politics. Recently student polls have been taken in some colleges, which prove that the average college student of today is politically minded.

At Amherst College in a recent student poll the preference for Willkie was expressed for Willkie by 252 votes, Roosevelt 52, and Thomas 12 votes, only 21 students being undecided. President Roosevelt's supporters based their decisions chiefly on his foreign policy, while those favoring Wendell Willkie based their opinions on other issues, which were domestic in nature, such as third term, civil liberties, national defense and partisan politics.

B. U. Law 100 Percent Willkie

Boston University, in a recent faculty poll, showed that 64 percent of its faculty is for Willkie, 24 percent for Roosevelt, and 12 percent undecided. The student body was 45 percent for Willkie, 43 percent for the President, and 15 percent for the Socialist candidate, Thomas. It is interesting to observe that the School of Law is 100 percent for Willkie, its chief objection to Roosevelt being his foreign policy and his character, and that the School of Education is 70 percent for Roosevelt. Whereas the co-eds of Practical Arts and Letters voted 64 percent for Willkie, the School of Social Work, on the other hand, favored Roosevelt 57 percent, Thomas 33 percent, and Willkie 10 percent.

At Dickinson College, out of the 398 votes cast, 284 favored Willkie, 100 Roosevelt, and 14 were on the border line. When the members of the faculty were approached, it was found that 8 voted the Democratic ticket, 24 for Willkie, and that 4 remained undecided. At Dickinson most of the students who voted pro Roosevelt felt that they would have voted for Willkie a week ago. They stated that they changed because of his vague speeches and flowery promises.

South Carolina Proclaims "Third Term Day"

Willkie proved to be the overwhelming favorite at Williams College, receiving 429 votes to Roosevelt's 98. However, most of the undergraduate students admitted that they voted the same ticket as their parents. The seniors, on the other hand, said that they had been most influenced by the faculty, a representative body of which voted for Roosevelt 12 to 1.

The University of South Carolina is definitely against seeing Wendell L. Willkie in the White House. Some of the students are so opposed to Willkie that they proclaimed October 23 as a "Third Term Day" in opposition to Willkie's proposed "No Third Term Day."

Miss Florence Bailey, a professor of the Home Economics Department, is spending the week in New York, where she will attend meetings of the American Dietetics Association.

Vermont Delegates Attend Conference

Deans and Presidents To Meet Here in 1942

Dean Elijah M. Swift of the College of Arts and Sciences and Prof. George G. Groat, head of the Economics Department attended on October 8 and 9 a conference of the presidents and deans of fourteen New England colleges, held at Amherst, Mass.

Delegates to this conference, representing Yale, Harvard, Boston University, Brown University and other colleges, discussed general problems of a confidential nature.

This conference is held annually. In 1942, the delegates will meet at Burlington as guests of the University of Vermont.

Famous French Film To Be Shown Mon.

"Harvest" Was Best Foreign Film in '39

Direct from a sensational showing in New York City, the famous French talking picture "Harvest" with English captions will come to U. V. M. for one night only, Friday, November 1 at 8.15 p.m. Sponsored jointly by the Fleming Museum and the Alliance Francaise, it will be shown in the Southwick gymnasium.

This film, the American Academy Award winner for the best foreign film in 1939, is a Marcel Pagnol production, and in all reviews, critics have been unanimous in calling it one of the greatest films ever produced. The story, in its unusual quality of creating, is much like a beautiful folk tale, combining Christian and Pagan elements. In its acting and whole presentation, it has a remarkable depth of feeling, so simply outlined that it has been likened to a beautiful, primitive painting.

Tickets for this production may be procured beginning Monday, October 21 either at the Fleming Museum, College Book Store, or from the Campus Representatives, who will be chosen this weekend. The price of admission will be 25 cents, tax exempt.

Faculty Members Honor Dr. King At Tea Friday

Doctor King, the new head of the Home Economics Departments was formally presented to the students enrolled in that course at a tea given at Practice House on Friday, the 18th, by the home economics faculty.

The members of the faculty in charge of the Home Economics Extension Service and Experiment Station, as well as members of the faculty and the student body of the department, itself, attended the affair.

The receiving line consisted of Doctor King, Miss Lake, who is the faculty member in residence at Practice House, and Miss Terrill, the former head of the Home Economics Department.

Senior home economics students assisted at the tea, by taking those in attendance through the receiving line and into the dining-room where refreshments were served.

Intramural Handbook Outlines Sports Program

Attractively Designed Book Emphasizes Advantages of Intramural Competition

"For a number of years we have felt the need of describing accurately to all students our intramural program. "The Intramural Handbook was published to meet that need," stated Archie T. Post, director of Intramural Sports.

"It answers all questions which may arise on rules and eligibility, and provides an equality of information for all the students so that they can all know what's going on. During competitions it helps by providing a convenient statement of the rules. Not only does the Handbook furnish a complete picture to students of the intramural program, but also to contemporary institutions who send us similar information about their schedules and programs."

"It should be made clear that intramurals are not a proving ground for the varsity teams. It is true that men sometimes do work up. But their chief purpose is to provide a field of endeavor—fun and play—for the average individual It to furnish certain fundamentals of character and physical benefits which can be gained in no other way."

Vermont Intramurals, 1940, is an attractively designed pocket-sized handbook. It has met with great approval among the many men of the campus who have received it.

Introduction by Prof. Prentice

A foreword by Howard A. Prentice, professor of physical education, explains the purpose of the book by telling the experiences of the past ten years which led to its publication. Also the benefits derived from intramurals are pointed out. "Sports and play are necessary in the life of any well-rounded individual. As the agency for providing a part of the broad health and physical education program, the intramural plan at Vermont has proved its value."

The various officials of intramurals are then introduced:

Director, ex-officio: Howard A. Prentice, associate professor of Physical Education.

Staff Members: Archie T. Post, assistant professor of Physical Education; W. Lawrence Gardner, assistant professor of Physical Education; John C. Evans, instructor in Physical Education; Roy J. Wietz, instructor in Physical Education; Sherman P. Fogg, instructor in Physical Education.

Intramural Advisory Council: Intramural manager, first semester, Lawrence M. Agan '42; intramural manager, second semester, Robert W. Agan '42; secretary, Arthur K. Tudhope.

Officials for games and meets are to be appointed. The Council will also have in its body one duly elected representative from each fraternity.

1939-40 Calendar

The Intramural Calendar of 1939-40 is summarized in the section which follows an historical introduction, traces the growth of the program from October, 1929, when touch football was first enthusiastically received, to the present day when eigtheen sports are included on the schedule. "It may be seen that the Intramural Division, which handles better than 50 percent of the male student body in its program, is attempting to provide sports of sufficient variety to fulfill its motto: "A sport for every student and a student for every sport."

Here's how the "attempt" reads: Fall tennis, golf, touch football, basketball, indoor track, indoor relays, bowling, badminton, handball, hockey, winter sports, wrestling, boxing, basketball free throw, hexathlon championship, softball, spring tennis, and horseshoes.

The "Constitution of the Intramural Division" is printed in full, dealing with the organization-name, membership, administrative and Council officers—and function of the Division as well as providing for amendments.

In the next chapter the By-laws explain all the rules for eligibility in Article I. Protests and postponements are take up in Articles II and III. Awards and trophies are provided for in Article IV. Special rulings and rules of procedure during games and meets are enumerated in Article V. The last two, Articles VI and VII, deal with amendment and interpretation.

"A Word to Team Managers," the next section, tells the importance of the manager to the team "Any organization which desires success in its undertakings must have a leader, a coordinator. . . . The manager is the main cog of the team. . . . A good team usually has a good manager. And conversely, a good manager aids greatly in making a better team."

The duties of the team manager are then enumerated and explained. Qualifications of a good manager are listed in the conclusion. "The Division is anxious to deal

U. V. M. Student Political Rally To Give Soap-box Orators a Break

My friends (where have I heard that before?) the time has arrived for every good man to come to aid of his party!

Are you a victim of that contagious disease, Rooseveltitis, or do you possess a great amount of Will(kie)? Those in the know say you can't go wrong by the elephant but there seems to be a great DEAL of competition from, shall we say, the donkey?

Everyone has a longing to become something which he isn't. To all of you men and women who roam "ye olde campus" daily in search of excitement, your opportunity to let off a bit of steam is fairly knocking your door down. Here is your chance to become a politician. Now you can drag Roosevelt through mud or tear Willkie to shreads until you wear yourself completely out! It's your party, so make the most of it. Get out your soap box and start practicing; let your common sense anad imagination run wild (most politicians do); and last, but not least, make it a date to be present in the cage of the gym on the never-to-be-gotten night of October 29!

Exactly one week from today, politics will take a front seat on the U. V. M. campus. Something new, something daring, something different is in store for you. It's the super-super event of the year. In other words, we mean the U. V. M. Student Political Rally, which is being sponsored by the International Relations Club. Everyone is invited to come and participate in this round up of amateur politicians, whether he be a Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Communist, or what have you!

The speakers will be purely students from our University. Why not be one of them? The rally will be run entirely by students with Professor Carroll of the Political Science department as moderator. Present plans also indicate that the band may be in attendance to add an atmosphere of the well-known political get-together.

Wake up and let's talk politics! How? Simple—Remember the date, October 29; the place, cage of the gym; the event, Student Political Rally. That's all there is to it. See your there!

Silence in the Classroom! Doctor Butler Speaks

Much is being said and written these days about the problem of academic freedom and more particularly about Dr. Nicholas Butler, President of Columbia University, who told those of his teachers who did not agree with the University's pro-British policies to resign. In his declaration President Butler also stated, "Academic freedom relates solely to the freedom of teaching on the part of accomplished scholars." An increasing wave of protest has swept the country at this action of Doctor Butler. Culminating the protest was the "Walkout on War" in which about one hundred thousand students on one hundred college campuses participated on October 10. This large mass protest shows that the American college student is not going to stand for President Butler's declaration.

From Doctor Butler's statement we infer that American students are to be denied their opportunity to have an active part in their university education. There seems to be no end of reasons why this unhealthy and certainly undemocratic attitude toward college students should be challenged. It is during their four years at college that many people lead their most active mental life. It is in college that students learn the broader aspects of many issues which will directly affect their future life. Why shouldn't college students have the right to express their beliefs about problems that are vital to them?

We would agree with the young and broadminded President of Chicago University, Dr. Robert Hutchins, who believes that it is not good national defense to have military training for all the students or force professors to study and consider problems which pertain solely to national defense. "The American universities," he says, "are the last resource of a world plunging to destruction."

The editor of The Hill News, the weekly at St. Lawrence University wrote recently, "Laurentians would not wait long to protest loudly and vehemently if the University went on its way toward a lofty aim by refusing to let them state the defects of the selective service act or question the necessity of large expenditures on armaments, or by expelling professors for stating their opinions in class and encouraging students to do likewise."

As students in the American educational system we have been brought up on the principle of academic freedom. Without such freedom we might never have had the broad expansion in our college curriculum. University leaders throughout the country have consistently upheld this principle of academic freedom but occasionally one seems to step off the track. Such a case is that of Doctor Butler. The leading educator has also been strongly criticized for his insistence that his own freedom to do with those under him what he wished must be "unhampered and unembarrassed by conduct on the part of any of its members."

Such a truly dictatorial statement which calls for the subordination of the wills of many to the will of one has been called by Prof. H. L. Dana, grandson of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, an exact counterpart in America of Hitler. We believe that in his declaration Doctor Butler overstepped his authority as a leading educator.

Speaking for the American student body, Herbert Witt, national secretary of American Student Union, said, "We must have the understanding and courage to defend the best in all we have learned. We must make the campus echo with the cry, 'Let Academic Freedom Ring!'"

AT THE THEATRES

By "Mac"

"Scatterbrain," playing tonight for the last time at the Strong, introduces a new star—Judy Canova. Judy plays the part of a hillbilly gal who is signed up to star in a Hollywood picture by an error of studio officials. Judy then becomes Hollywood problem number 1, and, while the officials sweat, the audience howls at Judy's hillbilly antics. Eventually, since all stories should have a happy ending, she turns out to be the Find of the century—which all makes both officials and audience very happy! Miss Canova is actually a new find and promises to be a top-rate star. All the trade mags seem to laud her performance in "Scatterbrain." She is a concentrated bundle of sex appeal and worth watching. (Hi fellows!)

"City for Conquest," starring James Cagney and Ann Sheridan, playing tonight and Wednesday at the Flynn, promises to be a great show. As "Our Town" portrayed life in a small country town, "City for Conquest" reveals the tempo of the largest city in the world. Cagney and Ann Sheridan show how to conquer the city, but, at the same time, have to fact great tragedy and sacrifice. Moving along at a swift and satisfying pace from fade-in to fade-out, this show is an exciting human interest story of wide appeal.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday brings Dorothy Lamour to the Flynn in another smash hit—"Moon Over Burma." Dotty whose sarong has made $10,000,000 for Paramount in the last four years, is sarong-less in this show—Hollywood's "Jungle Princess" dons a plenty-fetching white play suit and appears with a new and shorter hair-do. Highlights of the show are a log jam, a forest fire, a cobra after Dotty, and last but not least (and the Band Wagon might note this) a Burnese jam session??????

"Dulcy," playing tonight for the last time at the Majestic, stars Ann Sothern and Ian Hunter in one of the screwiest shows of the season. This is a story of a girl with a heart of gold and an especially keen faculty for getting everyone in trouble—seems to me that I've seen the type before, but let's not go into that. Ann, as Dulcy, botches up a few lives, a couple of careers, and a romance—then turns to her hero for consolation—don't they all?

"The Great Profile," starring John Barrymore, playing Wednesday and Thursday, at the Majestic, shows us an interesting example of Barrymore's great ability as an actor. In one of the comedy scenes Barrymore appears dressed as Hamlet and performs some of the highlights of his Shakespearean portrayals. Although he hasn't played the rôles for years, with no rehearsal, he reels them off as if he had rehearsed for weeks.

Note.—If anyone saw chapter No. 6 of "Junior G-Men" last Friday or Saturday, at the Majestic, please tell me how the heroes got out of the building that was blown up? I was out of town and missed it—doggone it!

with managers who have these characteristics and attributes: (1) An interest in the work, (2) intellectual and physical qualifications for carrying it out, (3) a fine sense of sportsmanship, and (4) an unqualified loyalty to the University of Vermont, of which his organization is but one of the many subdivisions.

An imposing array of Intramural Facilities, those built and those contemplated, occupies the next section of the Handbook. These numerous facilities could well be the pride of a much larger university.

"Pie" Traynor, captain-elect of baseball, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident on December 30, 1930. "Its purpose is to stimulate interest and activity in all the interfraternity competitions of the campus, a large share of which are intramural sports. It is a permanent rotating trophy, awarded annually to that fraternity scoring the most points for the year."

The points awarded for each accomplishment are listed along with winners of the trophy in the past. Sports competi-

Odds and Ends

Bob Stockwell '43 has been in the Mary Fletcher Hospital due to a streptococci infection in his hand. . . . You don't suppose he got caught in a receiving line, do you?

Sylvia Fishman '44, a Home Ec-er, innocently picked up her first bow the other day in a gym class at Southwick, and shot the arrow straight into the bull's eye. We only hope this literal triumph in the world of archery may be repeated figuratively some day. Cupid again!

Though she has never been noticeably conceited, Elaine Doerfler '43 has a swelled head. While standing in Morrill Hall recently a large picture fell on her head. Looks like she was the one that was framed!

And then there's enterprising "Pita" Young, a freshman living at Slade Hall. "Pita" specializes in waking girls up, turning on radiators, and shutting windows. This godsend to humanity charges her eight customers 10 cents a week for her invaluable service—plans to buy Christmas present with the money. We sincerely wish we were on the Christmas list of anybody who would go to all that trouble just to give us a present. We feel so absolutely futile guzzling daily cokes at Rand's. . . .

Far be it from us to tell-tales-out-of-school, but what was the yellow kitten doing in Chapel last Wednesday morning?

Gag-of-the-week Dept.: A certain professor of psychology 1 approached his classroom, already envisioning the pre-announced quizz which he was about to give his luckless students. Upon arriving at the door, he saw, (a) a group of students within the classroom, evidently an industrious hangover from the previous class; (b) a group of about twenty-five students clustered around the door in what appeared to be attitudes of patient waiting.

Obligingly the professor also waited, looking in every couple of minutes to discern whether the group within was still there. After the proper lapse of ten minutes, the class within the room arose and filed out—imagine his surprise and chagrin when he realized it was his own class!

Our favorite daily motto is direct from Oscar Wilde—i.e., "There is one thing worse than being talked about, and that's not being talked about."

Prof. Heicher Speak On Soviet Situatio

The International Relations Club he its first meeting of the year last Wedne day night at Southwick. Professo Heicher of the political science depar ment was the guest speaker, selecting a his topic, "Soviet Union and the Euro pean War." A very large number o students turned out to hear Professo Heicher speak and everyone thoroughly enjoyed his most interesting lecture o the present European situation.

After being introduced by the president of the club, Professor Heicher remarked that he had chosen his subject because the newspapers had made the present position of Soviet Russia most interesting, and that anything which happens in Russia will be of the utmost concern to us.

The speaker traced Russia's situation from the World War to the present day. To begin with, he explained how the Russian army suffered more than any other one engaged in the conflict. As a result of this, a liberal revolution took place in Russia in 1917, which gave way a few months later to the Socialistic form of government which Russia has today. Tracing further Russia's position after the war, Professor Heicher told of Russia's new foreign policy which was inaugurated in 1921. This consisted of gaining as many friends as possible for the new government, of keeping out of war, and of developing itself as much as possible. Backing up these statements, Heicher said, "Russia's policies were

Sitting Pretty

Well we can't say "we told you so" because we didn't. But whether we did or not the fact still remains that the Cats finally broke into the winning column. What's more, none other than the New York Times took notice of the game and granted it a paragraph in the sports section. After all, Union was an undefeated eleven—undefeated all through last year and up to Saturday. Vermont it seems was waiting for just that spot to come alive. According to what we read, aerials had a lot to do with the Cats' scoring, also a blocked punt by Red Dorian.

With the State games against Norwich and Middlebury not far off, the Vermont revival is a cheering sign and an augury for a possible championship. But before that there's a strong New Hampshire outfit and an R. P. I. team to hurdle. Victory in these two games would spell "bad medicine" for the Cadets and Panthers. So here's one prayer for a continuation of the revival spirit shown at Schenectady.

Funny how little it takes to make sport scribes cheerful and optimistic.

Stray Items

Glancing through the Colby Echo we noticed a very interesting letter written by the Governor of Maine to Johnny Daggett, captain of the Mules. The Governor praised the Colby Sparkplugs' sportmanship and remarked that his absence to the squad due to an injury will be greatly regretted by all. We think this speaks well for Daggett, whom all who have had contact with him are fond of. Fellows of his type are the ones who make college athletics all over the country more respected and more an agency for the moulding of character.

And Jackson in the Burlington Daily News brings up the cheery little notice that Hank Beauchemin hasn't yet been officially ruled ineligible for sports. According to report Hank had passed his make-up exams. We hope the University relieves our minds pretty quick—after all, a scorer such as Hank has demonstrated himself to be would be useful on any quintet.

Don't Look Now—

But those harriers have done it again. Paced by the Webster brothers (there ought to be a law against those two) the Catamounts ran Bowdoin ragged Friday.

And we've got a cold that's running us ragged, so if you'll excuse us we will proceed to blow our collective noses and remove the cotton stuffed in our heads.

Interfraternity Football Now in Full Swing

Interfraternity touch football competition was officially opened Thursday afternoon at two o'clock on the back campus, when a strong Independents team, led by Sisko and Senuta, overpowered a hard-fighting Alpha Tau Omega squad by a score of 25-6. The Independents' passing attack, together with a fast-charging line and excellent defensive blocking, was the cause of the avalanche which descended upon the A T O's.

Early in the first quarter the Independents took the lead with a touchdown, also gaining the extra point. Both teams scored once in the second period, but the Independents clinched the victory by making 12 points in the third. The lineup of the victors was Sisco, Senuta, Dunn, Palmer, Willson, Stoddard and Newton, while McCormick, Keith, Diforio, Pekala, Green, Biculos and Noyes composed the A T O team.

Phi Sigs Blank Owls 38-0

Phi Sigma Delta blanked a small Owl squad Saturday afternoon in the second touch football game scheduled. Although their team consisted of only seven men, with no substitutions throughout the game, the Owls gave a good account of themselves, and several times came within scoring distance only to be turned back by an impassable Phi Sig line. The final tally was 38-0.

In a sparkling offense, the Phi Sigs after the opening kick-off back to within scoring distance and crossed the goal line on the next play. The second frame was scoreless, but in the third the Phi Sigs made two touchdowns and a conversion, mutually clinching the game. The contest was punctuated by excellent playing on both sides. Red White's kicking for the Owls was brilliant but insufficient to turn the tide.

The starting players for the Phi Sigs were Goldberg, Saltzburg, Wolk, Becker, Rynowcer and Lippe. The Owls' "7 Iron Men"—Peterson, Moffat, Bigelowe, Howe, White, Darlin and Marcalus—valiantly played without a time-out for the duration of the gruelling contest.

S A E Victors 30-14

In a nip-and-tuck game Sigma Alpha Epsilon bowed to Delta Psi by a score of 30-14. From the beginning the Delts displayed a well-coordinated defense and a balanced offense, and left no doubts as to the outcome of the contest. Within eight minutes of the opening whistle the Delts had crossed the opposing goal line twice. The S A E's retaliated with a touchdown in the same quarter. The Delt steamroller annexed 12 more points in the second period while holding their opponents scoreless. The second half featured a comeback for S A E, outscoring the Delts 8-6.

The victorious septet included Swift, Evans, Stanley, Wood, Rood, Roby and Small. The S A E's were Cozzilino, Neal, Vreeland, Strachan, Thorpe, Campbell and Putnam.

Catamounts Topple Undefeated Dutchmen In Brilliant 19-7 Win

Johnny Spasyk, Vermont's small but tough signal caller, took personal charge Saturday afternoon as the University of Vermont used but five minutes of the second period to blast every hope and dream Union College possessed for its second straight undefeated season. Most of the other fifty-five minutes of the game saw the Dutchmen push the Catamounts around between the 30-yard lines, but all this resulted in was seven points early in the fourth period. Vermont had piled up 19 in its second period bomb throwing, and 19-7 the books read at the finish.

The exploding of Union's string of thirteen straight undefeated contests came with unexpected suddenness, although Vermont had been fooling around in deep Union territory during most of the first period. One drive had carried to the 1-yard line as the first period ended, where the ball was lost on downs, and Union apparently had kicked safely back nearly to midfield.

Spasyk Scores on Taylor's Pass

But no one reckoned with the junior caller from Pittsfield, Mass. This 38-yard drive was just a warm-up. Spasyk took Jack Vannier's punt on Union's 40 and ran it back to the 21. A reverse went sour and Vermont lost five yards. Capt. Frankie Taylor completed a pass to Misty Rice for no gain, but a moment later Taylor dropped back to the 35 and plunked the ball into the waiting arms of Spasyk in the end zone.

How Spasyk got there is still a mystery, not only to the crowd but to the Union players. He had sneaked by three of the Union line backers and not one had covered him and no one spotted him until Taylor's pass was all but in his arms. Taylor's placekick for the extra point was wide of the goal posts, but Vermont had a 6-0 lead.

Taylor kicked off and Ed Enstice brought the ball back to his own 30. Spasyk was called for pass interference and Union had a first down on the 47, but a moment later Vannier fumbled on the 50 and Spasyk recovered. His booming punt went over Norris' head and Dick Salmon downed the bounding ball on the 1-foot line, forcing Jim Hillick to kick from the end zone.

He never got the ball away. Swede Carlson and Whizzer White broke through and the ball bounded off their arms high into the air, and when the ensuing pileup was uncovered by the officials Red Dorian, Vermont's substitute right guard, had the ball nestled against his chest. Spasyk's placekick for the extra point was good, making the score 13-0, where three minutes before it had been 0-0.

Union's quick-kick after the kick-off drove Vermont back to midfield, from where Spasyk kicked out on the 10-yard line. Hillick cleared right end for 9, but on the next play George Norris was dropped with a jarring tackle by Dorian and the ball shot out of his hands, with Spasyk recovering on Union's 19-yard line.

Broutsas Scores on Spasyk's Pass

Two plays later Vermont had another touchdown, Spasyk dropping a pass into the arms of George Broutsas on the 5 and Broutsas scooted the remaining distance with no Maroon jersey near him. The extra point try was no good.

As the second half opened Union went to Vermont's 5 in a sustained drive of 44 yards, then came back to the 15 before losing the ball again. The third period ended with Union in possession of the ball on Vermont's 49.

Union Carries One Over

Harry Parker intercepted Enstice's pass on the 30, but a moment later Bob Baker, Union's outstanding tackle, pounced on a Vermont fumble and it was first and ten for the Dutchmen on the 28. Enstice completed a short pass to Norris and Norris plowed to a first down on the 18. On the next play Union opened its bag of tricks and produced a triple lateral followed by a forward from Vannier to Enstice. The fullback took the ball on the 3 and carried two would-be Vermont tacklers over the line with him. Sherman converted.

Eight minutes of playing time remained but Union had the ball for less than two minutes of this time. Sherman's attempted short kick-off rolled out of bounds and the Catamounts took over on the 35, pushing out a first down before Spasyk dribbled the ball and Vannier recovered on his own 45. Held to three yards in three plays, Vannier got off a 9-yard punt, from his own 48, the ball careening out of bounds on Vermont's 43.

Get to Union's Nine

This time the Cats moved, with Spasyk spearheading the attack, through the weak Union right tackle. Eleven plays brought four first downs and placed the ball on the 9-yard line. A Spasyk-to-Taylor reverse lost six yards, then the officials added five more for too much time in the huddle. Spasyk dropped a pass into White's arms on the 10, but he was dragged down four yards from the line. With it fourth and four, Taylor's field goal try was all but good, kicking the top of the goal post and bounding out.

Four plays later the game was over.

W. A. A. Notes

Demonstration Night for all freshman girls will be held Thursday night at 7.15 at Southwick. The program has been arranged to last not over an hour and a quarter, so that the girls will have plenty of time during the remainder of the evening to study for oncoming hour exams.

Sally Rome '42 will be in charge of the demonstration and the following sports managers will give short talks: Archery by Dawn Nichols '41, volleyball by Sophie Gorney '43, bowling by Ellen Isham '41 and Ruth Hopkins '41, badminton by Alice Howe '42 and Kay Kyle '42, ping pong by Thelma Packard '43, skiing by Dorothea Smith '41 and Barbara E. Burns '43, dancing by Jean Finney '41, swimming by Virginia Amidon '42 and basketball by Catherine Peterson '42. Square dances will be demonstrated by Miss Larson of the physical education department. Deck tennis, shuffleboard and golf will also be demonstrated.

Freshman girls attending this meeting are allowed to make up excused fall cuts which must be taken care of by Saturday, October 26.

The freshman gym class list is being posted in the Y room on Tuesday. Sophomore girls must sign up in the physical education before Saturday noon of this week. They have a choice of the following winter sports: Badminton, badminton coaching, volleyball, basketball, dance, workshop, golf, archery, square and country dancing, bowling and swimming. Winter sport classes will begin on Monday, October 28, and all girls are expected to come to their first class fully equipped to participate.

The University of Vermont girls' hockey team has been invited to Middlebury on Friday, October 25, to participate in a game down there. The bus will leave the gym at 1.15 on Friday afternoon. The girls will be chosen from the Monday and Tuesday practice period groups.

Sisters to Play Badminton

All University women students will be interested to see an exhibition match by Jean and Ellen Stewart from Rawal Pindi, India. The Stewart sisters are two of the most enthusiastic badminton players on the campus and have many cups both singles and doubles, which they won while in India. They have played since they were old enough to hold a racquet.

In India Jean and Ellen both belonged to the Christian Badminton Club, in which they were the only American members, the others all being Indians. The club meets in the evening usually from five to seven o'clock, tea usually preceding the game and an eight o'clock dinner following. Jean remarked that the meetings could be compared to the modern bridge club meetings, badminton being played instead of bridge. The Indian women play in their long dresses called saris. Very often they play with three, four or five players on each side of the net.

All women students who wish to see the Stewart sisters play this game are invited to the Sport Demonstration at Southwick Thursday evening, October 24 at 7.15.

Frosh Gridsters Prime For Norwich

Victory Starved Team Promises Hard Fight

When Sherry Fogg's stalwarts invade Northfield this Friday, October 25, for their football game with the Norwich J. V.'s, one will be able to see an extremely determined freshman eleven in action.

With two defeats well in their minds, one at the hands of Vermont Junior College by a score of 6-0, the other by Green Mountain Junior College, score 13-0, the Kittens will attempt to break this losing spree and turn over a new leaf.

After watching the freshmen practice diligently daily till dark, any impartial observer would be convinced that the U. V. M. freshman aggregation is due for a victory in the very near future.

Many faults apparent in the previous two games have now been eradicated. The blocking is more effective and certainly more impressive. For the first time this season the Kittens look as a well-coordinated unit.

From available reports none of the freshmen is ailing and it is hoped that the eleven strong that will take to the field will be in the best condition, both physically and morally, thus assuring certain victory for the freshman gridiators.

The famous French film "Harvest" will be shown Friday, November 1 at 8.15 at the Southwick Gymnasium. The price of admission is 25 cents tax exempt. Tickets may be procured at the Museum, Book Store or from the campus representatives.

The Medical Admissions Committee would be very glad to have those pre-medical students who are in their third or fourth year and who wish to do so, take the Medical Aptitude Test whether they have taken it before or not.—HARDY A. KEMP, M.D., Dean.

There will be a joint meeting of the W. A .A. Council and the Council-at-large on Tuesday night, at 7.15, at Southwick.

Cross-Country Team Led By Websters Beat Bowdoin 21-35

Undefeated Season Looms as Harriers Register Third Win

For the third straight time this fall the University of Vermont cross-country team, led by the famed Webster brothers, Fred and Charles, scored a convincing 21-35 victory over the Bowdoin College harriers from Brunswick, Me.

Taking the lead from the start and never relinquishing it, the Webster boys finished hand in hand in 22 minutes and 24 seconds, several hundred yards in front of Dana Jones, Bowdoin's only real threat who dogged their footsteps over the entire course but could not maintain the scorching pace set by the brothers from Orleans. Following Jones came Buck Hoyt in fourth, Capt. Frank Livak in sixth, Ernie St. Mary in eighth and Merle Crown in tenth.

The times were excellent considering the weather and condition of the course. Rain mixed with a light snow combined to thoroughly soak the course and in some places the mud was ankle deep.

There was no question of Vermont's preeminence. Bowdoin was simply outclassed by the speedy wearers of green and gold.

The U. V. M. boys are now in top shape and if their present form is any indicator something should be heard from the Vermont lads in the coming N. E. I. C. A. A. run in Boston on November 11.

Summary of all starters:

Tuesday and Wednesday of this week there will be an Outing Club membership drive. Don't forget that skiing will be here soon and the one dollar membership ticket assures you of lowered rates on the Underhill Ski Tow. Not only that, but when the season really rolls in, the club will charter a bus on Sundays to take Outing Club members, at lowered rates, to Mt. Mansfield's slopes and back home again.

The Outing Club sponsors the ski teams and arranges for lessons at reduced rates. It also offers lessons for beginners on the Centennial hill and the Country Club slopes from more experienced members of the teams. It has complete access to the new ski jump at Underhill, of which we'll hear a lot later.

There is also a course offered in First Aid for skiers, a preliminary step towards joining the ski patrol.

It boasts open meetings once a month at which time movies will be shown of skiing at Sun Valley, Lake Placid and Stowe; and prominent ski figures of the East will be present to speak. Refreshments are sometimes served.

If all this isn't enough for your dollar, nothing could be.

So bring your money some time on Tuesday or Wednesday to classes. There will be a special table in the Old Mill by the Book Shop where you can spend it well.

And, don't forget, there are at least four more hikes this fall.

October 22, 24, 29, 31—Practice sessions start, 7.30 p.m. After second week practices will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays until close of football season.

Varsity Basketball Practice starts tonight, Tuesday and Thursday, at 7.30.

Pi Phis Feature Mock Wedding Show

Surprise Climax Ends Clever Fashion Parade

The Pi Phi's wound up a brilliant fashion show Saturday at Southwick with an impressive formal fall wedding, featuring the bride, Jeanne Wooley '42, in a long-sleeved white velvet gown with a floor-length veil which fell to her shoulders in front. H. Pache '41 acted as groom.

Following the bridal couple down the center aisle were Agnes Connelly '41 in a gown of black velveteen with brilliant plaid skirt, the maid of honor, and C. Shortle '42 as best man. The bridesmaids in simple but startlingly unusual black velveteen and carrying large bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums were Janet Clark '42, Barbara Butterfield '42, Jane Allen '41, Janet Hackwell '43, Maywood Metcalf '41. The ushers were J. Cronin '41, F. Logan '42, P. Corley '41, J. Costello '42 and W. Nestler '43. T. Malone '41 sang "I Love You Truly" as the awesome procession returned to the stage.

Preceding this surprise climax the Pi Phi's under the able supervision of Jeanette Thompson '41, the chairman, presented in collaboration with Mary White of the Burlington Towne and Country Shop, an all-inclusive fashion show. Clothes for sports, afternoon, and evening were modeled by Barbara Butterfield '42, Maywood Metcalf '41, Janet Clark '42, Janet Hackwell '43, Jeanne Wooley '42, Barbara Evans '41 Agnes Connelly '41, Mrs. Proctor Paige, Mrs. Lois Horsford, Mrs. Allen and her daughter, Jane Allen '41, Mrs. Bosworth, Mrs. Dorothy Hunt.

By including these older women the clothes were more varied and more interesting to a greater number of people. The styles presented were exclusively American designed and included the new "trumpet" silhouette. In the sports line corduroy was stressed and the old standbys, sweaters and plaid skirts with knee socks.

Wool featured strongly in the spectator-sports line, and crepe, generally black and often sequin trimmed, vied with velveteen in the dressier afternoon class.

Bridge preceded the show and refreshments followed. Robert McKee '41 accompanied the show on the piano and the models were announced by a man from WCAX.

Sigma Gammas Hike

About fifteen Sigma Gammas and their guests climbed Camel's Hump Sunday, going up the Forest Service Trail, eating lunch in the hut near the top, and coming down by way of Montclair Glen. Helen Carr '41 was in charge of arrangements.

Heicher Speaks

hard-boiled and they had no regard for the United States or Great Britain because they were democratic nations."

Professor Heicher finished the first part of his speech by describing the effect which the dictators had upon Russia's policy. Describing Russia's right-about-face in its foreign policy, he added that the U. S. S. R. now favored the liberal democratic nations. Further elaborating on this topic, the Stalin-Hitler agreement was mentioned. Viewing this pact from the Russian point of view, Professor Heicher said that Russia was bound to gain as a result of it. Illustrating this point, he declared that when Germany declared war on Poland, Russia received a large share of Poland when it was divided. Russia then conquered Finland and later gained control of the Baltic States.

Introducing the second half of his lecture, the speaker mentioned that he was now going from the realm of speculation to that of pure guessing. Quoting Professor Heicher, the following proved most interesting: "As German power extends and increases in Turkey, Russia will oppose Germany until she is victorious or has to give up the struggle. I prophesy that war may come in cold weather, perhaps in December or January. In fact, Russia may be ready at the present time for war in the Far East." The speaker concluded his talk by saying that a parting of the ways had come between Germany and Russia.

Following the close of Professor Heicher's lecture an open forum was conducted, at which time any member of the audience might ask a question of Professor Heicher.

KEY AND SERPENT SOCIETY—There will be a meeting at the Phi Delta Theta house on Tuesday, October 22, at 7.30.—C. V. AKLEY, President.

Intramural

tions comprise the larger part of the competition. Kake Walk, Junior Week, and scholarship with the Interfraternity Sing complete the list.

The system for publicity and furnishing managers through volunteer scrubs is then explained. The three classifications of managers, sophomore intramural managers, freshman scrubs, and team managers, with their duties and responsibilities have their duties, awards, and promotion system enumerated.

Sigma Delta Psi, the national honorary athletic society, is the subject of the next section. The U. V. M. chapter of this society was chartered on May 12, 1930. Since its establishment at the University, eleven men have qualified and become members of Sigma Delta Psi. The name of the society means, "The body is the servant of the mind." Its objective is to promote physical, mental and moral development of college students. Qualifications for membership are dealt with and a list of the eleven men who have met requirements for membership is given.

The Handbook is concluded by a summary of the year 1938-39, in which competitions and their winners are listed, and a list of intramural indoor track, bowling, free throw, hexathlon, and indoor relays records, with the names of the men who made them and the year in which they were made.

U.V.M. Store Has Vermonter's Novel

"Deep Grow the Roots" is one of the new books in the Book Store this week. It is a first novel written with charming simplicity in an astonishing revelation of cultivated literary talent by Mari Tomasi.

Miss Tomasi claims Vermont as her native home as she was born in Montpelier, a site chosen by her father, because of its similarity of the old country, Italy. Miss Tomasi's first book is a sincere store written about today's people. Its picturesque setting is the Piedmont region of northern Italy and it is a tale of young Luigi and his great love for Nina.

One can't help but feel that this haunting story of simple peasants struggling to keep their lives undisturbed by the far away cry of imperialist ambitions is a supreme masterpiece magnificently written about the people Mari Tomasi herself knew.

VOL. 59 BURLINGTON, VERMONT, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1940 NUMBER 10

Guy W. Bailey '00 Was Honor Student In The Classics

Phi Beta Kappa Member Took Honors in Greek, Was Active on Campus.

President Guy Winfred Bailey, of the University of Vermont, who died last Tuesday in Boston, is a graduate of the University in the class of 1900. He took the Classical course, specializing in Greek, Latin and German, and taking special honors in Greek at his graduation. He has since been extremely interested in furthering the classics here, especially Greek. He was also elected a member of the Vermont Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

During his four years at college, the future president led anything but a biased life. He belonged to the Classical Club and to the Chess Club, which has since gone out of existence, was a member of the Beta Zeta Chapter of Alpha Tau Omega, played tennis, class football, and class baseball, and figured high in military activities, becoming a first lieutenant in his fourth year here.

Mowing the graveyard lots and carving monuments in the cemetery were two jobs which President Baily had during his college life. The money they brought him helped to pay his college expenses.

He was class president his third year, class poet his second, and was on the Class Book Committee his senior year.

He was quite well known as a poet, sending in verse continually to the Ariel and Cynic editorial staffs—all of which was published anonymously. This is unfortunate, since it is practically impossible to trace his early literary efforts except through one or two short stories printed in the Cynic.

As for President Bailey on the light side, here is a bit of evidence from the 1909 Ariel:

Funeral Attended By Many Friends

College, State Officials And Students Honor Him

Many college presidents, as well as faculty, students, friends of the University, and public officials from Vermont and neighboring states attended the funeral services of President Guy W. Bailey. The service was held on Friday, October 25, at 2:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

President Bailey's body lay in state from 10:00 a.m. Friday until time for the funeral. A guard of honor consisting of two men, changing each half hour, was on duty. Two men from each of the following groups formed the guard of honor, College of Arts and Sciences, College of Agriculture, College of Engineering, College of Medicine, the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, four Boulder men and two members of Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Reverend Percy Chandler Ladd, pastor of the College Street Congregational Church, of which President Bailey was for many years a faithful member, and Reverend Evan Thomas, professor emeritus of the University officiated at the services. The burial was in the family lot in the village cemetery of Essex Junction.

The active pall bearers were Robert Carney '41, Richard Healy '41, John Boyer '41, Donald Maley '41 and two members of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

President Guy W. Bailey

1876 to 1940

Served Vermont as Secretary of State And Member of House of Representatives

After he graduated from the University of Vermont in 1900, Guy W. Bailey studied law in the office of Allen Martin of Essex Junction, which later became the law firm of Martin and Bailey. He also worked with Brown and Taft of Burlington. He was admitted to the bar of the State of Vermont at the October term of the Supreme Court in 1904, although he never afterwards practiced law. In 1904 he was elected to the House of Representatives from the town of Essex and in this office he served on the committees in the state legislature for judiciary and revision of bills, being chairman of the last named committee.

From December, 1904 to October, 1906 he was clerk of the commission revising public statutes. He was reelected to the House of Representatives in 1906, where he served as a member of the committees on ways and means, judiciary, and as chairman of the committee to revise statutes. He was one of the commissioners to edit the Public Statutes in 1906-07. In 1908 he was elected Secretary of the State and has been reelected without opposition in his party since that time. In his years of public office, he has been a member of many commissions, among which have been those on working men's compensation and uniform accounting systems for towns and villages. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1916.

He came to the University of Vermont in 1917 as Comptroller. He was selected

Vermont Trustees Pay Fine Tributes to Beloved Head of the University of Vermont

The following telegrams with tributes to the University's beloved President have been received by the Cynic from members of the Board of Trustees:

"President Bailey was benevolent in his numerous and varied activities. In his service were blended realism and idealism which developed the mission of the University in state and society. His patience, faith and dauntless spirit surmounted all handicaps. The example of his diligence is an inspiration to his bereaved friends and his students."

Senator Warren R. Austin.

"The University has suffered a great loss in the death of its beloved President Guy Bailey. He was devoted to the interests of the institution and had a remarkably full and complete understanding of its business affairs and of its problems."

Willard A. Mitchell.

"Material monuments to President Bailey's work stand out for all to see but his greatest memorial lies in the hearts of thousands of the alumni who have been helped over rough places by his kindly sympathy and guidance."

Newman K. Chaffee.

"An irreparable loss. Steadfast, thorough, far seeing, wise, kindly, a loyal friend, he gave the University for over twenty years the full measure of his selfless devotion. He literally lived and died for it. Its growth under his administration was unequaled and is a living memorial to his tireless and fruitful labors. Thousands of her grateful sons and daughters today mourn the passing of a friend."

George W. Alger.

"The sad news of the passing of President Bailey came as a terrific shock to the Trustees, as he had seemed to be steadily improving in health the past year, as we met him at our meetings in his home.

"The State and University have suffered an irreparable loss. It does not seem as if anyone could ever fill his place, his work as our President for twenty years has been truly great, the University having had its most marked growth in physical equipment and number of students during that period. The Ira Allen Chapel, Fleming Museum, Slade Hall, Southwick Memorial and Waterman Memorial Building will be lasting memorials to him.

"He was a great leader and an inspiration to our youth, inspiring loyalty and integrity because those qualities were so outstanding in his own character.

"He was one of my dearest friends for nearly forty years. His memory will be cherished by every Vermonter. The memory of his high ideals, his never failing courage and his life-long demonstration of brotherly love should never be forgotten by us who must now try to carry the torch he bore so gallantly."

Thomas C. Cheney.

"The innumerable things which endeared President Bailey to our hearts and commanded our admiration could be told only by telling the daily story of a busy life. They were woven together into a wonderful and unblemished fabric of individual helpfulness and broad accomplishments.

"It distorts the picture of his life to deal with single characteristics, but it is hard to refrain from dwelling upon his infinite capacity, for taking pains, a capacity which is said to be the substance of genius. Sometime the story should be recorded of how Mr. Bailey's meticulously careful assistance to a stranger led to

President Bailey's Death Is Great Loss to Vermont

Head of University Dies Tuesday At Massachusetts General Hospital

President Guy W. Bailey, beloved and honored head of the University of Vermont for twenty years died of a heart attack last Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Massachusetts General Hospital. He had entered there on Wednesday, October 16, for a physical check-up. Though he had been ill since a year ago last spring, being confined to bed at his home and for months in a cast to aid in his recovery from a disease of the bone structure, President Bailey's death came suddenly and shockingly. In the past few months he had showed decided improvement and during the last few weeks he had been able to see the Vermont foliage at its height while taking short motor trips. Despite his drained strength in the last year and one-half, President Bailey unerringly administered to the intricate and varied problems of the University. Just last Tuesday morning his vibrant voice was heard over the telephone by members of the University administrative staff.

College Enlarged Under Pres. Bailey

New Buildings Acquired During Administration

President Bailey, beloved by faculty and students alike, has during his administration, through his vision and persistent effort in behalf of the University, added greatly to its prestige and development. A man of sympathetic understanding and marked business ability, he has throughout his entire administration been personally responsible in helping countless students obtain the financial aid which enabled them to continue their education.

Largely, through his efforts, speakers of great merit, many of whom he counted among his friends, have been brought to the Vermont campus, speakers, who have helped students to live up to high ideals. These fine men have given many students the courage to carry on when overwhelming odds seem to lay on every side.

Under his able direction, the University has been enlarged in countless ways. Many new buildings have been erected or acquired. It was during 1921 that the Redstone campus property first came into the possession of the University. The old Music Building, acquired in 1924, has recently been supplanted by the new one on Williams Street. In 1927, the Ira Allen Chapel, a beautiful monument to the

Associated with Many Activities

"So much one man can do that does both act and know"—for President Bailey was both directly and indirectly associated with practically every activity within the borders of his native Green Mountain State. He was born in Hardwick, May 7, 1876, the son of John Winthrop and Laura (Cahill) Bailey. After attending the grammar school there, later the Converse School in this city and grammar school and high school in Essex Junction, he graduated in the classical course from Burlington High School in 1896. He entered the University of Vermont in the fall of 1896 and graduated in June of 1900. He received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from the University of Vermont, Middlebury College and Norwich University in 1921.

When he was about fifteen, the future University of Vermont president learned the trade of the stone cutter, and rapidly developed the art of lettering, tracing and also did some carving, a skill that now appears to be dangerously diminishing in this state. He continued working at this trade until he was admitted to the bar in 1904.

He married Mabel Gertrude Brigham of Essex Junction, December 22, 1904. He lived in Essex Junction until 1920, when he moved to Burlington, where he has rescided since that time.

Moderator of Town Meeting

At the age of twenty-five he was elected moderator of the town meeting and continued to serve in that capacity for twenty-one years. He was president of the village of Essex Junction during the years 1902, 1903, 1904, 1914 and 1915.

Until August 31, 1917, when he became comptroller of the University of Vermont, President Bailey was active in state politics. He was a member of the House of Representatives in 1904-1906,

Pres. Bailey Led Active Public Life

By all those who had associations with him, President Bailey's active membership, interest and support in national, state, and local organizations will ever be remembered. He was president of the New England Kurn Hattin Homes of Westminster; a director and vice-president of the Mary Fletcher Hospital; treasurer of the Vermont Children's Aid Society, and honorary vice-president of the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. He was a member of every Masonic body, of the Green Mountain Club; the University Clubs of Boston and New York; the Rotary International; the Bankers' Club of New York; the Lake Placid Club; the Lake Mansfield Trout Club; and the Waubanakee Golf Club. He was also a director of the Howard National Bank and Trust Company; the Green Mountain Power Company; the Rutland Railroad Company, and director and vice-president of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

EDITORIALS

President Guy Winfred Bailey

"We are so stupid about death. We will not learn
How it is wages paid to those who earn,
How it means freedom evermore from pain,
How it untangles every mortal mesh."

Our hearts today are filled with sadness and esteem for one whose passing has left each Vermont student with a sense of a great irreparable loss. We find it difficult to adequately express our feeling for such a truly great man who for over twenty years gave unceasingly his service, his selfless devotion, his inspiration, and literally his life in order that we, the students of Vermont, might have the best college education possible and that the University of Vermont might grow into a finer institution.

Our debt to President Bailey is inestimable, as the many tributes of his friends and colleagues which appear in the pages of this issue indicate. To him we owe our deepest gratitude for the many fine new buildings which we now enjoy and which have facilitated the broadening of our University's educational program. These buildings were made possible through his dauntless persistence and his never-faltering labor in sickness and in health. Under his administration Vermont has increased her enrollment, her buildings, her faculty, her assets, and her prestige.

President Bailey made the Wilbur Fund gifts available in over 22,000 instances so that countless numbers of Vermont youth might obtain a college education—an education which he wanted every boy and girl in Vermont to have regardless of how little money they might have. Thus it is to him that many Vermont alumni and students are indebted for their college education.

That quality of President Bailey which particularly endeared him to the students was the fact that although he was constantly striving for the good of all, he never lost his infinite capacity for interest and concern in the welfare and aspiration of the individual. Although exceedingly busy in his able execution of the many affairs of our college, President Bailey always made room in his full program for any student in need of help and he gave to him the full measure of his wise counsel.

Countless instances of his courage, his unselfish devotion, his inspiration, his diligence, his kindness, his farsightedness, and his friendship might be told, but out of deference to President Bailey's modesty we feel that he would rather have such praise remain unspoken. Infinite reverence and love is, however, today felt in the hearts of many students and countless number of friends by whom he was beloved.

To those many students who did not know him, we say that those of us who had that privilege loved him. We found great inspiration in our talks with one whose very life was an exemplification of an abundance of those rare virtues that men deem divine.

So it is that death has taken from this world one who will forever linger in the hearts of his many friends, his loyal co-workers, and the numberless students of the University for which he gave his life, who through the years will often bow their heads in reverence and gratitude to one whose high ideals, unselfish labor, great courage, thoughtfulness, and infinite love for his fellowmen endeared him to all.

"Yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Dr. Thomas Tells Of Lifelong Friend

Dr. Evan Thomas, Professor Emeritus of Mathematics and Mechanics in the Colleges of Engineering, was a close friend of the late President Guy Bailey for over forty years. It was he who performed the marriage ceremony when President and Mrs. Bailey were wed in 1904. The fine tribute following was written by Doctor Thomas for his friend, Guy W. Bailey.

"In the death of President Guy W. Bailey I have lost one of my very best and steadfast friends. We first met more than forty years ago at Essex Junction, where I was engaged in newspaper work. I saw much more of him after I became pastor of the Congregational Church in the village. He was a very regular attendant at church, rarely missing even an evening service. He was also a member of my Sunday School class, and, though not disputatious, I knew that I had among the group an inquiring mind of a higher order.

During the forty years between his graduation from college and his death I have followed his career with ever increasing interest and admiration. The well-prepared sketch in last Wednesday's Free Press is an enviable record of useful and successful activities in the service of the State, the University, and numerous charitable institutions in whose work he was deeply interested. His was a life rich in those excellences which cluster around such words as citizen, public servant, patriot, friend, humanitarian, Christian, and other words of similar import. I have known no man to whom I would more readily apply the words: 'A workman that needeth not be ashamed.'"

Friends Tell Stories About President

Took Active Interest In Students' Welfare

Several men whom the President knew well have submitted the following interesting facts and anecdotes about him.

"One day when the President was leaving his office," said Prof. Leon Dean, "I met him on the steps of the Medical College Building. I told him that the Freshmen-Sophomore Hose Fight was being held on the campus at that time. He turned to me with concern written on his face and said, 'I hope none of the boys catch cold.'"

"President Bailey's favorite relaxation," said Mr. H. T. Rutter, vice-president of the Howard National Bank, and long-time acquaintance of the late head of the University, "was to take drives through the Vermont countryside."

"President Bailey was an excellent speller," one friend recalled. "I remember one time when he was the winner of a 'spell-down' at a Rotary meeting. He also liked to fish and often went to Averill Lake to partake of the sport."

"I took a Freshman's theme to the President one day," Professor Dean said. "In the theme the freshman told how he had come to Vermont with only $100 in his pocket and a lot of high hopes and ideals in his head. He said that as the second semester approached his money was all gone and his hopes and aspirations were fast dwindling. The President, after reading the theme, began to pace the floor in his characteristic fashion. Suddenly he turned to me and said, 'We'll fix that boy up with meal tickets. We'll not have him disappointed.' That boy finished not only his three years of pre-medical study but also his four years in the College of Medicine. Today he is a practicing physician well-known throughout Vermont."

Educated in Essex And Burlington

President Guy W. Bailey received his early education in the common schools in Hardwick and Essex Junction and the Converse School in Burlington. He attended the Essex Junction High School and was graduated from the Burlington High School in 1896. While in high school he took the classical course and was active in literary activities and athletics.

THE "THIN DIME DANCE" which was scheduled for tonight has been cancelled.—MORTAR BOARD SOCIETY.

Refused Candidacy For Governorship

In November, 1925, the people of the State of Vermont wanted to draft Guy W. Bailey for the governorship, but he refused this honor, saying "My many years of close contact with state affairs compels a most vital interest in all that pertains to the State of Vermont, and I am not mindful of the honor and opportunity which comes to one chosen as its governor, but problems facing the University this year are such that I feel that my entire time should be given to my duties here."

Story Illustrates His Thoughtfulness

The Honorable Joseph T. Stearns '96, former trustee of the University, and for many years an intimate friend of President Bailey submitted the following anecdote which illustrates one of President Bailey's many admirable traits of character.

"President Bailey possessed many admirable traits of character. Among these were his unfailing courtesy, kindness and thoughtfulness.

Having been asked for a human interest story about the president. Here is one that is characteristic of him.

One cold winter morning, a few years ago, Mrs. Stearns and I started for church. The sidewalks were icy and we were slipping and sliding along when a car overtook us and pulled up at the curb. A chauffeur stepped out and opened the rear door. As we approached, he touched his cap and said: 'President Bailey wonders if he can give you a lift.'

On our way downtown we told the president that the walking was so treacherous that we would have turned back, but as this was our wedding anniversary we wanted to go to church together. He congratulated us and said he was glad he happened along.

When we reached home after the service, we saw a large carton leaning against the outside door. On opening it, we found a dozen beautiful roses and a card inscribed 'congratulations and good wishes from Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Bailey.'"

Earned Expenses As Stone Cutter

President Bailey had a hard row to hoe at college. An exceptional student, he was also an athlete. Along with these time consuming activities, however, he had to earn a great deal of his college expenses. Vermonters, many of them before and afterward, have worked their ways through U. V. M., but probably few have ever labored at a similar task.

His father being owner of an Essex Junction stoneshed, it is small wonder that the President became proficient at this work. He had a great reputation for being an artistic craftsman, and was much in demand as a stone cutter. A great part of this work was on monuments, many of which were in the graveyards themselves. Such was President Bailey's singleness of purpose that he used to stay right on the spot until the job was finished. The President would pitch a tent right in the cemetery, eating and sleeping there.

Aside from these tasks in the field, President Bailey used to help his father in the stoneshed. In those days there used to be a trolley line to Essex Junction, but the President never had the carfare to ride home. He walked the six miles, therefore, after classes were over.

Key and Serpent Meets And Discusses Plans

The Key and Serpent Society held a meeting at the Phi Delta Theta house on Tuesday, October 22 at 7.30. The men discussed plans for the football hop on November 26 and for the pep rally for the Norwich game. John White '42 was appointed chairman of the football hop committee and Dave Sawyer and John Burgess are in charge of the pep rally. There will be another meeting of the Key and Serpent next Tuesday, October 29.

Union Card Was Pride of President

Levi P. Smith, Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC in 1908, President of the Burlington Savings Bank, and a neighbor and friend of the late Guy W. Bailey in an interview Wednesday told the following interesting facts about the University's late President.

"I first had contact with President Bailey when he was starting his campaign for State Secretary and I was a newspaper reporter working in the Legislature. I helped him in his campaign for the state office although he was assured of the office before he started campaigning. It was during the session of 1912-13, the longest session the Vermont Legislature has ever held, and I saw a great deal of him.

He loved to play chess and played an excellent game. His mental grasp and clearness were apparent here as in everything else he attempted. He had the quality of never admitting defeat.

As Secretary of State he occupied offices on the first floor of the State House. Here he was the center of a constantly changing group from early morning until late at night. Legislators, in particular those from small places, came to him for help from virtue of his sagacity and desire to accommodate. He had a great influence during all his years in public life in shaping important Vermont policies. He was a remarkable combination of careful and realistic qualities which would naturally go with the conservative make-up while in addition to these he had a courage and broad human interest. He was especially proud of his union card which he had earned as a young man in the stone cutter's trade. Much labor legislation was really initiated by him as was also the Blue Sky Law governing the sale of investments to the public and a great number of other forward-looking measures.

I also was closely in touch with President Bailey when he succeeded my father as treasurer of the University. His untiring mastery of detail, his quick grasp of the essential outlines of every problem combined with his intuitive good judgment to make him one man out of thousands perfectly adapted to direct successfully the administrative and financial policies of the fine old institution which he very soon came to head.

Last I knew him as a neighbor, courteous, kindly, always interesting and of perfectly astonishing thoughtfulness. Only a few days ago, just before leaving for Boston he called me to the telephone quite early in the morning to give me an item of information which he felt I might find useful.

President Bailey ought to have been an historian and to have written the definitive general history of Vermont. No one will ever know how much he contributed to the work when his friend, Walter H. Crockett, wrote his four-volume history of Vermont. It was President Bailey's natural love for historical information and his talent for reading the records of the past to be gathered from state archives under his control which first excited the admiration and close friendship of Mr. James B. Wilbur and led him into those researches which resulted in James Wilbur's life of Ira Allen. As often happened with so many other of President's Bailey's friendships, this friendship worked out to the lasting advantage of the University with the Wilbur Chapel and Wilbur fund as permanent memorials."

the magnificent benefactions of James B. Wilbur; and how Mr. Bailey's untiring assembly of details in the history of the University, defended the University's right to those benefactions. The genius behind these gifts was Mr. Bailey's. The reward was to the University and to those who thereby were enabled to come to the University. And this is but typical of his devoted and unselfish life."

Y. W. C. A. Meets With Advisors

Jr. Month Delegate Tells of Convention

The Young Women's Christian Association cabinet met with the advisory board at Southwick on Wednesday, October 23. The members of the advisory board are: Charlotte Perkins '38, Miss Holbrook, Mrs. C. P. Smith, Jr., Mrs. Martha Blackwell, Mrs. John Perry and Mrs. Harold French. At this time reports were made by the members of the different boards on the various activities conducted by the organization.

Miriam Rubin '41 gave a very interesting talk on Junior Month, that was held in Boston during part of June and July this summer. Miriam was the delegate sent by the University of Vermont. The convention was sponsored by the Boston Council of Social Agencies.

Reports were given by Shirley Gray '41, Betty Cooper '42, and Gratia Pearl '42, who attended Camp O-At-Ka as representatives of the Y. W. C. A. of the University of Vermont. This camp was held for a week at East Sebago, Me., and was managed by the New England Student Christian Movement.

Sally Rome '42 spoke about her work this summer in the Henry Street Settlement House in New York City.

The new Red Cross project was discussed and plans were made as to how the work could best be carried out.

Mrs. Fowler Guest Of Mortar Board

Mortar Board entertained their national vice-president, Mrs. Fowler of Iowa, last week-end.

Breakfast was served at Southwick, Sunday morning, and then a business meeting of Mortar Boad was held after which Mrs. Fowler and several members of Mortar Board enjoyed a ride. Mrs. Fowler also met the Mortar Board advisors, Professor Dykhuizen, Miss Burwash, Mrs. Adams, and Mrs. Bickford.

Mortar Board's National Vice-President was entertained by the local chapter at dinner at Robinson Hall on Sunday. A tea was held in her honor Sunday afternoon at which alumnae of Mortar Board, advisors and Mortar Board members were present.

Elizabeth Gurney was hostess at a supper Sunday evening at her home for Mrs. Fowler and the other members of Mortar Board.

for comptroller on account of his executive ability and capacity for organization.

At that time he was serving his fifth term as Secretary of the State. Under his supervision the licensing and regulating of automobiles had grown into a business of vast proportions. This department was almost entirely created by him, and the body of automobile laws in the Vermont statute books was written largely under him. These laws are considered among the best in the United States and has been copied by many states. The State publicity department was also established under his direction. He was greatly interested in the development of the resources of Vermont and under his administration many tourists were attracted to the Green Mountain State.

He has been a trustee of the University since 1914 and was trustee and vice-president of the Winooski Savings Bank. His other activities include a directorship of the Howard National Bank and City Trust Company of Burlington; Presidency of the Board of Trustees of the Kurn Hattin Homes organization in Vermont; presidency of the Vermont Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and treasurership of the Vermont Children's Aid Society, Inc. President Bailey was elected as a director of the Rutland Railroad part of the New York Central system in April, 1925. He filled a vacancy caused by the death of George T. Jarvis of Rutland. In 1927 and 1928 he was elected to the office of chairman of the Burlington Salvation Army Campaign.

President Bailey's Colleagues Laud His Many Fine Traits

"To my mind, President Bailey's outstanding characteristic as a college president was his humanity which was rooted in a real interest in and love for young people. This was manifested on many occasions and in many different ways. For instance, at the close of a conference in his office during the first year of my work here he said, as I was leaving: 'By the way, what about Miss Blank, from ——? Have you talked with her lately!'

"I replied that I had not seen her for several days but I believed she was getting along nicely. President Bailey looked out of the window for a moment at the students passing back and forth to classes, then he said:

"'I saw that girl on the street the other day. She looked pale and tired. Remember what pink cheeks she had when she came here? I am afraid she is not having enough fun. Perhaps she is working too hard with earning her board and room on top of her college work. At your convenience, I wish you would find out just how things are going with her. See that she goes to a movie once in a while and has a little fun. I will take care of the expense. I don't want that girl to lose her enthusiasm for life, nor those pink cheeks either.'

"This is only one of many instances of President Bailey's concern with the welfare of individual students. He knew and understood their problems, especially those of the students with limited resources who were obliged to deny themselves much that others enjoyed. The President never forgot that group and in countless ways tried to make it easier for them. It was his habit to look at the students' side and try to understand the motives which might have animated any lack of cooperation on their part. Invariably he gave a student ample opportunity to present his or her case and his patience and tact in getting at the truth was unlimited. It was also his way to give any offender the benefit of the doubt and he would often say that it was much more important to find the solution which in the future would be best for the student, than it was to stand on the letter of the law.

"President Bailey followed the students who went out from the University with interest and pride. Many have been helped, both financially and in other ways, through his kindness. If one failed it was a cause of sorrow and disappointment and he invariably asked the question "What did the University fail to do for that person? Are we to blame?"

That a man burdened with so many administrative details should have preserved such a vital interest in the individual student is only one of many evidences of President Bailey's breadth of heart and mind."

MARY JEAN SIMPSON,
Dean of Women.

Elijah Swift, Dean of Arts and Sciences: "One of President Bailey's outstanding characteristics was his friendliness and willingness to help students and faculty. While his administration of the complex and varied activities of the University won our admiration, his human qualities won our hearts. Many a time he solved my problems with a wise suggestion or shouldered responsibility for me, and when I thanked him, he would say, 'Oh, that's all right. Don't you hesitate to come to me.' No one will ever know how many students continued in college, only through his help or how many he assisted by his ever-shrewd counsel. We, on the hill, have lost our best friend in the death of President Bailey."

Col. M. E. Spalding, professor of military science and tactics: "We always knew if any question arose, we had full support of President Bailey and that he had the real interest of the military department at heart. I am speaking also for all the officers who have been here on duty. In addition to a personal loss, I feel the military department had lost a real friend."

"If I were to attempt a comprehensive tribute to President Bailey, I should need to speak of his extraordinary business ability in administering the finances of the University, and of his wisdom, his calmness of spirit, and his magnanimity that made the faculty without exception his grateful supporters.

For a student publication, let me emphasize only the fact that the students of the University have lost their most valuable friend. No one will ever know all the instances of sympathetic help that he extended to students who needed advice or aid. No business, in his mind, took precedence of a student's need. No student ever had cause to hesitate to present his case. No case was ever treated unsympathetically. Not often does such opportunity, such ability, and such desire for friendly service reside in one man. The loss is irreparable."

PROF. W. E. AIKEN.

"The life of President Guy W. Bailey was one of consecration to the ideal of service. Officially and personally he gave to the University of Vermont over a long period of years all of his devotion and energy; working unceasingly, wisely and effectively for the welfare of students, faculty and alumni. His chief concern was to provide the best possible opportunities for the young men and women of his native state. His administration was one of accomplishment as evidenced by improved educational standards and physical facilities in all departments of the University during his term as president. The University has lost a true friend, a wise counsellor and an able administrator."

GEO. F. ECKHARD.

I first knew President Bailey as a college mate from 1898 to 1900. As a student, he was well liked, courteous at all times, and a friendly college man. Later when he was secretary of the state, I had connections with him and found him to be fine in all business relations.

Then, as the head of our University and throughout the years, he took great responsibility and carried his load splendidly. At all times, he was a man of strength and inspiration. As we mourn his departure, we must rejoice that he was spared so long, and could do so much for young men and women of Vermont. Surely a man's good works and gentle words will endure.

—M. B. CUMMINGS,
Professor of Horticulture.

I esteem it a great privilege to have known so fine and kindly a man as President Bailey. The girls in my dormitory, who have been fortunate enough to have known him, feel with me a very deep sorrow at his passing.

President Bailey was guest of honor at Grassmount's Christmas dinner two years ago. At that time, he expressed great pleasure at the spontaneous singing of the girls during dinner.

—ANNA P. WILLARD,
House Director at Grassmount.

"President Bailey was a true Vermonter. Loyal and effectively devoted to the state, he worked quietly and never for display. At the University his kindly spirit was constantly shown in helpfulness to students and to members of the faculty. Interested in its harmonious development, through his ability and tireless efforts the University has become an increasingly happy and friendly place in which to work."

PROFESSOR BURROWS.

"All Vermont has lost a true friend, and the Medical College particularly suffers in this loss. President Bailey understood thoroughly the problems confronting the Medical College, and none was more tireless in his efforts to meet these difficulties and surmount them than was President Bailey. To say that his loss was an irreparable one would be far short of our situation. He has nevertheless left us with an example of manly courage which will go far toward supporting our future endeavors."

DEAN KEMP.

"It has been pointed out with great truth and propriety that President Bailey combined an unusual number of important requisites of the successful university President. While we all recognize the remarkable friendliness and kindliness of this man others have dwelt upon that side of his personality and I should like to point out what seemed to me a really remarkable characteristic, namely, the scholarly quality.

"For a man who had been a stone cutter in his youth, and since graduation had been engaged in legal and business affairs, it seems remarkable that he was so much interested in classical and historical matters. It is all too easy for us to drift away from the more serious, scholarly habits when circumstances do not hold us to them.

"We never heard Mr. Bailey give a public address, no matter how informal the occasion nor how brief the talk, without admiring and wondering at the careful and thoughtful composition of the material as well as the fine sense and meaning embodied in it. He never gave a shallow talk; there was always thought behind it.

"We have all expressed surprise and admiration for the apt classical references in President Bailey's addresses. Living very keenly in the present, he never lost his admiration and respect for the great thinkers in the past. That characteristic holds an important lesson for us."

H. F. PERKINS,

"Only those who had worked with President Bailey during his administration can appreciate his courage, imagination, resourcefulness, and executive ability. Above everything else, he had faith in Vermont and in the future of the University."

MR. KEHOE.

"The death of President Bailey brings to everyone who has worked with him and for him a sense of personal loss. He was always patient and helpful no matter how small the problems may have seemed to him. With his many cares, he could always give each member of his University staff helpful consideration."

—MISS HELEN B. SHATTUCK,
Head Librarian of Billings Library.

"My acquaintance with President Bailey began when I came back here to teach in 1921. Every year since I have seen him several times on business, usually at my request, occasionally at his. Now and again I saw him at his home just around the corner.

"I was first delighted at his quick grasp of the essentials of a problem and at the way his questions went straight at the strength or weakness of a case. He would seize instantly on words or phrases that might give a wrong impression to outsiders. Many matters he would settle at once; others he wanted to think over. Almost always he would dictate a letter confirming the final agreement and it was from him I learned to worship the carbon copy.

"Mr. Bailey was a very busy man. He was often weary and sometimes in pain. Often things important to me were settled in three or four minutes. Yet he always gave the matter as much time as it required and rarely gave an impression of hurry. He was always courteous and never gave me the feeling that my business was less important than what came before or after. His cordial 'Come in again anytime' was a standing invitation to unload fresh worries onto a back already overburdened.

"For many years he shared an office and there were usually other people in the room. Interviews were then pretty well confined to business. More recently he had an office to himself. There he talked more freely and sometimes spoke of his own college days, of people and politics in Vermont, of students and their parents, uncles, aunts, and cousins, and of his plans for the University.

"One November he invited me to listen to election returns in his office. He had a sheet with estimates of the vote in many different towns in Vermont. As returns came in on the telephone he checked them off. Often he was right within five or ten votes out of several hundreds. It seemed he knew everybody in the state that mat-

A Next Door Neighbor Calls on President Bailey

Last June I was shown into President Bailey's sick room and found him, as usual, cheerful and smiling.

He remarked how much he enjoyed seeing what was going on in my garden.

His knowledge of vegetables, flowers, and especially trees always astonished me.

I reminded him of a time when I called his attention to a threatened demise of a fine row of elms then on College property, I recalled how I had explained to him that these fine forty-year-old elms were to be destroyed in order to make room for a sidewalk.

President Bailey recalled the incident and remarked "The straight and narrow path is usually the best but in the case of those trees a little crookedness of the path saved them."

President Bailey's interest in people, flowers, garden, trees and first of all the welfare of the College, seemed to control the natural depression accompanying sickness. This fact was impressed on me when leaving him that June day.

serving on many committees during that time. In September, 1908, he was elected Secretary of State and served for eleven years in that capacity.

On June 1, 1914, he was appointed trustee of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College for the term ending November 30, 1916, and served until November 30, 1922.

President Bailey served his state through every conceivable means. As well as through the State Legislature and the State University, he served through his affiliations with numerous charitable and industrial organizations.

He had held board positions on the boards of the New England Kurn Hattin Homes of Westminster, Mary Fletcher Hospital, Vermont Children's Aid Society, Inc., and Boston Seaman's Friend Society.

Received Cross of St. Seba

On March 6, 1931, he received from His Majesty King Alexander I of Jugoslavia the officer's cross of the Order of St. Seba. He also received a certificate from the American Legion for having rendered patriotic services during the World War, being in charge of the training of 1,100 men in signal corps work and mechanics school at the University.

He was a member of every Masonic body in the State of Vermont. In September, 1933, he was elected an honorary member of the Supreme Council-Sovereign Grand Inspectors General 33rd degree. He was also a member of Green Mountain Lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F.; Burlington Lodge, No. 916, B. P. O. E.; Mt. Mansfield Lodge No. 18, K. of P. In 1907 he was elected Grand Chancellor of the Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias of Vermont, and in August, 1913, he was elected supreme representative.

President Bailey was also a member of numerous clubs and organizations, including the Green Mountain Club, University Clubs of Boston and New York; American Bar Association; Rotary International; Bankers' Club of New York; Lake Placid Club; the Lake Mansfield Trout Club; and the Waubanakee Golf Club. He has been connected with various corporations and utilities, including the Winooski Savings Bank of which he was a trustee from January 15, 1913, until July, 1938, a director of the Howard National Bank and Trust Company, the Green Mountain Power Co., the Rutland Railroad Company, and director and vice-president of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

He was affiliated with the Congregational Church and had been a life-long Republican.

"So much one man can do that does both act and know" is typical of the late President Bailey's career. He has served his community, his state, and his country through the high standard set by his influence on scholastic, political, civil and spiritual matters.

R. O. Slack Named In Who's Who

Among the "Who's Who"'s there has appeared in recent years a "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." In the 1939-40 edition published last spring fifteen University of Vermont students received the high honor of having their names placed in this nationally known book.

Ransom O. Slack was the only member from the junior class at U. V. M. whose name was entered. His outstanding qualities of leadership, industry, scholarship and faithfulness gained this distinction for him. Among the honors he has acquired in his first three years at the University are: Editor-in-Chief of Year Book, member of Key and Serpent, assistant manager of baseball, winner of Wilbur Fund scholarship, member of Men's Glee Club and Kake Walk Committee, and president of Delta Psi fraternity.

Sports Cast

By the Sport Editor

When an able and inspiring leader is taken by death, all groups with whom he has had contact feel the loss deeply. President Bailey was such a leader and his loss is as much a blow to the athletic departments of the University as the academic. Wise and diligent in his administration, the late President was always a loyal supporter of University sports. He was fully aware of their place in the academic program. Whenever time and health permitted, he was present at athletic contests, and meetings, encouraging those participating, stressing the value of fair play and the lessons to be learned from good, clean competition. True to his character as a leader, he drove home to students the need of sportsmanship on the playing field, in the classroom, and in the outside world. For this reason, we join our sincere tribute for a truly great man to all those other words of praise and regret which have accompanied his passing. His example, we know, will always be an inspiring one.

By Way of Prediction

With an almost guilty feeling we pass now to the everpresent task of sports editors—analysis and prediction. New Hampshire comes here today with what promises to be a plenty tough team. Defeated only once and then at the hands of a strong Colby team the Wildcats boast a highly versatile backfield. Harold Hall is being labeled as the best New Hampshire back in a decade. He carried the ball thirty-one times against Colby for 92 yards net gain—only 19 less than the entire Mule team. Also hitting the headlines is Stacey Clark, tiny 140-pound back. Joe Gordon another back is also a letterman. The line sports five lettermen led by Captain Matt Flaherty, tackle, and diminutive Steve Lampson at end.

However, despite the might of the boys from Durham we're going to ask Tarzan to move over on his limb and give the nod to the Cats. We're counting on Vermont to maintain the pace set at Union. The Cats after a slow beginning are definitely on their way up and unless they suddenly lose steam should keep rolling. Furthermore the absence of injuries thus far is a definite point in their favor. We hardly think overconfidence can affect them now after the Trinity debacle. At the risk of a big fall we'll bet on the Cats.

This week's contest between Norwich and Middlebury will be very interesting. Undoubtedly the winner of that scrap will have to flip with Vermont for the championship. The Cadets seem to us to be the winning horse in this jaunt. Despite Middlebury's ability to play hob with its state opponents Domina and his cohorts should have enough power to keep the Panthers under control. Granted the Cadets do win, that Norwich-Vermont game should be, to use a vulgar term, a "lu-lu."

Starting Early

Coach Evans apparently believes in starting things early. With the football season still alive and kicking he has already called out the Vermont hoopsters for practice sessions. With Les Brown and Hank Beauchemin back and most of last year's squad available this coming season promises to be a lively one. The presence of many football players on the basketball squad calls to mind the statement of Chuck Taylor, noted hoop expert, to the effect that he does not approve of basketball players playing football. Mebbe so, Chuck, but where would we be if they didn't?

Frosh Track Men Race State Aggies

After having lost its Homecoming Day meet to the Dartmouth freshmen, the Vermont freshman cross-country team, far from being disheartened, is busily preparing to meet its traditional rival, the State Agricultural College yearling team. The team is running over the 2½-mile course daily, but Coach Archie Post has stated that no more time trials will be held, for he feels that he is well enough acquainted with the running ability of each of his men.

Despite their loss on Saturday, the frosh showed that they are as strong as any Vermont freshman team of recent years. If the week-end meet is any criterion the Green and Gold first-year men should cop its race of the 25th even though the Aggie harriers are reputed to be quite strong.

F. F. A. Meeting Thursday Night

The Future Farmers of America held a meeting last Thursday evening at seven o'clock in Morrill Hall under the leadership of Francis W. Nye '41.

Curtis A. Moore '41, Norman A. Stoddard '42, and Glen E. Streeter '42 were appointed members of a committee to plan a program of work. An executive committee was also appointed. The members are H. Nelson '41, A. Story '43 and N. Knight '44.

As was announced at the meeting, the U. V. M. Collegiate Chapter of F. A. A. will initiate the members of the Hinesburg and Essex Junction chapters to the degree of Future Farmers tomorrow night.

About thirty members of the organization including several freshmen were in attendance. After the regular business meeting the freshmen introduced themselves to the group and had the opportunity of getting acquainted with the upperclassmen.

Bits About Badminton

All women students interested in badminton please give your names to either Kay Kyle, phone 2959, or Alice Howe.

Practices will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and there are three tournaments to be held, the Green and Gold, Inter-Dorm, and a tournament with the University men's team.

In January the Badminton Club will hold its first meeting, and we want many members, so sign early and get some good practice in before the tournaments begin, the first one to be played off before Christmas vacation.

Individual Contests In Intramurals Held

The half-way mark for U. V. M. individual intramural sport competition this semester has already been passed. Golf, by reaching a conclusion, is much in advance of both the tennis and horseshoe contestants. On October 8, at the Waubanakee Golf Club, E. A. Keenan narrowly edged out L. W. Gallup 4 and 3 in an eighteen-hole playoff match to be proclaimed champion of the tournament.

Back to the netmen, we discover that J. E. Simpson will meet W. Harvey and West will encounter L. A. Simpson in the semi finals. The winner of these two matches will battle it out some time this week for the high honors. The tennis tournament should reach a real exciting climax if J. E. Simpson is pitted against L. A. Simpson because both are top-notch players. The winners of all these matches played thus far have been determined by the better of two out of three sets. In the finals, however, the champion will have to win three out of five.

The horseshoe singles tournament has just commenced. In the initial encounter P. Czachor pitched himself to a victory over R. Winship. Other results have not been reported as yet.

Frosh Ready For Game With Norwich

Statistics Reveal Kittens Have Edge

With but two games remaining on their schedule, the frosh have avowed to turn a dismal beginning into a successful ending. Subdued in their only two encounters, the Kittens have failed to score, but on the other hand have held the opposition to only 19 points.

The postponement of the game with Norwich, scheduled for today, until Monday, October 28 will afford the Kittens a well earned rest. During this past week Coach Sherry Fogg's men have scrimmaged the varsity twice. As a result the frosh mentor is rearranging his lineup for the coming engagement. A world of credit is in store for Fred Boardman who, although handicapped more than any other fellow on the squad, has wrested the starting left-end position from Paul Walgren for the Norwich encounter.

The return of Nate Pulde and Herb Sedlis at the tackles with Johnny Baxendale ready for instant action should strengthen the defense considerably. D. Eddy will remain at right guard where he has performed admirably during the first two games. Len Kunken, a reserve back, will be installed in the left guard slot replacing J. Williams. Charles Smith is to retain his pivot position, but Alex Kepnus, a reserve, will see plenty of action. D. Barry is to be the other wing.

The backfield remains practically the same but for one change. Riddle replaces Hal Mayforth at left half back. A. Lewkowicz as the blocking back, Reed as right halfback, and Charlie Pacini at fullback, are the remaining regular backs.

If the scores that Green Mountain defeated Norwich and Vermont frosh may serve as a criterion in estimating the final outcome of Monday's game. Coach Fogg's team will have its first victory. Green Mountain College overpowered the Norwich frosh 26 to 0, while beating Vermont 13 to 0.

Fogg doesn't expect it to be as easy as that, for said he, "They are tall and plenty tough."

Women in Sports

There is a bulletin on the Y Room board which the girls who are enrolled in a golf class are asked to notice. It concerns the special rates offered to women students at the Waubanakee Country Club.

Miss Eleanor Cummings, head of the physical education department, is spending this week-end in New York, where she is attending a convention for deans and directors for physical education in colleges.

Catamounts To Be Ho[sts] To Strong Wildcat Tea[m]

Durham Players Boast Fast Backfield; Both Elevens Defeated by Colby Mules

Taking a new lease on life, as the result of a decisive victory over a previously undefeated Union eleven, the University of Vermont gridsters primed themselves today for their meeting with the powerful New Hampshire Wildcats on Centennial Field tomorrow.

The Catamounts have been going through prolonged drilling since Monday in an endeavor to polish up its offensive weapons and trim the ragged edges off its defensive so that the Wildcats attack may be nipped in the bud.

This year's New Hampshire team appears to be as dangerous as any combination that has represented that school in recent years, for although Colby eked out a 21 to 19 win over the Granite Staters in the initial game of the season, the Wildcats bounced back to easily dispose of Bates and Maine topped off by a 19 to 6 defeat of Springfield College last Saturday.

All eyes will be focused on diminutive Stacy Clark who has been the mainspring of the Durhamites this season, but, we may rest assured that he has little chance of overshadowing Taylor or Spasyk who shape up to be among the best backs in small college ball.

Vermont Harriers To Meet Williams

With a meet at Williams on the horizon, the Vermont hill-and-dalers, after steamrolling their first three opponents, will be gunning for their fourth consecutive victory. Coach Archie Post has had no advance news as to the strength of Williams, but the boys from Massachusetts have always turned out strong in track events. Nevertheless, he is confident that his squad will do creditably.

Fred and Charlie Webster '42, long synonomous with cross-country at Vermont will pace the team, which includes Capt. Frank Livak '41, Ernie St. Marie '43, Stoddard '42, and Burgess '42, who did not run against Bowdoin because of a tonsillitis attack. Bud Hoyt '43, Duncan Corliss '43, Daan Zwick '43, Steinman '42, and Buttles '43 will probably compete.

The famous French film "Harvest" will be shown Friday, November 1 at 8.15 at the Southwick Gymnasium. The price of admission is 25 cents tax exempt. Tickets may be procured at the Museum, Book Store or from the campus representatives.

mory of the founder of the University of Vermont, was erected. This was followed by the building of Slade Hall in 1929. By 1931 Fleming Museum appeared on campus and in 1936 the Mabel Louise Southwick Memorial Building was erected to serve as a center for the women's activities. Other property has also been acquired under his guidance.

Extensive improvements on the campus grounds have been made during these years. Landscaping and other external improvements have been added recently, improvements which have done much to make our campus one of the most beautiful.

President Bailey was an excellent financier as well as the confidant and friend of his associates. Students little realize how great was his influence in securing the Student Loan funds which help so many of them through college. Since 1917, when President Bailey was Comptroller, the amount of these loan funds has increased by $157,346.40. In countless other ways, many of which are intangible, this able financier has added materially to the advancement of learning at Vermont.

Not only has the University grown in this manner during President Bailey's administration. The total enrollment of students has increased considerably, due in a large part to his determination to see that Vermont students found some way to come to college if they really wanted to. In 1919-20 the total number of different students at Vermont, including the summer school students, was 1,183. By 1939-40 the total enrollment had risen to include 2,337 students. The faculty is now about three times the size of the faculty of 1919-20.

However, the material services which President Bailey rendered to the development of the University are no more important than the spiritual aid which his leadership gave to the college. Ever optimistic, with a firm belief in Vermont's future, his loyalty, courage, leadership and sympathetic nature, inspire every Vermont student to live up to the high ideals to which he dedicated his life.

Dr. Moody to Speak At Collegium Meeting

The guest speaker at Colleguim Sunday evening will be Doctor P. A. Moody, head of the zoology department. His talk will be in relation to science and religion.

There will also be a devotional service and refreshments. Everyone is cordially invited.

Prof. G. H. Burrows of the Chemistry Department, was the speaker at Collegium, last week. He gave an interesting description of his trip to Yellowstone National Park this past summer, and told of his observations of the birds and flowers on the westward trip. When he reached the top of Mt. Washburn the panorama he saw from there made him realize how vast and spacious our western country really is. He also showed enlarged snapshots of the mountains and animals native to that region.

He emphasized the facts that we should retain the land with which we are so nobly endowed, learn to know nature more intimately, and to use our legs for something more than rudimentary limbs."

At the close of his talk refreshments were served by the committee.

Because of the war, no Rhodes scholarships will be granted in 1940.

I. R. C. Political Rally Next Tuesday

Next Tuesday, October 29, International Relations Club will sponsor a political rally for students only. The speakers will be from the student body and anyone may express his or her views.

The rally will be held in the cage of the gym at 7.30 p.m. Prof. Daniel B. Carroll, head of the political science department, will act as moderator.

The distinctive feature of the rally, aside from the fact that it is for the students themselves, is that the sponsor is pledged to impartiality. The constitution of the International Relations Club requires that it examine both sides of every question. Furthermore, since the University is a state college, the college organization prefers to be impartial.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The CYNIC has recently declared in favor of Wendell Willkie as its choice for presidential candidate. This writer begs to differ with the opinion expressed in that editorial.

The present administration has put through more social reforms in less than eight years than all the other administrations (Republican and Democratic) since the Civil War. Today we have a comprehensive social security program covering in one way or another over one-half of the inhabitants of this country. The aged, the unemployed, the orphaned, the blind and crippled have been aided and protected.

Child welfare and public health services have been expanded. Vocational education has been extended to cover those who need it. Youth has been given aid to acquire trades and jobs in order to obtain advanced education. Housing improvements have been made in every state.

The unemployed have been given jobs. The employed have received the right to bargain collectively. A ceiling for hours and a floor for wages have been established. Conditions of labor have been improved. Through the Wagner Act, labor has come into its own. Union membership is at its greatest peak in our history, whereas industrial disputes have declined. These forgotten men (by the previous Republican administrations) will not forget to remember whence these improvements came on election day.

The farmer has not been forgotten as he was by the Republicans after the World War. He has been taught new and better methods of conservation. He has been aided in the payment of his debts. He has been encouraged to diversify his products. He has received aid and instruction in production and marketing to prevent wasteful overexpansion. He has received rural electrification and better roads.

Senator McNary voted for most of these improvements. Is not his about face merely a political move? Wasn't he nominated by the Republicans because the liberal West, largely agricultural, must be appeased?

Reforms have been made in the banking structure. The stock markets have come in for the control they so sadly needed. Monopoly of both labor and capital has been discouraged. Much-needed reforms have been made in the utilities, transportation, steel and other industries.

This administration has consistently pointed at the danger of the aggressors and their threat to America. It has stood for the rights of humanity and has denounced racial prejudice. It has done all it could to increase international cooperation. In the Western Hemisphere, the "Big Stick" has been replaced by the "Big Brother." Its trade policy has been one of international cooperation rather than one dominated purely by motives of domestic protection and high tariff walls.

At a time when the whole world has seen the replacement of human values by those purely material, it has maintained that the cornerstone of Democracy is faith of the common man in a representative government. Social progress must continue if we are to keep faith and certainly Roosevelt has a long and distinguished record in that direction. Willkie on the other hand, has ridden consistently with the forces of reaction and laissez faire as exemplified by the sordid record of corruption in business and in government during the twenties. After all, Roosevelt has placed the Almighty Soul above the "Almighty Dollar." Can the same be said of Willkie?

Doings At Southwick

Anyone who is interested in forming a new organization or obtaining a job, may feel free to consult Mrs. Bickford at any time.

Mrs. Bickford may be reached at her home from 12.30 to 2.00, for appointments or information.

It is of interest for everyone to know that it is not too late to join a dancing class.

The schedule for the dancing classes is as follows:

The beginners' class for men will meet next Tuesday evening, October 29, from 7.00 to 10.00 at Southwick.

The beginners' class for women will have its next meeting Friday, November 25 at Southwick.

A continuation group, including those people who have been in a dancing class before, will meet Wednesday, October 30, 7.30, at Southwick.

Mr. Eldred Speaks

Mr. Horace B. Eldred of the Fleming Museum discussed broadcasting at the Methodist College Group meeting this week. He compared broadcasting with the stage and the cinema, showing how much more must be put into dialogue for radio than for others. Then several of the members read a short drama that has actually been used on radio, illustrating these points.

Three Men Pledged

Vermont Alpha of Phi Delta Theta announces the pledging of William West '43 of Essex Junction, Vt., and of Robert Lockwood '44 of Sparta, N. J., on Tuesday, October 22.

Phi Chapter of Phi Sigma Delta announces the pledging of Robert Walloch '42.

Meeting of Freshmen

There will be a meeting for all freshman women and sophomore transfers Wednesday, October 30 at 7:30 at Southwick. At this meeting, representatives from sorority groups will speak on the advantages of being a sorority woman. Also there will be a representative to speak on the advantages of being independent.

NEWMAN CLUB—There will be a meeting of the entire Club, Sunday, October 27, at 7.30 p.m., in the Cathedral High School. Officers will be elected at this meeting.

Tributes

tered, and everybody—at least everybody in trouble—mattered to him.

"He had an insatiable curiosity about students and often when I had told him everything I knew about a student, he would go on to add a few chapters of family relationships and local background. Almost the only time he showed irritation was when I spoke of a prominent alumnus in the state by his first name and got it wrong.

"No kindness was too large or too small for him to think of or do. Once I appeared with an obvious frog in my throat. He pulled out a box of Sucrets and made be a present of it on the spot, accompanying it with a glowing eulogy of their efficacy. He gave me much sound advice about lawyers and doctors, investments, and personal relations of many sorts.

"Of the position he himself held I sometimes feel he had no idea. Alumni much older than he, some of them nationally known in their own right, treated a word from him almost as a royal command. Once there was much complaint about noise in the library. He went over and walked down the aisle and back. He was then heard to declare that the complaint must have been groundless, as he had not heard any noise.

"President Bailey was a conservative in education as in politics. He majored in Greek and maintained that a man or woman with a sound classical training can do or soon learn to do nearly anything. The classical scholarships he established are sound evidence of his faith.

"His eyes were on the future and his mind always busy with ways and means to realize it. He wanted every Vermont boy or girl capable of good college work to have a chance. He wanted a university not so much bigger as better.

"President Bailey was a man of keen mind, prodigious memory, sound judgment, and clear vision, yet all these he shared in some measure with many others. What set him apart is character, a moral worth that bulked like Mansfield. His greatest achievement was himself. The impression he left is one of selfless devotion to the young men and women of Vermont and to the University for which he lived and died."

L. M. PRINDLE '15.

"This tragedy was to me, as to everyone else, an extremely hard blow. It was so sudden that I am not yet able to realize that it actually happened.

"I feel, that I have been very close to President Bailey in many ways. I knew the problems that confronted him and experienced his joys and his sorrows. His main interest lie chiefly in all things that pertained to University life and activities. His only interest was the University, its growth and its development.

"Having known him as I did, I can justifiably say that the University and everyone connected with the University, including the students, have lost their best friend.

"One of his greatest dreams was to lay the cornerstone of the new Waterman Building. Though he will not be able to fulfill that life-long ambition, he would say, if he could, 'Carry on and complete the vision that has been in my mind.'"

PROFESSOR BUTTERFIELD.

"With deep sorrow it pains me when I think of the passing of so great a man as President Bailey. The University has lost one of its greatest assets with his passing.

"Today we pay tribute and homage to one whose characteristics were infinitely great. One of his most outstanding characteristics was his relationship with the students. His nature was affable and he was always willing to go out of his way to solve a student's problems. Another of the outstanding characteristics of the late president was his interest in making the University of Vermont's campus and grounds one of the most beautiful of all colleges. He was also an avid supporter of athletics and always did his share to promote athletics on the Vermont campus.

"Personally, I feel that the University has lost one of its greatest men. He was a man loved by all and if it were vested in him, he would want us, in all likelihood, to carry on where he left off."

Publication Heads Go To Detroit

The more important cogs on U. V. M. publications will be in Detroit on Nov 7, 8, 9. The occasion for this visit is the Associated Collegiate Press Convention in the motor city. Newspapermen and women from most of the colleges and universities in the nation will be there. Maywood Metcalf '41, editor-in-chief of the CYNIC, R. K. Kenney '41, business manager, Dorothea Smith '41, advertising manager, R. B. Hunting '42, editor of the Ariel, and C. G. Miller '42, business manager will attend the convention.

Discussion will be on cooperation between papers, better organization, new reporting methods, and many other subjects of interest to the college papers. The five students will leave by train on November 5 and return on November 11. The Book-Cadillac Hotel will be host to our representatives.

Pictures Being Taken For this Year's Ariel

According to R. Hunting '42, editor-in-chief of the Ariel, plans for this year's Ariel are proceeding satisfactorily. The plan of the book has been agreed upon and the photographer chosen. Photography will be done by the Zansky Studios of New Haven and the partial schedule for taking pictures is as follows:

Monday, October 21, the pictures of juniors were begun. S. Pike '42 and Nancy Goodwin '42, co-photographic editors urge all juniors who have not yet done so, to sign up for pictures sometime next week. Some of the group pictures and fraternity pictures will also be taken next week.

Catamounts Engaged For Coming Military Ball

"Tempi" Conner '44 and "Dorey" Doerfler '44 To Sing Lyrics with Enlarged Local Band

The crowning social event of the semester, the annual Military Ball, is to be held in the gymnasium Friday evening, November 15, from nine until one, with the Catamounts providing the musical entertainment. This formal dance, sponsored by Champlain Sabres, the senior honorary military society, promises to be "new, novel and different," according to T. Huntley '41, chairman of publicity for the affair.

As a special feature of the evening the Catamount orchestra is to be enlarged to include fifteen pieces, and will feature two members of the freshman class as vocalists, namely, Doris Doerfler and Tempi Conner. The price of admission has been reduced to one dollar and sixty-five cents per couple. This compares very favorably with that of the Junior Prom, the only other formal event of the school year, and the decided decrease from former years should prove a special drawing card.

Col. and Mrs. Spaulding and Capt. and Mrs. Simpson of the military department of the University of Vermont will chaperone this colorful affair.

For the first time this year selection of the co-ed major, who will rule over the festivities the evening of the ball, will be left entirely to the whole student body, whereas in former years the winning queen was chosen by members of the R. O. T. C. Nominations for the office of co-ed major will take place this week, while the actual voting will be held some time next week in the Old Mill corridor.

The committee for the ball, selected from the members of Champlain Sabres, are: E. Guilbert, chairman of the floor and arrangements for music; R. Copp, chairman of programs and tickets; Taze Huntley, chairman of publicity; J. Palmer, chairman of decorations; and Larry Simpson, chairman of co-ed major elections.

Fund Established As Aid to Youth

Fellowship Helps War-Impoverished People

An American Youth Fellowship Fund for the purpose of aiding young people impoverished by the recent wars was recently announced by Jack McMichael, former chairman of the National Intercollegiate Christian Council and now chairman of the American Youth Congress, instigator of the fund.

Three groups of greatest need have been specified by the Fund: the youth of China, anti-Fascist young people trapped in France, and youthful anti-Nazis interned in Canada.

Struggling to secure an education despite constant bombardment, the Chinese young people are establishing small new cooperative industries in China's hinterland, where they may escape destruction and where they may work to meet the manifold needs of their 400,000,000 countrymen. To further their cause, the Fund appeals for donations to help young people attend general and industrial schools at the small average cost of $2.30 per student per month.

Young Spaniards and members of the International Brigades who underwent almost three years of war in Spain and have experienced harsh internment in

High School Editors To Hold Conference

Clinics at Southwick Will Take Up Problems

Editors of high school papers and their faculty advisors from high schools throughout Vermont will come to Burlington for their annual fall conference with the University of Vermont next Saturday, November 2. Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University, who directs the conference, has announced that this year it will consist mainly of informal clinics or discussion groups on specialized fields of interest in the publication line. The meetings will convene at the Southwick Building, with assembly from 10 to 10.30 in the morning, clinics from 10.30 to 12.30, an hour's lunch period from 12.30 to 1.30, with conferees and speakers meeting informally over a basket lunch provided by the University; two hours of afternoon clinics from 1.30 to 3.30, and general assembly and closing from 3.30 to 4 p.m.

While nearly all the clinics will deal with various types of newspaper and magazine writing, especially adapted for high school publications, there will also be a clinic on novel writing, led by Elliott T. Merrick of the University of Vermont English department, a well-known novelist. Other morning sections are those on the short story, led by Laura Loudon of Burlington, whose short stories have recently been published in a number of periodicals including the American Magazine; poetry, Prof. Benjamin B. Wainwright and articles, Prof. Leon W. Dean, both of the University English department.

In the afternoon, essays will be taken up in one clinic, with Harold L. Chaffey of Brattleboro High School leading the discussion; Russell Erwin of Montpelier High School will head the clinic on yearbooks, Ben B. Lane of the Lane Press, Burlington, will give pointers on printing in a clinic taking up that angle of publication, and Miss Frances W. Field, English teacher in Rutland High School and advisor to the school newspaper, will discuss news getting and writing in high school publications.

Corbitt '41 Elected Newman Club Head

At the second meeting of the Newman Club held on Sunday, October 27, officers chosen for this school year were announced. J. F. Corbitt '41 was elected president; Marjorie Witham '43, vice-president; Mary Germain '43, secretary; and M. C. Reynolds '42 for treasurer.

Dr. Katherine McSweeney announced that the guest speakers for the year were to be members of the faculty from St. Michael's College.

Plans for the first semester were discussed. It was decided to hold informal meetings often, for anyone who wished to attend. The first of this type of meeting is to be held on Tuesday, November 5, at 157 South Union Street.

Renowned Film, Harvest, Will Play Here Friday

Brought Here After "Sensational Battle With N. Y. Censors"

"No student should miss 'Harvest,' the great French film," stated Doctor Perkins, who is responsible for the film's being brought to Burlington. "After a sensational battle with the New York Board of Censors, the Fleming Museum is bringing the film to Burlington for one showing on Friday evening, November 1."

Mrs. Roosevelt visited New York for the express purpose of seeing this film and "was thrilled throughout the entire performance." She complimented the film and praised the handling of the foreign dialogue. "It was so excellent that there was no trouble in following the continuity of the story. One was hardly conscious that the dialogue was in French."

The New York Times said, "It belongs among the really memorable achievements of the screen." Damon Runyan said, "A profound and beautiful film, deserving the highest praise."

Simple Story

Marcel Pagnol's artistry in producing the film is matched by that of his players. The simple but moving story reveals the primitive partnership of a man and a woman wresting their living from the land. It is grounded on simple truths, such as these: that the earth, uncared for, grows barren, but, when tended, yields a bountiful harvest; so with man and woman.

The characters are expertly played by leading stars of the French theater. The moving rôles of Gabriel Gabrio and Orane Demazis are balanced by the comedy supplied by Fernandel, who was recently voted the most popular film star in France.

Highly Praised

Critics used only superlatives in commenting on the successful film. We quote a few:

"It is a great film and it may well be that 'Harvest,' in setting too high a standard, makes one unjust to other pictures."—The Nation.

"A film to rejoice over—one of the finest films of the year."—Frank S. Nugent, New York Times.

"A deserved hit!"—Walter Winchell.

"It is tremendously moving."—Katherine Hepburn.

"A profound and beautiful photoplay with a great and noble theme."—Archer Winston, New York Post.

Tickets are on sale at the Fleming Museum and College Book Store, and may also be obtained from members of the French Club. The admission price is twenty-five cents.

Outing Club Sponsors Mt. Mansfield Hike

The University of Vermont Outing Club made another overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday, October 26 and 27, going to Butler Lodge in Stevensville. Thirteen members of the Outing Club left the gymnasium by auto on Saturday afternoon. After a thrilling hike up the trail in darkness the group spent the night at Butler Lodge. On Sunday several people continued to the top of Mt. Mansfield. The group returned to Burlington at five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

D. W. Zwick '43 was in charge of hike. E. C. Bailey '40 chaperoned the group.

Four Prominent Seniors To Lead Rally Tonight

Excitement on Campus Rises as Students Prepare to Defend Presidential Favorites

DOROTHEA SMITH '41

DONALD MALEY '41

Tuesday evening the cage of the gym will echo and re-echo the battle cries of the followers of Roosevelt and Willkie at the student political rally, sponsored by the International Relations Club. Four prominent citizens of the U. V. M. student body will make the leading speeches to start the ball rolling. For Roosevelt, the Democrats will be D. Maley '41, Kappa Sigma and member of the Boulder Society, and Shirley Gray '41, Pi Beta Phi, president of Y. W. C. A. and member of Mortar Board, while for Willkie, the Republicans will be R. Kenney '41, Delta Psi, president of Interfraternity Council and member of Boulder, and Dorothea Smith '41, president of the Outing Club.

After these speeches there will be an open discussion for any persons having reasons for their particular political inclination that need expressing or, having no statement to make at that time, merely wishing to cheer loudly for their party orators. The seating will be arranged so that the Republicans will be on one side and the Democrats on the other side of the cage, which will be decorated with political banners to help achieve the mood of a political meeting.

Professor Carroll of the political science department will act as moderator, with students the only participants. Everyone is urged to be in the cage at 7.30, October 29, at least to lend his support to his particular political party whether he has any comments to make or not. Everyone will be given a chance to speak and only eggs or other such ammunition will be unwelcome.

Sororities To Hold Open House

All New Women Will Be Welcome

On Thursday and Friday of this week, October 31 and November 1, all sororities on campus will hold open houses for the first time during this year. There will also be open houses the following week on Thursday and Friday. Both weeks on Thursdays open houses will be in the evening from 7.00 to 8.30 and on Fridays in the afternoon from 4.00 to 5.30. On these days all freshman and sophomore transfers will be made welcome at the sorority houses.

Following is a list of the houses which will be open this week and next:

Kappa Alpha Theta, 215 S. Prospect Street.

Delta Delta Delta, 143 S. Willard Street.

Pi Beta Phi, 369 S. Prospect Street.

Alpha Xi Delta, 39 Robinson Court.

Alpha Chi Omega, 384 Main Street.

Sigma Gamma, South Lounge at Southwick.

Delta Phi Epsilon, North Lounge at Southwick.

Dr. Robbins Speaks On Civilization

The Vermont Christian Association presented Dr. J. C. Robbins, a member of the faculty of Andover-Newton Theological Society and a former foreign secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Sunday afternoon at 3.00 o'clock at Southwick, in an address entitled "Can We Save Civilization?" He was introduced by the Rev. O. H. Sisson, pastor of the local First Baptist Church.

Doctor Robbins emphasized the importance of a progressive, rather than a static, civilization in which there are personal rights of liberty and justice and in which classes and races have learned to work together, living side by side as men and not as beasts.

"We can build a civilization," he said, "on integrity. We have Christian fathers, Christian mothers, a Christian home, and a world organization in a church that is alive, vital, and self-sacrificing. If there are enough of us who are loyal enough, who work hard enough, and who follow and adopt the ways of Jesus Christ enough, we can build a new world: a new world in which men help each other;

Freshmen to Hear About Sororities

There will be a meeting of all freshman women at Southwick on Wednesday night, October 30, at 7.30. At this meeting there will be talks by Dean Simpson and members of each sorority on the campus. Also "Happy" Dustan '42 will tell the advantages of not being a sorority member. Pan-Hellenic will at this time give out information sheets. This meeting will not count as a night out. Plan to come and get that information you have been waiting for.

Roger Blood Speaks To Methodist Group

The speaker at the Methodist College Group meeting Sunday evening was Mr. Roger Blood of the State Y. M. C. A., who is in charge of the High Y movement. He spoke of our responsibilities as educated adults in guiding the youth of the nation, especially those of high school age.

H. E. Thurber '43 announced a party to be held at the Y. M. C. A. building next week Thursday, November 7.

We Support — — — — — the Rally!

With only one week left before America goes to the polls to elect its President, the Student Political Rally, which is being held tonight, should be attended by every U. V. M. student. Regardless of one's choice for President, it is certainly stimulating to have some interest and excitement on the campus about issues of national importance.

The policies and the programs in the present campaign are vital to all. America is fast approaching one of the most critical periods in its history. Some of the truly basic fundamentals of our American way of life are on trial. Therefore, is it not the place of youth to so inform themselves of the policies of the two candidates so that they can vote wisely and with the realization that their choice is the right one?

The four students who are going to start the political wheel turning tonight are to be commended for their cooperation with Professor Millikan and the International Relations Club who are sponsoring the rally. Professor Millikan, however, told us that the four speakers were only to act as "sparks" to arouse the student body's participation in the discussions. Since the rally is being patterned after similar rallies in stadiums throughout the country, we hope that in tonight's rally extemporaneous speeches will spring out of the talks by the four leaders as citizens throughout the country respond to the political speeches of national leaders. Student response will be absolutely essential if the rally achieves its purpose.

The third term issue which Senator Vandenberg called the "Issue No. 1 at November's polls," will undoubtedly be a major point under discussion tonight. That senator went so far as to charge that President Roosevelt "during his two terms in the White House has exhibited a greater appetite for power than any President who ever preceded him."

Statements like Vandenberg's will probably be met with facts that point to the numerous creditable things that President Roosevelt has done in the past eight years. His supporters will undoubtedly mention the fact that it is a bad policy "to change horses in the middle of the stream" by putting in office a man who (they say) is not experienced enough nor capable of running a nation in what will undoubtedly be one of the most important times in American history.

Regardless of whom the students are supporting tonight, the rally is, we feel, an excellent innovation, for in its very purpose it is maintaining the American way of life. This way of life is being emphasized now by many educators who know what it will mean to the United States institutions if totalitarian traditions are substituted for our inherited democratic customs which are stronger than law because they are inherent in our lives. Since democracy today means the freeing of intelligence for independent, effective thought, the rally is a democratic form whereby everyone may express his opinion.

We urge all Vermonters to attend the rally tonight and defend the candidate for the big job of President whom you honestly feel will best maintain the American way of life which we are coming to cherish more each day.

The World Front

By Robert Wolfe and Fulvio Bardossi

Stating the Issues

Since, in his own words, Wendell Willkie has constantly emphasized the relation between economic policy and national defense; since he has denounced the New Deal economy as an impediment in the course of national preparedness, we feel that a rejection of his economic philosophy will constitute the major step in the rejection of Mr. Willkie as the next President of the United States. The Republican candidate has never held public office, therefore, we cannot judge his political principles from his actions, but must turn to his own statements of those principles . . . . statements which when taken as a whole form a strange hodge-podge indeed.

What is Mr. Willkie's economic policy? Fundamentally, this is the gist of it—government should let business alone. We should return to a system of free enterprise. "Those who now enjoy the benefits of free enterprise should value it above everything else, even above security, above any of those new concepts that have been offered to us in its place." (Indiana State Day address at World's Fair, June 1, 1939.) In continuing the statement of his policy in subsequent speeches, Mr. Willkie has scored the present administration for discouraging business by restrictive legislation and destroying business confidence.

Mr. Willkie has completely overlooked or disregarded the essential reason for government regulation of industry, namely, industry as a self-regulator of production and distribution has shown its inability to cope with post-war and depression problems. Mr. Willkie is still dreaming of the glowing twenties when the "boom days" meant prosperity and opportunity. He has failed to realize that "twelve of the most eventful and tragic years of modern history have passed since that era and have left an ineradicable mark on the pattern of our society." He is not aware that economics cannot look backward, but must find principles to meet the new present situation.

Is Willkie Justified?

But, let us set aside this vital fact for purposes of discussion and by an investigation of the facts determine whether Mr. Willkie is justified in his statement that government restrictions under the New Deal have hampered rather than aided business recovery. The facts are these:

1. A substantial and rapid recovery occurred between 1932 and 1936 when most of the so-called "restrictive legislation" was enacted.

2. Between 1936 and the middle of the present year there was no consistent growth in production or employment, a period during which some of this regulatory legislation was abolished by the Supreme Court.

3. Despite Mr. Willkie's fulminations on the evils of government competition and regulation, his power companies competing against the T. V. A. have made more money and sold more electricity than ever before.

4. The industries lagging in recovery suffered not from New Deal legislation, but rather from the effects of former speculative sprees and insistence on a maintenance of high prices, e.g., the railroads, building construction industry, and makers of capital goods.

The above facts are not the result of wishful thinking, but were gleaned from such sources as "Income and Economic Progress" by the Public Affairs Committee, Inc.; "The United States: A Graphic History" by Hacker, Modley and Taylor; The New Republic; and the reports of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee on Commonwealth and Southern and Subsidiary Corporations.

Economics and Preparedness

We come now to the third and most important aspect of Mr. Willkie's economic policy. He asserts that the New Deal economic system is incapable of meeting the requirements of an adequate national defense and foreign policy. What alternative solution does Mr. Willkie offer? The policy of free enterprise, his panacea for all ills. As stated above, the Republican nominee is ignoring the great changes of the past twelve years, he wishes to resurrect obsolete principles to meet the menacing advance of new and appalling situations.

"We must continue the operation of our system of free enterprise. We must maintain and add to the spirit of unity of the American people." This is Willkie's method of preventing the European tragedy from befalling us. He says nothing about "what is to be done with free enterprise that finds national defense unattractive except at a price of its own fixing." (The Nation, October 5, 1940.)

Apparently Mr. Willkie has not studied the cases of Britain and France thoroughly, otherwise he would have seen that in both countries "industrial coordination for total defense" was not furthered by a business government. In Britain, Baldwin and Chamberlain both represented conservative business men. In France under all governments big business constantly impeded military appropriations and preparations. In the present British government the unifying element is Churchill—a virtual independent, who gave important posts to responsible labor representatives. Irresoluteness and indecision in meeting the totalitarian challenge were the common failings of the business governments whose principles Mr. Willkie would have us adopt.

The Summing-up

In summing-up, neither as a solution to domestic ills nor as a coordinator of national defense or foreign policy does Willkie's economic policy hold water. Secondly, his criticism of New Deal economics does not correspond to known facts. Consequently, Mr. Willkie in seeking election on the basis of his economic policy has defeated himself by his own utterances.

S. Burton Heath's "Yankee Reporter" Reviewed by Prof. Leon W. Dean

S. Burton Heath, Vermonter and Pulitzer Prize winning reporter, has recently published an excellent book. It is one of those books that will keep one away from the radio, his job and peradventure a football game. The book is about Heath himself. Such books are called autobiographies and this one justly deserves the title.

Heath goes all out in the book. He doesn't spare himself. President Roosevelt, would-be president Dewey or anyone else. For a reticent Vermonter, Heath does well in revelations. The reader will get as varied a hand-out of humble Vermont farm life and life behind the scenes with the great and near-great as any reader deserves . . . . and more. By the time the reader arrives at the back cover—which he will in one 400-page setting—he will know more about some things and some people than when he started; enjoying meanwhile a pungent adventure in journalism and life.

Heath had a steep time of it as a Vermont farm kid. Most of the while he was dragging his sled uphill. But he was an independent, industrious little tyke even if he didn't have a spare handkerchief on which to wipe his nose. Somehow, between jumps, he picked up an education. Then he went to France, was gassed, and came back with a bundle of disillusionments tied into a pair of unbowed Yankee shoulders. With such a background he scrambled into small-town newspaper work and politics. He could not have found better training. All this he topped off with a college course at the University of Vermont where, he says, he learned some of the amenities of life, how to talk as well as write, and a few other things. It also provided him with an invaluable wife named Emily.

The Heaths started out on a roving assignment that hit most of the hard spots but that finally led to the World Telegram, and the contacts with men and affairs that have made the name of Heath famous in the by-lines of the newspaper world.

The pages of the book are alive with intimate anecdotes about political and business leaders of America—Wendell Willkie, Fiorello LaGuardia, Al Smith, John W. Davis, Samuel Seabury, Adolph A. Berle, Jr., Senator Robert Wagner and others. The author has a trick of holding a candle back of such men and letting his readers see through them.

Heath has a long, lean jawed face with questing eyes. He might in appearance be cast for the rôle of Sherlock Holmes. He is intelligent, persevering, painstaking by nature, an individualist, a reformer. In writing his book he has used a clear, vigorous, swiftly moving journalistic style that leaves no dull interludes. It is the fascinating and human story of a small town boy who is swinging the trapezes in the big top, but would still prefer to see green grass beneath him instead of sawdust.

Another Vermonter, then, has written a book. In it he pulls no punches. The name of the book is "Yankee Reporter," published by Wilfred Funk, Inc., New York.

Win in the Wind

The marrow of our respective bones is frozen, our vital current is congealed, and the water on our collective brains is solidified but we're happy, delighted, delirious. The wind blew cold but the Cats were hot Saturday. So hot that they roasted the bewildered Wildcats to a turn. And when we weren't busy trying to warm our feet in somebody's pockets, we got a big kick out of Vermont's new and rejuvenated eleven. Picking up right where they left off last week at Union, the Catamounts unleashed an attack that was somewhat of an eye-opener to local fans still nourishing notions of the Colby and Northeastern games.

Ye scribe, due to the call of dinner, was late for the kick-off. It's a good thing we weren't very late or we would have missed that first Vermont score. Remember that one? The one where Mickey Gilbert pulled a sneak on a supposed field-goal play and took Taylor's pass for a touchdown? At this point a kindly gentleman in a black overcoat invited us down out of the upper tier to a warmer seat. And then Frankie threw another pass to Misty Rice for another score. Gloria, gloria, gaudeamus.

In Re—Dark Horses

Came the second quarter and in went the second team. Surprise of the afternoon was Utley who after a touchdown by the Wildcats uncorked a 60-yard run that was a beauty. In fact the entire second team was right on the ball holding the opposition even in the quarter.

At half time the band did its stuff and we meditated on the great reliability of advance dope. In every game thus far the opposition has come here bearing with it highly heralded stars. "Watch so-and-so" is the cry and we do—only there isn't any "so-and-so" to watch because an unknown "Joe Doaks" gets in the limelight. So it was with Colby. So it was with New Hampshire. The famous Clark was quickly benched and a guy called Davis and another called Begin proceeded to do about 99 percent of the Wildcat ball carrying assisted by "Win" MacDonald.

In the second half Davis intercepted a Catamount pass and skedaddled up the sidelines in a brilliant 60-yard run. Don Begin, somewhat of a one-man-team, spent two periods giving the Green and Gold a little competition. And we madly tore our hair and cursed those seers who pass around all that wonderful information before game time.

It was a great game. The only note of foreboding was the announcement that Norwich had shelled Middlebury off the map. Best news of the season was the excellent playing of such supposedly reserve men as Broutsas and Utley. One of the best plays of the afternoon was the Long to Broutsas lateral in the fourth quarter for the last touchdown of the game for Vermont.

There now remains one more hurdle before Vermont gets to Norwich—R. P. I. Saturday the Polytechnic gridders defeated Union but not quite as impressively as the Cats. Indications are that R. P. I. has a scrappy outfit which ought to test Vermont's strength. We're trusting, however, that the Green and Gold will make this another victory.

Then—Norwich. Oh boy—if you don't mind our getting excited. Well here we are at the end—the end of a column, the end of a radio program, the end of a night, the end of a—oh shucks this is getting silly.

Frosh Harriers Defeat Aggies

The frosh harriers, with a defeat at the hands of Dartmouth under their belts, came back to trounce the Vermont State School of Agriculture to the tune of 20-35.

The Aggies were virtually out-classed when "Goodie" Goodell, Jack Grant, and Bob Lockwood, all wearing the Green and Gold rounded the two and one-half-mile circuit in 16:12 for a three-way tie for first place. Kennedy of the Aggies placed fourth, while McLaren, a Vermont hill-and-daler took fifth. Partridge and Coleman, the only other Aggies to finish annexed fifth and sixth respectively.

Summary of finish:

(1) Lockwood (Vt.); (2) Goodell (Vt.); (3) Grant (Vt.); (4) Kennedy (Aggies); (5) McLaren (Vt.); (6) Partridge (Aggies); (7) Coleman (Aggies); (8) Chase (Aggies); (9) Helberg (Vt.); (10) Stevens (Aggies).

Time for run—16:12.

Catamounts Blitzkrieg Wildcats, 33-13

One Pass—Caught

MISTY RICE

They sent a powerful, veteran team, winner of three out of four games this season, down from the hills of New Hampshire last Saturday to tangle with a Catamount eleven that has been a question mark all season and when the final whistle blew that question mark was erased thoroughly and the Wildcats, victims of a crushing 33-13 defeat, were sent back to nurse the wounds administered by a tricky, powerful Green and Gold team that gave an exhibition of scoring power which will not soon be forgotten.

Approximately 2,000 people sat and thrilled as they watched this football machine of Coach Fuzzy Evans display all the razzle-dazzle in the books. There were laterals, shovel passes, single reverses, double reverses, and long touchdown passes and runs. The intensive practice and long hours of blocking that Coach Evans gave his boys showed results as his forward wall proceeded to cut down their opponents.

It was evident from the opening kickoff that the Vermont boys were primed for this game and they proceeded to show their stuff by marching 76 yards uninterrupted for the first touchdown of the game.

Taylor Aerials

Spasyk received the kickoff on his own goal line and ran it back to the 24-yard line. Taylor went through for 4 yards and then a reverse, Gilbert to Taylor, was good for 6 yards and a first down. Gilbert faked a reverse and drove through the center for 4 yards. Then Frankie Taylor faded back and threw a pass that was too long for his receiver. The next play brought the crowd to its feet as Spasyk skirted the left end from a short punt formation and raced 36 yards down the sidelines behind some beautiful blocking. Then it was Gilbert for 3 yards, a reverse, Gilbert to Spasyk, for 8 yards and Taylor for 2. A long pass from Taylor, intended for Spasyk, was incomplete. Taylor went through for 3 yards and then the culmination of the drive came.

With the ball on the 8-yard line, Taylor faked a place kick and threw a long pass across the field to Mickey Gilbert in the end zone for the first touchdown. The try for the extra point failed and it was Vermont 6, New Hampshire 0.

Failing to gain with the ball, New Hampshire kicked and Vermont was again in possession of the ball. On the first play Spasyk lost a yard and then the crowd was on its feet again as Taylor faded way back and threw a 29-yard pass to Misty Rice, who, catching the ball on the 13-yard line, traveled the remaining distance without a New Hampshire man near by to bother him. The extra point was good and the Green and Gold led 13-0.

Two Passes—Completed

FRANKIE TAYLOR

The start of the second period saw an entire new team in for Vermont and it was during these first few moments that the Wildcats' vaunted power began to show. Their forward motion was short lived, however, for Chesarone intercepted a bad pass. An exchange of kicks followed and then on the first play Frank Utley skirted left end and twice reversing his field romped 60 yards for a touchdown in a beautiful exhibition of broken field running. A pass, Broutsas to Shaw, was good and the score stood 20-0, Vermont leading.

All Begin

New Hampshire was not out of the ball game yet, however, and in an attack featured by some beautiful running by Don Begin made two first downs in a row. Then a beautiful reverse, Begin to Davis, caught the whole Vermont team napping and was good for 25 yards. On the next play Win MacDonald faded way back and tossed a 24-yard pass over the heads of two Vermont men into the hands of Red Davis, who made a beautiful catch in the end zone. Capt. Matt Flaherty kicked the extra point and the half ended a few minutes later with the scoreboard reading Vermont 20, New Hampshire 7.

The second half started as a kicking duel since both teams could do no gaining. In fact, throughout the entire second half New Hampshire could gain only 16 yards rushing through both of Vermont's forward walls. Then it happened again.

A New Hampshire pass was knocked into the air by Frankie Taylor and was caught by Johnny Spasyk. A pass, Taylor to Rice, was good for 2 yards. Then, from a kick formation, Spasyk threw a 16-yard pass to Frankie Taylor, who leaped high into the air to make a pretty catch. A reverse, Gilbert to Spasyk, was good for 1 yard and then Johnny Spasyk threw a 27-yard pass to Bill Pye, who took the ball out of a New Hampshire man's hands and stepped across for the fourth touchdown. Taylor's place kick was good and Vermont retained a 27-7 lead going into the fourth quarter.

One Pass—Caught

The start of this quarter saw little action until Red Davis, the sparkplug of the Wildcat team, intercepted a pass thrown by Broutsas and raced 60 yards for a touchdown and New Hampshire's second and last score.

Long to Broutsas

Vermont was not through, however, and it was Herb Long who brought the crowd to its feet again. He cut through a hole at guard and then beautifully reversed to his right behind the line of scrimmage. As he was about to be tackled he lateraled to George Broutsas and at the same time threw a beautiful block on the only man between Broutsas and the goal. Broutsas traveled the remaining distance down the sidelines unhindered and tallied Vermont's final 6 points. New Hampshire, in desperation, threw long passes as the seconds ticked off but to no avail. The final score was Vermont 33, New Hampshire 13, sweet revenge for last year's defeat.

New Hampshire had three fine men on the field in the persons of Don Begin, Win MacDonald and Red Davis. For Vermont, both teams showed up very well, but the spotlight focussed itself on four good backs, Capt. Frank Taylor, Johnny Spasyk and their two understudies, little Georgie Broutsas and Frank Utley, a man from whom much can be expected after his fine showing in this game.

Interfraternity touch football competition continued last week with the playing of the two games—in the first Phi Delta Theta defeated Phi Sigma Delta, 27-13; in the second Sigma Phi defeated Sigma Nu, 19-12.

Phi Delta Theta Defeats Phi Sigma Delta 27-13

With the Phi Sig boys rolling up 13 points in the first period it looked like an easy victory for them. The second period was the opposite of the first and the score read 13-13 at the half.

The third period decided the game when the Theta boys scored 14 points. The final score read 27-13, Phi Delta Theta on top. The game was marked with thrilling runs and long passes by both teams. A large crowd was on hand to witness the game.

Sigma Phi Defeats Sigma Nu 19-12

Both teams being unable to score in the first half it looked like one touchdown would decide the game. In the second half both squads came out with plenty of fight. Sigma Phi blocked a pass and before the ball could touch the ground one of the Sigma Phi boys caught it and ran for a touchdown. They also scored on a fine run and pass by N. Tucker. Sigma Nu scored on a ten-yard run by J. Fleming. Each team put over a touchdown and the final score read 19-12 Sigma Phi.

Freshman Girl Has Seen Many Lands

"Interview me, but why?" asked blond Bette Vosbury, one of Vermont's pert freshmen. "Because you've done things in which people are interested," we said. Although she is a typical American girl, Bette has lived the greater part of her life out of the United States.

Born in Long Beach, Calif., Bette has spent most of her life at the various naval bases at which her father, a naval officer, was stationed. She has crossed the continent six times, and the Pacific twice, but the nearest she has been to the Atlantic is swimming at Coney Island. Her various residences have been Long Beach, Coronado, Annapolis, Newport, Shanghai and Singtau, China, Unzen, Japan, Manila in the Philippines, Binghamton, New York City and Ausable Forks. "Next to Ausable Forks I like Shanghai the best," she declared. "I was in Honolulu for one day, though, and I'd like to spend the rest of my life there."

During the Chino-Japanese war in 1932 Bette was living in the French concession at Shanghai, only one block from native city, where much fighting took place. "I could see bombs falling at times, and often managed to go into the city. There were loads of dead bodies lying around and the trenches fascinated me. Being so young, I got a big kick out of all the excitement, but of course I wouldn't now. We'd see people being led to execution, and though I begged, my family wouldn't let me go to any. What made me furious was getting the measles in the midst of it all."

Vermont is the fifteenth school which Bette has attended, but in all of these she was never taught how to do square root. She has seen movies and shows in every faraway place she has been to, but has never seen a Broadway play. She has been through two typhoons (one on board ship) and the worst one took place right outside the Golden Gate. Two years ago was the first time she ever saw a pig. "And just in case you're interested," she said, "I can still eat with chopsticks like a native."

While trying to digest all these interesting facts, we asked Bette about some of the highlights of her voyages. "Well, I saw Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson swimming at Waikiki, and sat on Pat OBrien's lap on the boat coming back from Honolulu. But don't get me wrong—I was quite young then."

Among her pet likes, Bette mentioned Kay (her roommate), the color red, jitterbugging ("I learned how in Ausable Forks"), Glenn Miller and above all, teddy bears. At present, Bette owns eight teddys, but she'll never forget the first one she got aboard ship. "When I lost him a few days later, I was so sad that I cried for two months," she admitted. "And you might mention that I hate the name Elizabeth and the song 'Playmates,' and fiction about China which shows everyone running around in pigtails and is so unreal. China isn't full of pagodas; it has loads of modern cities, and I was one of many Americans in Shanghai."

Although she can no longer ride to school in a rick-shaw, or speak Chinese, or live on rice and vegetables cooked by a Chinese "amah," our feminine Marco Polo affirms that she finds Vermont to be a most enjoyable place, and is looking forward to four wonderful years here.

AT THE THEATRES

By "MAC"

"Haunted Honeymoon" playing tonight for the last time at the Majestic is the only major picture made in England since Hitler went absolutely insane. Robert Montgomery traveled 24,000 miles through war-torn seas just to star in this show which could only be produced satisfactorily against a true English background (personally I don't think I'd care to take the chance of playing tag with Hitler's ships).

"Maryland" playing Wednesday and Thursday at the Majestic, is a perfect show for all horse-lovers as it contains some beautiful riding. Climaxed by the Maryland Hunt Cup Race, America's most spectacular steeplechase, this show is one to be long remembered by all horse-lovers.

"The Howards of Virginia" playing tonight, Wednesday and Thursday at the Strong, is based upon Elizabeth Page's best seller, "The Tree of Liberty." A great historical picture, and one which everyone should see.

Watch this show, fellows—"Down Argentine Way" playing tonight and Wednesday at the Flynn, brings us not only the most beautiful gal in Hollywood (accordingly to Billy Rose), Katherine Aldridge, but also a little gal known in the theatrical world as "the Brazilian Bombshell," Carmen Miranda. If this gal can act half as well as she can sing that's all we ask (and I promise you that she has all the S. A. that one can stand for one evening).

Local wits are wondering whether the Roosevelt influence isn't increasing in the film industry what with the title of the new Paramount film playing Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Flynn being "Xmas in July." They say it's an occasion for Thanksgiving.

Former Instructor Writes First Novel

The Ox-Bow Incident Tells of Western Life

"The Ox-Bow Incident," a novel by Walter Van Tilburg Clark, formerly a graduate student and instructor in English at the University of Vermont, has just been published by Random House. The president of Random House calls Clark "in my opinion, the most exciting new writer to be published by Random House since William Saroyan." Clark also authored a short story appearing in the August issue of the Atlantic Monthly.

The novel tells the exciting tale of a lynching bee in a western cattle town in 1885, and in the words of the Random House president, "beneath the incidents of the novel are implications and undercurrents that could only be handled successfully by a man who is already master of his craft."

Clark spent his early childhood in New York City and Maine, then at eight went to Reno, Nev., where his father had become president of the state university. He went to school and college there, and followed his college degree with a year's graduate work in English. One year between high school and college he spent working as house painter and truck driver, and one summer he traveled twenty thousand miles about America in a Ford.

Clark's two years at the University of Vermont doing graduate work in philosophy and literature followed his first year as a graduate student in Nevada. Marrying Barbara Morse, whom he had met in Reno the second year, they went to live in upstate New York, where he devoted his time to writing. Then he taught a summer session at the City College of New York, and since then has lived in Cazenovia, N. Y., teaching school and coaching in sports and dramatics, as well as writing.

At the University of Vermont Clark took an active part in literary activities, contributing poetry to the literary magazine, Winnowings From the Mill, and joining in student writers' organizations.

Fund Established

France since 1939, have been offered refuge in Mexico and other Latin-American countries. These refugees include many students; and the Fund is seeking to obtain $150 transportation fees as swiftly as possible, for persecution and death await them at the hands of the Fascist invaders of France.

A similar predicament faces other young anti-Fascists in France who have sought to escape the oppression prevalent in Fascist countries. Asylum in and transportation to American countries is being solicited for many; while some, interned in Canada by British authorities, require books, clothes, and other necessities.

PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB—First meeting of the club will be held Wednesday night at 7.30, in the dark-rooms at Slade Hall. All men and women students interested are urged to come.

Rules Announced Concerning Dances

To Social Chairmen:

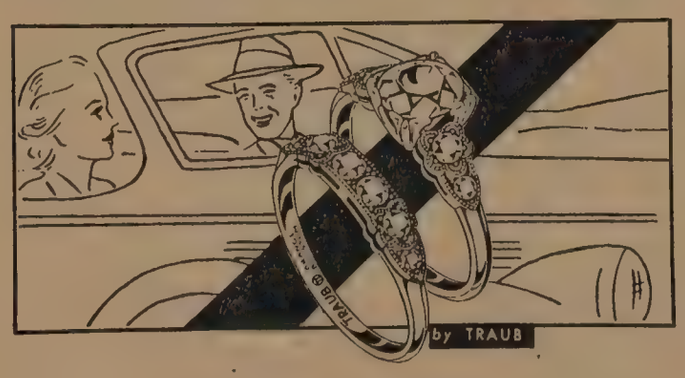
Your attention is called to the following rules relating to dances:

(1) Applications for all dances except tea dances must be in the office of the Dean of Arts and Sciences "at least one week in advance of the date set for the dance."

(2) Applications for tea dances must be in the office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences on the Wednesday immediately preceding the date set for the dance.

(3) Chaperons must include married members of the Faculty.

(4) Dances will be authorized for Saturdays and days immediately preceding a vacation only, except for those listed in the Social Calendar for other days.



Applications not conforming to the above may be denied.

Political Rally Sponsored by I. R. C. Is Great Success

Enthusiastic Speakers And Supporters Present Arguments for Favorites

Boos and cheers rang from enthusiastic students as they supported presidential candidates, Roosevelt and Willkie, at the political rally in the "cage" on Tuesday night. Shirley Gray, Dorothea Smith, D. Maley, and R. Kenney, senior members of I. R. C., were speakers for the Democratic and Republican parties.

The Willkieites and Roosevelt boosters each gathered on their respective sides of the gymnasium and glared at each other across the aisle. There were many placards proclaiming, "The New Deal is Youth's Deal" and "One Good Term Deserves Another" waved from the Democratic group. The Republicans didn't seem to have any standards, but their lusty voices made up for any deficiencies in placards.

Margaret Drum '41 called the meeting to order. Professor Carroll, acting as moderator then stated the rules of the meeting, saying that anyone wishing to debate the issue could come up to the platform after the four selected speakers had talked.

The first speaker for the evening was Shirley Gray, who campaigned vigorously for Roosevelt saying, "I don't see how anyone who is honest about keeping us out of war can think of changing presidents now." Then pointing out the C. C. C., N. Y. A., and W. P. A., she said, "This administration is strengthening democracy by spreading democracy."

Willkie's Ability Praised

Next, Dorothea Smith spoke for Willkie telling the students that she was going to vote for Willkie because of his "ability to organize and get the support of those working for him."

D. Maley supported Roosevelt because "This election means a lot to American youth, and with Roosevelt elected, we all will have a fair and square chance to earn an honest living."

Sororities to Hold Dances Sat. Night

All To Be Informals With One Exception

Five of the sororities on the hill are holding their fall dances tomorrow evening. The dances with the exception of one will be informal.

The Pi Phis and their dates will dance to the music of the Catamounts. Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and Prof. and Mrs. J. B. Carroll will chaperone. The dance is in charge of Nancy Goodwin '42 and Barbara E. Burns '43.

Festivities at the Tri-Delt House will take the form of a tea dance. June Hoffman '43 is in charge. Chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. G. V. Kidder and Mrs. Swerdferger.

Music for the Alpha Chi semi-formal dance will be furnished by Louis Pichierri's orchestra. Harriet Nelson '42, Lillian Aronson '42, and Alice Howe '42 are in charge. Prof. and Mrs. E. E. Lincken and Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond will chaperone.

Jane Badger '42, Mary Bissell '42 and Dorothy McCormick '42 will take charge of the Alpha Xi tea dance which will be held from 5.00-8.00 p.m. Prof. and Mrs. A. E. Briggs and Mrs. Lord will chaperon.

The Sigma Gammas are holding an informal dance at Southwick. Dr. and Mrs. Gershoy will chaperon. Dorothy Franklin '43 is in charge.

Vermont Dairymen to Hold Annual Conference

The nineteenth annual conference of the Vermont Dairy Plant Operators and Managers Association is to be held at the Fleming Museum on November 6 and 7. This conference, including all lectures and discussions, is open and free to anyone interested. Among the subjects to be discussed are "New Developments in Dairy Science and their Application," by Paul F. Sharp, professor of dairy chemistry at Cornell University; and "How the Current Milk Marketing Situation Affects Producer, Distributor and Consumer" by W. B. Duryee, assistant to the president, Sheffield Farms Company, New York City.

On the lighter side of the conference will be an "Information, Please" contest at 3.45 and the initiation to "The Ancient and Honorable Order of Yellow Dogs, Green Mountain Kennel 4317" on Wednesday afternoon.

Sorority Advice Given Freshmen

Reasons For and Against Membership Discussed

On October 30, at 7.30 p.m., a meeting of all freshman women was held at Southwick. At this meeting talks were given by Dean Simpson and members of each sorority on campus, as well as by "Happy" Dustan '42 who spoke on the advantages of not being a sorority member. The speakers were introduced by Betty Isham, President of Pan-Hellenic.

Dean Simpson, speaking as a sorority member, said that it was very important to choose the sorority which most met the individual's need. She said that a sorority was the group on campus which lasted the longest for it not only meant fellowship while in college but after graduation also.

Dean Simpson also pointed out that those who do not join a sorority because of expense have the opportunity of making friends from a large group and of having freedom of action.

Good Qualities Promoted

Gloria Oling '42 of Delta Phi Epsilon was the next speaker and she talked on personal development as promoted by sorority. Sara Wilson '42 of Delta Delta Delta spoke on service of the sorority.

Barbara Butterfield '42 from Pi Beta Phi gave a talk concerning cooperation. The benefits of sorority after college were discussed by Louise Mann '41 of Kappa Alpha Theta.

Barbara Dunbar '43 of Alpha Xi Delta sorority gave a talk on the social events of sorority. Harriet Nelson '42 of Alpha Chi Omega spoke on friendship as developed in a sorority.

Sorority Advice Given Freshmen

Advantages of not being a sorority member were discussed by "Happy" Dustan '42. She said that personal development, service, cooperation, scholarship, social events and friendship are all qualities which sorority helps to improve, but one does not necessarily have to belong to a Pan-Hellenic to possess them.

Betty Isham, at the beginning of the meeting, announced that there will be open house among the sororities Thursday, 7.00 p.m. and Friday at 4-5.30 p.m.

Sororities will hold open house next week at the same time.

Pilgrim Fellowship

The title of the discussion to the held at the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting next Sunday evening will be "The Christian's Position in a World at War," and will be led by Kenneth Johnson '41. Merritt Colehammer '41, will have charge of the devotions.

Gala Military Ball Coming Social Event Of Fall Season

Entire Student Body Will Cast Ballots For Co-ed Major Choice

The Military Ball, gala formal dance sponsored by Champlain Sabres, the senior honorary military society, is to be held Friday, November 15, in the gymnasium, and promises to be bigger and better this year than ever before.

The selection of a co-ed major, who will rule over the festivities of the evening, will this year for the first time be left to the student body entirely. In former years, the winning queen has been chosen by members of the R. O. T. C. Nominations for the office of co-ed major will take place this week and the voting will be held some time next week in the corridor of the Old Mill.

The Catamounts Orchestra has been engaged, and, as a special feature will be enlarged to fifteen pieces, starring two vocalists who are members of the freshman class, Doris Doerfler and Tempi Conner. The admission price has been reduced to one dollar and sixty-five cents per couple, a favorable comparison with the Junior Prom, only other formal event of the school year. This decided decrease in price from other years should be incentive to a large attendance.

Col. and Mrs. Spaulding and Capt. and Mrs. Simpson of the Military Department of the University of Vermont will chaperon the dance. The committee for the ball, chosen from members of the Champlain Sabres, are: E. Guilbert, chairman of the floor and arrangements for music; R. Copp, chairman of programs and tickets; Taze Huntley, chairman of publicity; J. Palmer, chairman of decorations; and Larry Simpson, chairman of co-ed major elections.

Football Hop Plans Made

The Key and Serpent Society held a meeting at the Phi Delta Theta house at 7.30 Tuesday evening. They took action regarding the purchasing of the blankets which are to be presented to the senior football men at the Football Hop on November 23. J. J. White '42 was appointed chairman of the Football Hop dance committee which, to quote R. B. Hunting '42 "will be something new and unusual and which will startle the campus no end." J. D. Sawyer '42 and H. P. Wood '42 will be in charge of the Pep Rally before the Norwich game. There will be another meeting of the Key and Serpents next Tuesday evening at 7.30.

Medical Aptitude Test To Be Given Students

Students who plan to apply for admission to any medical school on or before fall, 1941, will need to take the pre-medical aptitude test of the Association of American Medical Colleges, which is being given at 3 p.m. in Room 27 of the Williams Science Hall on Friday, November 8. This test has been adopted by the Association of Medical Colleges as one of the normal requirements for admission to medical schools throughout the country. The test measures the ability of prospective doctors to learn material similar to that which they will study in medical school. It also measures their general information and scientific background, and their ability to draw accurate conclusions from a given set of data.

The medical admission committee, through an announcement by Dean H. A. Kemp of the Medical College, has announced that pre-medical students in their third or fourth year of study are welcome to take the aptitude test, whether they have taken it before or not.

Those wishing to take it should apply immediately to Miss Cornelia Baylies, secretary in the dean's office of the Medical College. A fee of one dollar is required at the time of registration.

Music Instructors To Give Recital

Violinist and Pianist Are Excellent Artists

A faculty recital, with Michael Anselmo, the new violin instructor in the music department, as violinist and Prof. Howard G. Bennett, head of the music department, as pianist, will take place Sunday, November 3, at 8.30 p.m., in Southwick Memorial. This concert is open to anyone who wishes to go.

Michael Anselmo was first violinist in the Cremona string quartet from 1935 until this fall when he joined the music faculty of the University. He made his musical début at the age of sixteen in Aeolian Hall, New York City. Since then he has given more concerts in Aeolian Hall and also in Town Hall and Carnegie Hall, New York City. While he was with the Cremona string quartet he made several appearances at the University of Vermont summer session previous to his joining the University faculty. He was soloist with the Vermont Symphony orchestra last year.

Professor Bennett is well known to Burlington audiences as a pianist. He has resumed his work at the head of the music department following a year's leave of absence.

A very interesting program is planned.

Miss Davis of Ec. Dept. Attends Conference

On October 24, 25 and 26, Miss Gennette Davis of the economics department attended the Office Management Conference of the American Management Association, held at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City.

Among the delegates were representatives of many large corporations, among them Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and Eastman Kodak Co. Miss Davis was one of the few educators present and one of the few women.

Topics discussed by the Conference were job evaluation, salary standardization, letter writing and filing.

University Lecture Series to Begin With 'To Asia For Apes'

Films and Recordings Included in Program For this College Year

The first University lecture of the current series will be given at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont at 8 p.m. the evening of Thursday, November 7. The subject is "To Asia for Apes" and will be developed by Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., Assistant Curator of Mammals in the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology. With four specialists Doctor Coolidge recently organized a field exploration expedition to Siam, Borneo and Sumatra, to study the gibbon and orang-utan in their native habitat under natural conditions.

The lecturer discusses and displays some remarkable results. First outlining recent theory regarding the biological relationships of apes and man, the lecturer then displays motion pictures taken in the beautiful mountain regions where gibbons were stalked and "shot" with camera and sound equipment. Sound recordings will reproduce the jungle symphony, and the wild cries of gibbons at play. The films include surprising scences of wild gibbons eating, playing, and swiftly swinging from tree to tree along the aerial highway.

This lecture is no mere travelogue, but rather a report on scientific work and scientific findings. Since Darwin's day there has been a notable increase in our knowledge of fossil apes and fossil man. These findings have enhanced scientific interest in the existing great apes. Do they talk? Into what patterns does the group life of apes fall? The psychologist of the expedition made important pioneer observations on the social behavior and family life of wild gibbons. He also secured sound-recordings of their various calls. These are being studied to determine whether they have any sort of language. Do the apes talk or if not have they cries which, serving as significant signals or symbols may perhaps be called a rudimentary language?

The University lectures are free and those interested are cordially invited.

Prof. A. R. Gifford, head of the philosophy department of the University of Vermont and chairman of the Committee on University Lectures, also announces the following lectures:

Thursday, November 21: "Dante as Mediaeval Humanist" by Rev. Gerald G. Walsh, S.J., the eminent Dante scholar of Fordham University, and editor of the quarterly Thought.

Wednesday, December 18: "We Go to Egypt," an illustrated lecture relating to

Copeland Leaves Museum Staff

Athol M. Copeland, for a number of years technician at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont, has left his position there and is associated with the Stanley-Dana Corporation, as a salesman of moving picture projectors. Mr. Copeland continues to make his home in Burlington.

Taking Mr. Copeland's place as technician with the Museum is Antonio Gelineau of Burlington. Mr. Gelineau has worked in the Gelineau baking business here until his recent accession to the staff of the Fleming Museum.

Duties of the Museum technician include building and repairing much Museum equipment, helping with the arrangement of displays, supervision of mechanical appliances and operation of Museum movies and slides, both in the Museum and outside.

The Student Activity Fee!

A truly fine educational and entertaining program is being offered to the Vermont students this evening with the showing of the highly praised French film, "Harvest." The film has been brought to our college through the efforts of Dr. Harry Perkins, the director of the Fleming Museum. We congratulate Doctor Perkins for his successful arranging for the showing of the film which was most difficult to secure because of the strict censorship of the New York Bureau of Censors.

The suggestion has come to us that similar fine entertainments might be given to the University students if a portion of the Student Activity Fund could be set aside for this purpose. We realize, of course, that our Student Activity Fee includes many things—football games, basketball games, baseball games, our yearbook, the CYNIC, lectures, and the maintenance of the various departmental clubs and the honorary societies. The fee, however, does not include any entertainment such as musical concerts, plays, or educational movies such as the film "Harvest" which is being shown tonight. Such things as these are included in many college programs where the activity fee is only twenty-five dollars or less rather than the thirty-five dollars that we pay here at Vermont.

If each group or club which receives an allotment from the Student Activity Fee Fund would cut down their budget needs, part of the activity fee could be used for fine entertainments which appeal to a large number of the students who otherwise would not have the opportunity to enjoy this important type of cultural education. In fact, we feel that the number of University lectures could be decreased so that part of the large amount of money used in securing the lectures could be used to a better advantage to engage artists from many varied entertainment fields or for educational films. Such programs, we believe, would appeal to a larger group of students than the formal lectures that are presented in the small auditorium of the Fleming Museum.

At Massachusetts State College where the activity fee is only twenty-five dollars a year, vocal and instrumental concerts, educational films and plays are presented at a small cost to the student. It would certainly seem that here at Vermont some system might be worked out whereby we might derive much more benefit and much more pleasure from our Student Activity Fee of thirty-five dollars.

An expression of a campus desire for such additional educational and entertainment opportunities would necessarily have to precede any action which the administration might take in the rearranging of the allocation of the Student Activity Fee. If students who do want more programs of a cultural nature at a minimum cost do not express their desires, no action will be taken. However, if a group of students do feel that we should have the opportunity to enlarge our educational and cultural background through the arranging of more and varied programs, they would do well to write a letter regarding the problem to the editor of the CYNIC with their names attached.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

As I recall, last year we had a Hobo Day before one of our big football games. I think that a great deal of spirit for the game was worked up in this way.

Why not have a Hobo Day on Friday before the Norwich game? Of course I know it did disrupt the dignity of some of the professors and upset classroom procedure but it was fun and I believe there are many in the student body who would support another Hobo Day.

Let our slogan be:

Hobos for today
Bums of Norwich Saturday.

KATHLEEN LEBARON.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

At our "Political Rally" on Tuesday evening the Republican speakers seemed to confine their remarks almost entirely to the past. They spoke of Mr. Willkie's humble origin, and of his stupendous and commendable success in the field of money-grubbing. They spoke of everything except his plans for the future. These they dismissed with a few vague generalities of distinctly Utopian flavor.

It is easy to see why Republican speakers avoid the future. Mr. Willkie has not seen fit to divulge his intentions to the American people. He has said that he will relieve unemployment, support labor, help business, speed defense, keep out of war, and at the same time lower the national debt. These are all very worthy objectives, but Mr. Willkie has neglected to tell us how he plans to attain them. He has criticized many of his opponent's policies, but he has promulgated no acceptable substitutes.

In fine, Mr. Willkie bases his entire campaign on his personal merits, and the third term question. For the former, we have only his record as a business man. There are a great many efficient business men in America, but very few of them are considered Presidential material for that reason alone.

The third term question does not seem very important to me. It can hardly be called democratic to prevent a President from serving as long as the electorate sees fit to retain him, as under real democracy the electorate must be the final judge of all political matters. The only difficulty, therefore, is the matter of precedent, and there have been sufficient opportunities to enact this custom into law to make it appear that it has never been as inviolable as the Republican party and Mr. Willkie would have us believe.

October 21, 1940.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Several times in the last month it has occurred to me that I still have a host of friends at U. V. M. with whom I would like to correspond, yet the task of writing individual letters to each and every one presented such a problem that I didn't know where to start. However, this week I received a copy of CYNIC from one of the bunch and only then did I think of the Campus Comment column as the means for which I was looking.

So, taking a chance that the CYNIC staff will permit the words of a former student now technically in allegiance to another institution to enter this column, I'll give out with a few things that I hope prove of interest. I can say that the two years I was at Vermont were two of the most enjoyable I've had. Yes, there was work and lots of it now and then but it did not overshadow the fun to be had, snake dances up Church Street, Hell Week at Kappa Sig, Sugar House, and many other memorable places and events.

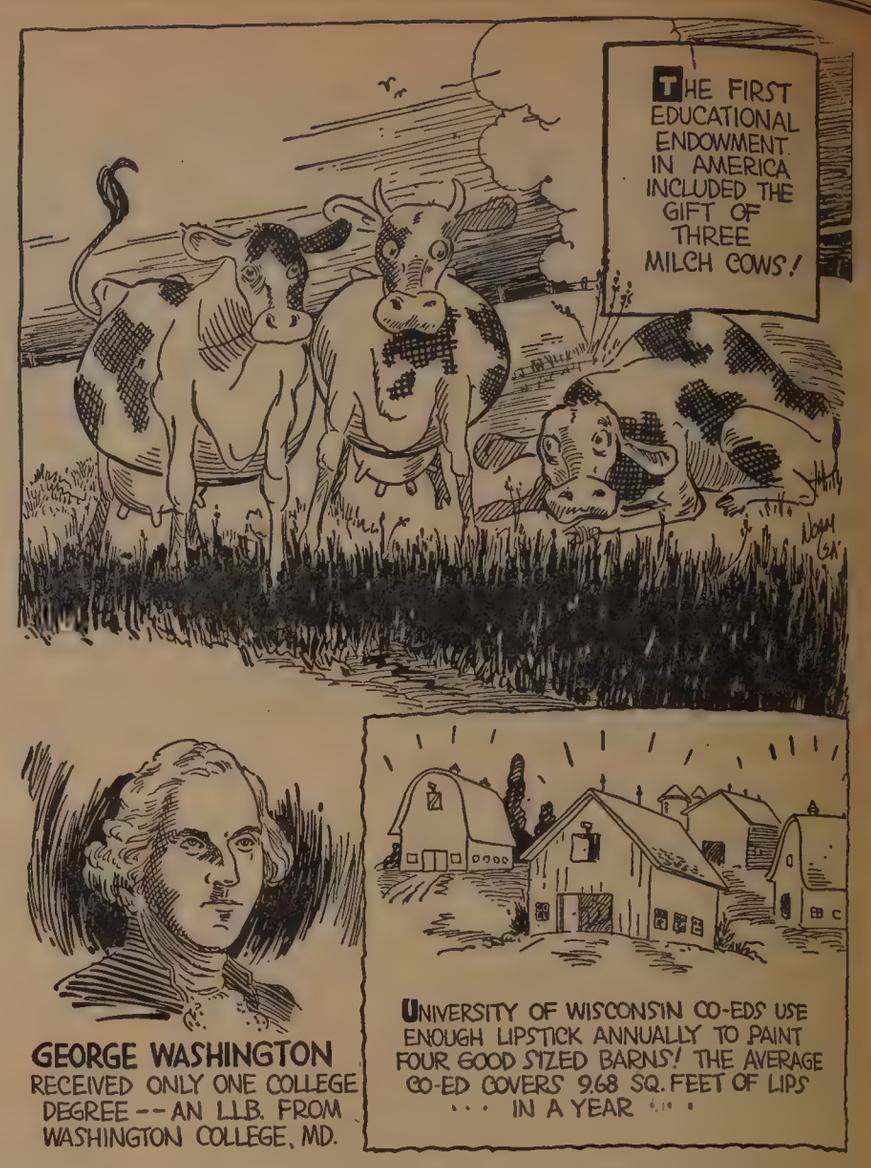
I have grown to like the University of Illinois very much in just a month but actually I find it no different than U. V. M. except in size. We have a beautiful campus, shaded by large elms very similar to Vermont, and spotted here and there by the eighty-seven University buildings. Our new Illini Union building just completed at a cost of $1,400,000 compares well in cost with the Waterman building now in construction and I know that Vermont students will have just cause for pride in their new addition to the campus as such an investment can provide a building equipped beyond all imagination.

One point of interest to the girls might be the "nights out" rules here. This is a frosh's paradise as she enjoys the same nocturnal privileges as the senior, every night out until 10.30 and Friday and Saturday nights until 1.00 a.m. Just sign out and that's all there is to it, none of this "who you're with nor where you're going" stuff. Girls also have the same smoking rights as the men, smoke anywhere except in the buildings.

They have to fight for more school spirit here just as they do there and "Go Illini" and "Know Your University" campaigns have been in full swing this fall. They did manage to get about three thousand out at six o'clock last Friday morning (practically the middle of the night) to see the team off to the Michigan brawl. I hope you overlooked the score! Notre Dame plays here this Saturday for our Homecoming game and tickets are as scarce as eels' heels for the contest. The stadium seats some 65,000 and only end seats are left. Nothing like an A. A. book that will get one at least into the cheering section.

I do notice here that there isn't the chance for guidance in the various courses that there was at Vermont. Practically no personal help is given at all. One becomes just a cog in the machinery and grinds along methodically doing their work and taking Hour Exams (I couldn't get away from them). Like changing your name for a number!

One of the most amusing things in my stay here has been the student's attitude toward a Vermonter. After a few minutes' conversation I became used to exclamations such as, "What! A Yankee!" or, "You can't be from Vermont. You don't talk or look like an Easterner." I wondered what an Easterner was supposed to be like, never having noticed anything strange about their appearance or speech. I actually feared being placed in the Museum as a rare specimen from the land of maple sugar, as they call it.



Perplexing at times here are the odds of men to women—about 4 to 1—out of 15,000 enrollment. What colossal stag lines.

I have been getting the sports page of the Free Press lately and have been following Vermont football closely. Of course, the state series is still ahead but here are my cheers for the Green and Gold and above all let's repeat that 21-0 victory over Middlebury of last year.

In all seriousness, though, I do hope some of you find the time to wing a message out this way and I'll try to do my part in replying and in closing, let me give a short message to the fellows at the Kappa Sig house: I'm still lamenting the fact that I won't be there this year to be on the pleasant end of Hell Week, which I was definitely not on last year!

Have You Met Mrs. Wheeler?

In the stock room off the Freshman Chemistry Laboratory in Williams Science Hall one finds not only the usual well-filled shelves of chemical supplies and equipment but—in the midst of these—a delightfully interesting gray-haired lady with a pleasant laugh and a twinkling eye. Meet Mrs. Ellen Wheeler—for eleven years chemistry assistant at U. V. M.

Mrs. Wheeler graduated from the Essex Classical Institute in 1896, the same year incidentally, that our Science Hall was completed. In her present position she attends to the needs of eight classes—"nine if you want to include my Sunday School class," she laughed. Mrs. Wheeler enjoys her work "more every year" and likes chemistry a great deal. "No serious accidents have ever occurred during my stay here," she informed me, "unless," she added with a smile, "you would include the hundreds of broken test tubes!"

Mrs. Wheeler remembers well the time when the Chapel and the Museum were built and she thinks the Waterman Building will add much to the campus and will be an improvement to the College which is "getting better and better every year." Conscription and politics? "No views to express—at least, not publicly!" The war? "Nothing to say." The class of '44 (aha!)? "Well, I really haven't had time to get acquainted with the Freshman class as yet, but I think it will average up pretty well with the past classes I've known."

Boynton's Have Shoe Barrel for War Refugees

"Deposit your old shoes here for War Refugees!"

Since October 10 this sign has hung over a barrel placed at the entrance to the B. J. Boynton Shoe Store on Church Street. During the first two days, over two barrels of shoes were given for war refugees.

The larger shoe stores in cities all over the United States during the month of October are cooperating in this project as suggested by the September 14 issue of The Boot and Shoe Recorder. The shoes are wrapped in pairs and placed in barrels which are coopered and strapped ready for ocean shipment to war refugees.

"The shoes have been of exceptionally good quality," said Mr. Boynton. "About 65 percent are women's and 35 percent men's shoes. Very few rubbers or children's shoes have come in yet. Shoe repair shops have given a number of pairs which were left and never called for."

Already eight barrels of shoes have been brought in. When there are enough to fill ten barrels, they will be sent to the British War Relief Society, Inc. at 480 Lexington Ave, New York City. Since the sender pays the freight, Mr. Boynton does not plan to ship more than ten barrels, but he adds:

"We hope to continue having the barrel for the benefit of the Salvation Army and Burlington poor."

Freshmen Hygiene Classes to Begin

Course to Meet Student Needs and Interests

The Physical Education Department announced Monday that the Freshman Men's Hygiene Classes will start November 13 and 14, Wednesday and Thursday, and continue until mid-years.

Archie T. Post, assistant Professor of Physical Education, stated that the objective of his department is "to make this a course which meets the needs and interests of our students, personally as well as generally, in the ultimate aim of better and more healthful living."

"In order to do that we attempt to present those phases of a health program which are of most importance to college men. From past experience in this course and similar ones at other schools and from questionnaires for college men here and elsewhere, we have learned the problems that are foremost in students' minds."

Eight lectures will be given, each one being devoted to some general health problem of men. Movies, whenever possible, will be coordinated with the lectures, and some reference books will be kept on reserve at the Billings Library.

The problems which trouble most college men are, in order of importance as evidenced by the number of times mentioned on questionnaires:

Sex and marriage in all phases; tobacco, alcohol, and other stimulants; diet.

Nervous problems, mental health, worries, maladjustment, attitudes, inferiority complex.

Exercise and body development; heart and circulatory disturbances.

The course will be given to six classes in the Fleming Museum Auditorium. After the first meeting on Wednesday or Thursday, all subsequent meetings will be held on Mondays or Tuesdays during regular gym periods. All freshman men will be required to take the course, regardless of excuses from other gym classes.

The complete class schedule is:

Monday—11.30-12.20; 3.00-3.50.

Tuesday — 9.30-10.20; 10.30-11.20; 11.30-12.20; 3.00-3.50.

German Classes Decrease In Size

Professor Carpenter announces a slight decrease in the enrollment of the German department this year. Last year, however, was the largest enrollment in the history of the department. His comment as to the reason of the decrease was most non-committal. Said he, "this may or may not be symptomatic that German is becoming unpopular over here due to foreign affairs."

One of his smallest classes is made up of Clara Griffel '41, Elizabeth Kulka '43, Eva Maidenbaum '44 and Hans Herst '44, all but Miss Griffel having German for a native tongue. It is a most informal class which meets three times a week. At present they are reading and discussing "Faust."

Professor Carpenter has made a new German acquaintance. She is a teacher of gymnastics at Trinity College in the city. This girl, Clara Feiner, has been in America only six months and as yet can speak very little English. Professor Carpenter was pleased to find it necessary to carry on conversation totally in German. Clara came to him to offer her services as a possible tutor of any University students.

The famous French film "Harvest" will be shown Friday, November 1 at 8.15 at the Southwick Gymnasium. The price of admission is 25 cents tax exempt. Tickets may be procured at the Museum, Book Store or from the campus representatives.

Vermont Co-eds May Attend Armistice Dance

Co-eds of U. V. M. have been granted permission to attend the Armistice Day dance which is to be held at Memorial Auditorium on November 11 from 9 to 12 o'clock. The dance is for the benefit of the Child Welfare Committee of the American Legion Auxiliary and the Vermont Children's Aid Society. Those present at the dance will have the opportunity to attend a band concert which will precede the dance from 8-9 o'clock.

The Catamounts are to furnish music.

Tickets, which are being sold by Y. W. C. A. are fifty cents for one person or seventy-five cents a couple. They may be purchased from Shirley Grey '41 and will also be on sale in the Old Mill.

PI BETA PHI

Two alumnae visited the Pi Beta Phi house on Tuesday, October 29. They were Frances Hennessey '36 from Bellows Falls and Madeline Crosby '40 of Brandon.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Harriet Whitson '43 and Mary Lessor '43 were initiated into Tri-Delta on Monday, October 28. An informal dinner at the Tri-Delta house followed the initiation.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Marjorie Bell '40, Phyllis McGovern '40 and Carol Bell Taylor '42 were at the house over the week-end.

A covered-dish supper was given to the active chapter at the house Monday night, October 21, by the alumnae.

A tea was given by the active chapter Wednesday afternoon at the Theta house in honor of Doctor King who is a Theta from Illinois and for the alumnae. Barbara Mann '41 was in charge. Mary Jane Hammond '41, Nancy Jones '41, Laura Hawley '41 and Dorothy Emerson '41 poured.

The spaghetti supper which was postponed is to be held Tuesday, November 5, from 5.30 to 7.00 at the Theta house, 215 South Prospect Street. The price is 35 cents. Jeannette Whipple '41 is in charge.

ALPHA XI DELTA

Ellen Brown '41 has pledged to Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

Museum Paintings In Art Exhibit

On exhibit now at the Fleming Museum are six of the Museum's own paintings. Three of these paintings are done by the modern artsits Herbert Myer, Mrs. Ruth Mould, and J. W. Warf. The other three are examples of the Hudson River School which is the first group that advocated our own American scenes as subjects rather than European subjects and believed in painting nature as they saw it rather than according to the set rules that existed at the time. The artists of these three oil paintings, all of the middle nineteenth century, show clearly the influence of that school. Their works are all meticulously done and generally in dark, muddy colors. They form quite a contrast to the modern paintings in the group. The three paintings are "Hermitage" by Cole, "Interior of Woods" by Wyant, and a landscape by Wyant.

U. V. M. Teams Place In Judging Contests

Inspect Dairy Products And Cattle at Shows

Two intercollegiate judging teams representing the department of animal and dairy husbandry of the University of Vermont and the State Agricultural College have recently returned from the national contests with creditable records.

At the Dairy Industries Exposition held in Atlantic City, the Dairy Products team, accompanied by Dr. J. A. Newlander, coach, competed with teams from twenty other states. Iowa won the contest, Connecticut placing second and Minnesota third. Vermont won third place in butter judging, seventh in ice cream, twelfth in cheese and fifteenth place in milk judging.

Members of the Vermont team were E. E. Gifford, Jr. '41, R. P. Davis '41, and R. F. Evans '41. Among sixty-three individuals, Gifford was fifth on cheese, seventh on ice cream, thirteenth on butter and fifteenth on all products; Davis was tenth on butter, eleventh on ice cream and twenty-first on all products; Evans was twenty-fifth on milk and forty-sixth on all products.

The Dairy Cattle team attended the National Dairy Show at Harrisburg, Pa., with Dr. M. H. Campbell, coach, to compete with teams from twenty-four other states. Vermont's team, included E. F. Paquette '41, K. F. Estey '41, and G. H. Bailey '41, stood tenth on Ayrshires, fourteenth on Guernseys, fifteenth on Brown Swiss, nineteenth on Holsteins, twenty-first on Jerseys, and seventeenth on all breeds. The contest was won by Illinois, with Ohio second, and Nebraska third. Among seventy-five individuals, Paquette stood seventh on Guernseys and fortieth on all breeds; Estey was forty-sixth and Bailey, fifty-second on all breeds.

Refugee Refuses To Join Society

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. (ACP)—A refugee student in Rutgers University has declined membership in Alpha Zeta, national honorary agricultural fraternity, because it admits white students only.

He is Martin L. Cohnstaedt, enrolled in the college of agriculture. His father was a principal editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung before the Nazis took power in Germany.

"When I came to this country thirty months ago," Cohnstaedt said in a letter to the fraternity, "my greatest desire was to serve the country of my choice, to give it everything I have in return for its willingness to open its doors to me.

"But how are we to serve the cause of agriculture in this country if we lose what we esteem highest: character and tolerance? I lost home and friends due to a denial of tolerance. Prejudice may be human. But if we do not master it, what may become of our good work?"

University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., campaigned for a sustaining fund of $500,000 and received $503,685.

Band Concert Last Gift of Late President

The late President Bailey's last gift was in the form of a band concert by the R. O. T. C. Band, Tuesday evening, October 29, to the town of Charlotte and their Red Cross Chapter.

Two chartered buses took the forty-odd men from Converse Hall at 7.00 p.m.

A brief program of marches was led by J. F. Lechnyr, leader of the R. O. T. C. Band. Lieutenant Schofield '40 represented the military department on the trip.

Collegium Honors President Bailey

Collegium paid fitting tribute to the late President Bailey Sunday evening through the words of their leader, A. F. Amee '43, who said in part: "As students of the University of Vermont we have experienced our first great sorrow with the passing of President Bailey. It was a sorrow that brought with it irreparable loss.

"His endless efforts for us in the field of education and in the building of a better University for us spent his strength all too quickly toward the hour of his death. But the work that he accomplished in that field will serve as a perpetual memorial to him.

"I cannot express what President Bailey meant to those of us who knew him; perhaps the students aren't expected to. But I can say with Shakespeare that—

> His life was gentle, and the elements
> So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
> And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

Professor Moody of the zoology department, was the guest speaker of the evening. His talk was based on I Corinthians 15:49, "And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly," and it dealt with the interrelationship of science and religion, with emphasis on the influences of evolution throughout time. Doctor Moody's effective treatment of the subject will be long remembered by those present.

Museum Sponsors Weekly Broadcasts

Historical Sketches Alternate With Music

The Fleming Museum has been sponsoring since last April a series of radio programs divided into two sections. On every other week, in preparation for the sesquicentennial anniversary of the founding of the University of Vermont and the entrance of Vermont into the Union, in 1791, the Fleming Museum puts on, in chronological sequence, historical radio sketches of Vermont. Each sketch, either in the form of a descriptive talk, a monologue, or a play, all accompanied by sound effects, deals with a separate chapter in Vermont history. Some of the subjects taken up in the past include the Indian occupation of Vermont, the discovery of Lake Champlain, Vermont pioneers, the French and Indian wars, and the colonization of Vermont. The next broadcast of this series will be a description of the Battle of Bennington by Prof. Leon Dean. The programs will be continued until the sketch concerning Vermont's entry into the Union has been presented—about five or six more broadcasts.

The other section of this program is devoted to music. The Museum feels that music is as much an art as painting or sculpturing, and as such it constitutes a legitimate and logical program for the Museum to sponsor. Music has become a very important project in large museums all over the country.

On these broadcasts are featured music department students or local artists who often are "discovered" rather than well known. The program is frequently devoted to a particular composer, and educational comments upon the particular instrument performing, the artist, the composer, or the selection are always presented.

These broadcasts are over the air every Thursday at 8.30 p.m. over WCAX.

Catamounts Meet R. P. I. Tomorrow

Undefeated Team Will Put Up Hard Fight

Riding on the crest of a sudden wave of power, the University of Vermont eleven descends on Troy tomorrow to engage an undefeated R. P. I. unit in what shapes up to be the toughest assignment that the Cats have had thus far this season.

Last week-end the Technicians knocked off a weakened Union team 12-0, a fact which gives the Catamounts a pre-game edge as they rolled up a 19 to 7 score over the Dutchmen when the latter were in top form.

R. P. I. pins its scoring hopes on elusive little Sammy "Scooter" Schwartz, who has reeled off at least one long run in every game this season, and fullback Don Hoopes another fleet-footed ball carrier. These two behind the magnificent blocking of Capt. Fred Schnatz have accounted for the bulk of the Rensselaer scores this season.

What with the Technicians out to keep their slate clean and the Green and Gold just as eager to snap their string of victories, all indications point to a "thriller" with unpredictable results.

Kappa Sigs Defeat Independent Team

Tuesday afternoon, interfraternity touch football was again in the spotlight, Kappa Sigma coming from behind to defeat the Vermont Independents by an overwhelming score of 32-13.

Conditions looked unfavorable for the Kappa Sigs when the Independents ran back the opening kick-off to the two-yard line, and scored on the first play. The extra point was booted over, and at the close of the first frame, the Independents were out in front 7-0. Sparked by Sysko and Senuta, they chalked up another 6 points in the second quarter, while the Kappa Sigs retaliated, scoring their first touchdown by a long pass.

The Kappa Sigs shifted into high in the second half by means of a pass attack which clicked surprisingly well, and sweeping end runs which were responsible for a great deal of yardage. Led by John Royer, they broke through the crumbling Independent line again and again for 12 points in the third period and 13 more in the fourth, thus assuring their victory.

The Kappa Sig line-up included R. Healey, L. Killick, J. Royer, R. Lynch, J. Thomas, W. Harvey, T. Clairmont. The Independent squad consisted of Sysko, Senuta, Doherty, Dunn, Trono, Wilson and Smith.

Archibald Mehitable Is New Team Mascot

Archibald Mehitable is happy this week. He was actually heard chuckling to himself as he gazed fondly into a convenient mirror. And Archibald is by no means an indiscriminant chuckler—he feels keenly his responsibility as mascot of our cross-country team.

Now Archibald is no ordinary cat. He is of the order Plasterus Parisus, with long graceful legs and a sleek black coat, a genuine Perisian feline bred by Mr. Kresge himself. With such lineage it is no wonder that Archie holds himself so proudly and perhaps a trifle disdainfully. And it is not surprising that he should have attached himself to our sterling cross-country team, from Captain Livak all the way down to the fellow who finishes the race in a car.

Archie shifted his attention quickly from his mirror to two girls who were passing just outside the window. He

Kittens Bow To Norwich Frosh

Undefeated Midd Team Plays Armistice Day

Sporting an offense that gained practically nothing through a mediocre Norwich line and a pass defense of little value, the frosh were once again subdued 14 to 0 last Monday. This was the third successive setback for the Kittens in as many starts, and also is a blot on the record of other preceding Vermont freshman teams which maintained much better averages during their short season.

A line that did not charge on offense or defense, plus a backfield of only average ability spelled defeat for the frosh. It was obvious from the outset of the contest that the Kittens were lacking in pep. Though they tried to overcome these deficiencies, their gameness was to no avail.

Norwich succeeded in gaining their touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters, in the meantime staving off two Vermont thrusts in the second and fourth quarters respectively.

The first quarter was practically even except for the one slip of the Vermont pass defense. Norwich had set the Kittens back on their heels for the greater part of the quarter, and although the frosh were forced to kick from behind their own goal against the wind, this did not prove to be their downfall. Having been apparently checked on the ground, the Cadets resorted to the air and from the Vermont 40-yard line scored a touchdown on one pass. Eluding the halfback cleverly, the Norwich left end snared a 25-yard pass and scampered 15 more to pay dirt.

The Kittens, not disheartened, struck back in the second quarter and worked their way to the Norwich four-yard stripe, but bad quarterbacking and inability to carry out the plays halted the march at that point. The next two periods were anti-climax although the Cadets pushed across another touchdown early in the fourth quarter as a result of a blocked kick. The Kittens tried desperately to score in the final minutes but met with no success.

The Middlebury frosh, undefeated and untied, will invade Centennial Field on Armistice Day for the final scheduled game. With but a week of practice remaining, the frosh find themselves in dire need of one triple threat back. Coach Sherry Fogg has been experimenting daily in the hope of uncovering another unknown marvel. A frosh victory over Middlebury would not only redeem the freshmen prestige, but also knock Middlebury out of the undefeated ranks.

The players who started the Norwich encounter were as follows: Barry and Boardman at ends, Pulde and Baxendale at tackles, Kunken and Eddy at guards, and Smith at center; Reed, Pacini, Riddell and Lewkowicz composed the backfield.

Vermont Harriers To Meet Williams

Green and Gold Team Confident of Victory

After two weeks of intensive preparation, the Vermont varsity cross-country team is ready for it meet with the Williams College harriers at Williamstown, Mass. Whether this year's Green and Gold edition can follow the example set by the team of 1939 by defeating the boys from the Berkshires will be known tomorrow shortly after 12.15.

In order to retain the excellent record that they have made thus far, Coach Archie Post's men have had daily workouts, during which they have run with the freshmen over the 2½-mile course. The boys tapered off with speed tests on Wednesday and warm-up runs yesterday.

Prospects for a Vermont victory are bright, for the Webster brothers, Fred and Charles, are in the pink of condition. Buttles, a sophomore, has been handicapped with an ankle injury, but he is now working out regularly. Harrington, another runner on whom Coach Post is depending, has also been suffering from injuries, but fortunately he is now able to participate in light workouts.

Vermont's chances are further enhanced by the addition of Norm Stoddard to the squad. Although Stoddard, a junior, has never before run in a cross-country meet, most upperclassmen remember that he ran some excellent mile races last year. The benefits of Stoddard's participation with the squad are two-fold. First, this swift-footed young man is sure to contribute greatly to a Vermont victory tomorrow; second, through his workouts with the hill-and-dalers Norm will be in excellent condition by the time the track season starts in the spring.

There is a justified air of confidence about the squad. Coach Post states, "The boys are in good shape and have a great deal of pep, as they demonstrated when the squad picture was taken the other day. We should have no trouble with Williams, barring accidents." However, cautious Archie added, "It isn't wise to count the chickens before they hatch."

Sports Cast

The Pace Quickens

Mid-week and more predictions coming up. News is filtering through to this camp of a fast and undefeated R. P. I. eleven. Whatever else you can say about this year's grid schedule, you can't say it's spotted with pushovers. The only supposedly easy games—Northeastern and Trinity—came at the beginning of the season when the Cats hadn't hit their stride and, now that they have, the schedule is getting tougher and tougher. Last Saturday's victory over New Hampshire indicated pretty clearly, however, that the Catamounts are a completely new team.

The blocking and tackling were greatly improved. In fact it was a thing of beauty to see the precision with which Vermont went about its work. The performance of the first team was more polished and the teamwork was much smoother. The only weakness that stood out was the team's vulnerability to fast running plays. Time and again the New Hampshire backs got away for long runs. A tight defense against fast starting backs is especially in demand for the R. P. I. and Norwich games. Both teams boast dangerous backfield threats.

Advance Dope

The usual advance dope from R. P. I. headlines 155-pound Samuel Schwartz as the man to stop. Tricky and fast, Schwartz has been the sparkplug of the Polytech eleven all season. If he lives up to expectations (they usually don't) Vermont will have to keep close watch. Of course there's always a chance that the Green and Gold's new tackling style will slow him up considerably.

Coach Fuzzy Evans reports that overconfidence is non-existent in the squad, but that a strong determination prevails to give all comers a good run for their money. The players express the same sentiments—"We're not saying we're unbeatable, but we'll be playing every minute of every game from here on in to the best of our ability." This spirit should help the Cats immensely in what promises to be one of the hardest tests of the season. R. P. I. has played five games thus far and has won them all. Last week they toppled Union by a 13-0 score. Other victims of the New York lads are Trinity, Drexel, Coast Guard, and Hamilton.

Those are the facts, now for the fortune-telling—feeling reckless and lightheaded we'll string along with the Cats. If they lose we'll blame our jinx-powers. If they win we'll take a bow.

The Hapless Kittens

The gridiron campaign of the Kittens has been a disastrous one to say the least. Lack of experienced and outstanding players seems to be the chief trouble. Defeated in every game thus far, the Frosh still have a chance to redeem themselves by a win over Middlebury, but it's a slim chance for the Panther Cubs sport an undefeated record.

The lack of yearling talent this year seems to point to reserve trouble for the Varsity next year. For the past few years the Frosh have come up in great numbers to swell the Varsity ranks. But next year with many of the present senior outfit graduating and few Frosh to fill the vacancies, the situation may offer problems. But this seems to be a case of crossing bridges before we come to them and there's plenty of trouble floating around without looking for more.

Cross-country Note

The undefeated harriers invade Williamstown this week-end with high hopes of extending their winning streak. Williams has always put out strong cross-country teams, but on the basis of their past performances we'll pick Archie's boys to turn the trick again. Well, we've stuck our necks out far enough for one afternoon.

Three new members have been added to the Outing Club Council; they are W. Nestler, P. Sutton, and Barbara L. Burns, all of the class of '43 who will be in charge of all the winter sports and skiing activities. There will be some freshman members chosen in February to aid in spring hiking and to enable them to become acquainted with their new positions.

Every year these members are chosen for their apparent interest, cooperation, and participation in the club activities.

Sunday there will be a hike to Sterling Pond. The truck will leave the gym at 9.00 a.m. and will take everyone up into the snow country of Vermont. It will cost you 35 cents, one lunch, and the use of your cup; so come on—you'll like the snow, the view, the hike, and the company. Last week the overnight hikers hit snow all the way to Taylor Lodge and arrived there at 9.00 in the dark and stormy night. It was something new, something different, and everyone had wonderful fun together. So try your luck this Sunday.

The jump at Underhill is now in the making; the land has been cleared and all is in readiness for the construction. It's a class A jump and compares most favorably with Dartmouth's. The winter season looks bright, it is needless to say.

There will be an open meeting for all Outing Club members on Thursday, November 14. The entertainment will be announced later.

D. F. Stuart Chapin, University of Minnesota sociologist, has been awarded the University Medal from his alma mater, Columbia University.

Frosh Cross-country Men To Meet Three Teams

The freshman cross-country team will meet Waterbury High school, Williamstown High School and Burlington High School in a combined meet at which Williamstown and Burlington High Schools will also compete with each other. The Williamstown-Burlington meet was originally scheduled separately but has been incorporated in this contest.

Coach Archie Post states that the boys will take it easy this week; but will start getting in shape next week.

Ten Years Ago In Sports

After going down to defeat at the hands of Harvard by the score of 35-0, the "Cat" gridsters are preparing to meet the U. S. Coast Guard Academy here Saturday, in the first home game of the season. The Catamounts showed up well against the highly touted Crimson outfit, holding them scoreless in the final quarter while pushing the ball down to the Harvard one-half yard line, only to be held off by the powerful Crimson line. No serious injuries were received in the Harvard fray and Coach David L. Dunn and his charges are confident of a victory over the Sailors Saturday.

The frosh football team are also to see action Saturday when they journey to Saxtons River to meet Vermont Academy. The Kittens have a very fine backfield but the line does not look very imposing as it lacks much needed weight on the ends.

Coach "Archie" Post is pleased with the showing of his cross-country men whose last year's team remains intact and has the added strength of several strong candidates from last year's freshman team

Herbert Hoover Led U. V. M. Presidential Poll In 1932

In 1932 the International Relations Club sponsored a college poll on the Presidential issue. At that time a nation-wide poll was being taken under the auspices of the Daily Princetonian. At Vermont the poll was held with the cooperation of the CYNIC news departments, and the results were released simultaneously with those of other colleges. According to the I. R. C. officials, this ballot was a direct outgrowth of the increasing local student interest in political activity on national as well as international affairs.

Many campus leaders urged voters to go Socialist. Several posters in the Old Mill displayed slogans urging: "Upset the Apple Cart with Thomas," "Go Republican and elect Herbert Hoover," "Root with Roosevelt—He's the Man." However when the results were posted, Hoover received the plurality of votes cast in thirty-one out of forty-seven participating colleges, and nearly half of the votes cast.

Hoover 29,289, Roosevelt 18,212, Thomas 10,470. Thomas led in five colleges but Roosevelt obtained 73 percent of the entire southern vote which was the highest sectional percentage obtained by any candidate. The results of Vermont's vote were: Hoover 179, Roosevelt 77, Thomas 155, Foster 1, total 412.

In October and November of 1912 the campus was seething with the most active phase of politics nowadays; eloquent platform speeches, profusion of literature, challenges, charges, counter charges and the like. The Woodrow Wilson Club was organized with thirty charter members present, and they adopted the slogan "Old Vermont and Wilson—Three times on the End." At the same time a Progressive Club was enthusing over Teddy Roosevelt. It promptly challenged the Wilson Club in debate. The Taft Club was still in embryo but there was an undercurrent in favor of the President.

Finally the long-looked-for Roosevelt-Wilson debate took place. Resolved: that Theodore Roosevelt is better fitted to become President of the United States than Woodrow Wilson. The debate was held at the Chapel and was very well attended. Although some good points were brought out, real proofs were rather rare, and the judges decided unanimously in favor of the negative. Much interest was shown in the straw votes taken; readjusted his new green and gold ribbons, preened his whiskers, and spoke with a sigh, "Purr-ty aren't they?"

The first vote: Wilson 41, Roosevelt 30.

The second vote: Wilson 49, Roosevelt 31.

An apologetic cough called him back. "Ah, yes, the interview," continued Archie. "I did a great job Saturday, don't you think? Scalped my first Indian." Archie expanded visibly. "Quite a task, but I did it. Y'know, I'm glad I joined up with this team. Great bunch of boys. It's a pleasure to help them out. A real pleasure."

The mention of a rumor that he had been injured in a brawl with a New York night club waiter caused Archie's paw to move automatically to a slightly disfigured ear.

"It's a lie! I'm innocent! I wasn't there, and besides, it wasn't a night club; it was a restaurant. And it wasn't New York; it was in Glens Falls. What's more, he hit me first." That disposed of that rumor.

Archibald Mehitable glanced back to his mirror and chuckled approvingly. "Cross-country agrees with me. I think I'll stick around and help out the Websters for a while. And you tell that Sports Editor that I've been eating those apples marked "Poison," and I'm still feline fine!"

Two Club Groups Meet at Museum

Visual Education Material Display

An aquarium club under the direction of Howard Johnson, a graduate student here, is now being instituted at the Museum. All those interested, students and non-students alike, have an opportunity to see a well-balanced acquarium with a large variety of tropical fish at the west end of the Museum. The first meeting of the aquarium club was held in Doctor Perkins' office at the Museum Sunday, October 20 at 2.15 p.m.

At the teachers' convention held here recently, the Museum displayed six different units available to Vermont schools as loans for classroom visual instruction. The expense of transportation is the only cost of these displays. They include films, photographs, paintings, and actual specimens. Eighteen cases with glass fronts are available for these exhibits ranging all the way from geology to anthropology.

A cannon ball found in the lake between North and South Hero has been presented to the Museum by Mr. Harley Macomber. It is thought that it dates back to the Battle of Plattsburgh during the War of 1812. It will be exhibited in the Early Vermont room.

Dr. Lewis M. Hurxthal addressed the Osler Clinical Society in the Museum auditorium, October 24 at 8.15 p.m.

their winter sports classes by Saturday morning at the physical education office at Southwick.

Freshman girls will find their schedules posted in the Y Room.

Winter sports classes begin next Monday. Everyone must come equipped to participate.

All sports clubs will begin this week. Badminton Club held its first meeting on Thursday evening. Miss Eleanor Bayley '40 will help coach this year. She is a former badminton sports manager and an All Sports Club member. Volleyball and Basketball Clubs will be held Tuesday at 4.45.

Regular Dances Planned For Saturday Nights

This year students who want to have a good time on Saturday evenings, yet find themselves ineligible to attend the special social functions of the week-end, will find that a grand evening can be spent at Southwick where dancing and games will be open to everyone. Plans are already well under way to provide the very finest in popular dance music for these evenings.

These events will be held each Saturday (except this week), starting at 8.30 p.m., and is being specially designed to supplement the social program, no attempt being made to conflict in any way with other scheduled events. It is hoped by those in charge of providing this service to University students that every student will avail himself of this splendid opportunity for Saturday evening entertainment.

The Inside Story Is Released On 7.30 Military Classes

R-r-r-ring go sixty different alarm clocks every Saturday morning as the members of that crack company, the dawn patrol, arise to assemble in the cage for Saturday morning drill. As the sergeant's wrist watch tolls 7.30 a.m. E.S.T. the command "Fall in" is given. Almost immediately thirty sophomores are assembled in three straight lines, and beside them stand thirty freshmen in not-so-straight lines. At the command "Inspection, arms" from the platoon sergeants, all the eager, alert freshmen and sophomores open their eyes, shake themselves, lift up their heads, and finally perform "Inspection, arms." The ceremony of calling the roll and other preliminaries being completed, senior and junior ranking officers fall out to correct the mistakes—yes, mistakes of the freshmen, who, as you may have already guessed, are not infallible. A little brutal perhaps, but one must meet the issue squarely. In the meanwhile the more intelligent sophomores march about the cage or outside. Essentially, this is the general routine of the drill.

At this psychological moment some clever student whose alarm clock didn't go "R-r-r-ring" chooses this time to make his grand entry and present his shining, morning face to Sergeant Pickett. Sergeants as a rule are soft-hearted fellows, and Sergeant Pickett is no exception to this rule.

But while he is dripping sarcasm, let us look back at the freshmen now who are frantically wrestling with their rifles in a vain effort to snap to those commands of "Port arms," "Right shoulder arms," "Order arms," etc. To most of those fellows the feeling of discipline and strict obedience to one's commands is probably a new sensation. At first it is quite a job to learn to curb one's animal instincts, but by the time the aforementioned one completes his R. O. T. C. course there is a marked difference between him and many of the lower forms of animals. But right now there's quite a lot left to be asked for, as, for example, one bright freshman ad libs on a command so that his rifle clicks seconds too late or another executes a solo after everyone else has finished counting in time to his movements. It is trying moments like these that cause sergeants to get gray or falling hair, as the case may be.

However, every good and bad thing must come to an end, so that finally that magic moment comes when the squad marches off to put their rifles back in the rack for another week. This is the polite way of saying "Company, dismissed" or "Resume slouch."

This is the inside story from a personal eyewitness, probably one of the first who has survived to print his experiences, of what goes on in that blessing to alarm clock manufacturers, the seven-thirty drill.

Waterman Building Is Growing Fast

The Waterman building is beginning to look less like an air raid shelter and more like the memorial it is to be. Scores of men are working day and night—digging, carrying, hammering, pouring cement and laying bricks, and soon to be riveting—one can almost see the building grow. A few thin timbers groping towards the sky, a shapeless pile of bricks, become tomorrow a solid brick wall; within a year the wall will be one of the largest and most beautiful college buildings in New England.

Sidewalk superintendents are having a field day. Physics students stagger out of classes to see men who never knew that $F = ma$ efficiently solve the problems of their jobs. A girl fresh from French class listens in awe to a superb stream of profanity which sounds like French, and wishes for a broader education. A proud civil engineer explains the whole layout to an admiring co-ed, until a gruff voice grunts "out of the way" and a wheelbarrow load of cement rolls by.

The huge crane is a fascinating object. Powerful and ponderous in its movements, it brings to mind a giant dinosaur moving about its business. The long boom, like a neck, gets tangled in the trees, sending dead leaves and small branches crackling toward the earth. As the orange cab slowly revolves, the trademark "Speeder" painted in large black letters stands out as would a bow tie on the neck of a dinosaur. A man lost in the mechanism guides the crane deftly, picking up massive chunks of granite and gently placing them on the prepared foundation. A machine, the product of our civilization, put to intelligent use. Men of all nationalities using their hands and machines, working together constructively.

Will Speak on Finland

Sunday evening at Collegium Mrs. Carpenter will give an interesting talk on "Finland." Mrs. Carpenter has traveled there recently, and she will have samples of their handiwork and post cards to illustrate her topic.

There will be a devotional service preceding the speaker, and afterwards there will be refreshments. Everyone is cordially invited.

Political Rally

R. Kenney, last of the speakers, was a Republican, proclaiming that "This is not merely an election, but a crusade for all those principles that we have held dear for 150 years, life and liberty." He wound up his crusade against Roosevelt by saying, "A man who dictates his nomination at Chicago is not indispensable but should be dispensed with."

Feeling ran high in the audience and several students gave impromptu speeches from the platform as their colleagues cheered their support. The first to state his views was M. Levin '41, who argued in favor of Roosevelt, then in rapid succession came J. Emott '41 for Willkie, Caroline Brown '43 for Willkie, Huddee Zwick '43, a determined Democrat, D. Edson '42 and J. Burgess '42 Willkieites, W. Suojanen '42 and H. Werner '41 for Roosevelt, and last G. Moody '42, who said he was a Socialist, but he was in favor of Willkie.

Impromptu Speakers

These impromptu speakers were roused by the arguments placed before them by Shirley Gray, "Dot" Smith, D. Maley, and R. Kenney. After being recognized by Professor Carroll, the speakers from the floor rushed up to the front inspired to stand by their candidate staunchly, but finding they could only talk for a minute and a half, they hurled brief yet effective arguments for their man.

As the students entered the "cage," pamphlets, printed by the Rpublican and Democratic National Committees were passed out with "facts" concerning each nominee and his qualifications for office. "Smash that Bottleneck! ELECT WILLKIE-McNARY" and "KEEP the GOOD WORK GOING, line up with the Democratic party" were headlines on some of the propaganda sheets.

The International Relations Club sponsored this rally so that everyone could have a chance to express his views about the election coming up on next Tuesday. As a whole, the meeting was kept well in hand, as every so often someone pleaded for freedom of speech by letting the speakers be heard above the noise.

THE MUSIC DEPARTMENT announces a recital by Michael Anselmo, violinist, assisted by Howard Bennett, pianist, at the Southwick Memorial Building, Sunday, November 3, at 8.30 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Independents Plan Program For Year

Motto, "Vermont First," Is Basis of Activities

Vermont Independents, the organization of students on the campus with no Greek letter affiliation, is beginning to take shape for the present school year. Meetings are being held at 7.30 p.m. on Monday evenings in Fleming Museum.

Believing that there is a need for an organization on the campus to broaden the activities of non-fraternity men, Vermont Independents is planning a program which will give more social, athletic, and recreational opportunities to its members. At least two dances per semester are to be held at the same time as the formal dances of the Greek letter societies. The dues of one dollar per semester will cover the expenses of these dances.

Vermont Independents is the only means by which non-fraternity men may participate in most of the intramural athletic activities. The program includes touch football, basketball, hockey, track, and soft ball teams to represent the Independents, besides such other sports as there may be interest in.

Speakers and movies will form a part of the programs of the weekly meetings, with subjects of timely interest to members. Revival of now-defunct school spirit will receive special attention.

The motto of this organization is "Vermont First." Following this lead, the Vermont Independents will be glad to cooperate with any students who see ways and means of improving the University and its activities. Through the work of the Independents our skating rink was instituted, and in this connection the formation of a hockey team to represent U. V. M. was discussed at a previous meeting. Frank Livak '41 is president of the Independents.

Vergennes Pastor Says Men Are Growing Cynical

"There are two kinds of people today. Those who think that peace is normal and war abnormal and those who think that was is normal and peace abnormal," stated Rev. Charles S. Hager of Vergennes, at the Chapel service last Wednesday. He said that the Conscription Bill and all its effects should make the problem particularly important to college students.

He concluded his sermon by stating that the world today is drifting toward cynicism in which war seems normal. "The future is in youths' hands," Reverend Hager concluded.

A Bach cantata was sung by the Chapel Choir who were accompanied by the Chapel Orchestra under the baton of Prof. Howard Bennett, head of the music department.

Modern Dance Group To do Creative Work

The Modern Dance Groups are being conducted under a new system as well as a new leader this year.

The classes, which are open to sophomores, as a gym elective as well as to any other girls interested, are under the direction of Miss Larson, who is replacing Miss Hazard on the Physical Education staff.

Instead of the former method of planned dances to be taught to the girls throughout the year, Miss Larson is letting the groups entirely decide what type of thing they'd like to do this year. The girls will probably start with simple techniques and work until they are accomplished enough to do creative work.

The new instructor believes that dance has something to say for itself, and she would be interested in seeing the girls create dances and then write the music, rather than dance to music already composed.

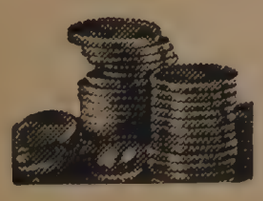
A large number of enthusiastic girls have signed up already, and modern dance promises to be a very interesting recreation.

College Expenses Are Hard To Earn

TERRE HAUTE, IND. (ACP)—Working one's way through college is easier said than done, according to Prof. A. C. Payne of Indiana State Teachers' College.

Nearly one-half the high school graduates eager to "work their way through" are unable to find employment and therefore never continue their education, Doctor Payne reported after a five-year study.

Professor Payne, a faculty director of the National Youth Administration at Indiana State, sought to learn how many prospective freshmen denied NYA employment fail to attend college anywhere. The study indicates that the percentage of non-attendance in college among those denied employment is increasing. In 1937 it was 46.7 percent, in 1938 it was 43.1, and last year the figure rose to 55.4 percent.



These findings dispute the belief of the man in the street that freshmen who fail to obtain employment will enter or continue school in spite of the handicap, Professor Payne pointed out.

He said that included among those unable to find work to finance their continued education are some of the best academic possibilities.

Total investment in the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles is $12,000,000.

U. V. M. Press Club Has Busy Program

Thirty Members Work With Publicity Office

The Press Club, functioning under the direction of Prof. Leon W. Dean in the University news office, has been keeping very busy this fall. Already, nearly 1,000 cards have been sent out to the home town and school newspapers telling "those back home" what honors their friends at U. V. M. have received, what clubs they have joined, and their various other activities.

There are thirty students working for positions in the Club, from whom twenty will finally be selected. The selection is on the basis of the scrub's reliability, accuracy, resourcefulness, and general ability.

Angeline Ducas '41, president and Janet H. Heath '43, the supervisor of work, are the executives in charge of the Club's activities.

Professor Dean feels that the Press Club has been greatly improved during the past few years. Its workers are now much more efficient and the quality of the work is better and more properly done. This work is one of the most important ones in the University news office as the casual contacts of the public with these bits of news serve a purpose far greater than is often realized as do the larger publicity articles on the University itself.

Looking At Vermont

Ten Years Ago

The University Farm has been given its first flock of sheep.

Doubleday Doran, publishers, have just announced their offer of another prize for the best novel of campus life written by an undergraduate for the 1930 contest.

The faculty have voted to adopt a new course next year. A curriculum emphasizing the social sciences, and designed to round out the courses of study prescribed by the University, will be entered next September as the Social Science course.

A questionnaire recently taken of the seniors revealed that Prexy and Campus were the best things at Vermont, with fraternity politics and the football team as worst. The highest tribute to the University was paid when every senior applied in the affirmative when asked if he would choose Vermont again if he were about to enter college.

Eighteen colleges and universities sent delegates to a New York State scientific conference at Vassar College.

"Buying" Topic of Home Ec. Meeting

Opportunities in This Field Discussed

"Common sense and a lot of luck are what it takes to be a good buyer." So said Mr. Ralph Herrin of Reynolds in speaking to the Home Ec Club at the Brick Barn, Wednesday night.

Buying has progressed during the last quarter century from one of the functions of the storekeeper to a specialist's position. Besides the romantic aspects of choosing the clothes for the store and learning of their sources and the stories behind them, buying involves much hard work. The budget must be planned carefully so that the best amount will be spent for different sizes, different colors, and different prices. The stock on hand must be constantly checked and popular articles reordered. The salespeople must be informed about all the selling points of the new lines, trained in salesmanship, and supervised.

There is much opportunity for capable buyers today. They must be open-minded and willing to buy things they don't like if they feel there is demand for them; they must be cooperative and able to get along with people. A sense of humor is almost a necessity in the business.

Kay LeBaron '41, president of the Home Ec Club, led the meeting. Joyce Bone '43 played violin selections, accompanied by Judith Perry '42.

Champlain Sabres Making Big Plans For Military Ball

Co-ed Major Will Be Chosen by Student Vote; Reduction in Price Made

The Champlain Sabres, senior military society, are combining their genius to make the 1940 Military Ball the best yet. This first of our two really big formal dances is to be held in the Gymnasium on Friday, November 15, with our own Catamounts, augmented to fifteeen pieces, furnishing the music.

The most exciting event preceding the dance is the selection of co-ed major, to take place some time this week, and will, for the first time be the result of votes cast by the entire student body, instead of the R. O. T. C., as in past years.

Other innovations this year in connection with the ball are a reduction in price to one dollar and sixty-five cents, and songs by two vocalists—members of our own student body already well known on campus—Doris Doerfler '44 and Tempi Connor '44.

The Champlain Sabres in charge of the dance are: E. Gilbert, chairman of floor and arrangements for music; R. Copp, chairman of programs and tickets; T. Huntley, chairman of publicity; J. Palmer, chairman of decorations; and L. Simpson, chairman of co-ed major contest. Chaperons will be Colonel and Mrs. Spalding and Captain and Mrs. Simpson, of the University of Vermont Military Department.

Willkie Leads in College Opinion

Holds Slim Margin of 1 Percent Over Roosevelt

AUSTIN, TEX.—American college opinion is almost equally divided between Franklin Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie.

Results tabulated this week for the first Student Opinion Surveys of America poll of the college year show the Republican candidate with a minute lead of one-half of one percent. Willkie's majority is so slim that, considering the allowable margin of error (3 or 4 percent) in all scientific sampling, it would be more appropriate to say that college students are about evenly divided on the two candidates.

This survey covers nearly 150 college newspapers, is conducted by the University of Texas.

Scores of personal interviewers using uniform methods over this cross-section of campuses asked students, "Whom do you want to see elected President in November?"

All students

WILLKIE, said.....50.5 percent
ROOSEVELT, said....49.5 percent

(Of all the students interviewed, 6 percent declared they had not decided.)

Not all college students are eligible to to vote, of course, but of the thousands who are twenty-one or older and will go to the polls next Tuesday, a majority will probably give their support to Willkie. Cross-tabulations of qualified voters gave these percentages, adjusted to eliminate undecided answers:

Voting students

WILLKIE .....52.4 percent
ROOSEVELT .....47.6 percent

This poll was taken before the President swung fully into his speaking tour, and it may be that before election day he may influence many a collegian, with the possibility of his taking the majority from Willkie. In 1938 the Surveys started sampling collegiate opinion on the third

Kappa Phi Kappa to Hold Meeting Nov. 6

On Wednesday night, November 6, at 7.30 p.m., there will be an open meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa in the education office. This meeting will be open to all Vermont men interested in any phase of education. The program includes a speaker and refreshments. It is hoped that everyone will avail himself of this opportunity to become acquainted with U. V. M.'s chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa.

Military Majors Hold Positions

Class of 1940 Includes Army-Marine Members

Col. Merrill E. Spalding, U. S. Army, who has been in charge of the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Vermont for several years has been endeavoring to ascertain the places the graduates of the four-year R. O. T. C. course of the class of 1940 are taking in the scheme of national defense which is pressing on the country.

The first among these is Gordon L. Smith who, with an inclination towards the military acquired at the University of Vermont, decided to attain the maximum of training and secured an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point where he enrolled July 1, 1940, and is now wearing the cadet gray.

As an honor graduate of the R. O. T. C., a designation given only to men of high standing both in scholarship and in military work, Earl Cash was commissioned permanently in the United States Marines. He is attending a Basic School in Philadelphia with additional field work at Indiantown Gap, Pa., where he will be until early in November.

Upon the departure of one of the officers of the Regular Army from the University of Vermont, Carl Schofield took his place and is now an instructor in the Military Department. Carl Schofield was the recipient at last graduation of the Sunderland award.

William E. Hunter is in the Army of the United States for a year's service and is located at Camp Jackson, S. C.

David R. Jones who applied for a year of active service with the Army is now stationed at Fort Niagara, Youngstown, N. Y., and assigned to the 28th Infantry.

Flying Cadets

The demand for young men is particularly high qualifications for our air defense has been met by R. W. Robinson and Roger Thomas who are both now serving as flying cadets. As flying cadets they will have one year's severe training aimed at securing the maximum in results and in eliminating those not fully qualified. After completion of the course as flying cadets, provisions are made for their continuance as reserve officers in the Air Corps with more extended training and with a possibility of their being appointed permanently in the Regular Army

Key And Serpent To Sponsor Second Hobo Day And Pep Rally On Friday

Styles for Hoboes—1939

Bums to Compete for Awards in Big "Beat Norwich" Campaign

Tramps, bums and hobos will rule the campus Friday for Key and Serpent Society has announced that Friday will be "Hobo Day." In an effort to arouse school spirit for the "Beat Norwich" rally which Key and Serpent is sponsoring Friday night, everybody will be expected to come to classes in the image of the worst bum they know. Old coats, patched trousers, worn hats and beards will be the order of the day. Key and Serpent suggests that the men on campus who wish to have real he-man beards should stop shaving tomorrow morning.

Key and Serpent Society is sponsoring "Hobo Day" in response to Kathleen LeBaron's letter to the editor which appeared in last Friday's CYNIC and to the many requests of students on campus. The first "Hobo Day," which was held last year before the Middlebury game, met with the enthusiastic response of all the student body, who enjoyed the departure from the usual "run of the mill" class day.

As a special feature of the "Beat Norwich" pep rally, Key and Serpent will announce the names of the best female bum and the best male bum at the rally. The method of selection will be determined by the society at a later date, but it will probably take the form of some type of voting on the part of the students who attend the rally.

Key and Serpent hopes that every Vermont student will join in the school spirit and fun of "Hobo Day" and will cooperate with them in making the "Beat Norwich" pep rally a big success.

Sororities Hold Annual Fall Dances

Five Hold Informals One is Semi-Formal

Five of the sororities held their annual fall dances on Saturday, November 2.

The Pi Beta Phi house, decorated with cornstalks and pumpkins, was the scene of an informal dance. Music was furnished by the Catamounts. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and Prof. and Mrs. D. B. Carroll. The dance was in the charge of Nancy Goodwin '42 and Barbara E. Burns '43.

The Alpha Xi's held a tea dance from 5.00 to 8.00 p.m. Chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. A. E. Briggs and Mrs. Lord. Jane Badger '42, Mary Bissell '42 and Dorothy McCormick '42 were in charge.

The Tri Delt tea dance was in the charge of June Hoffman '43. Chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. G. V. Kidder and Mrs. Swerdferger.

The Alpha Chi's danced to the music of Louis Pichierri's orchestra at a semi-formal dance of which Harriet Nelson '42, Lillian Aronson '42 and Alice Howe '42 were in charge. Chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. E. E. Lineken and Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond.

Sigma Gamma sorority held an informal dance at Southwick. Dorothy Franklin '43 was in charge. Chaperones were Dr. and Mrs. Gershoy.

Music Groups to Present Oratorio

"Judas Maccabaeus" to Be Given Next Spring

The University Choir and Chapel Orchestra are planning a performance of Handel's Oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus" at the time of the Lenten-Easter Concert in the Ira Allen Chapel, Sunday, March 23, 1941. Faculty and townspeople who assisted in the chorus of the Brahms "Requiem" last year, members of the Mixed Glee Club and students in the Music Education curriculum are invited to participate, providing they can attend rehearsals regularly. Other persons interested in singing in this chorus may try out Wednesday, November 6, at four o'clock, in the Music Building.

On account of the earlier date and the intervening Christmas vacation and mid-year recess, it seems advisable to begin rehearsals now. Scores have been obtained from the Association of American Colleges, and the choir is already working on one of the choruses.

The first rehearsal of the full chorus will be held next Thursday evening, November 7, from seven to eight o'clock, in the Ira Allen Chapel, and rehearsals will be held weekly at the same time, with the exception of the following Thursdays: November 28, December 12, December 26, January 2, January 23 and January 30.

If you are interested and eligible without tryout, please telephone or call at the Music Building office (phone 2810) before Thursday, November 7, if possible; if not possible, report at the first rehearsal that evening at seven o'clock in the Chapel.

Those trying out Wednesday afternoon will be notified before the rehearsal Thursday evening if they are accepted for the chorus.

"Harvest" Is Shown To Large Audience

Realistic Life of Peasants Portrayed

Something radically different from anything in the way of a motion picture that had ever reached Burlington before was the French film, "Harvest," that was shown at Southwick, Friday, November 1. Entirely devoid of anything that resembled glamor, the play was so realistic as to result in a battle with censors before it could be brought to Burlington. The plot, characters, emotions, and scenery all followed the theme of simplicity and man's harmony with nature and the soil throughout the story. The title itself signifies "second crop" or symbolically "rebirth." It is the story of the rebirth or regeneration of a human being and a village.

Panturle, a half-savage peasant, is the last occupant of the deserted mountain village of Aubignane. His solitude has almost made him like the wild animals that he hunts for his sustenance. One day this solitude is broken by the arrival to the village of a traveling knife-grinder and his wife. While spying upon them, Panturle falls into a brook, and is rescued by Arsule, the wife of the knife-grinder. Panturle falls in love with her and persuades her to run away from her husband. Through Arsule's love for him and her civilizing influence, Panturle becomes a human being once more. In the meanwhile, Gedemus, the knife-grinder, reports his wife as dead to the police and manages to get himself arrested for her murder. He is finally released when they find out the truth. This scene provides an entertaining comic interlude to the story. All this time Panturle has been tilling the land and has sold his produce at a country fair. With this money he buys Gedemus' wife from him for the price of a

Let's Be Bums for a Day!

November 8 is to be official "Hobo Day" here on our campus—the day when bums will have their heyday. Kathleen LeBaron '41 in her letter to the editor in last Friday's CYNIC apparently expressed the desire of a large group of students who will welcome the "Hobo Day." Boulder last year sponsored a "Hobo Day" before the Middlebury game and it proved a great success. Students joined in the plan and school spirit and merriment ran high.

The Key and Serpent Society which is sponsoring this year's "Hobo Day" is adding a special feature. The junior honorary men are going to acknowledge publicly at the rally Friday night the man and the woman who are the "best" bums. Such recognition should be an added incentive to everyone to don their oldest and most disreputable clothes and join in the fun.

Frequently we hear students complaining about the lack of school spirit, excitement, and pep at U. V. M. Whether the complaint is justified or not, we heartily endorse any plan which will arouse school spirit and will promote pride in our grand old college. If everybody joins in the fun on Friday and cooperates with Key and Serpent in their effort to foster "Beat Norwich" spirit, our plucky football team will see that every Vermonter will be supporting them next Saturday.

Is school spirit lacking at Vermont? Does our student body lack pep and enthusiasm? Are all Vermont students too conservative to be "bums for a day"? Do we want Norwich to point at us Saturday and say we have no spirit? Let's answer all these questions with a loud and emphatic "No!" Let's all show that we can support our team by being "bums" on Friday and yelling loud and long at the rally and the game "BEAT NORWICH!"

"Harvest"

The record number of people who attended the showing of the French film "Harvest" last Friday evening at Southwick is clear proof of the point that we made in last Friday's editorial that the students at Vermont do want more fine entertainment. The film was excellent and was enjoyed by all who attended. If such programs were as well attended in the future, the University would certainly not have to spend much money, since the proceeds from the sale of tickets would take care of the entire expense.

Massachusetts State College has a student activity fee of twenty-five dollars which includes all the items that our fee does plus a number of lectures, fine films and concerts. Eugene List, the talented young pianist who last Sunday played with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, gave an excellent concert at Massachusetts State last winter which was attended by the majority of the students on that campus.

Several students have pointed out to us that the two debating teams at Vermont receive a large portion of the student activity fee—a portion which is far too large in comparison to the benefit to all the students which these organizations offer. We do not intend to make any derogative remarks about the debating teams whose members do work hard, but we believe that some of the large sum of money that is given to these teams could be used to better advantage in the sponsoring of programs which would fulfill the desires of a much larger group of students.

We feel strongly that if a conscientious effort were made on the part of all groups some money could be allotted for the sponsoring of cultural programs on our campus.

AT THE THEATRES

By "MAC"

"Strike Up The Band," playing tonight and Wednesday at the Flynn, stars Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and June Preisser, and features Paul Whiteman's band. I must admit that this Preisser gal seems to have some attraction for college boys. Of course, this whole theory rests on one, or rather eleven, facts which are, to the average co-ed's envy, all frat pins.

To follow up my line on pins, "Third Finger Left Hand" arrives rather appropriately November 7-9 at the Flynn. It seems that in ancient times there was a belief that a special nerve or vein ran directly from this finger to the heart—thus the plain gold band was placed around the third finger left hand in lieu of the heart.

During the last year or so a few men had the nerve to take a couple of candid shots of the European situation. Just recently those shots have been incorporated into "World in Flames," which is playing for the last time tonight at the Majestic. Now we may see those imbeciles over there in all their glory???

"Return of Frank James," starring Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney and Jackie Cooper, plays Wednesday and Thursday at the Majestic. It's a relief to see a western thriller once in a while that is a grade A show, after having scores of these d— pulp stories flashed on the screen before us.

"I'm Still Alive," starring Kent Taylor and Linda Hayes, plays Friday and Saturday at the Majestic along with those daring Jr. G-men, who are incidentally still alive, although I don't see how!

"Dance, Girl, Dance," starring Maureen O'Hara and Louis Hayward, plays Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of next week at the Strong. This show is a great laugh and cry drama of one gal who gave the customers what they wanted, and another who chose to fight it out on the lines of most resistance—of course, the latter gal won out in the end, but the other one didn't come out on the bottom of the pile by any means.

Industrial Fellowships Held by Two Graduates

Two graduate students are working in the department of chemistry of the University of Vermont on industrial fellowships, one provided by the Eli Lilly Company of Indianapolis, manufacturers of pharmaceutical products, the other by the Maltex Company of Burlington, manufacturers of Maltex cereal. Jack L. Cohen of Burlington, holding the Eli Lilly fellowship in organic chemistry, is studying derivatives of sulfanilamide and related types. This is the fourth year the Eli Lilly fellowship has been offered at the University of Vermont.

Allan R. Williams of Jericho, Vermont '40, is working on a problem involving the activity of malt amylase. His fellowship is made available for the first time this year at the University by the Maltex Company. Both students are working for their Master of Science degrees, and both are under the supervision of Dr. Charles E. Braun, associate professor of organic chemistry.

donkey and is happy once more, tilling the soil as he was meant to do.

Because so many were turned away from the show last Friday evening, the Fleming Museum mangement is glad to announce a return showing of this picture tomorrow night, at 8.15. All who did not see this beautiful, humorous, simple production are urged not to miss seeing it on its return showing. The following special report, on this Marcel Pagnol production, by the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review, dated July 31, 1939, is of much interest. This report states, "The Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Reviews considers 'Harvest' an exceptional picture, in its unusual quality of creating, in the simplest terms, the effect of a folk-tale that is almost a parable. In its acting and whole presentation it has a remarkable spiritual depth of feeling that has the dignity of something Biblical translated into modern Provencal."

Tickets may be procured from the Book Shop and Fleming Museum.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Not all the opposition will be out on the field this Saturday. The Norwich Cadets will be up here full force, doing some grand cheering. If the Vermont cheering is as it has been they will certainly show us up.

Last year the reserved cheering section proved very successful, and many of us have been surprised that such a good thing has not been kept up. Why not revive the practice and give the Vermont students a section of their own where they can effectively combine their lung power and cheer their team to victory?

FRANCES ABEL '42.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In reference to Mr. Powell's letter of the 29th inst. to the editor: I fail to see why a man who lays no claim to being indispensable or superhuman should set up a code of ethics that he will follow regardless of the future, especially when his contestant for office has not even attempted to carry out most of his first term promises. Should we wait until a third or possibly a fourth term to give him a fair chance?

But perhaps we had better remind outselves that Mr. Roosevelt, among others, has never felt that economy was a principle of sensible government. Just as long as you have a stable security such as Harvard, New York State, the United States, or even a fine family name, you can go into debt to your heart's desire.

The New Dealers by their insincere phrases have managed to cover the third term with sleek oil and have thus hidden the obvious truth. By gazing across the Atlantic Ocean one is able to see the proclivity that the President twists too incessantly.

I only warn, I do not claim to prophesy. Mr. Roosevelt craves power and returns to the third term as to a drug habitué.

HAMILTON ROGERS '44.

term. Here is the record, showing the increase of approval as election time approached:

Favoring a third term for F. D. R.:
December, 1938 .....27.2 percent
January, 1939 .....28.2 percent
November, 1939 .....31.8 percent
February, 1940 .....39.5 percent
TODAY .....49.5 percent

From section to secton of the nation opinion varies considerably. Only in the Middle Atlantic States, which the Gallup and Fortune Surveys indicate will be the deciding factors, are students sharply divided: New England, 63 percent for Willkie; Middle Atlantic, 52 percent for Willkie; East Central, 60 percent for Willkie; West Central, 62 percent for Willkie; South, 63 percent for Roosevelt; West, 61 percent for Roosevelt.

if they so desire. Roger Thomas is at a Flying Field in Tulsa, Okla., where 40 percent of his class have already been eliminated.

R. W. Robinson was at Tuscaloosa, Ala., where it is understood he held the rank of cadet captain, the highest rank held by a cadet. He is now located at the Basic Flying School at Maxwell Field, Ala.

At Fort Benning, Ga., the Regular Army maintains a school where officers of all grades are sent for additional training. A course of three months is now being maintained for lieutenants who are serving for one year. With extended facilities in terrain and target ranges, much more ample and thorough practical training can be given than is possible at the colleges and universities. As lieutenants, six men are taking this course as part of their year's military service. They are: Arthur D. Clark, Herbert W. Coburn, William G. Cole, William W. Cross, David E. Stowell and Charles W. Utter.

Regular Army

Congressional legislation for the past several years has provided that about six hundred and fifty selected graduates of the R. O. T. C. could serve one year with the Regular Army as lieutenants and from this number fifty are chosen to be commissioned permanently in the Regular Army. Immediately after graduation Henry V. Middleworth was commissioned as a lieutenant and joined the 18th U. S. Infantry and is competing for a permanent commission.

Not all of last year's graduates could be reached, others have applied for active service but have not been called, so this list of fourteen is most probably incomplete.

Four years ago when these men began their training, the country was little concerned with military matters, but now our statesmen have no hesitancy in stating the gravity of the situation. The compulsory service will shortly bring men into service by the thousands. Where are the officers to come from? Putting on a uniform and granting a title of lieutenant does not make an officer. To train the men of the draft requires men who themselves are trained. These fourteen men are our contribution.

Colonel Spalding views with satisfaction the response of these fourteen men of the class of 1940 in this call to a national duty, and an additional satisfaction that from all reports and indications they are most successfully fulfilling their new duties.

Catamounts Sunk By Rennsalaer Mermaids

Engineers Skirt Ponds to Triumph 12-0; Still Undefeated

Rensselaer Tech remained among the unbeaten small college teams here this rainy afternoon by proving to be better muddlers than the University of Vermont. The Engineers, by executing two touchdowns in the first half, and protecting this lead with determination the final half, sounded the knell of the Catamounts 12 to 0 before a handful of drenched customers.

Playing on a field with water up to six inches deep in places and as deep in slimy clay in other spots, the Engineers marched 38 yards, the second time they gained possession of the ball, for their first score, and then took advantage of a break for the second tally in the next period.

Penalty Leads to Score

A penalty paved the way for the Engineers' first six points. Following Vermont's kickoff, which Sammy Schwartz took on his 17 and ran back 28 yards to the 45, Tech kicked to Johnny Spasyk on Vermont's 8-yard line. The Cats' quarterback immediately punted out to the 38. Three plays by the Engineers gained 6 yards, and Haller's punt went out of bounds on Vermont's 24.

Mudder!!

PHIL CHESARONE

But the Cats were offside—their only penalty of the game—and instead of taking over on the 24, it was 5 yards for R. P. I. to the Vermont 27. Geib, Schwartz and Haller combined on line smashes to pick up a first down on the 12. Schwartz carried to the 5, and Haller to the 1-yard line. Haller was knocked back for a yard loss, and again smashed but could not gain.

He reversed to Schwartz on the next play, and the 150-pound back dove over the center of the line for the score. The attempted pass for the extra point was easily knocked down by Mickey Gilbert.

Vermont got a break a moment after it had punted following the kickoff, Spasyk recovering a fumble by Schwartz—who lost the ball when tackled by Boots Lawrence—on the Vermont 44, but failing to gain Spasyk kicked on third down, sending Rensselaer back to its own 24.

Suddenly switching to reverses, the Engineers picked up three first downs on three plays, carrying the ball to the Vermont 13 after the second period opened. Geib picked up 30 yards, Schwartz 10 and Hoopes 16, but the next four plays gained only 6 yards and the Catamounts took over on their own seven.

The Vermont second team was in the game, and Frank Utley kicked out on first down to the 39, where Swede Carlson downed the ball. Schwartz was slammed for a 3-yard loss, then Hoopes came off left tackle, cut to his left and moved about 10 yards up the field.

Four Vermonters sent him to the sideline but when one of them slipped and fell he brought the other three down with him. Hoopes then outraced Utley to the end zone, and instead of the Engineers having the ball on the 30-yard line, they were 12 points in front.

Vermont Never Gets Going

That was the story of the first half. Vermont never got going, although Broutsas broke into the clear on a reverse with no one between him and the goal line, only to slip and fall after picking up 7 yards. The rest of the period was a kicking duel across the midfield stripe.

Most of the third period was played in R. P. I. territory, but little came of it until the last two minutes of the game. Vermont stopped the Engineers with ease, but could not get any kind of an advance going. It was gain 5, 6 and 7 yards, then lose that many as the carrier would tumble with no tacklers around as he tried to get started.

Neither team could advance, and the result was a punting duel among the little lakes and ponds. Vermont tried passing, to no avail, as the wet, soggy ball was falling far short of its intended receivers.

The fourth period was a repetition of the third, until late in the session when an unidentified Vermont player broke through and blocked Hoopes' attempted punt on the Engineers' 24-yard line, Shaw recovering the ball on the 23.

Aerials Fail

Broutsas got 2 yards off tackle, then an aerial went awry for no gain. His next pass, intended for Al Shaw, who was in the clear on the goal line was far short and intercepted by Geib on the 10, halted the rally. The ball was soaked and so heavy it could not be thrown for any distance. Three plays later the game was over.

Madden, the Rensselaer right tackle, played an outstanding defensive game, while Schwartz, Hoppes and Haller, all lightweight backs, were the spearheads of the offensive.

Lawrence, Carlson, Chesarone, Reed and Cliff Long were the stalwarts of the Vermont line, checking the Engineers effectively after the damaging first period. Butch Broutsas was the only consistent ground gainer for the Catamounts, getting 18 of Vermont's 29 yards in seven tries.

U. V. M. Harriers Win Over Williams For Fourth Victory

Websters Win; Miss Record by 30 Seconds; Stoddard Places Fourth

Running on a wet and slippery course, the University of Vermont harriers proved themselves to be "mudders" by setting back a strong Williams contingent last Saturday by the score of 20-35.

Despite the poor conditions, the Webster brothers traversed the course in 21.11, just thirty seconds behind the record, and crossed the finish line together to annex the first and second places for Vermont. Chapman of Williams placed third, closely followed by Norm Stoddard, new Cat recruit who ran a great race, coming in fourth. Hoyt, St. Mary, Livak and Crowne finished sixth, seventh, ninth and tenth, respectively, to clinch the meet.

After the run the hill and dalers journeyed to Troy to watch their less fortunate brothers succumb to R. P. I.

The results of the race were as follows:

1. C. Webster (V)
2. F. Webster (V)
3. Chapman (W)
4. Stoddard (V)
5. Moore (W)
6. Hoyt (V)
7. St. Mary (V)
8. Griggs (W)
9. Capt. Livak (V)
10. Crowne (V)

Time, 21.11.

Interfrat Football Enters Semi-Finals

Intramural competition narrowed down to but a handful of teams, leaving Kappa Sigma, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Phi Delta Theta still in the running.

Kappa Sigs Win 32-13

Tuesday afternoon Kappa Sigma met the Independents septet and came from behind to win by the score of 32-13. The outlook appeared black for Kappa Sig when the Independents ran back the opening kick-off to the 2-yard line, to score on the first play, booting the extra point. However, the Kappa Sig line held for the duration of the period and retaliated with a touchdown in the second quarter and tied up the game by making the extra point. The Independents again scored, and at the end of the first half the score was 13-7, with the Independents on the long end.

The second half was all Kappa Sig. By means of a passing attack they scored 12 points while holding their opponents scoreless. The fourth period netted Kappa Sig 13 more points to make the victory decisive, and the final accounting showed a Kappa Sig landslide.

The Kappa Sig squad consisted of Healey, L. Killick, J. Roger, R. Lynch, W. Harvey, J. Thomas, T. Clairmont. Substitutes were Corbett, Swift, Keighley and Rhidson.

The Independents were S. Sysko, H. Senuta, R. Doherty, B. Dunn, Thomas, H. Wilson and H. Smith.

TEP's Triumph 26-6

Tau Epsilon Phi whitewashed Delta Psi Thursday afternoon to the tune of 26-6.

The Delts were visibly outclassed but fought valiantly against their opponents, who used every play on the books. The first T E P touchdown was scored on a sleeper which caught Delta Psi napping. Accurate passing by Harold Stroyman and the brilliant receiving by Al Glazin were responsible for the 13 points scored by the T E P's in the first frame. No scores were made in the second period, but the game was put on ice when the T E P's scored twice in the third. Kicking by Len Weg also helped to make the game a runaway.

Desperately Delta Psi attempted to even the score and succeeded in making 6 points in the last period through the excellent playing of Hazen Wood.

The Tau Epsilon Phi team was composed of Lennie Weg, Moose Savin, Jack Bloom, Al Glazen, Harold Stroyman, Scuts Basch and Schuman. Subs were Itzkowitz, Berman, Goldberg and Saiger.

The Delts had Hazen Wood, R. Carlson, Frank Swift, Stuart Evans, Gilman Rood, Mel Small and Ed Roby representing them, with Caldwell, Davis and Gallus alternating.

Kappa Sig, sporting three crack squads, overpowered a Sigma Phi team by the extremely one-sided tally of 37-0.

In the first quarter Kappa Sig amassed 31 points and held their opponents scoreless. The Sigma Phi line held for the next two rounds and only gave up 7 more points in the fourth.

The Kappa Sig first team consisted of John Roger, Dick Lynch, Dick Healy, Larry Killick, Don Maley, Tom Keighley and John Thomas, Richardson, Corcano, Williams, Corbett, Swift, Black, Hennessey, Harvey, Collins, Costello, Clairmont, Edmo and Simpson.

Sigma Phi started Cecil Kimball, Dick Hay, Bob Pond, Dick Pop, Norm Tucker, Brad Sutton and Pat Moore. Substituting were Pease, Wedge and Kempter.

Grant Wood, celebrated artist, has been granted a year's leave from the art department of the University of Iowa to devote full time to painting.

Sports Cast

By the SPORT EDITOR

Backfire

This is Monday morning and everything looks foggy, to say the least. What was to be a very brilliant prediction has backfired and Vermont is now trying to forget everything except that game with Norwich. R. P. I. it seems had a football eleven. Two of the Engineers—Schwartz and Hoopes—got one touchdown apiece and that was that. Of course, R. P. I. was undefeated, but we're inclined to think the Cats weren't playing the type of ball they did play against New Hampshire and Union. Maybe the boys were worrying about the election.

Stopping Norwich

Meanwhile the Norwich motorized attack struck Hyannis and decimated it 40-0. The best strategy it would seem for stopping next Saturday's invasion is to place sharpshooters in the stands. When Walt Domina gets going on one of those long touchdown runs, someone could wound him just enough to slow him up.

Seriously speaking, we think that Vermont has two points in its favor when they meet the Cadets—first, the latter are about as cocky as any one eleven could be; second, the Cats have played a harder schedule than the Cadets. Another factor is the maxim—"Anything can and does happen in a state contest."

At all events the Norwich-Vermont tilt will probably be the "thriller" that has been predicted all season. Hang on to your tickets, folks, and please don't push.

The Harriers Are Still At It

Once more our undefeated harriers have scored a win. Not even mighty Williams could do anything about this new winning streak of the Catamounts. That N. E. I. C. A. A. run Armistice Day should see them well up in front. This is the first time in years that a Vermont cross-country team has taken part in this event and Archie Post certainly picked the right time to enter.

And now if you'll excuse us, we'll scram for a certain clear-toned bell is ringing out a summons.

Women in Sports

The first meeting of the girls' Bowling Club will be held this Tuesday at four o'clock at the Bowlaway on Main Street. Meetings will be held throughout the winter and any girl who attends at least three-fourths of the meetings will automatically become a member of W. A. A. The committee in charge of the Bowling Club met Monday to discuss plans for interdorm and other competition which will be held during the winter. This committee consists of Gail Klinger '42, coach, Ruth Hopkins '41, Ellen Isham '42, Elizabeth Jenks '43 and Alice Needham '43.

Fogg Looks Over Frosh Basketeers

Despite the fact that basketball will not officially commence until the football season is over, a large number of aspirants have already responded to the first call issued by the coaches. Freshman basketball will be under the supervision of Sherry Fogg, who at the present is coaching freshman football.

Practices are held every Monday and Wednesday evening from 7.15 to 9.00 o'clock in the gym. The fundamentals such as dribbling, passing and holding the ball are the points mainly stressed. Since football players are not allowed to attend the practices until their present sport has terminated, the freshman instructor has only been conducting light workouts.

The freshmen are well stocked with promising material for most of the candidates either starred or saw considerable action in high school and prep school. It will be a hard job to pick the five best players.

Ten Years Ago In Sports

In the first home stand of the season, the Catamounts came through with a timely win over the Coast Guard's "Pigskinners." It was certainly most appropriate for Coach Dunn in presenting his charges for the first time before the Vermont student body.

Formal announcement from Pres. Guy W. Bailey and the athletic council confirmed earlier reports of the appointment of two of Vermont's most prominent young alumni, A. T. Post '27, and H. A. Prentice '28, as coaches of the freshman and varsity basketball teams respectively.

Textile Display Given to Museum

Modern Prints Designed From French Fabrics

Modern textile designs are not always new designs, points out a special display of the old and the new in textile patterns at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont. The exhibit proves its statement by showing a piece of an old handmade French coverlet, found in an antique shop in Bergerac, France, together with two samples from modern French and American textiles, bearing the same design. There is also shown a piece of wall paper printed in a pattern based upon the same old French design of leaves and flowers.

The display is the gift to the Fleming Museum of Pierre Pozier of New York City, who bought the antique French print material from an antique shop in Bergerac, known as 'Comme Chez Grand'-Mere." French craftsmen of the present day reproduced the design in one of the modern samples shown, and since the war started, it has been reproduced in this country. In both modern textile samples the cloth is machine woven and the design hand printed. All the modern versions of the old French pattern are of different coloring from the original. The antique textile was printed in deep reddish pink and blue; the modern fabrics instead of this pink have a peach-pink shade with basic orange tones instead of the underlying purple-red of the antique. Stylists of the modern materials, it is said, believed this color to be more pleasing to the modern taste. The blue in the modern designs is similar to that in the old.

Mrs. Williams Talks To College Group

Subject, "Comradeship In Western Hemisphere"

Mrs. Hugh Williams, for many years a teacher in Paraguay and Argentina, spoke to the Methodist College Group, Sunday night, on "Comradeship in the Western Hemisphere." She described life in the southern part of Latin America, pointing out some superiorities over our life. The chief of these is the complete lack of race prejudice—Negroes, Japanese and Indians are treated as equals by English, Spaniards and Germans. In many ways our southern neighbors are less advanced than we—women cannot vote, and the family is bossed by the man, who may even lock his wife in and go off for the evening. School laws are good, but facilities are inadequate and few girls go to high school. After her talk Mrs. Williams sang a few songs in Spanish, such as the Argentines sing.

Thursday evening of this week there will be a social at 7.30 at the Y. M. C. A. Building. All members are urged to attend. Next Sunday evening there will be no regular meeting, due to Armistice Day, but there will be open house at the parsonage for all who wish to drop in.

D. A. Morrison '41 has been chosen secretary-treasurer to succeed Clinton Rich who has left town.

Correction

In the article about the Pan-Hellenic meeting with freshmen, in last Friday's CYNIC, the name of one of the speakers was omitted. Marjorie Smith '43, of Sigma Gamma, spoke on scholarship as promoted by sororities.

SCRIBES—There will be a meeting on Wednesday, November 6 at 7.15 p.m., at Southwick. Prof. Elliott Merrick will be present, and refreshments will probably be served.

Waterman Building Aids Back Campus

Paradoxically enough, the construction of the $1,250,000 Waterman Building on our front campus has also facilitated the improvement of our back campus. In excavating for the foundation of the building 3,000 cubic yards of earth were removed. This earth has been deposited on the back campus. It has succeeded in leveling off the hollow that formerly existed between the men's playing field and Converse Hall. In this way there is a great deal more space for such sports as touch football, track, rugby and basketball. Part of this earth has also been used for the leveling of the space behind the Southwick Memorial.

The Coffee Corner no longer has the doubtful honor of being the outstanding spot where men may get together to discuss conscription, etc. The site of the Waterman Building is in competition for the honors. And no wonder; there are always a great many people who are interested in watching the construction of a building. The foundation and basement walls are already completed and the construction of the framework of the first floor is well under way. By Christmas the roof is expected to be on, thereby making it possible to work throughout the winter months.

The actual building operations were started on July 17 of this year and it is expected that the building will be completely finished by September 1, 1941. The University expects to be occupying the Waterman Building, and well settled therein when it will be formally dedicated next October at the Sesquicentennial Anniversary Celebration of the University.

Scribes to Make Plans For Page in the Cynic

Scribes will hold its next meeting Wednesday, November 6, at Southwick. The time is 7.15 p.m., in other words, some time before 7.30. Members are urged to come in spite of flood, hurricane, or hour exam, and to bring as many manuscripts as possible. This is important, because plans will be made for the page in the CYNIC, and there has to be something to work on.

Prof. Elliott Merrick will be present to cool the fevered brows. Refreshments will be served.

Coming Catamounts And Vocalists For 1940 Military Ball

Three years after organizing finds the Catamounts leading the queen city bands and Vermont college bands as well. Featured vocalists will be "Tempi" Connor, and Doris Doerfler of U. V. M.'s frosh. Also in evidence will be the horn of plenty of the former.

The Catamounts organized after a summer engagement at the Westport Yacht Club. Weathered a cold winter on the home campus but went to Auto Inn and Nicklaw Manor for successful summer engagements. Its career has been highlighted by its winter sojourn at the internationally famous Lake Placid Club where it was selected over eighteen college bands and four professional outfits.

The Catamounts are not a band of past performances as evidenced by a complete fall schedule. They will be in the spotlight at the Policemen's Ball, the Armistice Charity Ball and numerous other local and college dances.

The band still relies on the idea of "every man a leader" as when it was first organized. The brunt of the work is borne by Wayne Barrows '41 and Louis Pichierri '41.

Emphasis has been placed on special arrangements and different treatment of stock favorites. The endeavor has been to present a modern version of swing tunes as well as a true version of sweet ditties on the hep side.

The enthusiastic reception of the band at its various performances, the constructive criticism of men in the profession, and the long period of catering to the public's taste without too great a back seat to commercialism have all gone to making the Catamounts not only a bigger but a better orchestra. Effort has always been toward improvement. The Military Ball will see the usual ten-piece outfit augmented by more of the local outstanding musicians.

The appearance and the enthusiasm of the members have helped keep up the morale of the band on tedious one-nighters or luxurious location jobs.

Special arrangements are handled by Bob Johnson '40 and Hal Boutilier.

G. Oling Chosen Delegate

In a meeting Friday night, Pan-Hellenic discussed revising their constitution. It was decided not to start work on this until after the convention at Penn State College next week-end. Gloria Oling '42, of Delta Phi Epsilon, was chosen as Vermont representative.

Students spend 21,000 hours a year standing in line during registration periods.

Faculty Members Heard in Concert

An enthusiastic audience, some of whom came from as far as Montpelier and Rutland, heard a splendid program of concert music at Southwick auditorium on Sunday evening. The artists, both of whom are members of the faculty, were Mr. Michael Anselmo, violinist, and Prof. Howard G. Bennett, pianist. Mr. Anselmo, who has been a member of the Cremona string quartet which has made several appearances at the University of Vermont summer sessions, is violin instructor in the Music Department. Professor Bennett, who is well known to Burlington audiences, is head of the department.

Before the first movement of the Sonata in E minor by Mozart had hardly begun, the audience was aware of the splendid ensemble which was characteristic of the entire concert. The second movement of the same sonata, although lacking the vividness that characterized the rest of the program, was played correctly and with fine interpretation.

The climax of the recital, reached in the Concerto in E minor by Mendelssohn, brought prolonged applause. The adagio movement was the high point within the concerto.

To many, the quiet and simple "Madrigale" by Simonetti was the most beautiful of the program. Concluding the recital in a literal 'blitzkrieg" of motivation, was the "Moto Perpetuo" by Ries.

Responding to encore, Mr. Anselmo repeated Simonetti's beautiful "Madrigale."

The complete program follows:

Sontata in E Minor, K. 304.....Mozart
Concerto in E Minor, Op. 64.Mendelssohn
Sonata in G Major, Op. 30, No. 3
Beethoven
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Rondo .....Mozart-Kreisler

Collegium Enjoys Talk on Finland

Those who attended the Collegium meeting Sunday evening heard a very interesting talk on Finland by Mrs. Frederick Carpenter, who visited there a year ago last summer.

Dressed in native Finnish costume, she described the country, which is very much like our own Vermont, the language, the educational system and universities, their religion, cultural achievements, architecture and great interest in sports. She spoke on Helsinki, the largest city of the country and the capital, with its buildings all of white stone, the industries of lumber, textile making and wood working, and their numerous radio stations. She passed around interesting pamphlets and souvenirs at the end of her fascinating lecture.

The Collegium meeting next Sunday evening will be at Mrs. Perry's at 236 S. Prospect Street. All those planning to be present please call 1993-R before Friday.

Vt. Women Take First Aid Course Under Dr. Mackay

When the University of Vermont offered a course in Red Cross First Aid for twenty women students, more than fifty overwhelmed officials by asking for enrollment in the training. Upperclass women were given first chance at the twenty places in the class, but requests for the instruction were not confined to juniors and seniors. Freshmen and sophomores, too, were eager to study first aid, a course which, completed satisfactorily, rewards its graduates with a Red Cross First Aid Certificate.

Present arrangements have been made for the originally scheduled class of twenty with Dr. A. G. Mackay, assistant professor of surgery in the University Medical College, as instructor, and the first meeting was held Monday, November 4. Twenty lessons in all make up the course. They will be given Monday afternoons at the Southwick Building.

This is the first year the official Red Cross First Aid Course has been offered here at the University. Prof. Eleanor S. Cummings, head of the women's physical education department, who made the arrangements, announces that an attempt is being made to find an instructor for a second First Aid class to meet the urgent demand of the students. In the event such a class is formed, girls who have already signed up for First Aid instruction would be given first chance.

The twenty girls who have been admitted to the First Aid class starting Monday are: Jean Aseltine, St. Albans; Joanna Metcalf, Waterbury; Miriam Rubin, Brockton, Mass.; Elizabeth Gurney, Burlington; Agnes Conley, Brockton, Mass.; Jeanne Woolley, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Jean Finney, Malone, N. Y.; Fleda Jones, Morrisville; Beatrice Shine, Wardsboro; Louise Mann, Burlington; Jean Young, Elmhurst, L. I., N. Y.; Doris

John Dewey Club To Debate at Southwick

The John Dewey Club will hold its first meeting tonight at 8.15 at Southwick. The program will consist of a decision debate between Keene Normal School and U. V. M. The subject of the debate will be, "Resolved, that the power of the federal government should be increased." Vermont will uphold the affirmative.

After the debate an open forum will be held. Refreshments will be served at the meeting.

Super-Colossal Pep Rally!

Hoboes To Be Crowned Free Cigarettes

Under the auspices of the Key and Serpent the second pep rally of the football season will take place tonight at 7.30 in the cage. To make sure that as many students attend as possible, the R. O. T. C. Band will parade around to various fraternities and dormitories.

Out to "Beat Norwich," the pep rally will feature Mr. Prentice, head of the physical education department, and Roy Wietz, assistant football coach. As an added attraction, senior members of the football team will be asked questions about the game. But the climax of the evening will be the rewarding of prizes to the best male and female bum on the campus as the crowning point of "Hobo Day." Those judged to have the best costumes on the campus during the day will be asked to appear at the rally, and the winners will be judged by the amount of applause which they receive.

The rally is in charge of Jack Burgess '42 and Dave Sawyer '42. C. V. Akely '42 will be master of ceremonies. Of course, the R. O. T. C. Band will play at the rally, and special attention is called to the fact that free cigarettes will be distributed.

Boulder Dance Tomorrow Night

Climax to "Hobo"-Cadet Week-end

An informal dance, sponsored by Boulder Society, will be held tomorrow evening in the men's gymnasium. This dance, concluding the events of the week-end, will provide a suitable climax for the excitement of "Hobo Day" and the Norwich game. In addition to Vermonters and their dates, Norwich visitors will be present at the affair.

The popular Catamounts orchestra has been engaged to furnish swing tunes for the dancing. A minimum price of fifty-five cents per couple will be asked for admission and with this added attraction, a crowd is expected to attend.

Coach and Mrs. Roy Wietz and Coach and Mrs. Sherman Fogg of the physical education department will chaperone. R. G. Healy '41 is chairman of the committee for the dance. He is assisted by J. R. Royer '41 and N. K. Strassburg '41.

Choir and Orchestra Give Chapel Program

Many students attended the musical program conducted by Professor Bennett in chapel last Wednesday.

The program started with Miss Marston at the organ playing "Reverie" by Bonnet. The University Choir and Chapel Orchestra joined in "What God Ordains Alone in Right" from Cantata No. 75 by Bach. The choir then sang "O Domine Jesu Christe" ascribed to Palestrina. The orchestra played "Concerto" from Cantata No. 142 by Bach, following which the choir sang "Come, O Blessed Lord" by Tchaikovsky. The choir and orchestra then again joining in "O Father, Whose Almighty Power" by Handel and the Organ Postlude "Grand Choeur" by Dubois concluded the program.

Catamounts Meet Cadets In Championship Tilt

Vermont Must Stop Domina and Liebel Game May Develop Into High-scoring Contest

The scarlet wave of the Norwich Horsemen invades the ivy portals of U. V. M. this Saturday, November 9, for the express purpose of annihilating its football team, a feat which no Norwich team has accomplished in some eleven years.

The Horsemen, led by Walt Domina, have compiled a very impressive record and are very slight favorites to cop this Saturday's game, although the Vermonters concede them nothing and past records mean very little when Norwich and Vermont clash. The skirmish will start at 1.45 p.m. on Centennial Field.

Norwich Statistics

The Norwich lads have made some very nice statistics in most of their games thus far, against several weak teams from somewhere, one might say frem the State of Coma where only a half dozen fellows on each team know the shape of a football, but against their only noteworthy opposition, Boston University, Norwich succumbed by 30 points. Yet it must be admitted that the Cadets are a strong outfit and unless some unforseen "break" appearing on the horizon before Saturday, Norwich will go on the field a slight favorite.

Throughout the week the Catamounts have been working overtime in an effort to develop ways and means of stopping Domina and Liebel, the two players who have carried the burden for Norwich all year. Domina, a halfback, has received nation-wide recognition while piling up the amazing total of 86 points, which puts him only one behind Michigan's Tom Harmon, and Frank Liebel, an end, is not far behind with 51 tallies, which ranks him first among the East's high-scoring ends. If the Cats succeed in these two standouts their chances of victory are much greater. Without Domina, Norwich is just another mediocre small-college team.

Senior Lineup

The Vermont line-up will be studded with many seniors who will be facing the

Gloria Oling '42 At Penn Conclave

Representing U. V. M. Pan-Hellenic Council

Gloria Oling '42, of Delta Phi Epsilon, has been chosen by the entire Pan-Hellenic Council to represent the sororities of U. V. M. at a regional conference being held this week-end at Penn State College. Miss Oling is junior representative for Delta Phi Epsilon and will be president of Pan-Hellenic Council next year. Had Miss Oling been unable to attend, Wanda Cobb '42, Kappa Alpha Theta, would have taken her place as alternate.

Conference Scheduled

Miss Oling took the noon train yesterday, November 7, to New York. She will stay over night there and proceed by bus to the town of State College, Pa., where the school is located, on Friday morning. The sorority delegates will be housed at sorority houses and dormitories for the week-end.

Registration takes place from 8.00 to 9.00 o'clock Friday evening to be followed by a general meeting for all delegates and visitors.

Saturday morning there will be round table meetings and a luncheon with imported speakers at 12.30. Saturday afternoon from 2.30 to 5.00 there will be more round table discussions. At dinner Saturday night Dr. Paul Selsam will speak. Afterwards the delegates may attend a Mortar Board dance called the "Spinsters' Skip" if they so desire. Dates will be arranged. This is an annual benefit dance to raise money for scholarships.

Recommendations To Be Made

Sunday morning there is a breakfast meeting at 9.00 o'clock, followed by a meeting at which all findings and recommendations will be heard. The conference will be officially closed at 10.30 that morning.

Miss Oling will arrive back in Burlington some time Monday. Many interesting and debatable questions are to be discussed and Miss Oling expects to bring back much valuable information and new ideas of value on our own campus. The revision of the Pan-Hellenic constitution has been postponed until Miss Oling returns from the Penn State convention.

Two Vermont Alumnae to Lead Pilgrim Fellowship

Two alumnae of U. V. M., Kay Narramore and Doris Kinsley, both of last year's graduating class, are expected to lead the meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship next Sunday evening at 7.30. The topic is as yet unannounced. Refreshments will be served and everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Collegium Meeting

The Collegium meeting Sunday evening will be at Mrs. Perry's at 236 S. Prospect Street. Will all those planning to be there please telephone her at 1993-R?

"To Asia for Apes" Given at Museum

Fleming Museum was the scene of the first of this year's series of University lectures on Thursday evening. The guest speaker was Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., assistant curator of mammals in the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology, and his subject was, "To Asia for Apes." He was brought here by Prof. A. R. Gifford, the chairman of the Committee on University Lectures and head of the philosophy department.

Having been on a field exploration in Siam, Borneo and Sumatra, Doctor Coolidge was well qualified to discuss the gibbon and orang-utan. The lecture was vividly illustrated with motion pictures as well as recordings of their calls and wild cries. The psychology of family life and social behavior of the gibbon was most interesting, as was the most recent theory on the biological relationship between man and apes. Being more than a travelogue, the lecture also dealt with the scientific findings of Doctor Coolidge's expedition. Both science and philosophy students enjoyed this fascinating illustrated talk.

Students Favor Isolation For The United States

AUSTIN, Texas, November 5—Unlike U. S. public opinion, majority sentiment among college students today holds that it is more important for the United States to try keep out of war than to help England even at the risk of becoming involved.

Simultaneously over the entire nation, Student Opinion Surveys of America has sent its interviewers to query all types of students on large and small campuses, presenting to them a problem vital to American youth, a question many times discussed in a thousand dormitory and boarding house bull sessions. With the cooperation of the CYNIC and scores of other newspaper members, the Surveys has gathered and tabulated these opinions by means of scientific sampling methods. Here are the results:

Students were asked which of the two following things they thought was more important for the United States to try to do. Their answers, in percentages, are given after each statement—

Keep the United States out of war 55%
Help England, even at the risk of getting into the war..... 45%

This is not what their elders think. A Gallup poll recently pointed out that the majority of Americans believe the British are holding our first line of defense and helping them is more important than merely trying to steer away from the conflict.

Students, however, have repeatedly shown their tendency toward isolationism and their strong deside to avoid another war. For two years the Survey has been gauging collegiate sentiment the nation over. It has found, for example, that majorities (in October, 1939) would not volunteer should the United States send troops to help England and her allies, opposed (in October, 1939) changing the neutrality law to allow any belligerent to buy American supplies, opposed (in February, 1940) compulsory military training, and felt (in February, 1940) our most important problem was to keep the country out of war.

These opinions have been tempered somewhat by the impact of recent events such as the fall of France, United States conscription, and the spread of the war. An indication of this cooling of opinion is the large group, comprising 45 percent of the students, who at this time approve helping England, even if we eventually have to fight.

Streamlined Rushing

With the last open house close at hand, freshman women are beginning to assume a more serious attitude toward sorority. So far it has been a series of football game invites, hilarious visits between the hours of four and seven-thirty and a few talks on sorority at Southwick. Final parties, the climax to rushing, are yet to come. Contrary to previous years, they may be either formal or informal. This innovation should challenge the originality of every group on campus. To freshmen final parties are inspiring and it is their duty as well as the polite gesture to accept every party invitation if possible. Important as they are, final parties should not be too great an influence on freshmen, for it is not with the final party but with the girls as individuals and as a group with whom a pledge must live and cooperate.

Everything possible has been done to make the rush period pleasant for both sorority and freshman women. Pan-Hellenic has tried to distribute rushing activities so they won't interfere too much with academic activities. Final parties have been dated so that they will conflict with hour tests as little as possible. Professors and teachers have been asked to cooperate with the efforts of Pan-Hellenic in trying to make the last days before Thanksgiving recess as easy as possible. Pledging has been placed after Thanksgiving to give freshmen an opportunity to discuss sorority with their parents. Rules, while they seem rather complex and unnecessary now, have been made as simple and direct as conditions permitted. First semester rushing is being given its second year of trial. The unsuccessful parts of the first year have been improved or eliminated and the second attempt should be more successful.

There are many opportunities for freshman women who do not go sorority. To them are accorded many of the privileges which sorority women are not allowed to enjoy. Many women do not affiliate themselves with a Greek-letter society their first year in college. If there is any doubt in which sorority to pledge this is the avenue which should be followed. Pledging is a very important step for it may mean sublime happiness or it may mean discontent, dissatisfaction and unhappiness. Open bids may be extended upperclassmen and they certainly are worth waiting for in any doubtful circumstance.

Everything is being done on the U. V. M. campus to stop unfavorable publicity now being given to sororities. It represents a very unfortunate trend.

Hobo Day

This Friday will witness the second Hobo Day on the Vermont campus. Last year's hontytonk fiesta was not only a functional success but proved loads of fun for the participants. There was a wide variety of travelers' costumes. This year's sartorial relaxation should benefit by the experiences of last time and the fresh (or frosh) ideas of you of '44.

Remember this year's added attraction of proclaiming a king and queen of hoboes.

Ladies—you can wear dungarees and still look glamorous.

Gents—the gals won't recognize you behind those beards anyway.

Women in Sports

W. A. A. has chosen the honorary varsity hockey team from the girls who have shown outstanding ability in this field. The members are: Ruth Cheney '44, Nancy Fawcett '44, Kathryn Ferrick '44, Edna Gates '44, Cathryn Grier '43, Esther Gove '43, Lola Hawley '43, Ellen Howe '44, Charlotte Hyde '44, Helen McLean '43, Jean Norris '44, Priscilla Perkins '44, Mary Louise Pickard '43, Phyllis Pierce '43 and Alice Rowe '44.

Many freshman girls have been made W. A. A. members through their ability, interest, sportsmanship and attendance at club meetings. Those who have received membership through Hockey Club are: Marjorie Abell, Dorothy Arnault, Natalie Beal, Dorothy Bullard, Naola Carter, Ruth Cheney, Frances Counan, Nancy Fawcett, Kathryn Ferrick, Alice Ferrin, Edna Gates, Cathryn Grier, Ellen Howe, Charlotte Hyde, Jean Norris, Priscilla Perkins, Phyllis Pierce, Alice Rowe, Ellen Stewart, Phyllis Taylor and Nancy Whittemore. Those who received membership from Tennis Club are: Cynthia Bailey, Barbara Clark, Pauline Clarke, Mary Lessor, Mary Quinn, Mary Rice, Alice Ryan and Barbara Webb. Those who were made members by Archery Club are: Lorraine Gannon, Betty Pratt and Jessie Swann.

Bowling Club, which meets on Wednesday afternoons at 4.15 at Bowlaway, is off to a grand start, and more girls are joining continually. Those who attend three-fourths of the meetings are made members of W. A. A., and if twenty-five girls attend the bowling alleys on the third floor are reserved for them alone. Last week the highest averages were held by Alice Needham, 88; Mary Quinn, 83; Carol Provost, 79; Peggy Durfee, 79. Those scoring highest in individual strings were Peggy Durfee with a 97 and Carol Provost with a 93. The club plans to hold a zone tournament soon.

There were twelve girls present at the Swimming Club last Friday and more girls are urged to attend. The meetings are held at the Y. M. C. A. pool on College Street, and the girls are instructed by three women in swimming and diving. A splash party is being planned for December.

Miss Larson's courses in country and square dancing are a great source of interest and fun to many girls, and there is room for more girls to enter. The class meets at 4.15 on Wednesday afternoons. There are twenty-five girls enrolled in the modern dance group which meets on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4.15. Miss Larson urges those girls who would like to participate in the Lilac Day pageant in the spring to start attending classes next week, that they may learn routines and do some creative work before the regular Lilac Day rehearsals begin.

Twenty-one upperclassmen attended the First Aid course given by Doctor Mackay last Monday. Next week, because of Armistice Day, the meeting will be held on Tuesday afternoon. Those who pass the course will receive a Red Cross Certificate. There are eight copies in the Billings Library of the textbook "American Red Cross First Aid" from which Doctor Mackay lectures. Another course is being planned for the girls who were not able to be enrolled in this one, and they are urged to watch the Y board for an announcement of this class.

Last week-end Miss Barbara Crowe of the physical education department attended a field hockey umpires' rating conference for Albany district in Troy, N. Y. She took her test for rating on Saturday and served on the committee to rate other applicants. Sunday she umpired several field hockey games.

Douglas Hyde, first president of Eire (Ireland), was once interim professor of modern languages at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

THE NEWMAN CLUB will meet at Southwick in the North Lounge on Tuesday, November 12, at 7.30 p.m. The speaker will be Prof. Basil Candon of St. Michael's College.

PEP RALLY!—7.30 p.m. Let's go! Beat Norwich!

Life Begins At '44

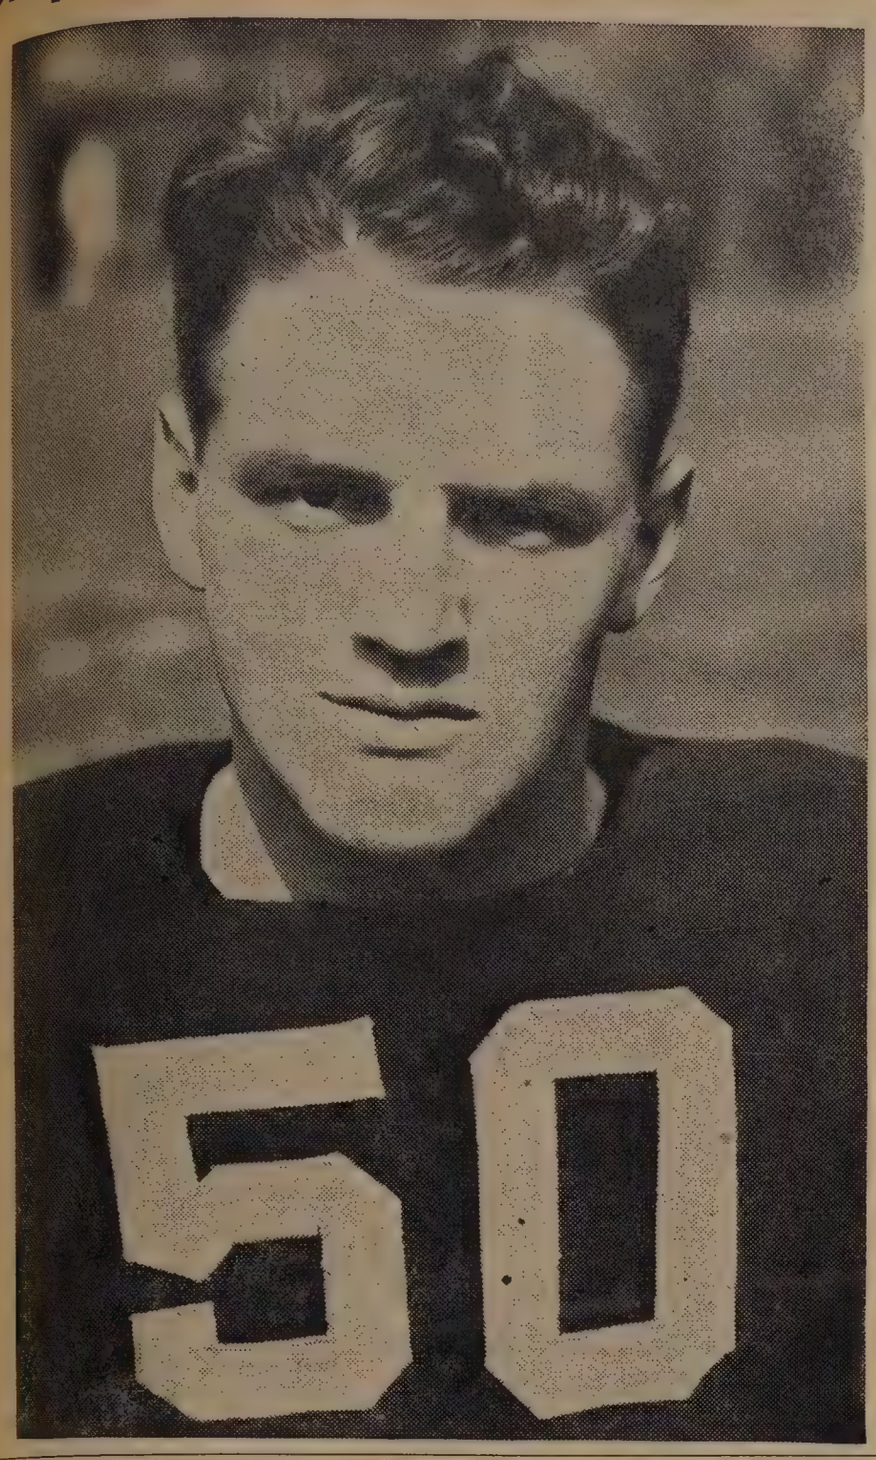
Here it is November and the college year is entering its third month. What has happened to our "babes in arms"—the class of '44? Well, for one thing, they don't look quite so green as formerly (maybe I'm just color blind!). . . . Slowly but surely, they have acquired the poise and ability of college men and women. (This point is also open for discussion.)

What about the daily occurrences that go on behind the scenes? . . . . Here is the class of '44 as seen around the campus. . . . It looks as though a new fad has hit the campus of U. V. M. as far as the masculine element of the class of '44 is concerned. . . . Have you noticed the white cardigan sweaters with the U. V. M. emblem attached thereon, which the males have donned? . . . . 'Tis said they grow in trees over at Converse! . . . . It seems that U. V. M. has one more newcomer to contend with than it expected—none other than "Butch," the little, class-attending dog who seems to know his way around much better than his freshman master. . . . By the way, "Butch" thoroughly enjoys Professor Witham's Math of Finance class—especially the female element therein!! . . . . Here's a money-making proposition for anyone who might be interested . . . . how about some bright and industrious upperclassman authoring a little number entitled, "How to Pass a Political Science Hour Test in Ten Easy Lessons"?. . . . I guarantee they'd sell like hot cakes . . . . it seems that several of the greener frosh met their Waterloo in the form of the above-mentioned exam! . . . . Believe it or not! John Hurst, a freshman from Switzerland has a diversion other than skiing, that of eating pie! . . . . one needed only to step into Rand's last Friday night to witness a sight that would make any pie maker scream with delight, for John ordered one for his supper and could be found happily devouring an entire apple pie!!! (By the way, this is no record as you might think. The all-time record at Rand's seems to go to the exceedingly hungry individual who several years ago, devoured seventeen pieces of pie!) . . . . Where has the renowned Model T disappeared to? . . . its clanking around the campus has been missed these past few days . . . . don't tell me, I bet "Tweedles" was the victim of an expected letdown, or should I say breakdown? . . . .The Wednesday morning class schedule change still baffles several of the newcomers . . . . eight-fifteen seems to be the favored time for the making of their grand entrances on this stated day of the week! . . . . The male half of the frosh class is eagerly awaiting the arrival of the R. O. T. C. uniforms . . . .it will soon be a common occurrence to see the "little men" trudging to class bedecked in their navy blue outfits!

And so it goes, the trials and tribulations of a freshman. You'll be a sophomore soon (you hope!) Then it will be your turn to sit back and watch another flock of freshmen tread the path to success!

Headquarters of the International Labor office have been temporarily transferred from Geneva, Switzerland, to McGill University, Montreal.

New girls' dormitories are being opened this month by the University of Missouri at Columbia.



Some 21,500 cars and trucks are in regular day to day service with the Bell System. The great majority have bodies specially developed by telephone engineers. Many are equipped with power winches, air compressors and pole derricks. Each of the many types is designed to handle particular functions in the construction and maintenance of telephone plant.

Planning, purchasing and operating the world's largest fleet of commercial motor vehicles is a big job in itself. Yet it is but part of the far bigger job: providing the finest, fastest, friendliest service to the millions who daily use the telephone.

Why not give the family a ring tonight? Rates to most points are lowest after 7 P. M. any night—and all day Sunday.

Stop Domina!

Cats vs. Cadets

Cadets for the last time and who are ready and waiting for the game which has been pointed to since the first practice session.

With the exceptionally potent attacks possessed by both Vermont and Norwich, the game might well develop into a high-scoring affair, especially if Domina and Liebel are on the loose and again if Vermont's famed passing attack is clicking. The Vermont coaching staff is hoping for a dry day Saturday because, as was demonstrated in the R. P. I. game, the Cats are a hapless team without their air game.

Vermont will use their two teams intermittently, the first team playing the first and third periods, with the second group following in the second and fourth quarters. There are two men on the second team, namely, Broutsas and Utley, who may break into that starting line-up. Broutsas's play, which has always been characterized by his fine defensive game, has added a valuable offensive touch to it and his improvement may warrant him a slot from the opening whistle.

If Vermont exhibits the fine form which it is capable of showing, Norwich will be in for a busy afternoon, and it would be no upset if the Cats were ringing the victory bell in the Old Mill tower, an old custom which, by the way, has been sorely neglected this year.

Frosh X-Country In Four-Way Meet

Tomorrow afternoon at 12.40 p.m. two cross-country races will begin in front of Morrill Hall. The Vermont freshmen will engage in a quadrangular meet with the Waterbury, Williamstown and Burlington High Schools. At the same time the latter two teams will be battling each other in a dual contest.

Not too much is known about the yearling harriers' opponents, but reports are circulating that the three rivals are all strong enough to let the '44's know that they have been in a battle.

Inasmuch as the race tomorrow is to be the last one before the big meet with their traditional rival, Middlebury, the young hill and dalers have been worked hard by Coach Archie Post in order that next week may be spent in polishing the rough spots. Since the contest with the Aggies the freshmen have been working out daily and have just about reached their peak. Hence, Mr. Goodell and Co. ought to take tomorrow's meet in stride and be prepared to duplicate the feat against the Panther Cub plodders on November 16.

Frosh Eleven to Face Middlebury

Each Has Perfect Record to Date

With less than two days to go before his team's final game, Coach Sherry Fogg is trying desperately to salvage the Armistice Day football contest with the Middlebury freshmen. A win over the Panther Cubs would change into a successful season what might otherwise be the most disastrous campaign for the Kittens in recent years.

Having decided that a victory over Middlebury would be practically impossible if he used the same team which started the previous games, Coach Fogg has undertaken the herculean task of rebuilding his entire first team. Since the unsuccessful Norwich encounter the coach has been experimenting with each individual player in an effort to uncover some previously unrecognized talent which would greatly benefit the team. As a result of Sherry's tireless efforts the team that he has chosen to tentatively start the November 11 game is as follows: Pulde, center; Runken and Eddy, guards; Baxendale and Walgren, tackles; Pacini and Barry, ends; Smith, Reed, Desso and Lewkowicz or Williams, backs.

Among the most radical changes made by the coach is his conversion of Nate Pulde to center. Sherry's experiment has proven successful, for the coach now has, in the person of Nate Pulde, unsurpassable strength in the center of the line and an excellent snapper-back.

Lennie Kunken, who has played every position except center and tackle, is now proving himself a strong guard. The husky New Yorker will team up with Eddy, who has played admirably in the guard position all season.

Baxendale, who has been subbing at tackle most of the season, has finally crashed the starting line-up. The other tackle is six-foot two-inch Walgren, a former end whose vacated flank position has been assumed by Charlie Pacini. Although Pacini is one of the best backfield men on the squad, Coach Fogg believes that he will be more valuable at end. Sherry's new backfield ought to be an improvement over the former combination, especially with Smith quarterbacking, for poor choice of plays has been one of the outstanding reasons for the team's lack of scoring punch.

Despite the fact that the Panther Cubs showed their strength by defeating Vermont Junior College 28-0, there is just reason to believe that the freshmen are going to end their season with a victory over their traditional rival. The squad has taken a new lease on life and is eagerly waiting to submerge its opponent.

Unbeaten Harriers Off for Boston

To Run in N. E. I. C. A. A. Meet Armistice Day

Sunday morning at nine o'clock the undefeated University of Vermont harriers will leave for Boston and the N. E. I. C. A. A. meet which takes place there on Armistice Day.

This will be the first time in several years that the Catamount hill and dalers have participated in this run and it is very likely to pay top dividends, for although Coach Archie Post's teams have always been of the highest caliber, this year's unit appears to be among the finest, on the strength of decisive victories over such outstanding contingents as Dartmouth, Bowdoin and Williams.

Coach Post has not definitely decided on the seven men who will make the trip, and he stated that any one of the first ten men may be in the line-up. However, little Charlie Webster and his brother Fred, who have run some great races this year, along with Capt. Frank Livak, are practical certainties, while Bud Hoyt, Ernie St. Mary, Norm Stoddard, Merle Crowne, Jack Burgess or Ed Corliss may round out the remaining positions.

Many prominent teams are expected to await the gun Monday afternoon, among whom are Maine, Bowdoin, Connecticut State, Springfield and Rhode Island State. These along with others are expected to set a fast pace.

While in Boston the Catamount squad will stay at the Hotel Bellevue and will return home Monday night.

Strong T.E.P. Team Swamps Phi Delts

Interfraternity touch football entered its final stage as Tau Epsilon Phi made short work of Phi Delta Theta, 52-13. The game, called at the end of the third quarter because of darkness, was T E P's all the way.

T E P went ahead in the first period, piling up a three-touchdown lead and holding the Phi Delts scoreless. Scuts Basch of T E P scored five of his team's eight touchdowns, and several of the extra points. The educated toe of Lennie Weg was another feature of the game, the average kick being about 50 yards. Harold Stroyman's long passes were responsible for the 14 points T E P scored in the second period, the Phi Delts breaking through the tight Tau Ep line but once for 6 points. In the third quarter Basch once again broke loose, running the length of the field to cross the Phi Delt goal line. T E P copped two more touchdowns by dint of tricky reverses and laterals, allowing Phi Delta Theta 7 points.

The T E P squad consisted of Max Schuman, Al Glazin, Scuts Basch, Jack Bloom, Lennie Weg, Moose Savin and Harold Stroyman. Subbing were Charlie Itzkowitz, Julie Goldberg and Len Berman. Phi Delta Theta started Cronin, Logan, Goetlich, Potter, Shortle, Dennis and Pache. Dick Flynn was the only substitute.

Tau Epsilon Phi meets the Kappa Sigma contingent Monday morning at 10.00 o'clock.

Epistle Dedicatory

The most momentous election in recent years just ended. A war-torn world reeling beneath the blows of a blood-maddened war god. The world in flames. Inferno at our doorstep. Chaos—and here we sit as the night rolls by, here we sit sipping our stimulant (grade A), here we sit preparing ourselves for the most critical task of our careers. Norwich versus Vermont—oh, fatal words fraught with dire portents and the awesome mystery of the unknown. Have at thee!

Canto I

Lo, the Cadets, the famed horsemen were an awesome force and their vaunted might had laid low the gridders of two times three elevens. Yea even Middlebury had they trounced right royally (aside—we'll skip mention of Boston University). And the mightiest of them all was Domina. Ball toter extraordinary, punter magnificent and hero with the triple threat. His running was as the lightning, his knee-action was like unto a motor car (body by Fisher). "Aye," quoth all the prophets, "aye he is the finest in the land."

Canto II

Deep in their lair, the tawny Catamounts sharpened their claws and flexed their muscles. Not so bright was their glory but they vaunted mightier foes. Always they fought and always did they choose the strongest warriors upon whom to try their might. And as they waited spinning hidden strategems by which to lure the Horsemen to their doom they heard the swelling cry—"Stop Domina." Not cocky were they, but grim, determination etched upon their features. Far away the hoarse cry of the confident Cadets rose. "We are strong. We are invincible. We have a mighty hero."

Canto III

Late in the night the mighty wizard labored, wrestling with the mystic symbols and the figures with which he divined the hidden ways of Fate. Oh, that some heavenly sign should solve for him the riddle; and it was to no avail. The answer eluded him and being wise and versed in the devious verbiage of necromancy he spoke thus:

"In favor of Norwich we have Domina, Vermont's vulnerability to fast backs, a good line, confidence, six wins.

In favor of Vermont we have the possibility of the Cadets getting too confident, a tendency to upset the dope bucket in state tilts, the fact that Norwich played a much easier schedule, the possible uncorking of a surprise attack, a grim determination to win, the advantage of playing at home.

Prime requisites for a Vermont victory—Stop Domina. Playing of the type shown against New Hampshire and Union.

The best team will win. I have spoken." And so the people waited for these wise words to come true.

Explanatory Note

(The above epic is the final work of an obscure poet of the 1940's who died suddenly one day while reading the football forecasts in the daily newspapers. The doctor analyzed the case as a "mental combustion resulting from over-indulgence in statistics, analysis and wishful thinking." The loss of so great a genius is mourned by all as there is no telling what he would have produced had he been able to go on writing.)

Formal Opening of Women's Rushing

Program Includes Open Houses and Parties

As the period of informal rushing, which included visiting hours in dormitories, sorority houses and private homes, closed October 30, women's rushing is now in a new period, that of formal rushing, from October 31 to November 9. During this time are the open houses, which this week are Thursday, November 7, again from 7.00 to 8.30, and Friday, November 8, from 4.00 to 5.30, as last week.

On Tuesday, November 12, the period of the parties for the rushees will begin, each sorority giving one party with the expense not exceeding thirty-five cents per person. The parties will be given in the following order:

November 12—Alpha Chi.
November 13—Sigma Gamma.
November 14—Delta Phi Epsilon.
November 19—Kappa Alpha Theta.
November 20—Delta Delta Delta.
November 21—Pi Beta Phi.
November 22—Alpha Xi Delta.

There will be a neutral period from December 1 to 2 and pledging will be in the afternoon of December 2.

Doings At Southwick

Mislaid—Three hand-knotted Tunisian mats (like little rugs) with predominating colors of cream, brown and black. They were used last spring on the stage in the ballroom.

Will anyone who knows where they might have been put for safe keeping, or anything about them, please tell Mrs. Bickford?

Dancing classes for next week will be as follows:

The beginners' class for women will meet Tuesday, November 12, from 7.00 to 8.30 p.m.

The beginners' class for men will have its meeting Tuesday, November 12, from 8.30 to 10.00.

Members of the continuation group, don't forget your afternoon conferences with Mrs. Bickford next week.

DANCE—Girls wishing to attend the dance for the benefit of the Children's Aid Society which is to be held at the Memorial Auditorium on Armistice night must arrange ahead of time with their House Directors for this privilege. It is not a 12.30 night for girls who are not attending the dance. —MARY JEAN SIMPSON, Dean of Women.

N. Y. A. Orchestras Flourishing This Year

Youth orchestras are flourishing this year. Leopold Stokowski made a great success of the American Youth Orchestra. Now Edwin McArthur, talented conductor and protegé of Kirsten Flagstad, the Wagnerian soprano, conducts a series of Sunday broadcasts by the 110-piece orchestra of the National Youth Administration, over CBS at 10.30 to 11.00 a.m.

McArthur, who has conducted many important orchestras, among them the New York Philharmonic Symphony and Philadelphia, is confident that this NYA experience is valuable in giving its members professional training.

"They play in full concert formation under professional conditions and special stress is placed on training for work in radio," says McArthur.

Three Fraternities To Hold Tea Dances

Hopeful Victory Dances Planned

Three of the fraternities on the hill, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Sigma Delta, will hold tea dances on Saturday afternoon after the Norwich game.

The dance at the Phi Delt house is being planned by E. B. Mott, Jr., '43 and F. C. Bundy '43. It will be chaperoned by Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond.

Guests from the Norwich and Dartmouth chapters will be present at the S A E dance. Among the out-of-town guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Gander McLeod of California, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Colombo of Texas, and Dr. and Mrs. Massucco of Springfield. Chaperones for the dance will be Prof. and Mrs. H. G. Millington. J. S. Noble '43 is in charge.

The Vic dance at the Phi Sig house will be chaperoned by Prof. and Mrs. L. L. Briggs. Chairman of the committee in charge is G. Manheim '44. He is assisted by M. Rubenstein '44 and I. Saltzburg '44.

CANDIDATES for the men's ski team will report at the Gym, Wednesday, November 13, at 4.00 p.m. Freshmen are eligible!

Armistice Dance to Be At Memorial Auditorium

Come one! Come all! Come stag! Come drag!

The Vermont Children's Aid Society and the Child Welfare Committee are sponsoring a dance from 9.00 to 12.00 on the evening of Monday, November 11. The gala event is to be held in the Memorial Auditorium and everyone is invited.

For the nominal fee of 75 cents a couple or 50 cents stag, one will be able to dance for three hours to the music of the Catamount orchestra.

The dean of women has approved this dance for college students, and all girls who attend will be given a 12.30 night.

Tickets will be sold outside the Y room by members of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet on Saturday morning.

Don't miss a chance to have a really "smooth" evening and also support a worthy cause.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB will meet Wednesday, November 13, at Southwick, at 7.30 p.m. Guest speaker. Watch CYNIC for further details.

Why does the majority of students believe that our efforts should emphasize our keeping out of war? A University of Rochester freshman gave this reason: "We have enough trouble here." A co-ed told the Tarkio (Missouri) College interviewer, "England brought this down upon herself by her conduct after the last war." A sophomore at the University of Maine spoke for the opposition when he said, "If England is conquered it is our turn to worry, and we won't have anyone to worry with us."

Delegates Return From Convention Of Journalists

Gather New Ideas An Inspiration as Well as Having Fun

Five weary but enthusiastic journalists returned to the campus Monday from Detroit where they had been attending for the past week the nineteenth annual convention of the Associated Collegiate Press which was held in the Book-Cadillac Hotel. Dorothea Smith '41, Maywood Metcalf '41 and R. P. Kenney '41 of the CYNIC and R. B. Hunting '42 and C. G. Miller '42 of the Ariel represented Vermont.

"Had a wonderful time," Dot said. "I had no idea there were so many different colleges in the country. Why I hadn't even heard of some of them. We pooled our ideas. The speakers at the Advertising Roundtables gave us many practical suggestions."

"We found a happy medium between business and pleasure with a little more emphasis on the latter. The thing that amazed me most was the abundance of delegates from the South who must have outnumbered we 'Yankees' three to one. It was, on the whole, a most enjoyable and constructive conference," Bob decided.

"The convention was very instructive. Even if I didn't get anything out of the conference, it was a great experience meeting all those people—especially the gals from south of the Mason and Dixon line," Rog Hunting drawled.

Clark Miller said, "The thing that impressed be most was that while some schools whose enrollments are in the thousands their problems are essentially the same as ours. We found solutions for many of our problems."

"We were extremely fortunate in being able to attend such a grand conference. The speakers and discussion leaders were all prominent men. Their ideas were very enlightening and we all learned many new things. In addition to the roundtable discussions, we were royally entertained. We met students from all over America—Alabama, Mississippi, Oregon, Georgia, Florida and thirty-two other states. I'd never been west of New York City and so I got a thrill out of seeing the middle-western part of the United States," was Maywood's version of the trip.

The delegates were conducted through the large Detroit News building and their radio station WWJ. They also visited the Plymouth plant and saw new Plymouths come off the assembly line at the rate of three a minute.

Outing Club Will Discuss Skiing

The first open meeting of the Outing Club will be held at Southwick, Thursday, November 14, at 8 o'clock. These meetings open to all members of the Outing Club and anyone else that is interested in its activities are an innovation this year. There will be similar meetings once a month for the rest of the year. The first meeting will be devoted to an explanation by Dorothea Smith '41, president, of the present organization activities of the Club and a discussion of new plans for the coming skiing and skating season. Ways and means of holding the Intercollegiate Ski Union Meet will be worked out and committees for it chosen from those interested. Donald Marburg '44 will discuss his experiences and activities last winter as head of the Ski Patrol at Sun Valley, famous ski resort and Dr. Hiram Upton will explain plans for the ski patrol to be formed in Vermont this winter.

Cider and doughnuts will be served.

Carnegie Room Open For Use of Students

A room has been set aside on the first floor of the Music Building which is designated as the Carnegie room. The Carnegie Music Set is here for the use of students, and is available from two to five-thirty Monday through Friday, and from nine to twelve on Saturday. A student will be in charge while the room is in use.

Candidates Chosen For Co-ed Major

Elections Will Be Held Thursday

Nominations by the freshman and sophomore military classes of three women from each of the four classes were released today by L. A. Simpson, member of Champlain Sabres in charge of co-ed major election for the gala Military Ball to be held Friday evening. Voting by the student body will be held this Thursday, November 14, and the co-ed elected will be honored at the ball and will be honorary head of the battalion for the rest of the year. The nominations were as follows:

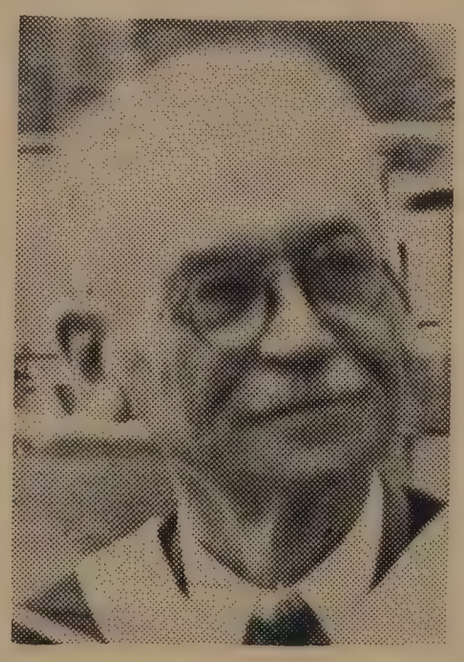
Hoboes Appear On U. V. M. Campus

Huddee Zwick and Alf Reynolds Win

The highly publicized Hobo Day, sponsored by Key and Serpent, was observed in all its glory last Friday, November 8, with costumes that even the proverbial "Pete the Tramp" would shudder to behold.

Garbs ranging from the highly sophisticated Latin American tramps to the lowly North American hoboes were seen flitting about the campus like nightmares on a clear night.

Especially picturesque was costume worn by a cute blonde freshman depicting the "Oakie" as seen in "The Grapes of Wrath.' ' This girl had a corn liquor jug around her neck held only by her index finger in the typical "Oakie" style.



Then the Senorita tramp. She was wearing a straw hat, about three feet in diameter, and marked with the name "Puerto Rico." The most authentic part of this impersonation was that the girl looked like a South American belle with jet black hair and those dark twinkling eyes that get you!

The males, on the whole, went in for localized bum costumes. One hobo, who attracted much attention, was completely clad in burlap rags—a pitiful sight on any day but Hobo Day.

On Friday evening all these costumes were appraised bly the applause meter. The contestants were all so frightfully hoboish that it was a close race all the way, but Huddee Zwick '43 of the girls' contingent and Alf Reynolds '42 of the boys eked out victories by a hair and a stomach, respectively.

There will be a Pan-Hellenic meeting Friday at 4.00 p.m. at Southwick.

Acting President

NEWMAN K. CHAFFEE

Chaffee Chosen Acting President

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the University of Vermont Saturday, Newman K. Chaffee was appointed as acting president of the University. Chaffee has been a trustee of U. V. M. for many years and is president of the Rutland Savings Bank.

At the same time a committee was chosen to consider selection of a permanent president and treasurer. This consists of U. S. Senator Warren R. Austin, H. B. Oatley of New York, and N. K. Chaffee. Rumors are suggesting Elias Lyman, U. V. M. '11, in this connection. He is now assistant to the president of Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. The trustees, however, have declined to make a statement regarding prospective appointees.

The trustees passed a resolution in praise of President Bailey and voted to insert a biographical sketch of him in the University's permanent records.

Sergeant Jackson Leaves University

Sgt. Norman Keyes Jackson of the military department has been called by the War Department as a captain in the Reserve Army. He left Saturday for Fort Benning, Ga., an infantry school for officers.

Sergeant Jackson came to the University of Vermont last May to replace Sgt. Raymond T. Conner as instructor in the military department. He graduated from Boston University in the class of '23 with a lieutenant's commission in the Reserve Army. The following year, he enlisted in the Regular Army, failing to get an appointment for permanent service because of a slight physical disqualification. He did, however, receive a captain's commission in the Reserves. Sergeant Jackson served for four years in the C. C. C. and as captain in a camp in Massachusetts before coming to Vermont.

"Sergeant Jackson has now been at Vermont long enough to be familiar with the work and the University," stated Col. M. E. Spalding, professor of military science and tactics. "His going will be a real loss to the military department."

Newman Club Hears Professor Durick

The Newman Club held the first of its informal Tuesday night meetings on Tuesday, November 5. The speaker for the evening was Prof. Jeremiah Durick from St. Michael's College. These gatherings on Tuesdays are to take the form of lectures and will continue till sometimes in December.

John Thomas Killed in Armistice Day Accident

Four Students Injured; Ten-Year-Old Girl Dies

J. M. Thomas '42 of Rutland was killed and eight other persons were injured, one fatally, when a Ford carrying five U. V. M. students crashed with a Buick traveling south in front of the Home for Destitute Children on Shelburne Road Monday night at about 8.30. The injured were taken immediately to the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital where Thomas died. Dorena Mitchell, 10, of Colchester Avenue, died late last night at the hospital.

Elizabeth Pratt '43 of North Clarendon suffered a fractured collarbone and pelvis as well as cuts and lacerations. Her condition, according to Dr. E. Douglass McSweeney who attended all of them, is serious but not critical.

Those treated for cuts and bruises were H. M. Pulling '43 of Rutland, the driver of the Ford; F. W. Haley '43 of Middletown Springs; and R. Thomas '44 of Rutland, brother of John Thomas; as well as Harold Spaulding who was driving the Buick; Pauline Mitchell, 13; and Herman Mitchell. Mrs. Herman Mitchell alone escaped injury, but was admitted yesterday morning suffering from shock. Richard Thomas, Haley, and Mitchell were released from the hospital after treatment, and the others are reported to be resting comfortably.

Police are investigating the accident but as yet have not discovered the cause.

John Thomas was a member of Kappa Sigma, Alpha Zeta, and the agricultural clubs. He was on the track and cross-country squads and had been on the Dean's list.

Men Will Debate St. Michael's and N. Y. U. Here Soon

The Men's and Women's Debating Squads have opened what promises to be a very active season.

The men's squad has met Bates College in a debate before Gould Academy in Bethel, Me. Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, Union College at Schenectady and Keene State Teachers College, in Burlington. The debates with R. P. I. and Keene State Teachers College were decision debates, and Vermont took unanimous decisions in both cases. Arrangements have been completed for a debate with St. Michael's on November 19, here and with N. Y. U. on November 22, here. Arrangements are being made for a debate with Colgate. A Thanksgiving week-end trip has been arranged, during which debates will be held with Harvard, Boston University and Tufts. The debate with Harvard will be on Thursday, November 28, from three to four in the afternoon and will be broadcast over Station WAAB.

The men's squad this year is made up of Fulvio Bardossi, Allan Caldwell, Julius Cohen, Harold Durfee, Taze Huntley, Myer Levin, William Musicant, Abraham Swartz, Daan Zwick, Gerald Haines and Charles Katzew. Most of the men on the squad have had experience in intercollegiate debates.

Women to Make Trip

The women's squad has already met Bates College in a home debate and is scheduled to meet Plymouth State Teachers College at Plymouth, N. H., on November 21, and the Keene State Teachers College at Keene, N. H., on November 22. Plans are also being made for a debate with St. Lawrence University here during the first week in December. Tentative arrangements have been made with Rhode Island State College, for a debate at Kingston, R. I. on December 13.

The women's squad this year is made up of Jean Stewart, Kathleen LeBaron, Huddee Zwick, Janet Clark, Sophie Gorney, Faye Lipman, Flora Fifield and Harriet Nelson. Huddee Zwick, Kathleen LeBaron, Harriet Nelson and Faye Lipman, have had debating experience last year. The other members are all able speakers and show much promise.

Both squads are being directed by Prof. Merrill D. Powers, who has turned out some very successful teams in past years.

The questions which are being used this year are

Resolved: "That the power of the Federal Government should be increased." and:

Resolved: "That the Nations of the Western Hemisphere should form a permanent union."

Both questions are timely topics, and should create considerable interest among the student body.

Judge O. B. Hughes Named as Trustee

Governor Aiken has announced his appointment of Superior Judge Orrin B. Hughes of Brattleboro as a trustee of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College to succeed Lewis S. Dubois of Barnard, resigned. The Governor said that Hughes was appointed to serve until the office can be filled in the manner prescribed by law, election by the legislature.

Library Displays Special Exhibit

Miss Dickinson and Mr. Raymond in Charge

In observance of Book Week, which comes this year the week of November 10 to November 16, the Billings Library is sponsoring a book exhibit. The exhibit is under the direction of two of the members of the staff, Dorothy M. Dickinson and Kenneth L. Raymond. They have arranged an attractive and interesting display on the tables near the fireplace, and it is hoped that the students will avail themselves of this opportunity to learn about some of the recent additions to the Library.

Research reveals that a special week devoted particularly to books was begun in 1919, and it was known at that time as Children's Book Week. The idea of setting aside one week a year to books became so popular that by 1930, it was decided to set aside one week in November for Book Week. From then on, the idea has been gaining an ever increasing popularity with libraries, public and university organizations and book stores. No longer is it devoted to only children's books, but it includes also books that appeal to all ages.

The idea of setting aside some special time to "the book" was also popular in Europe before the present struggle began. Whether it is still being carried out there cannot be ascertained. In Europe the idea seems to have originated in Spain, where the date of Cervantes was chosen for their "book day." In Germany "The Day of the Book" was celebrated on the date of Goethe's death. The Moscow Book Fair, begun in 1919, was Soviet Russia's contribution to the "Book Day" idea. The month of May was devoted to this, and variety given by the observance of special

"A Department of the Future"

"A department of history is the gonest thing in the world. What we need in our colleges is a department of the future," Charles Kettering, head of the General Motors research laboratories and fondly called the "Thomas Edison" of our day, told the 502 delegates at the Associated Collegiate Press Convention in Detroit last week. We felt the statement to be of particular importance to American college students since it was made by the man who, when without a good pair of shoes to his name and working without benefit of laboratory equipment, invented the self-starter for automobiles.

Pointing to the photo-electric cell, synthesized rubber, cloth made from milk and the many plastic products, as examples of recent progress, Kettering said that youth's future is not as dark as it is thought. He pointed out that today the world itself is not in a state of chaos, but it's the people in the world that are making a mess of things. Colleges are places where we learn how little we actually know, is the belief of the jovial Mr. Kettering.

"There are so many new things to discover each day—so many things that we do not know. There is a challenge to youth every day," the famous inventor said.

"We are working now on the problem of why grass is green, which fact is one of the most important biological factors in the world although it may seem elemental. Youth today should live for each day. Every day something new is waiting to be discovered. I do not see a dismal picture for youth, but I see a challenging department of the future," Boss Kettering concluded.

Such a bright picture of youth's future was very pleasing to all the delegates from 159 different colleges and universities in our country. We felt that you would like to know that a brilliant and far-sighted man is optimistic about the future of American youth. "The new frontiers awaiting your exploration are vaster than any of those earlier frontiers which our forebears opened up," stated Paul Garrett, Director of Public Relations for General Motors. "Freedom of Speech, and Freedom of Worship, and Freedom of Public Assembly, and a Free Press—these are not the only freedoms over which we stand guard. Freedom to Think, Freedom to Dream, Freedom to Accomplish—out of these have grown our whole American way of life on the economic side."

Both Mr. Garrett and Mr. Kettering said that we are very lucky to be Americans. Democracy, American style, has spelled opportunity—opportunity to grow in all of those respects which make living more attractive and more productive, according to the young Mr. Garrett. We are also fortunate that here in America the recognition of the right of achievement, the inherent value of individual endeavor, has developed. In no other country can we find a productive system that has come anywhere near achieving our standard of living. Nowhere else has there developed a formula which has contributed anywhere so solid a base to stand on.

In talking with college students from all over the United States we found that all of them were optimistic about the future of American youth. It was the general feeling among the delegates that the youth of this country must above all realize more completely that we cannot maintain or protect democracy without maintaining and advancing the mechanisms through which democracy works.

By PAT MOORE and CHUM REYNOLDS

After an unwilling lapse of several weeks due to fate itself, we are back with some choice items ranging from super-dance music to examples of the most brilliant piano playing you will hear in seven sabbaticals.

CHARLIE BARNET—Here are two very sweet tunes offered on Bluebird label by sax-man Barnet. "All This and Heaven Too," has a fine sax half-chorus leading to a sincerely sung vocal by Larry Taylor. But it's the backgrounds that are really lovely. More brass and a good sock end up the side. The reverse, "Where Do You Keep Your Heart," features fine solo trumpet and another adequate vocal by Mr. Taylor. Once again, however, it is the beautiful backgrounds which stand out. Toward the end, you'll recognize an unmistakable staccato brass figure which seems to be Barnet's stock in trade. These sides are very danceable stuff.

WOODY HERMAN—On Decca, Mr. Herman has recorded two sides which provide a grand change of pace, "Rhumboogie" and "A Million Dreams Ago." Former is done in the conventional boogie-woogie manner with excellent piano, clarinet and vocal, the latter by one Dillagene. Behind said vocal is a neat figure which will get under your skin and make you want to do some "Rhumboogie" yourself. The last chorus shows the tremendous drive of this band. "Dreams" is an honest-to-goodness pretty tune with swell muted brass and a vocal by Mr. Herman.

BOB CROSBY—This dixieland outfit turns in the other direction and comes out on Decca with two pop numbers, "Two Dreams Met," and "Down Argentina Way." Former is very well done, showing off tasty muted brass, vocal by Bonnie King, and general danceability. The reverse offers as good a job as possible on what appears to be a very mediocre tune.

WILL BRADLEY—One of the latest records by this really outstanding orchestra couples a new version of "Beat Me Daddy"—labeled "Down The Road A Piece," with some novelty stuff under the title of "Celery Stalks At Night." The first is a trio of piano, drums and bass viol involving more of that McKinley brand of wacky vocal. The tempo is boogie-woogie, piano and brass solo, and you feel pretty good listening to this one. "Celery" is a full band arrangement of some good novel swing stuff, even though it does sound a bit stiff in spots.

JIMMY DORSEY—My hat is off to this orchestra and its leader for one of the grandest records I have ever heard, Ferde Grofe's "On The Trail" A wonderful sax section alternates with muted trombone and trumpet to create some very pretty stuff. But really, you've got to listen yourself in order to get the feeling behind it. Other side is a pop tune, "Yesterthoughts," done in sort of a stock style with vocal by Bob Eberly, if you like Bob Eberly. There is a nice ending by the band.

ART TATUM—This great colored pianist has been around a lot and played in many places, but never has he played any better stuff than this set of six sides put out by Decca. The tunes are all diverse—"Elégie," "Humoresque," "Sweet Lorraine," "Get Happy," "Lullaby of the Leaves," and lastly, "Tiger Rag." Tatum is essentially a modern pianist, but he can take a classical masterpiece and literally turn it upside down, playing it both as jazz and as it should be played. This is especially brought out in his rendition of "Humoresque." Truly, the technique of the man is prodigious. "Get Happy" and "Tiger Rag" are a bit one-sided because of said technique and nothing else but, nevertheless, it's all wonderful stuff. There are a maze of original ideas in "Sweet Lorraine" and "Lullaby of the Leaves" (even with repetitions) while the best swing tempo in the group is in the last half of "Humoresque."

Honestly, if you like piano at all you can't help but go for some of this music.

Well, don't you think we've hashed over enough for now? Agreed.

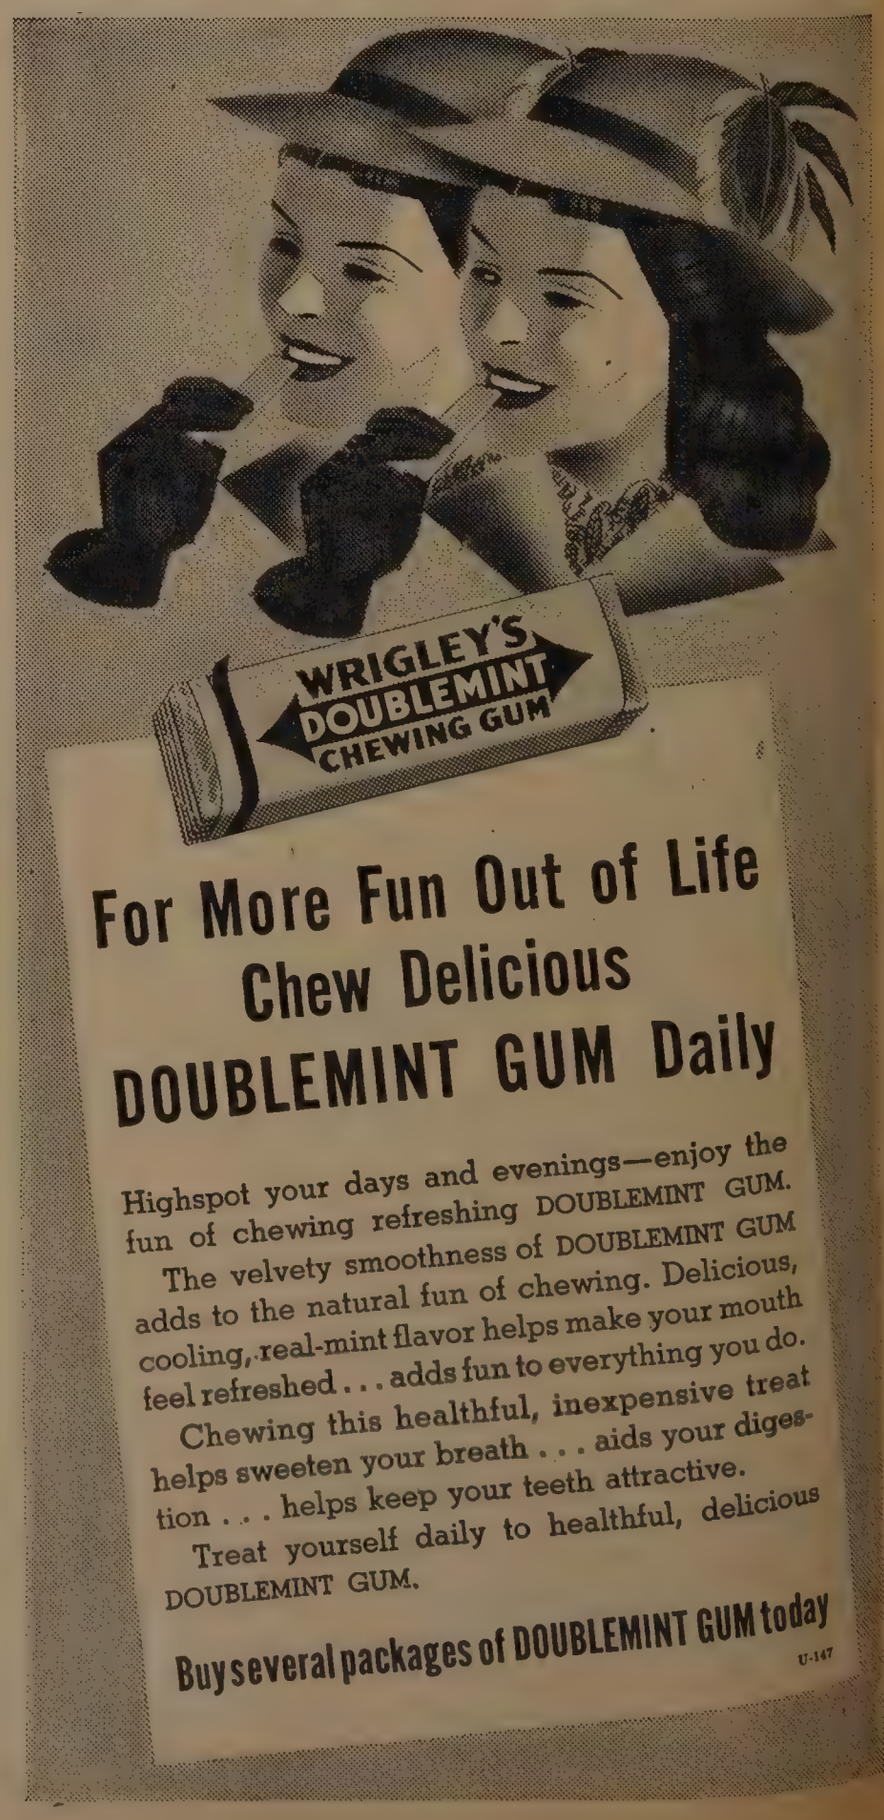
Mysterious Draft To Occur Soon

Vermont students are confronted with a great mystery. It is reported that this enigma is more puzzling than the disappearance of General Kitchener, Judge Gater, or the Delt cups. In fact it is common property that the creators of the mystery. Boulder and Mortar Board Societies are themselves completely in the dark.

In the near future a draft is to be held. All U. V. M. students will be assigned numbers. On the day of the drawings, an undisclosed number of students will be selected at random for P. O. T. C. Puzzled students inquiring into the meaning of the letters P. O. T. C. were not enlightened. The only information available was that this designation P. O. T. C. was conferred on the draft by Dean of Women, Miss Mary Jean Simpson.

Boulder and Mortar Board refuse to make any statement on the number of students to be drafted, or the purpose of the draft. They state that all those drafted will report to Southwick Memorial on Tuesday evening, November 26. It is announced that women draftees subject to house regulations will be allowed special nights out.



STUDENT UNION SCHOLARSHIP—A meeting will be held Thursday, November 14, at Southwick, at 4.30 p.m. Report cards will be in the "Y" room, Tuesday, November 12, by 12.30 p.m.

Catamounts Swamped By Norwich Cadets 38-7

Horsemen Capture State Championship By Tremendous Victory Over Vermont

The Norwich Horsemen led by Walt Domina and Frank Liebel lived up to all previous expectations this past Saturday to the misfortune of the Vermont football team and its followers. Before a record crowd of 6,000 persons, who thronged their way into Centennial Field to witness the thirty-fifth meeting between the two rivals, the Horsemen demonstrated their tremendous power which has swept them to seven victories in eight starts. The final score to the disgust of Vermont fans read 38 to 7.

Although Vermont has a decided edge in this rivalry, which dates back to 1897, the intermittent Norwich victories atone for the numerous defeats suffered. The Cadets had not tasted victory since 1931, when they went on a spree to win 26 to 7. The series now stands with Vermont winner of twenty-three, loser in nine; three contests have ended in scoreless ties. As a result of this triumph the Horsemen annexed their first State championship within a decade.

Domina's Total is Tops

The highly touted Domina would not be stopped. He kicked, passed, ran, faked, tackled, and scored. Entering the game one point behind Michigan's All-American Tom Harmon as leading scorer of the country, the sophomore sensation emerged from the fray with 20 precious points. This boosted his total to 106 points and at the present is tops for the country. Liebel, who is also a sophomore, accounted for one touchdown in the game. With 56 points to his credit, he maintains his lead as the highest scoring end in the land. Besides being an outstanding pass receiver, Liebel plays an excellent defensive game. His continual breaking up of end- and off-tackle plays caused the Catamounts to resort to a still more disastrous air attack.

The contest was decidedly one-sided and except for Al Shaw's 55-yard run on an intercepted pass late in the second quarter, the Catamounts were never officially in the ball game.

The Vermont team had heard so much about Domina and Liebel that they failed to give adequate consideration to the other Horsemen. McCallister, the Hughes brothers, and Raville proved to be just as harmful to the Vermont cause. These backs riddled the Vermont forward wall time and again.

Norwich Plays Ball

Capt. Frank Taylor won the toss and elected to receive the opening kick-off. Liebel kicked to the Vermont 23-yard line, where the ball was fumbled. Earl Reed finally pounced on the loose pigskin on the Vermont 41. Broutsas, replacing Taylor in the starting line-up, gained seven yards around end. The Horsemen stopped the attack then and there, and Spasyk was forced to kick on fourth down. Norwich likewise failing to gain kicked on third down. Taylor replaced Broutsas. Vermont's ground attack stalled, the Catamounts kicked to the Norwich 30. In six plays the Horsemen went 70 yards for a touchdown. A 26-yard pass from Domina to Liebel produced the tally after the Vermont secondary was caught flatfooted. Domina failed to convert. A few moments later the Horsemen marched 55 yards in eight plays for their second score after the Vermont team was compelled to kick. White climaxed the drive by snaring Domina's 20-yard pass for the second score.

Both teams substituted at the start of the second quarter. Following an exchange of kicks the Horsemen gained possession of the ball on the Vermont 35. Two reverses, a line smash, and an off-tackle thrust with Hughes and Domina carrying the mail made the score 18 to 0. Domina tugged the leather for the score, but again failed to convert.

Shaw Makes Lone Score

Up to this time Vermont's play had been extremely ragged. Very noticeable was the absence of good blocking and interference for the backs, who had to fight their way for every inch. In only four plays did the Catamounts display their attack that white-washed favored Union and New Hampshire aggregations. Johnny Spasyk, taking Liebel's kick on the ten, battled his way to the 35-yard marker. A Taylor to Spasyk pass covered 15 yards. Taylor picked up 9 yards around end. A Spasyk to Taylor pass netted 14 yards. For a moment it appeared that the Vermont captain was away for a score. With the ball resting on the Norwich 27, Spasyk unhooked a pass to the 15, Carl Hughes plucked it from the arms of a Vermont receiver on the dead run, and galloped to the Vermont 40 before being brought down from behind. Norwich momentarily stopped on the ground, took to the air. A third down pass from McCallister to Domina in the flat was intercepted by Al Shaw. Out sprinting Domina, Shaw ran 55 yards for the lone Vermont tally. Frankie Taylor converted.

The second-half opened with Taylor kicking to the Norwich two. Domina ran it back to the 25. Fakes, spinners and reverses carried the Horsemen to the Vermont three where they finally relinquished the ball. Spasyk spiralled a beautiful kick to Domina on the midfield stripe; the latter bringing it back to the Vermont 40. Nine plays later Domina carried the pigskin over for his second touchdown. The attempted conversion was good and the score stood 25 to 7.

An intercepted Vermont pass on their own 30 brought about the fifth Cadet touchdown. Domina and Hughes carried to the 19, from whence White caught Domina's pass for his second score. Domina converted.

Most of the Norwich first team left the game at the commencement of the fourth quarter. Midway during the quarter another Norwich interception put the Horsemen on the Vermont 2-yard line. Domina banged over on the third down for his third tally of the day. The attempted conversion was wide.

Vermont on two long passes reached the invader's 15- and 5-yard line later in the period. The game ended with Broutsas passing to Corbett for 41 yards.

Grid Gleanings

The Norwich team outweighed the Vermont eleven by almost fifteen pounds per man in the backfield, and thirteen pounds per man in the line.

* * * *

Boots Lawrence played a great defensive game in a losing cause.

* * * *

Walt Domina gained on the average five yards per try.

* * * *

Each team has an end named Whizzer White.

The Norwich followers not content with victory made short work of the scoreboard and one goal post.

Coach Gardner Back From Cuban Baseball Tourney

United States Second Among the Seven Competing Teams

In spite of the sparsity of competing teams due to chaotic international conditions the World Amateur Baseball Tournament was held in Havana, Cuba, last September. Seven countries were represented: Mexico, Cuba, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Nicaragua and the United States which was led by U. V. M.'s own baseball coach Larry Gardner and aided by a group of sixteen delegated college ball players which included Joe McDonough, former Catamount second sacker; Alex Pesarik, pitcher and captain of the Vermont 1940 outfit and Bob Carlson current pitching star on the hill.

This tournament is of the round robin variety and the winner receives the John Moores trophy. John Moores, the donor of the cup, is a prominent English business man who owns a chain of stores in England similar to our own Woolworths and also as a hobby backs forty or fifty amateur baseball teams. This trophy is valued at $15,000.

Gardner and Co. Does Well

Each team plays every other team twice in rotating; the team winning the greatest number of games being the trophy winner. This year Venezuela came out on top followed closely by the United States and Nicaragua who were tied for second place with a record of 9 wins against 3 losses.

Much credit for the fine showing of our United States team must be given to Coach Gardner who collected a group of college players from all parts of the country and with only 2 or 3 practices behind them pulled up in a tie for second place which is considerably higher than U. S. teams of previous years. A year ago the team from the land of the Stars and Stripes won nary a game and ended up in last place. Coach Gardner informed us that Joe McDonough was the star of the series followed closely by Billy Krywicki, a Fordham boy, and that Pesarik and Carlson did very well on the mound, the former compiling 2 wins and no losses and the latter finishing with 1 win and 1 loss.

Cuban Baseball Improving

Coach Gardner stated, "Baseball is growing very fast in Cuba, every vacant lot is filled with youngsters playing the great pastime, and this baseball is of a surprisingly high caliber. Cuba's best type of baseball compares very favorably with our own class B league ball and keeps improving each year. This improvement may be attributed to the fact that a large number of the Cuban and Latin-American teams are coached by American men or men who have played baseball in these United States."

One factor which slightly hindered the U. S. players this year was the strange food and hot climate. It took the boys several days to become accustomed to the temperature of the island nation although the humidity is reasonably low and they never did adjust themselves to the fried and highly-seasoned food but the latter defect was greatly remedied when the American club, a group of wealthy American business men in Cuba invited Coach Gardner's lads over to dine for the last week of the sojourn.

The flight from Miami to Hawaii by Panama Clipper was the most fascinating phase of the trip and the journey proved to be very educational in many ways although Coach Gardner pointed out that not much time was had for sightseeing and the boys were tired out from the games and heat which is shown by the fact that each player lost on the average from 6 to 11 pounds.

Obituary

It was a case of too much Norwich and not enough Vermont, Saturday. It would have taken an inspired team, or a team playing over its head to stop the Cadets and the Cats were neither. That just about sums it up.

Living up to all advance reports and then some Walt Domina (though he did look silly on those first few plays) was worth the price of admission. That boy runs with all the power of a horse and the elusiveness of a ballet dancer. Also by way of variety he kicks and passes. Just the answer to a coach's dream.

But it wasn't merely a case of "Stop Domina" because the Cadets took along ten other players who sort of messed up the playing field for the Cats. Between runs Domina would rest and give Hughes a crack at the ball and old Jackie would hit the jackpot too many times at the Catamount's expense.

And those players you saw running in front of Domina when he started to tote the ball weren't spectators trying to get a closer view of the game. Norwich's blocking and tackling was very much in evidence. Vermont's was nothing to write home about. At times the Cats did show a flash of the playing they used against New Hampshire but on the whole they were clearly too weak in the blocking and tackling assignments to stop the Cadets march. Booby prize for the day goes to the Vermont backfield for that play which gave Norwich their second touchdown. With White out in the clear on the Cat goal line, the Cats went into a huddle and for all we know started playing bridge. This lasted until Domina tossed the ball into White's arms for the score.

Best plays of the day were—Shaw's interception and 55-yard run; Corsonnes' neat catch of that long pass in the last quarter; Jim Corbett's miraculous catch of another aerial in the same period. An orchid goes to Misty Rice for his tackling. His playing stood out as the best of the afternoon.

We could get poetical (?) about the whole matter and write a dirge but that would be more or less like crying over spilt milk. Norwich was good and Vermont couldn't stop them. For the first time in eleven years Norwich rides the victory trail. Oh well you can't be on top forever. What goes up has to come down. But there were moments during the game when we felt just like the over-stimulated spectator who staged an impromptu boxing match on the field in the last half. And so we inter another year's championship hopes.

Other person smiles and says nothing because he's only Frankie Taylor.

Kappa Sigs Become Football Champions

Edge Out T E P Team On Muddy Field, 32-21

In a tight game, which never fully assured either side of victory, Kappa Sigma defeated Tau Epsilon Phi by the score of 32-21, to win the intramural touch football championship. Both teams were hampered by the condition of the field, but the Kappa Sigs proved themselves to be the better mudders.

The first period started off with a bang, Kappa Sig running back the opening kick-off to score in four plays. For the duration of the period the T. E. P. line held, and Kappa Sig was out in front by 6 points. T. E. P. rallied in the next quarter and went out in front by a slim margin when they scored 7 points. However, it wasn't long before the Kappa Sigs rolled up two touchdowns by means of basketball passes. From then on the game was on the fire, Tau Ep narrowly missing several chances to score because of the slipperiness of the field. Kappa Sig took to the air and scored twice in the last quarter. Tau Epsilon Phi also made two touchdowns, but with four plays left, it was virtually impossible to turn the tide.

The championship team consisted of Don Maley, Bob Hennessey, Caccavo, Healey, John Royer, R. Lynch and Sullivan. Substituting were Larry Killick, Williams, T. Clairmont, Keighley, Cane, Collins and Swift.

Tau Epsilon Phi started Al Glazin, Herb Basch, Harold Stroyman, Len Weg, Moose Savin, Max Schuman and Jack Bloom, with Charley Itzkowitz the only substitute.

Goodell, Lockwood Tie for First Place

Frosh Harriers Win Smashing Victories

Saturday afternoon at 12.40, thirty-three harriers left the starting line in front of Morrill Hall to plod over a 2½-mile course. Exactly sixteen minutes and nine seconds later, two Vermont freshmen, Cliff Goodell and Bob Lockwood, crossed the finish line holding hands to start off the Green and Gold to three smashing victories, the frosh hill and dalers overcoming Waterbury High School to the tune of 19 to 36, Wiliiamstown by 20 to 35, and Burlington 17 to 42. At the same time Williamstown subdued Burlington by the score of 25 to 30.

Following the aforementioned Goodell and Lockwood came Williamstown's S. Farnsworth and Vermont's Grant in the most thrilling finish of the meet, with the latter making a last minute spurt to tie his opponent. In fifth place was McLaren, another Vermonter, and he was trailed by Goff of Waterbury, Johnson and Lafayette of Burlington, D. Farnsworth of Williamstown, and Morse of Waterbury.

All the U. V. M. plodders (with the exception of one who became winded because of the prevailing cold weather) were in excellent condition, and all finished comparatively fresh. True to predictions, the young Green and Gold cross-country men have reached their peak and gave evidence of this fact by the manner in which they trounced their opponents. After the way the boys performed on the ninth, it seems unlikely that Coach Archie Post will have too great a task in preparing his charges for objective Middlebury on November 16.

NOTICE

On Saturday, November 16, the day of the Middlebury game, classes will meet in accordance with the following schedule:

Military Science	7.00- 7.50
First hour	8.00- 8.40
Second hour	8.50- 9.30
Third hour	9.40-10.20
Fourth hour	10.30-11.10

Gigantic Rally Precedes Game

Cheering, Songs, Talks Make Spirit Run High

Hobo Day came to its culmination Friday evening, November 8, with the presentation of Hobo awards and a super-gala Pep Rally before a gigantic crowd of 1,500 students and members of the faculty.

C. V. Akely '42, a member of the Rally sponsorers, Key and Serpent, was the chairman of the festivities. He first introduced R. O. Slack '41, whose pep talk was indeed very encouraging, ending with "Let's Stop Domina."

The next speaker was Fuzzy Evans who expressed his certainty that Vermont would fight the whole way and then said, "C'mon, Norwich, we're ready for you."

The expert cheerleaders then went through their antics with quite a few impressive acrobatic cheers. They, very skillfully aroused much spirit among the students.

After the cheers, Bunny Prentice spoke very inspiringly; the crowd were so animated with pep that they applauded every line of Mr. Prentice's speech.

Under the direction of Joseph Lechnyr the band then played "Champlain," while everyone stood in respect.

The last speaker of the evening was Capt. Frankie Taylor who said that the seniors will go into the Norwich game not considering it just another tussle, but since it will be their last appearance at Centennial, it will be "a memory of Centennial Field."

After this touching speech, everyone followed the "Walt Domina effigy" outside where a brilliant bonfire was illuminating the sky and everything in the vicinity. The students' voices were raised in cheers and songs of all kinds.

As we were standing around the bonfire, we spotted the Hobo prize-winning Huddee Zwick. In reply to our query concerning what she had to say for herself; she gallantly extended her arms to her head and exclaimed, "Well, Hair I Be!"

As the bonfire was dying down, some students in cars and others on foot engaged in a real old-fashioned tumultuous snake dance ably abetted by the R. O. T. C. Band.

Delegates Return

Mr. Lee A. White, Director of Public Relations for the Detroit News and an alumnus member of the Board in Control of Student Publications at the University of Michigan discussed "How Much Freedom for the College Press" at the opening convocation. On Friday Dr. Ralph D. Casey of the Department of Journalism, University of Minnesota spoke on "Behalf of the Press."

One of the best speakers at the convention according to the U. V. M. delegates was Mr. Charles F. Kettering who is head of the research department of General Motors. He was introduced as the "Thomas Edison" of this age. To him is credited the invention of the self-starter for autombiles as well as many other helpful inventions.

M. W. Fodor, Chicago Daily News roving European correspondent, spoke to the convention Saturday on "History in the Making." He told the delegates that last year he visited twenty-two European countries. Italy is the weakest link in the powerful axis at the present time in his opinion. He also told the students about the large part the women who are intimate with Europe's leaders have played in the present state of affairs.

The Vermont delegates left Detroit Sunday afternoon and came back to Burlington by way of Montreal where they saw the Canadian troops marching in the streets in their Remembrance Day celebration.

IMPORTANT—First practice for the men's ski team will be held Wednesday, November 13, at 4.00 p.m. in the men's gym. Freshmen are eligible. Everybody out.

VIOLIN MASTER TO PLAY SUNDAY

One of the world's greatest masters of the violin, Mischa Elman (above) will appear in the Memorial Auditorium, Burlington, on Sunday evening, November 17, at 8.15, in the second of the Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary concert series. A boy-wonder in his teens, Russian-born Elman now stands before the world in his artistic prime, a select member of the musical elect of the present generation. He has given concerts on every continent.

Montreal Doctor Talks on Vitamins

"Vitamin Deficiency and Diseases of the Nervous System" was the subject of an illustrated lecture by Dr. Donald McEachern, before members of the Osler Clinical Society of the University of Vermont Medical College and guests at the Fleming Museum, Thursday, November 7.

Doctor McEachern is acting chief neurologist of the Montreal Neurological Institute.

The Osler Clinical Society, medical students' organization, issued its customary invitation to all interested physicians of Vermont to attend the lecture, which took place in the Fleming Museum at 8.15 p.m.

days during the month. Other fairs were held throughout Russia at the same time.

Denmark and Norway celebrated "book day" on the third of December, the birthday of the poet Holberg. Sweden devoted two days to their "book period," the second and thirteenth of November, these two dates being the birthday and the day of the death of Essias Tegener. "The Festival of the Book" was held in Italy, and this lasted for one week.

The purpose of the exhibit in the Billings Library is for the enjoyment of the faculty, students and the administration, and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of this opportunity.

The exhibit includes books in a number of different fields such as history, foreign affairs, arts and sciences, and philosophy and religion. There will also be a special display of children's books for those specializing in elementary education.

A card has been placed in each book, and those wishing to borrow the book after the exhibit may indicate their desire by signing the card. The book will circulate in the order in which the name appears on the card.

Local Band To Swing Out At Ball Tonight

World-Famed Violinist To Give Concert Sunday

In response to a growing demand, students of the University may now attend the Mischa Elman concert at a reduced price. There are approximately 100 rush seats in the back which will be sold to University students Sunday night for only fifty cents. In this way several students will be enabled to hear Mr. Elman's concert.

Mischa Elman, one of the world's greatest violinists, who will appear in the Memorial Auditorium on Sunday, November 17, at 8.15, under the auspices of the Mary Fletcher Auxiliary was born in the small town of Tolna, in Russia, son of Saul Elman, teacher of Hebrew, grandson of a family famous violinist, great grandson of a noted Talmudic scholar.

Played Violin at Age of Five

When he was two the Elman family moved to Shpola, a small Russian village, and at three Mischa betrayed the first signs of interest in the vioin by dropping his toys and lifting his voice in song when his father started to play. By the time he was five his attempts to play his father's violin resulted in the purchase of a small one for the boy. The local landowner heard the boy play, procured a teacher for him, and because of his rapid advancement, placed him in the Odessa Imperial Academy of Music.

At the age of ten he began his association with the great pedagogue, Leopold Auer. After hearing the child play, Auer complimented and encouraged him. Later, he asked him to come to the St. Petersburg Conservatory of Music as the first student to be admitted to the master's classes without preliminary training under subordinate teachers.

The boy attracted the attention of the musical patrons of the capital with the result that his first important violin, an Amati, was given to him by the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

Concert Brought Applause

During this time, and prior to his entrance to the Conservatory, Mischa had been making local concert and recital appearance. His first public concert at the Conservatory was greeted by ten minutes' steady applause, and it was then decided that the art of the young virtuoso should be displayed in other European capitals.

His tour of Germany included a triumphal Berlin recital and appearances in all the important cities, arousing the enthusiasm of such outstanding conductors as Fieldler, Nikisch, Von Richter, and winning the steadfast friendship of Joachim, then an old man. Vienna and Paris bowed to his genius, then London capitulated, and he was commanded to play before the King at Buckingham Palace.

All of Europe heard Elman. In 1910 his début in America established him here, and many times since his first New York concert he has toured this country. In the years since, Australia, Asia, Africa and South America have likewise fallen under his spell.

Eight Frats Plan Gay Parties For Tomorrow Night

Eight of the fraternity houses on the hill will be the scenes of gaiety this coming Saturday evening when the men entertain their dates informally. The Kappa Sigs have called off their dance and the T. E. P.'s are waiting till November 26 for their entertainment.

At the Phi Delt House, W. Nestler '43, who is in charge promises an evening of unsurpassed enjoyment dancing to the lilting strains of J. Collins and his boys. Professor and Mrs. Pond will be the chaperones.

The Phi Sigma Delta House will be transformed into a veritable advertiser's nightmare on that same eve. Under the able leadership of Sid Sisselman '42, B. Rynowecer '42, and M. Holtzman '42 an advertising party will be in sway. The motif for the evening will be furnished by the various nationally known advertisers and all the guys and gals are to come representing some well known product. Jollity will reign under the chaperonage of Professor and Mrs. Collier.

At the S. A. E. House, H. Vreeland '43 is in charge of entertainment. What it is to be has not been divulged yet, but it will center around Gander McLeod from U. S. C. and will be determined by a special meeting Friday evening.

The Delt entertainment is in charge of G. Little '43 who promises something very interesting to all the lads and lassies who will be there. Professor and Mrs. Dodd, and Professor and Mrs. Perry will chaperone.

The Second Annual Hunt Club Ball will be held at the Sigma Nu Lodge Saturday evening. D. Neil '42 is in charge of the evening's entertainment and Professor Cantwell and Professor McKee will be the chaperones. Music will be furnished by the Merry Men and the Lodge will be appropriately decorated with hunting trophies, guns and other hunting paraphernalia.

At the Sigma Phi House, J. Burgess '41 is in charge of the evening's entertainment. He could not yet state the form of entertainment which would reign.

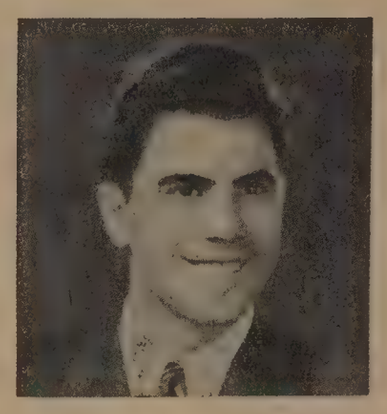
Dean Announces Recess Schedule

Thanksgiving Recess will begin at 11.50 a.m., Wednesday, November 27, according to the announcement from Dean Swift.

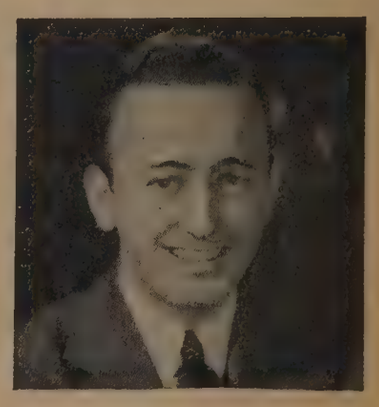
Classes and laboratory groups should meet in accordance with the following adjusted schedule and no deviation should be made from this program.

Wednesday, November 27:

First hour	8.00- 8.50
Second hour	9.00- 9.50
Third hour	10.00-10.50
Fourth hour	11.00-11.50



To avoid loss of class and laboratory work, classes normally meeting Wednesday afternoon will be held Tuesday afternoon. Thus Tuesday, November 26, there will be four class periods in the afternoon aranged as follows:



Fifth hour (Tuesday classes)	1.30-2.20
Sixth hour (Tuesday classes)	2.30-3.20
Fifth hour (Wednesday classes)	3.30-4.20
Sixth hour (Wednesday classes)	4.30-5.20

Wednesday, November 27, the usual chapel service will be omitted.

Two hundred thousand students attend college in other than their home states.

Work on Ski Jump Has Been Started

To Be Second Largest In Vermont—40 Meters

"It is expected that the Outing Club's new ski jump will be finished before Christmas," announced E. Bailey '40, Thursday, when asked about the progress of construction.

The Underhill Winter Sports Club and the University of Vermont, through the Outing Club, are cooperating in the project. The jump will serve as a "home jump" for all meets of the college ski team.

It is to be located near the halfway house on Mount Mansfield. The Civilian Conservation Corps of the area have already started work on the trestles. The jump will have to be literally cut out of the wilderness. Three of Vermont's senior engineers, A. Taggart '41, G. I. Palmer '41, and H. Wilson '41, are doing the surveying on the job.

The jump will be maximum size for a college jump which can still be used by amateurs. It will be a forty-meter jump which compares very favorably with others in the State. Middlebury has about a thirty-five-meter jump. Only the jump at Brattleboro is larger.

The land to be used will be leased from the State and technically will remain their property.

"The reason that the Outing Club is so interested in building the jump at the present time," Bailey went on to explain, "is that in order to complete tentative arrangements to hold the Intercollegiate Ski Union meet here, we need a ski jump of our own."

Y. W. Secretary Visits U. V. M. Campus

On November 12 and 13, Miss Edith Lerrigo, secretary of the New England Student Christian Movement, was visiting our campus. Miss Lerrigo stayed with Miss Charlotte Perkins '38, secretary of the local Y. W. C. A. There were conferences with the cabinet members on November 13. Also, in the afternoon, there was a meeting of the Y. W. C. A. members and the advisory board.

On Wednesday evening at a mass meeting of the Y. W. C. A. at Southwick, Miss Lerrigo spoke on the Student Christian Movement at Vermont in relation to the World Student Christian Federation. In this talk she gave the Vermont students invaluable opinions and ideas about how to carry on and better their work.

While visiting here, Miss Lerrigo was entertained by a dinner at Robinson Hall on Wednesday evening.

* * * *

Members of the Y. W. C. A. are very anxious to get contributions of wool for war relief.

The young men of U .V. M. are arriving on campus with sprained wrists, sore from the efforts of shining up the old guns. Ears are appearing cleaner, barer and lower, due to many recent visits to the local barber. Cleaning and pressing concerns are doing a rushing business, while lovely ladies dash frantically around dorms taking old and cherished evening dresses away from the moths, or looking just as frantically for something new and different to borrow. There is a suspiciously large number of kerchiefs on campus covering "hairdos" which are unmistakably being kept together in preparation for—something. That is the question: What is this mysterious something which is about to happen?

You guessed it, people. It's the great, glorious and gigantic Military Ball tonight at the men's gymnasium. Tripping the light fantastic among the students will be Colonel and Mrs. Spaulding and Captain and Mrs. Simpson the chaperons.

Hall Will Be Decorated

Words seem to fail the chairman of this affair in attempting to describe its elegance, but E. A. Guilbert '41 says it will be terrific, superb, spectacular, marvelous, stupendous, plus all the adjectives Mr. Webster ever thought of. The hall will be decorated in a unique artistic manner; the likes of which have never before been seen on the U. V. M. campus.

It is the first time a local band has ever played at the Ball and they have had great and favorable reports from all who have heard them. Also an original feature is the vocalization by two Vermont students, Doris Doerfleur '44 and Tempi Conner '44 who is a member of the band.

Co-ed Major to be Announced

The highlight of the evening will be the election and announcement of the co-ed major and the presentation of the Champlain Sabre to the lucky girl. The voting took place yesterday and like the sale of tickets, has been heavier than ever before. One of the twelve girls who have been nominated will then not only lead the Grand March (which has a new and spectacular form this year), at 10 o'clock, but also will reign at all military events throughout the year. This is the first time the student body has participated in the election of the co-ed major, and the winner is bound to be one of popular choice by the popular vote.

The price, incidently (who said incidently? it's the most important item), has been reduced to one dollar and sixty-five cents.

The committees composed of the Champlain Sabres are: E. Guilbert, chairman of floor and arrangemnts for music; R. Copp, chairman of programs and tickets; T. Huntley, chairman of publicity; J. Palmer, chairman of decorations; and L. Simpson, chairman of co-ed major contest.

In the words of Eddie Guilbert—"Best Brawl of Fall—Come All!"

COFFEE HOUR—Sunday, November 17, Southwick south lounge, 2.30-3.30 p.m. Everyone welcome!

Friends of Britain Plan Program

Vermont students will be given the opportunity to give tangible aid to Britain by attending on Friday, November 22, a fine concert of English music which will be given at Southwick. The local chapter of "Bundles for Britain" is sponsoring the program which will include vocal selections by Prof. G. L. Millikan of the Political Science Department and T. K. Malone '41 and piano selections by Mrs. Howard G. Bennett, an accomplished pianist who is familiar to many Burlington audiences.

The proceeds from the sale of the tickets, which will sell for twenty-five cents to all students, will buy yarn for the 300 Burlington knitters who are sending knitted goods directly to the British soldiers.

There will be a Pan-Hellenic meeting Friday at 4.00 p.m. at Southwick.

Narcyz Wasilkowski Addresses I. R. C.

Narcyz Wasilkowski was the guest speaker at a meeting of the International Relations Club at Southwick, Wednesday evening.

He graduated from Burlington High School in 1938 and after graduating went to Warsaw, Poland, to study at the University there.

He related very vividly the conditions in Poland before and after the German attack. He also described the condition of the Russian army and the Russian people as he spent some time in Russia. He brought before his audience, in a very realistic manner, pictures of his own personal, and in some cases harrowing experiences.

He traveled through many European countries on his way back to the United States and was thus able to discern the political feelings of the people of these various countries.

Who Elected the Co-ed Major?

Webster says that democracy is "a government by the people." The founders of this University and the faculty and students of our college have prided themselves for years on the democratic ideals for which Vermont stands as well as the democratic way in which the students on our campus conduct their affairs. With these two thoughts well in mind we are asking you yourselves to analyze the following facts in order that you may judge as to the democratic principles employed on our campus.

Yesterday, election for the co-ed major, who is to become an honorary member of the Champlain Sabres at the annual Military Ball, was held. Ballots were distributed in the Old Mill corridor on the first floor —the most crowded and least accessible section of the Old Mill. Slips of paper (formal ballots were not available for everyone) were handed to the students who were fortunate enough to get a piece. Upon the paper students were asked to write their own name and that of their choice for co-ed major. No accurate checking system was used and we have been informed, on good authority, that one student cast four ballots!

Students could vote only during the second and third periods. Many students whose classes meet in other buildings on the campus undoubtedly found it difficult to vote. Several students told us that the persons in charge of the ballot distribution were heard telling undecided voters whom to name on their ballots.

Since you readers are of college intelligence and since it is not a wise policy for an editor to preach nor be vindictive, we are merely stating the facts of the procedure followed yesterday in the co-ed major election and we are asking you to make your own decision as to whether the voting was democratic.

Debunk—Debunkers

Many prominent educators and writers in America have been saying and writing much in the past few weeks about the educational system in the United States. A few weeks ago Walter Lippmann, the well-known columnist for the New York Herald-Tribune declared that the movement in our schools for the debunking of American history had been a serious mistake.

Prof. Charles Beard's book, "An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution of the United States," has been especially criticized by Lippmann and others. The New York writer said that Beard's book gave the impression that the founders of the nation were influenced entirely by selfish motives of protecting their own property when they adopted the Constitution.

The United States Constitution with its unrivaled provisions for determining the settlement of "diverse economic interests," could never have been written by men who had no other motive than selfishness, the columnist asserted.

If modern education is telling youth that the very foundation of our government was selfish and offers no better foundation on which to build faith, education can be said to be failing. It would seem wise, therefore, for American youth to "take with a grain of salt" the work of the debunkers of our forefathers.

Winooski Boy Tells of 15,000 Mile Trek Through War Zone

"I came, I saw, he (Hitler) conquered," so goes the story of Narcyz Wasilkowski, twenty, of Winooski, who was marooned for fourteen months in war-devastated Europe.

Asking us to be seated, genial Narcyz then poured forth an experience saturated with pathos, adventure, and emotion concerning his observations during his 15,000-mile race back to freedom and democracy, the United States.

After graduation from the Burlington High School in 1938, Wasilkowski went to the Warsaw Conservatory of Music in Poland.

September, 1939, came and Poland was invaded by modern killer country, Germany. The German war machine was pounding away at the gallant defenders of Poland. Narcyz remained in Warsaw for seven days while the goose-steppers were besieging the city. Our subject was desperate. At the advice of the American Embassy, he fled Warsaw with hopes to reach Vilno, Poland, which is near the Polish-Russian border.

Thus began the strange and almost fantastic flight of a youth who only a year before had been living comfortably in the little industrial city of Winooski.

The transportation facilities between Warsaw and Vilno had been so thoroughly bombed that Narcyz was forced to move toward his destination on foot. After two weeks' constant walking, subsisting on grass and wild fruits, he finally arrived in Bialystok.

At this juncture our host related to us an incident which made us chew our nails and be thrown into a high pitch of suspense.

As he was approaching a small town near Bialystok in attempt to evade the German army and the Russian army which had recently invaded Poland from the east, Wasilkowski suddenly looked up and beheld a barricade of machine guns, cannons mounted on trucks, and several mechanized units. He lifted his arms and ran toward the line—held his breath —no shots—saved from the arms of death. Soon he was conversing, to the best of his ability, with one of the German generals. He was not suspected of espionage and with the aid of his American credentials, our hero was released. As Narcyz was about to take leave of the invaders, a mysterious voice called him back. Turning about, he saw a youthful truck driver not more than seventeen years old. As Narcyz was gesticulating to the youth, he noticed that the youth seemed to be in a sort of a trance caused either by fatigue or drug.

This latter theory is more probable because Wasilkowski was informed by a reliable source that the German aviators about whose daring feats we read, are actually under the effect of a highly potent drug which is administered by means of a hypodermic injection.

After a few more reciprocal arm and hand motions, Narcyz went on his way.

Arriving in Bialystok, our friend was informed that transportation to Vilno would not be available for at least a week. In this time, as he wandered through Vilno and its suburbs, he was met with accusing whispers, "Spy! Spy! Spy!" the convictions of the natives being based on his foreign apparel.

And Narcyz's journey to Vilno was not uneventful either! Quite a few times he was taken off the train, searched, questioned and, only by a streak of luck, he escaped being forced into the Polish army.

Finally, Wasilkowski arrived in Vilno, near which city he had an uncle. From this point, for ten months he corresponded with American Consuls in a futile attempt to get a visa. In these quiet ten months, Narcyz became quite adept in the use of the spinning loom.

At this juncture, Narcyz excused himself, ran to his closet and took out a few products of his newly acquired art. We all gaped in admiration as he displayed a linen suit, tie, cap, and two table scarfs. Beautiful is their description!

On with the adventure: Our host's efforts were not altogether in vain; after ten months' continuous correspondence, he was allowed to pass into Russia. Traveling 3,000 miles within Russia, Narcyz could find no outlet to reach America. After Russia—Istanbul, Turkey. There he found a very strong suspicion of Russian ideas and ideals, but on the other hand, Narcyz discovered a very warm friendship between the Turks and an especially significant Turkish sympathy toward Greece. He also expressed his belief that Turkey would be in the Balkan War if Russia's stand was definite.

Traveling toward Italy where he hoped to find a means of Trans-Atlantic transportation, he went through Greece, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and, finally in Italy, Wasilkowski was informed that that country's entrance into the war would make passage impossible.

Disappointed but determined, Narcyz went to Geneva, where final arrangements were made for his journey home. Moving southward, our adventurer went through bomb-torn France, and then through Fascist Spain, and subsequently arriving in Lisbon, Portugal, on August 29, 1940. Describing Lisbon, Narcyz said that it is the "only port of freedom in Europe which I visited; there, people live comfortably and do not seem to be aware of the furious on the continent."

Wasilkowski sailed for the United States on the Lovcen, a Yugoslavian steamer, whose weight was only two and one-half tons, a factor which accounted for its slow speed.

October 22 saw the Lovcen steaming past the symbol of the American way of life, the Statue of Liberty. As Narcyz was standing on the gangplank, he noticed a "God Bless America" sticker whose words have a significance realized only by those who have seen how pitifully the regimented and coerced people of other countries are.

Putting in a little humor, our affable subject told us that among other things, he missed hot dogs, candy bars, and popcorn. And as soon as he alighted the gangplank of the ship, he lost no time in compensating for the absence of the aforementioned items in his European diet.

In response to the query, 'How do European and American students compare," Narcyz said that for one thing, European students are much more mentally matured than we. "They," he continued, "are very patriotic and greatly engrossed in politics. Wherever I w... Cats Finish Fifth At N.E.I.C.A.A. Meet; R.I.S. Leads Field

Webster Brothers Take Eighth and Tenth Place To Lead Vermonters

The U. V. M. cross-country team arrived home Tuesday from the New England Intercollegiate Cross-country Meet held in Boston. The Vermont harriers led by the Webster brothers finished fifth out of a field of thirteen, a creditable performance for a team running for the first time in top competition. Fred Webster came home eighth, closely followed by his brother Charles in tenth place.

Robert Nichols, a sophomore from Rhode Island State, ran away with first place honors and also created a new record by running Franklin Park course in 20 minutes 57.4 seconds to break Don Smith of Maine's record of 21 minutes 16.8 seconds made a year ago in the same race. The Rhode Islanders scored a clean cut victory as a team. Nichols set the pace from the start and if he had been pushed in the final mile he would have broken the time by a greater margin. The young Rhode Islander, however, was almost disqualified, after he covered practically the whole distance he discarded his jersey with his number on it which caused the referee and some of the officials to confer to see if Nichols had broken the rules. The officials could not find anything in the New England college rules to disqualify a runner who finished in this manner and the victory of Nichols was finally accepted as official. On the other hand the A. A. U. rules state that if a runner crosses the line without any jersey and his number the runner is disqualified.

Following Rhode Island were Connecticut, Northeastern, Maine (defending champion), Vermont, New Hampshire, Bowdoin, Massachusetts State, Springfield, Bates, M. I. T., and Tufts.

The other point-getters for Vermont besides the Websters in eighth and tenth places were Bud Hoyt, thirty-ninth; Norm Stoddard, forty-fifth; and Capt. Frank Zwak, fifty-seventh. Ernie St. Mary and Merle Croun pulled up in sixty-eighth and eighty-sixth places respectively.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CLUB MEETING to be held Wednesday, November 20, at 7.30 p.m., in Slade Hall. Members urged to attend. Prospective members welcome.

Vermont Hoopsters Start Daily Drill

After a period of informal preliminary training which has extended throughout the past month both varsity and frosh basketball teams will start daily practice next week. Thus far both groups have had a minimum number of candidates because of the number of court players out for football but after the Middlebury football game this week-end the basketball aspirants will come out in full force for the daily drills.

The frosh are as yet an unknown quantity but rumor has it that there are several excellent high school and prep men available. On the varsity front the situation is much the same as last year when the Cats won five and lost ten with Capt. Paul Corley, Dick Healy, Don Maley, Frank Taylor and Bill Pye returning along with Henri "Hank" Beauchemin, star of two seasons ago who was not in college last year. Anso Belardinelli, mainstay of the last three seasons is lost through graduation and although his absence will be felt Beauchemin should fill his shoes very capably. Other men vying for positions are Bob Dougherty, Milt Kaufman and Dick Grosvenor of last winter's frosh team accompanied by Dick Lynch, Red White, Hazen Wood, Leo Brown and Ray Laramie of the 1940 second stringers. Among the other candidates appears Bill Conrad baseball letterman, who seems equally adapt at the hoop game.

Although last year's record was rather poor the Catamounts averaged 42 points a game to their opponents' 44 which indicates the close margin of most Vermont defeats. This year with a number of experienced men sparked by "Hank" Beauchemin, Vermont should go far towards becoming one of New England's best college teams.

NON-FRATERNITY men and women, except freshman women, are invited to attend the informal dance and fun nite to be held Saturday, November 16, at 8.30 p.m., at Southwick.

Catamounts Out To Break Losing Jinx On Porter Field

Eleven Seniors Will Don Vermont Uniforms For Final Appearance

Seeking balm for the wounds received in last week's skirmish with Norwich, the University of Vermont eleven was set today for its annual meeting with the Middlebury Panthers in finale of the 1940 season on Porter Field tomorrow.

Eleven seniors will don the Vermont uniform for their last tilt with Middlebury, and their last appearance for the Green and Gold as gridmen. This group includes such stand-outs as Capt. Frankie Taylor, undoubtedly one of the finest athletes in U. V. M. history; Ironman Swede Carlson, whose defensive work has stood out in every game he has played; Boots Lawrence and Earl Reed, two linemen who have always been in the thick of the fray when the going was the toughest, and Jim Corbett, Dick Salmon, and Bill Pye, three of the most talented ends ever to appear in Catamount gear; along with George Broutsas, Elmer Nichols and Frank Utley, who though not always in the starting line-up have played some great ball.

Tomorrow the Cats will be out to snap the jinx that has prevented them from gaining a victory on the Middlebury home field since 1918, and every indication points to a breaking of this string, for this has been one of the gloomiest seasons in Middlebury history, as the Panthers have failed to register a single victory in seven starts, and only amassed a total of 31 points against their opponents 171. However, though weak they will be spurred on by the great spirit of rivalry that has produced some astounding results in the past regardless of the strength of either unit.

Panthers hopes rest on fullback and Capt. Jack Johnson, who has proved to be a triple threat man this year, and on Van Gaasheck and Mayo, two other backs who have shown up well at times during various encounters.

Probable line-ups:

MIDDLEBURY		VERMONT
Crawford, l.e.		r.e., Pye
Adsit, l.t.		r.t., Lawrence
Beach, l.g.		r.g., Benoit
Wishinski, c.		c., Reed
Wittlin, r.g.		l.g., Strassburg
Clapper, r.t.		l.t., Carlson
Cosgrove, r.e.		l.e., Salmon
Bertuzzi, q.b.		q.b., Rice
Von Gaasbeck, l.h.b.		r.h.b., Spasyk
Mayo, r.h.b.		l.h.b., Taylor, Capt.
Johnson, Capt., f.b.		f.b., Gilbert

Intramural Winter Sports Start Soon

"Inter-fraternity touch football being ended, interfraternity bowling and basketball will be in the spotlight for the next few months," stated Coach Archie Post.

Bowling will be at the Community "Y" Friday afternoons from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. inclusive, on the five-alley layout. Bowling must be completed at 6 p.m. on the days scheduled. The arrangements will be as follows:

1. Five-man teams.
2. Two strings per man.
3. Points:
   - 5 points for high team score.
   - 1 point for high single string.
   - 1 point for high double string.
   - 7 possible for a match.

Team captains will be responsible for having their teams present, for contacting their opponents in advance, for proper exchange of score with their opponents, and for keeping their teams from fouling and lobbing the ball. For each match that a team bowls with fewer than five men it shall forfeit one point for each man under the team limit of five. Any team which forfeits two consecutive matches, or a total of three matches during the season, shall be eliminated from the balance of this schedule. There shall be no postponed matches for any reason whatsoever, except by reason of some condition arising at the "Y" whereby bowling facilities are unavailable.

Basketball will start soon. There will be no class league, but intramural basketball will be run an round-robin basis, with two leagues with six teams each comprised of one team from each fraternity, one from the Independents and one from the faculty. The league winners will play each other two out of three games for the championship.

Coach Post would appreciate it if any fraternity which doesn't want to enter into the competition would inform the director before the schedules are made out.

Sports Cast

By the SPORT EDITOR

Still Trying

The Panthers haven't won a game yet. The Catamounts are out to atone for that Norwich defeat. Both elevens have nothing to lose, so the game should be a wide-open one with plenty of fireworks. Last year the Cats pulled a surprise by completely submerging a supposedly scrappy and dangerous Middlebury eleven. The question this year is—Will the decidedly weaker Middmen be able to turn the tables on the favored Vermonters?

Tradition seems to indicate that a Catamount victory on Porter Field would be a reversal of Fate itself. For twenty-two long years the downstaters have been able to stave off all Green and Gold invasions. Maybe the Cats ought to go into this game with charms to ward off the jinx.

Another red entry in the Vermont ledger is the proverbial "deep purple gloom" prevailing throughout the squad as a "hangover" from the Norwich game. Even Fuzzy Evans admits that it's "going to be a tough job" to get the boys into a proper frame of mind before Saturday.

But despite these taboos on a Vermont victory we think the Cats have a good chance to cure their wounds with the healing salve of victory. You see we're still gunning for a successful prediction.

Odds and Ends

The more we read about that Norwich team the less downcast do we feel about Saturday's debacle.—According to Coach McAllister, Domina has psycho-somatic perception. Well that ought to have about the same effect on rival teams as the now out-moded "evil eye" of the witchcraft era. Also says McAllister Domina runs like Red Grange. Not content with such lesser fare as Vermont and Middlebury the Cadets, it is rumored, are looking around for some real competition. Latest reports have it that Dartmouth has changed its mind about meeting the Cadets next year. The way the Big Green has been dropping games lately we don't blame them.

Note from Alfred College—Pike Trigilio, ex-Catamount '41, is going great guns in the backfield. Has scored 45 points to date. Remember when he and Taylor were Vermont's touchdown twins?

In case you're interested next year's grid slate will probably list the same opponents as this year.

Rumour Corner—The whisper is going round that Hank Beauchemin is not eligible for the basketball squad.

Trying to hurry winter along Ev Bailey has let out a call for ski team candidates. Here's to you, Ev and let's hope that this year skiing will become an official sport at this University.

Puzzled

Now that all the reports are in it seems that the varsity harriers did themselves proud at Boston. Finishing fifth in the N. E. I. C. A. A. meet is no slight achievement. Charlie and Fred Webster finished eighth and tenth. The varsity runners thus injected an inspiring note into an otherwise disastrous autumn sports schedule. Undefeated thus far in dual meets the Catamounts meet Middlebury this week-end. May they end one of the best cross-country years in Vermont history with a victory.

Footnote: We wish somebody would explain to us why Bob Nichols of Rhode Island State was not disqualified for tearing off his jersey at the three-mile mark. One commentator has it that the officials could find no law against this in the handbook; another states that the Rhode Island coach's eloquence influenced the judges to ignore the existent law. Want to flip for it, boys?

Wanted

Fortune teller with reliable credentials to tell us in a few but well-chosen words who will win that Boston College-Georgetown fracas. Also to loan us ten dollars to invest on said prediction. That is all.

Kittens Bow To Middlebury, 13-0

Writing a bitter finis to the season's gridiron warfare on Centennial Field, a hard charging Middlebury Freshman eleven defeat an unimposing Kitten unit by the score of 13 to 0, in an Armistice Day battle.

The Panthers pushed over their two scores early in the first period before the holiday crowd of 800 had hardly settled in their seats. Taking the opening kick-off to the Vermont 40-yard line, the Cubs were held for three downs, but on the fourth play, Fleming let go a long pass to Peppin, the downstaters' left end, who grabbed it out of the ozone on 2-yard line and carried it across for the first marker. The try for the extra point failed.

Shortly after the ensuing kick-off, Peppin recovered a Kitten fumble on the Vermont 12 and on the second play Fleming drove through for the last tally. Hale booted the extra point.

Except for a short Vermont jaunt into Panther territory early in the second period as the result of runs by Conti and Lewkowitz the ball rested in Kitten territory for the remainder of the game, where the Middmen pounded away at their opponent's defenses, but were kept from running up more scores by the occasional rallies of the Vermont line by the occurence of various breaks.

Although the Kittens fought a losing battle against the onslaught of the heavier and rugged Panther forces, the work of Conti, Barry, Lewkowitz and Mayforth shone through to somewhat brighten the atmosphere for the home contingent, while the performances of Peppin, Fleming, Lawler, and Sheehan indicated a strengthening for next year's Midd varsity.

Vermont Victorious Used by Minn. School

A request for the music of "Vermont Victorious" was recently received by the music department from Morris High School, Morris, Minn. The request was turned over to Mr. Joseph F. Lechnyr, leader of the R. O. T. C. Band, who mailed the arrangement used by the band to Lovelle Johnson, librarian at Morris High School.

Mr. Lechnyr received the following reply, in part, "Our new pep song was played at Homecoming and made a big hit with both the students and the alumni."

"Spaulding High School of Barre has requested the music of 'Cotton Babes,'" Mr. Lechnyr announced.

Tri Delt Officer Visits Sorority

District President to Hold Conferences

Mrs. Sidney E. Stuart, district president of Delta Delta Delta, District No. 1, arrived here Wednesday, November 13 from her Brooklyn, N. Y., home on one lap of her first chapter-visiting trip of the fall college semester.

Mrs. Stuart is one of the fifteen district presidents throughout the United States and Canada of Delta Delta Delta, national college fraternity for women, which was founded in Boston, Mass., on Thanksgiving eve, 1888, and has now grown to an organization numbering eighty-seven chapters and 27,500 members.

A graduate of the University of Vermont, Mrs. Stuart taught school the first year after commencement, and then joined the Y. W. C. A. with the intention of doing war work.

Her training, however, was not finished until the war was over, so she organized the industrial department of the Lawrence, Mass., Y. W. C. A.

Two years later she went to Brooklyn, N. Y., as industrial secretary of the "Y" there, and a year later gave up her work to enter the employment agency field.

After nine years of experience with a large employment agency, she became part owner of a smaller one in 1936.

Now retired from business, Mrs. Stuart is kept busy with her home, and with her participation in many Delta Delta Delta affairs.

Besides her duties as district president of the sorority, and as president of the Delta Delta Delta Alliance (alumnæ organization), she is at present helping Mrs. Hortense Hudson with the main project of the sorority—Futures, Pfd., which is concerned with national employment surveys and finding worthwhile and interesting positions for college graduates.

Through the New York City Alliance, Mrs. Stuart has launched a new program, whose object is to give members of Delta Delta Delta an opportunity to learn New York through the eyes of sorority alumnæ who are specialists in various professional fields.

Mrs. Stuart's itinerary included visits to five collegiate chapters of Delta Delta Delta.

The Tri-Delts of Eta Chapter have looked forward eagerly to Mrs. Stuart's visit and have planned a program for her. There will be an informal supper at the house Wednesday night. Thursday, Mrs. Stuart will have luncheon in Robinson Hall dining room and will have dinner at Grassmount. During the afternoons the Tri-Delts plan to have several conferences with her. She will leave Burlington, Friday night.

Bluestockings Plan Membership Drive

The Bluestockings, a women's honorary society, announces that manuscripts from women students will be accepted any time from now until Christmas vacation. All women are eligible to hand in a short story, poem, essay, play, or a prescribed book review, which will be judged by the Bluestockings Club. These manuscripts are to be placed in a box in the library provided for this purpose.

Membership is limited to twenty students, and this January only six new members can be admitted. Eligibility for membership is based on the manuscripts turned in.

This literary club held a meeting at Southwick, on November 12, at 7.30 p.m., during which this announcement was made. The speakers for the evening were not able to be present. Doris Jareckie '42 and Flora Fifield '42 read some of their poetry.

The next meeting is scheduled for December 10, at 7.30 p.m., at Southwick.

Meeting of Aquarium Society November 17

The third meeting of the Fleming Museum Aquarium Society will take place Sunday, November 17, at 2.15 p.m.

It is expected that officers will be elected at this meeting. Correspondence from various fish hatcheries will be discussed.

All those who may be interested in attending the meeting are welcome.

Sororities Begin Rushing Parties

December 2nd Set as Climax of Campaign

Party girls were everywhere in evidence on the University of Vermont campus this week with the first sorority party for prospective members held on Tuesday, November 12, at the Alpha Chi Omega house. It was the Sigma Gamma sorority which entertained on Wednesday, November 13 and Thursday, November 14, Delta Phi Epsilon received. Other parties are scheduled for next week. The Kappa Alpha Thetas are sending out invitations for November 19; Delta Delta Delta, November 20; Pi Beta Phi, November 21; and Alpha Xi Delta, November 22.

Each sorority invites the new students in which it is interested to its party. Sororities are permitted to give only one party each, with the cost per person not exceeding thirty-five cents. Parties may be either formal or informal, as the sorority chooses.

Freshmen will go home for their Thanksgiving holiday Wednesday, November 27, following the last of the final parties, and upon their return to college, a neutral period will go into effect from December 1-2. Strict rules will limit conversation beween sorority and non-sorority members, during this neutral period, to simple greetings and nothing more. Freshmen and other non-members will sign for the sorority of their choice Monday afternoon, December 2, and pledging ceremonies will climax the annual campaign of the sorority groups for new membership.

It cost the Dartmouth student of 1850 about $994 for a four-year course.

Evolution Is Lecture Topic

Several Catholic members of the faculty and a large number of Catholic students convened in the North Lounge of the Southwick Building, Tuesday evening, when Prof. Basil Candon, biologist from St. Michael's College, gave a lecture on "Evolution" as based on Catholic interpretation.

Professor Candon treated with equal balance the pros and cons of the theory of evolution. He attempted to convey to the audience that evolved changes in the development of organisms can only result from the power of an infinite Creator.

"Special creation still cannot be disproven," said Professor Candon. "The Creator made each individual thing separately by a special act."

Speaking on the advantageous outlook of evolution, Professor Candon emphasized the fact that it enriches greatly the glorification of the work of God who can make so thorough planning. Although the evolutionist classifies man along with the members of the evolutionary tree, yet, he segregates man into a specie of his own, namely, "homo sapiens."

In the discussion that followed it was further said that at some time in the history of creation, the Creator chose to infuse a mortal animal with an immortal soul, "homo sapiens" or the intelligent man.

At the next meeting on Tuesday, November 19, the members of the Newman Club will take part in the discussion concerning evolution which Professor Candon will direct.

These lecture meetings are a part of a program to stimulate interest in the Newman Club, which hopes to meet some of the problems of Catholic students at U. V. M. The club is only several years old on the Vermont campus, but in many other colleges it has been a prominent active society for many years. This year the membership of the Newman Club has increased. In previous years the meetings took the form of socials, but now the program has been designed to inform the students and to promote open discussions, although there will be some parties as a dance is being planned for the future.

All Catholic men and women are invited to the club's meetings.

Carnegie Endowment Gives Books to I. R. C.

The International Relations Club has just received six books on international relations from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace as part of the periodical contribution which that fund provides for International Relations Clubs in colleges all over the country in an effort to acquaint students with worthwhile books dealing with timely subjects. The books are all up to date and will be placed on the International Relations Club shelf in the Billings Library, where any student is welcome to take them out. The books received are as follows: "The Way Out of War," by Cesar Saerchinger; "What Germany Forgot," by James T. Shotwell, which deals with reasons behind the Versailles Treaty for the present conflict; "Some Notes on War and Peace" by Walter Lippmann; "Commonwealth or Anarchy?" by Sir John Mariott, which discusses different peace projects put forth in the last few centuries; "Great Britain, An Empire in Transition," by Albert Viton; and "American Policy in the Far East, 1931-1940, by T. Scribes' Harvest

By Way of Explanation

This is not a "literary" page of the first degree. It wasn't meant to be, and moreover, it didn't turn out that way. This is more or less of a smattering of almost everything under the sun, taken from the files of SCRIBES, informal literary organization. As a matter of fact, every true SCRIBE hates the word "organized," so we might as well amend that statement right now. Members, whose number fluctuates from day to day and from meeting to meeting, simply arrive, drape themselves upon a chair or the floor, and things begin to hum. The sole officer, besides the Keeper of the File, is a chairman elected for each meeting, who puts out notices and generally rounds up members. The purpose of the club is to encourage free expression, both written and verbal, and to do away with all inhibitions, both public and private. Members bring their latest manuscripts to the meetings, and prepare themselves for a thorough grilling. Prof. Elliott Merrick of the English department, has been duly inaugurated faculty advisor, to the joy of every member, and even brings a story of his own every so often.

SCRIBES started out, in January, 1939, as simply a freshman women's literary club, brought north by Jean Young '42 as a pioneer outpost of the Garretson Scribes of her New York City high school. The organization throve and waxed greater. When the "freshman women" became sophomores they couldn't seem to accept the fact, and SCRIBES kept right on. In January, 1940, in order to justify its existence, SCRIBES became co-educational, and dedicated itself to the fostering of creative work on campus.

The purpose of this page is to show the student body in general that literary activity actually is going on, and to give would-be authors, poets, and journalists a chance to see their work in print. We hope also to stimulate interest in the annual Tri-State Literary Contest, so that next spring Professor Dean will find himself buried above the high-water line in short stories, poetry, and essays.

Fiddler Bill

ROBERT BENNETT

Cigarette dangling from the corner of his mouth, leather shoes drumming on the floor, head bobbing up and down, sits old Bill at the height of his glory, fiddling an Irish reel. The dancing couples are gloriously happy as they step out an old-fashioned square dance to the music of Bill's singing fiddle.

"Hi," says Bill. "Haven't got a cigarette, have you? Thanks. This one is getting short." His fingers dance over the strings, and the bow bounces back and forth as he talks, visits, and puts over a "big deal."

Bill can't read a note of music and can't tell the treble cleff from the bass, but if a stranger asked him about music, he would tell him he could read as fast and accurately as the best, that is, providing the stranger didn't look like a musician. He never had a lesson but has plenty of rhythm in his blood along with a wonderful ear for music.

One night I asked him if he could play anything besides the violin. "Sure. Any stringed instrument is easy for me. I play some piano, too. (I later found out that his piano playing consisted of several words.) I used to be a son-of-a-gun with a trumpet," claimed Bill. "Triple tongue, double tongue—do most anything with it. No lip now. Haven't played for years. Yes, sir! I used to tickle the ivories pretty fast."

One night he was telling a bunch of us fellows about a trip he took. "Yes, sir," Bill went on, "went to New York and played on Major Bowes' program. Swell guy, that Major Bowes; makes you feel right at home."

"I'll bet you were pretty nervous," remarked John Morley.

"Naw. The crowd didn't bother me at all," answered Bill.

"When did you take the trip?" asked Bob Blanchard.

"Twenty-ninth of January," replied Bill. "Yes, sir, January twenty-ninth. Drove to Burlington, left my car in a garage, and took a boat down the lake. Swell trip. Say, someone got a cigarette? I was gonna buy some, but left my pocketbook in my other pants. Yes, sir, I got balled up in New York at first, but it wasn't long before I knew my way around. Mighty big place, New York."

"How long were you there?" I asked.

"Two days," replied Bill. "Took in all the sights, played over the radio, and then took a bus home. Those buses are pretty nifty."

"The twenty-ninth was on Friday," commented Bob Blanchard, "and Major Bowes' program is on Thursday night."

"How'd the boat get through the ice?" questioned John Morley.

"I suppose your car came home by itself," I added.

"Gotta 'nother cigarette? I'll see you boys later. Big business deal on," commented Bill as he headed for the door.

Mist and Rain

DAAN ZWICK

The clouds are closing in again, giving me the uncanny feeling that I am apart from this world. All around, in every direction but down, the view is limited to a grayish-white nothingness. Only occasionally is this intangible curtain torn by shadowy forms, which I know are trees, but which are now just patches of darkness. A diffused, bright area above serves as proof that I am at least still in the solar system, but even that evidence disappears at times.

What lies beyond this curtain? Is there just more of this nothingness, a continuation of the uncanny white mist? Or is there the same world that I see on clear, sunny days: Trees, fields, houses, and the ever-present mountains? The log cabin whose roof protects me from a continuous drizzle certainly is the same cabin of cloudless days. The ground around the cabin still seems familiar, in spite of an uncertainty as to where it ends and where the mist begins. These landmarks are all I am sure of. Perhaps the little cabin and its plot of ground are floating around in this mist, separated from the mountain and the world. Perhaps . . . .

No! That cannot be. I have seen this before. This is only a low-lying cloud which has settled down on the mountain; in a few minutes the wind will blow it away. At the most it will last until tomorrow. At any rate, I am still on Mount Mansfield, still solidly on this earth.

But am I? I seem to be moving slowly through this universal mist, yet never arriving anywhere. There are no earthly sounds, no auto horns echoing up from the valley, no human voices. Only the slight, intermittent tapping of the rain on the roof, only the sounds which I myself make. No sounds from outside my little world. Time passes, and still there is this gray—white, perpetual envelope, still is there no evidence of something real lying beyond the vague boundary of the mist. A bell sounds, but yet it is not a real bell, for the sound comes from everywhere at once. I should be hungry, but I am not. It must be that out in this void even hunger, a most mundane phenomenon, is no more. Physically and mentally I am floating through a boundless void. Time passes unnoticed. Or perhaps there is no time here . . . .

Gradually a change is coming over this still unyielding mist. A reddish glow, coming from nowhere in particular, has replaced the grayish-white, adding a sort of cheerfulness to the unreality. The dainty murmur of the rain has ceased, and the air is beginning to stir. Almost

Golden Wedding . . .

MAROLYN POWERS

"Fifty years," she thought with a feeling that was half pride, half incredulity, "is a long time." She pondered over it in wonder until her father stopped the car in the yard at the old white farmhouse. "My goodness, Dad, there must be twenty cars here. I didn't know there was going to be such a crowd!" And so there were—gay, shiny roadsters and sedans parked on the broad lawn, in the horsebarn, under the willow that was older than the farm itself. Beside the stability of the weathered buildings they looked bizarre, transient, like a gaudy billboard in the midst of a pine grove.

Cousin Catherine rushed out to greet her with an impetuous kiss, and found herself gently thrust aside. "Careful, Kit, mustn't muss me up until after I've said 'hello' anyway. How's the reception going?"

"Oh, swell, Betsey!" Kit, dragging Betsey toward the seldom-used sitting room door, was enthusiastic. "Gallons of ice cream, tons of cake, and everybody kissing everybody else."

Betsey felt an anticipatory thrill as she stepped into the crowded room. It was a bewildering mixture of strange faces and tobacco smoke. She looked about her for someone familiar. "Grandma!"

She looked so beautiful and proud, with her glistening white hair piled high on her head in an intricate knot. Triumphantly, she shook hands with two people at once while she carried on conversation with yet another. Just like a girl, they'd always said she was, eager for praise and dignified as a princess. At seventy she dealt the favored men a glance they seldom forgot, while the less fortunate winced under the flash of her scorn. So people thought bearing six children and doing the work of two ordinary women was detrimental to beauty. Well, thought Betsey, if I could affect people that way I'd be willing to work fifty years for it. But as she took her grandmother's crippled hand in her own, she knew that this indomitable woman had paid for her happiness a price that was terrible. After her last child was born, permanent semi-invalidism claimed her. She had known the agony of seeing her two small girls submitted to drudgery while she lay helpless, and the scarring sorrow of the death of her oldest daughter.

Betsey turned to her grandfather and shook hands with him. "Well, Mr. Kingsland, how are you?" The question was unnecessary, for as her eyes sought his she saw that he was ill at ease in his best clothes, and the laughter-crinkles were gone from around his eyes. Foot hurt him probably, where the horse stepped on it a year ago and he'd never had it tended to. He was liking this, though. Immensely proud in the knowledge that he and his wife were the most highly respected couple in the township. And through everything worry nagged him. Wonder if Luke went after the cows . . . horses watered . . . hogs . . . calves . . . ought to be out working instead of foolin' around in here. People told him he was silly to work like a man thirty years old. "Kill yourself, you old fool," they said. He laughed and thanked God for work. He knew that was what kept him alive. He didn't know, however, that his weather-beaten face, seamed and brown, was handsome. His moustache was bleached white from constant work in the sun and wind. Mowing, cultivating, harvesting. Another fall—another spring. I live to see another year, praise be! He was of the soil. Fine, clean, great in strength of body and soul. Master of his house and of his sons, patriarch of his family.

Betsey's mother claimed her now. Did she have a good ride down in the bus? Have to wait long for Dad? No. That's good. Well, come and meet Cousin Jenny Kingsland. And this is Martha Reynolds, come all the way up from Rutland just for the reception. So lovely you could come. This is my daughter, Betsey, bigger than I am. Well, I always say it takes a wedding or a funeral to bring the family together, and no telling which is the sadder! Me? Oh my, no! Perfect picture of her father. And this is Mrs. Cady (faded, nervous), Mr. Cady (henpecked), Cousin Carlie—you've heard me speak of her; Mr. Willoughby—. At this point Betsey ducked, as that affectionate gentleman attempted to kiss her, and went out to the dining room in search of something to eat.

This room, too, was filled to overflowing with people, and at one end stood a table covered with plates piled high with white and yellow cakes. As Betsey made her way toward this haven of retreat she stopped suddenly. Ringing laughter filled the room. Over the heads of the people she saw then the source of the laughter. He stood head and shoulders above everyone else, a handsome, jovial giant with abundant blond hair and a flowing, tobacco-stained moustache. He spoke to Cousin Carlie with a thick, hard accent and then his merriment rang out again. Betsey gasped and poked one of her cake-cutting aunts.

Idyll of a Ten Cent Store

DORIS JARECKIE

A man was slowly circling the candy counter, like a wrestler watching for an opening. Some assorted chocolates were displayed rashly at one end. He stopped before them, glanced covertly around him, put out his hand cautiously as if expecting a mousetrap, snatched one end, and, in the same movement, popped it into his mouth and hurried on around the corner of the counter. No one had seen him. At least, he thought no one had.

He meandered round and round the counter, like a planet revolving around the sun. And all the while his mouth looked suspiciously as if it might be watering, and his eyes glinted eagerly. He had a distinctly CCC-WPA look about him, might have been thirty-five, was of medium height and dressed in dark baggy trousers, a dark, heavy, belted jacket, scuffed work shoes, and a visored cap with ear flaps. He was thin. A razor blade had recently been applied to his chin—it was Saturday.

He stopped at the peanut-brittle section, leaned way over it—almost pressing his nose against the glass—and looked. He continued to look for a long time. Finally, having observed it from all angles, he moved on. The next thing that caught his eye was some hunks of chocolate, peppered with numerous nuts. History repeated itself. Time became a mimeograph machine.

Over on the other side of the counter, opposite the peanut brittle, he stopped again. After an interminable period of serious debate, during which he shifted from foot to foot, scrutinized, and scratched his head, he made the momentous decision: ten cents' worth. He communicated his choice to the sales girl in an undertone, she scooped it out, weighed it, and put it in a bag. He passed the dime to her and received his purchase. Then, to satisfy himself that he had chosen the right thing, he made the rounds two more times, before ambling off in the general direction of the hardware counter.

He had chosen some cheap, gaily striped balls of candy, wrapped in twists of varicolored cellophane.

GEORGINA GREENE

Miss Jackson's a funny combination
Of college education
With some country livin' mixed up in it.
Th' other day we rode home with her
From Burlington after one of her trips
F'r extension bizniz. She and her mother
Sat in front, and ma and me
We sat in back. Mostly we jest listened.
Miz Preston—that's Mis Jackson's mother's name—
Well, you might say she holds down
Her end of the talkin', and mebbe she Holds up your end, too. Sorta like
Them teeter-boards they have in the playground
By the schoolhouse—she's up in the air
'Bout something most the time.
Well, anyway, we was riding t' home
With them and mostly listening.
They was talkin' 'bout the big dinner
They had eaten, how tastey 'twas,
And 'bout how good it was to Get to eat some place where 'twas really
Civilized, and they could have
A glass of wine alongside of their dinner.
But then while they was eatin',
In came some teachers from the school at home.
The fuss that those two women made
'Bout the teachers' seein' them drinkin' wine—
'Twas only a small glass—you'd think
That Miz Jackson and Miz Preston
Was jest a wee mite guilty
In the conscience.

Tarantella

Fulvio Bardossi

Somewhere in the swirling madness of the music there was a pause for Orlando and he rested his violin on his knee. His fiery black eyes slowly became aware of the other members of the quartet. Lowenstein—meticulous, prim, precise, the worshipper of technique, the destroyer of music's soul. Himmler—meek, tired, and as easily moulded by a superior will as a lump of clay. Khorilov—ah, yes, Khorilov—grasping his violin surely and powerfully as if to squeeze every last drop of music from it. His eyes uplifted in a moody stare. "Look at him, all wrapped up in himself. In his damnable skill," thought Orlando. "I'll bet he doesn't even know what it is he plays. What arrogance. What insufferable egotism."

Orlando's turn came again and he plunged into the music, losing himself in it. It churned madly in its course. Orlando was carried away off the concert stage, out of the building. He was drugged by the power of the composer's creation. The music tore and beat about him. Yet his fingers responded surely, making him apply the bow with regulated pressure. His eyes swept through the maze of symbols before him and read them aright. All the while he felt the beauty of the music going through him like a torrent.

Then the four were alone. The concert was over. Lowenstein and Himmler hurried off to an appointment, leaving Orlando alone with Khorilov. As the young musician gathered his things together the leader of the quartet came up to him.

"My young virtuoso," he said, with sensuous red lips thrust forward and shoulders hunched up as he balanced on tiptoe, "your playing was beautiful tonight but you were a trifle too demonstrative."

Orlando turned with bitterness in his heart and a spark in his eyes. "You mean perhaps I played my part as it should be played and did not worry about how well you stood out from the group."

Khorilov frowned. "My friend, you are a trifle inclined to think that a piece is sacred and not something to show off the musician's skill."

"Skill. Skill. That's all one hears. Your skill to which we all must kneel like puppets. What about the music itself? Doesn't that count for anything? Don't you feel the beauty, the melancholy or the gayety of it? Don't you respond to its moods, its spells?"

"Moods and spells are for the listeners; the poets," overruled Khorilov. "Music is to be employed as a tool. I play well. So very well I employ a piece to exhibit that ability to best advantage, and nothing must mar a performance by detracting from that central fundamental. So in the future curb your tendency to make the secondary part so beautiful that it detracts from the attention, the focusing on the first violin."

Orlando could stand no more. His long legs rapidly crossed the wide lobby to the door of the concert hall.

"Where are you going?" asked Khorilov condescendingly without raising his voice at all.

"Somewhere where there are real people and there's still some room for soul and beauty." The door slammed shut.

Orlando walked slowly through the night, his mind burning with the coals of revolt. Why should he tie himself to a quartet where no one felt the beauty of music, where no one was a true artist? All of them were mere puppets in Khorilov's hands. Khorilov, the master, the first violin, the crusher of originality. There was no room for originality in the group, all must fit into a mold, all must submerge their individualism in the collectivism of the group. Well, he had enough of it. He'd cut loose from the whole bunch. Somewhere there must be room for a violinist who put music before skill and mechanics. Somewhere there must be people who played with the heart, not technique and mind.

His train of thought was derailed by the lights of a small café. The sign blinked on and off its letters spelling out "Casa Napoli" in snakes of imprisoned light. Orlando walked in. Yes, Tony was there as he knew he would be—small and dark and beaming behind the small counter.

"Orlando," he shouted, "by all the saints and the Virgin Mary what good fortune brings you here?" He was out from behind the bar in a second and he hugged Orlando to him, his mustache ruffling the boy's cheek.

"Maria, Maria, come and see, the prodigal has returned."

Maria pushed open the door from the kitchen and waddled to him quickly. Her big arms almost crushed the breath from his body. She smelt faintly of tomatoes and garlic.

Orlando was soon in a booth eating spaghetti and drinking the dark purple wine that Tony made himself each year. The dark color of the wine blended with the bright red of the table cloth, the red and white walls.

"Orlando," shouted Tony, his hands going like a windmill, "tonight we celebrate. I go call everyone—Julio, Napoleon, Gigi—all your old friends. Ah, it will be like old times. You remember?"

The youth tried to stop him but he flitted out of the door, swift as a bumblebee with a mission.

"Such a man," said Maria laughing happily. "Always he wants to laugh and sing. Tony, I tell him, you are a poor business man, you never get rich. And what does he say—Maria, who wants to be rich? Per basso, not I. Why be rich when you can be happy?" And she laughed as if it were a big joke.

Orlando looked at her thoughtfully.

"You are happy, aren't you?" It wasn't exactly a question, more a statement of fact.

"Si, Orlando, why shouldn't I be? It is not very hard to be happy. We have enough to eat, we have friends, lots of them, and we can sing and dance. What more?"

"I don't know," confessed Orlando.

The door burst open and Tony entered leading a score of men and women. A little man with a great mop of iron grey hair was squeezing music from a battered accordion. Everybody shouted greetings and pummeled Orlando. Where in the world Tony had collected all these people Orlando couldn't tell. Yet all his old friends were there. Julio, prophet of the revolution; Gigi, happy-go-lucky, perpetually unemployed; Zabalione, all stardust and patches, the dreamer, the quoter of poems, the connoisseur of wines; Madelena, seventy years old, yet the youngest of the lot; Cassandro, the drunkard, who when thoroughly intoxicated threw all the dishes from the window and then apologized to his wife by rendering a beautiful serenade. Yes, they were all there and tons of others he didn't know.

Tables and chairs were shoved aside and preparations were made for dancing. Orlando found himself near the bar with a violin in his hands and the little accordion player at his side. Without another thought he slipped out of his everyday world into a new one. His violin met his chin and his bow scraped the strings. Notes gushed forth easily, merrily. All his pent-up revolt was expended on the helpless strings and they were forced to produce a mad mosaic of rhythm that set the dancers to swirling in fiery polkas, stately waltzes—all the old dances that set feet to motion.

As if in a haze Orlando saw old Madelena waltzing gracefully in the arms of Gigi. Her face glowed with the light of a person who tastes again the fleeting rapture of youth, the heady wine of transient joys. Her face was a canvas snatched from Rembrandt. Her eyes, coal black, were the essence of Italy—wildly joyous, full of fire, and alive with life.

Cassandro zipped by, his long legs eating up space as he flung his little wife about in careless abandon. Cassandro had never learned to dance right. He covered more ground than a frightened kangaroo. His powerful body dashed from wall to wall and his partners were in constant peril. As he whirled now in dizzy gyration his wife looked like a Lilliputian clinging to Gulliver. Yet she was laughing, her face mantled by a cascade of merriment. Tomorrow she would probably be buying a new set of dishes but tonight she was again a lovely peasant girl in faraway Tuscany and Cassandro was the dashing young blacksmith coming to sing at her window and to hang floral offerings on the first of May. In her heart it was springtime—the snows of life forgotten.

There was Zabalione treading a graceful measure with some dark-haired girl. Zabalione with his patched trousers, his greasy cap and his woe-begone shoes. In all his poverty he appeared a courtier. A gallant. A gentleman of gentlemen. His waltz was a thing of beauty. In his eyes was the glow of remembrance, the half-tones and the soft lights of recollection.

And so the music flowed. Round and round went the dancers—a poem full of life, of color, of laughter. There was abandon and freedom in every move. This was a group unchained, unconscious of time, of reality, of the world. The vivid red of the walls, the bright colored dresses of the women, the glow of the colored electric lights was a study in primitive pigments, in flaming colors.

Orlando fiddled on—his violin vibrating with harmony, with rhythm. All the old folk tunes came back to him. The songs born of the race. Songs springing from the heart of a simple people. Songs that shouted aloud a joy in living, a carelessness of the morrow, a trust in the good, a poetry of the soul. Next to him like a Puckish Quasimodo the accordion player produced from his box of wind orchestral effects over which the melody of the violin floated like clouds over a sunbaked, riotous landscape.

It was midnight and everyone stopped. Tony was coming out of the kitchen, a huge wash boiler full of spaghetti in his hands. Tables were flung together and everyone sat down. The wine flowed like water—red, deep purple, glowing, full of light. It sent a thrill throughout the body, it made the tongue waggle more freely, it made poets of peasants. Orlando sat and let the laughter flow about him; somehow the revolt of his heart was flowing out and a strange new peace was flowing in. A strange understanding. Tony jumped to his feet—"A toast. A toast to a great artist, a friend. To Orlando." Shouts of "viva," "salute," "bona fortuna" filled the air. Orlando got to his feet and his expressive hands motioned for silence. Holding a glass aloft he said in triumphant tones:

"Amici, I thank you. Tonight I came here in revolt, dissatisfied. I will go away with a great truth locked in my heart, one I will never forget. Tonight I have achieved freedom, true freedom. Let us drink—to my emancipation." A score of glasses were uplifted, a score of voices shouted a paean of joy.

It was five in the morning. The city was strangely hushed in expectance of some great event. Orlando, tired but clear-eyed and awake, walked slowly toward the hotel. He could still hear a babel of voices, a clash of notes. He could still see Madelena dancing that last tarantella with the policeman who had been sent to break up the party. Her white curls peeped out from beneath the policeman's cap as she turned this way and that in the maze of the dance. The policeman had said his name was O'Rourke, but he didn't take long to learn the tarantella and to create a liking for red wine.

Orlando enjoyed the hollow echo of his footsteps on the pavement. The air was fresh and cool. It would soon be dawn. Over the rooftops a faint streak of yellow tinged the gray of the sky. There was a breathlessness in the air. The yellow grew brighter, the gray turned lighter, rays shattered its thin eggshell wall. The yellow spread along the sky, running riot, chasing all else to the far corners of heaven. The sky became a glowing canvas of molten gold. The city slowly shook off the cloak of shadows and bathed in the light. And Orlando stretched his hands toward the sun and shouted aloud for mere joy.

Return Engagement

Jane Lyons

Look up this laughing side of hill:
See how the mountain shakes its jocund head;
Blue laughter ringing down the gulf,
Pelting in silver jibes and static lead,
Pounding its way to the despondent dead.

Turn up this laughing side of hill:
See how Jove holds his sides—the mighty joke
Sprawls him intemperate in the sky,
While crimson lightning splits the clement yoke
Of towns and people and the things they spoke.

Turn up this muted side of hill:
The wind breathes in a disconsolate whine;
And there is nothing verdant here
Or imminently bright, 'til Jove shall find
Another joke evolving in his mind.

You Killed My Clown

Huddee Zwick

But I was made to laugh
And not whip my
Twinkling eyes into massive and murky pools.
It wasn't meant that when
My clown fell down two white
Petals should lay on a silent breast;
He'd get up
And finish his act.
You don't understand.

I can make you bend and hold your sides
But you stick needles into me of
Sharp aching and tape my upward lips.
You show me that tomorrow will be Withered and clip the ripple that
Would mean so much in these thorny times;
And you've killed my clown.
My heritage that could be yours.
You don't understand.

Golden Wedding

"Who's that?"

Aunt Lora glanced up briefly. "Him? Mr. Bachmann. How are you, Betsey?"

"Oh, fine; just grand." But she was listening to the rich overtones in that gutteral German voice. Johann Bachmann. In the World War of 1914 he had been ridiculed and scorned because of his nationality, until in desperation he had slashed his own throat. But he had lived to see his country defeated, and now under the rule of a despot. And he could still laugh.

He was saying good-bye now. "Goot bye. Ja!" A roar of laughter. "Ach, ja, die crops is badt." His face suddenly sober. "But you, Carlie, iss more pretty dan you wass thirty years before. Vell, auf wiedersehen! Come, mein Schatz." With careful tenderness he half lifted his wife from her chair where she had been sitting, unnoticed. They said she was dying of diabetes. And that dress—it was pitifully old, shapeless, as unlovely as she herself. Yet as he helped her out the door he said something in her ear which made her smile, and the door closed on their mingled laughter.

Hours later the people were all gone, the dishes were all washed and put away. "Well," Aunt Dorothy observed with satisfaction, "there were 125 people here, at least."

It was a cross-section of Vermont people, Betsey knew, with their roots deep in the rocky earth, and their heads lifted humbly to the sky, accepting what came without complaint. Laughing in the face of danger. Strong, sage, tender, stubborn, proud. For them there was no golden anniversary. To them fifty years was short; and every year as they lived it, was pure gold.

Mist and Rain

imperceptibly my little world is growing larger. The vague borderline between earth and mist is retreating from around the cabin. Dark, shapeless forms become darker and more definite, and at last appear as trees. I am coming back to earth. In the distance the top of the mountain is taking shape as a dark mass. appearing and disappearing alternately as the cloud disintegrates. The sun is setting down in the Stowe valley, reddening the clouds which have not yet risen from the valley floor. Upwards, the mist is shredding out, allowing blue sky to appear; these shreds finally gather into rolls and float off as ordinary clouds. I am back on earth again. And I am hungry.

Snowy Evening in the Hills

Herbert Elliott

Now in a grey and windy avalanche
On chains of wall, and leaves burnt crisp and brown,
On frozen, furrowed hills, and the ground,
And glassed-in brooks that run with a sound,
The evening and the snows are fallin down.

The woodmouse shivers in its flak starred fur.
Out from its lair the hunting wea glides,
And melts into a bog of misty light.
A red fox yaps along the edge of nig
And shakes the winter from his tawn sides.

Now in the gloom a crying bird is blen
Along the swamps a wild white ha slips by,
And shakes white powder from the fro grass.
A buck cuts snow with hoofs as sh as glass.
And leaps in dusk, and sniffs the fall sky.

Micha Elman Gives Excellent Concert For Large Audience

Hospital Sponsors Musical Concert at Memorial Auditorium

Memorial Auditorium was filled to capacity Sunday evening when the Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary presented Mischa Elman, one of the world's greatest masters of the violin.

There are many violinists in the world, but few compare with the Russian-born Elman. His name is known throughout the world wherever people appreciate the best in music. He has given concerts on every continent, and everywhere audiences have fallen under the spell of his masterly interpretation of the great music of the ages. Choosing to live in the United States, he has become an American citizen and now makes his home in New York.

Elman's fame began when as a talented boy he gave his first concert. Through the years, this fame beginning so early has increased as his genius matured. He came to America in 1910, and he has since engaged in extensive concert tours on this continent.

In his concert Sunday evening, he was accompanied at the piano by Leopold Mittman, and those who listened to the following program which he presented had the double satisfaction of knowing that they were contributing to a worthy cause as well as seeing and hearing a great artist.

The program follows:

I

1. Partita in E minor—J. S. Bach-Nachez
   Allegro
   Adagio
   Allemanda
   Gigue
2. Sonata in A major.....Gabriel Faure
   Allegro molto
   Andante
   Allegro Vivace
   Allegro Quasi Presto

Intermission

II

3. Concerto No. 9 in D minor Louis Spohr
   Allegro
   Adagio
   Rondo-Allegretto
4. Nocturne in D major Chopin
   Vida Breve.....DeFalla-Kreisler
   Hungarian Dance No. 4.....Brahms
   Polonaise in D major.....Weiniawsky

The Trapp Family Singers, a gay and talented Austrian group of mother, five daughters, and two sons, will appear in the final concert of the hospital benefit series on Tuesday evening, December 3.

Second Class Started in Red Cross Work

On Wednesday, November 20, at 4.15 p.m., the second Red Cross class will be conducted. This class, which will meet every Wednesday, is for the benefit of those people who are not in the first class. Dr. A. G. Mackay will also handle this class, and the girls are requested by Miss Cummings to look at the list in the Y room for names and all other details.

French Club to Meet

The French Club will hold an important meeting Tuesday, November 19, at Southwick at 7.30 p.m. The boys will read the parts of a French play, "Faussé Monasée." All members are urged to be present.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CLUB MEETING to be held Wednesday, November 20, at 7.30 p.m., in Slade Hall. Members urged to attend. Prospective members welcome.

Fordham Professor To Deliver Lecture

Magazine Editor Will Discuss Dante

"Dante as Mediaeval Humanist" will be the subject of a University lecture to be delivered in the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont on the evening of Thursday, November 21 at 8 p.m. The lecturer is the Rev. Gerald G. Walsh, S.J., professor of Mediaeval Culture, attached to the Graduate School at Fordham University, and editor of the quarterly magazine Thought.

A distinguished scholar and eminent authority on Dante, he includes among his hobbies mediaeval architecture and an active outdoor life.

Dante's 'Mediaeval Miracle of Song" has been called the "swan song of Scholasticism," and modern humanists hear his clarion call as the cock-crow announcing the Dawn of a new spirit and so of a new age.

Father Walsh however, finds an intrinsic unity of Scholasticism and Humanism in Dante's "Integral Humanism," which is more adequate, because more complete and more profound, than that of his successors. In his lecture he considers Dante as thinker, artist, lover and poet—as "Christian Humanist."

This Epic of Man gives Dante his claim to the title of Integral Humanist.

"It is a Humanism that by starting with the obvious assumption that God is the creator of both man and nature reconciles all those elements that modern disintegration has torn asunder. . . . We may learn from Dante that if we are to be fully happy in a human way we must cultivate intelligence, conscience and taste, in the light of both reason and Revelation."

This lecture is open to all who are interested.

Dr. Dallas Speaks On World Problems

John T. Dallas, D.D., Bishop of New Hampshire, was this week's guest speaker at Sunday vespers held at the Ira Allen Chapel. Bishop Dallas' talk was an allegorical story, "Old Man World," concerning Christian principles and world problems.

Bishop Dallas, after graduation from Yale University and Union Theological Seminary, started his work as curate of St. John's Church of Waterbury, Conn., in 1908. Later he became associate headmaster of Taft School, Watertown, Conn.; rector of St. Thomas' Church, Hanover, N. H.; and vicar of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston. In 1926 he was appointed Bishop of New Hampshire.

The University Choir provided several musical interludes during the program, including "Come Oh Blessed Lord" by Tchaikowsky, the anthem, and two responses.

English Music Concert Friday To Aid Britain

Mrs. Bennett to Play; Mr. Millikan and T. K. Malone to Sing

The local chapter of the "Bundles for Britain" is sponsoring a fine concert of English music on Friday, November 22, at Southwick at 7.30 p.m. The proceeds from the concert will buy yarn for the 300 Burlington knitters who are sending large quantities of woolen goods directly to the British soldiers each month through their New York office.

Mrs. Elsa Kremers Bennett, concert pianist, Mr. George Millikan, baritone, and Thomas K. Malone, Jr., '41, are the artists on the program. G. Robert McKee '41 will accompany the singers.

The following selections will be included in the concert:

The price of admission is only twenty-five cents and tickets can now be obtained from students who are selling them or at the door on Friday evening.

Classes To Elect Officers Soon

The meeting of the junior class to nominate for the office of class treasurer, originally scheduled for Wednesday, November 13, was postponed until Monday, November 25, because there were not enough present to hold a class meeting. The meeting will be held in Room 27, Williams Science Hall at 4 p.m.

The freshman class will hold its nominating meeting Wednesday, December 4 also in Room 27, Science Hall, at 4 p.m. Candidates for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer will be nominated. Elections for these offices will occur Wednesday, December 11, in the office of Dean Elijah Swift of the College of Arts and Sciences, from 9-12 a.m. and from 2-4.30 p.m.

Additional nominations may be made by petition signed by at least fifteen qualified voters of the class concerned and presented to the Committee on Student Elections at least three days in advance of the election. Prof. Daniel B. Carroll, head of the University political science department, is chairman of the committee.

S. Burton Heath Publishes Book

Another U. V. M. Grad Successful Writer

All too few of us fully appreciate the large number of our alumni who have gained national recognition. For some unaccountable reason a great proportion of this number have gained their fame in the field of journalism. It is said that of a graduating class of twenty, about one hundred years ago, four were prominent in the newspaper field, two of whom were founders of New York papers.

To this ever-increasing number has recently been added the name of S. Burton Heath. We are particularly aware of him through the recent publication of his autobiography, "Yankee Reporter," published by Funk, Inc. It is the interesting story of a vivid career of journalism.

Prof. Leon Dean of our English department, who is well informed about journalism, was a student at the University at the same time as Burton Heath. Although Burt Heath was a couple of classes ahead of Professor Dean, through their mutual interest in writing they knew each other rather well.

Editor of Cynic

Heath was a country boy, coming from a poor family. Before entering college he did a little professional newspaper work on small town papers. He also served overseas in the World War. Soon after his return he entered the University with the class of '23. While he was in college he did part-time publicity work for the University. His natural interest in journalism was shown in his excellent work for the CYNIC, of which he was the editor during his senior year.

He was interested in debating and was a member of the University team. In this field he was more recognized for his sound thinking than for his "platform technique," which though good, was not particularly aggressive or brilliant. In his book he claims that his habits of logical thinking, developed through college debating, have helped him in confronting New York "big shot" politicians. He was also one of those seeming paradoxes in college, actively engaged in extra-curricular activities, having a good scholastic record and working his way through college. At graduation he was the next highest ranking student below the Phi Beta Kappas.

He married a University co-ed and he claims that it was through her influence

Kappa Phi Kappa To Meet Tomorrow

An open meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa, honorary education fraternity, will be held on Wednesday night, November 20, at 7.30 p.m. in the Education Office. All Vermont men interested in education are extended a cordial invitation to attend. Professor Householder will be guest speaker and refreshments will be served.

Sally Rome '42 Reigns At Ball As Co-ed Major

Catamounts Play as Crowd Dances in Military Manner

The week-end has come and gone and another Military Ball has passed into the pages of history. Flags and bunting have been returned to the mothballs, the co-ed major's sabre is proudly displayed over a certain young lady's fireplace and pasted in countless scrapbooks are gold and white dance programs, souvenirs of the evening of November 15 and the annual Military Ball.

The big event of the evening was the presentation of a sabre to charming blue-eyed Sally Rome '42 of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. Sally was chosen from among eleven other candidates by the vote of the entire student body. She was presented with a sabre by B. W. Hill '41, captain of Champlain Sabres, honorary military society, and will have the honor of presiding over the social life of the R. O. T. C. during the present college year.

Sally is a member of Delta Delta Delta and was chosen queen of last year's Kake Walk. When asked her reaction to the honor of being co-ed major she laughed demurely and admitted "Gee I was scared."

The other candidates for co-ed major, chosen by members of the freshman and sophomore military classes were as follows: Class of '41 Margaret Crowley, Mary Jane Hammond, Eleanor Shandoff. Class of '42 Frfances Lynch, Jeanne Woolley. Class of '43 Corinne Hollowell, Lola Hawley, Joan Eldridge. Class of '44 Julia Fletcher, Ita Casey, Dorothy Moore.

Patriotically decorated with flags, red, white and blue bunting, crepe paper streamers and two small streamers guarding the band the atmosphere of the gym was formally military. Only in the mad scramble for balloons was the dignity lent by uniforms, tuxes, and formal gowns forgotten for a moment.

Music for the large throng of enthusiastic dancers was furnished by the Catamounts augmented by additional players especially for the occasion. The vocals were done by Doris Doerfler '44 and Tempi Conner '44.

Chaperons were Colonel and Mrs. M. E. Spalding and Captain and Mrs. Simpson of the Military Department.

The Champlain Sabres in charge of the dance were E. Guilbert, chairman of floor and arrangements for music; R. Copp, chairman of programs and tickets; T. Huntley, chairman of publicity; J. Palmer, chairman of decorations; and L. Simpson, chairman of co-ed major contest.

Sororities Begin Rushing Parties

The women's rushing parties started off with a bang last week with a party at the Alpha Chi House, November 12, with Peggy Wishart '43 in charge, assisted by Judith Perry '42 and Madge Duba '41.

The Sigma Gammas gave their rushing party at Mrs. L. B. Rowell's house on Cliff Street, Wednesday, November 13. Barbara McIntosh '41 and Betty Isham '41 were in charge of the arrangements.

Next week the Theta party will be Tuesday, November 19; the Tri-Delt on Wednesday, November 20; the Pi Phi on Thursday, November 21; the Delta Phi Epsilon on Sunday, November 24; and the Alpha Xi on Friday, November 22.

Each sorority gives only one party each, which is to last not more than two and one-half hours, usually taking place from 6 to 8 p.m. These parties may be in any mood chosen by the sorority.

"Bundles for Britain" at Vermont—

With the sponsoring of a benefit concert of English music on Friday at Southwick, "Bundles for Britain, Inc." is starting its plea for support on our campus. Since the organization and its fine work are comparatively new, we feel that a brief résumé of its purpose and aims would be interesting to you.

"Bundles for Britain" was started in the United States by a group of people who felt strongly that since Britain is really fighting for the American way of life, we all should give some type of tangible aid to Britain. The movement rapidly gained popularity and spread until at present there are branches in most every city in the United States. The society has become incorporated and maintains New York central offices.

The society buys yarn at wholesale rate and distributes it to the volunteer knitters throughout the country through its many branches. All the work for the society is volunteer. In addition to its work in supplying wool for knitters, the corporation uses some of the money that is given them to buy badly-needed ambulances and "rolling" kitchens which play an important part in the feeding of the destitute civilians after a raid has destroyed their homes.

During the week ending October 18, 122 cases of clothing were delivered to the English soldiers and civilians. Ten of the cases contained new hand-knitted garments for the soldiers and 112 cases contained assorted second-hand garments which were distributed among the civilians. In one case of the knitted goods there were 4,315 individual pieces.

There are six knitted articles in each soldier's outfit—a sweater, two pairs of socks, one pair of mittens, a big scarf and a knitted helmet. Up to the present time, well over $2,000,000 worth of clothing, ambulances, and "rolling" kitchens have been sent to the British through the "Bundles for Britain" organization. All the goods are shipped on British ships from New York according to international law. The local committee expect that with the coming of winter there will be a great need for a large supply of blankets and influenza serum.

The Burlington chapter at the present time has about 300 knitters, many of whom are financially unable to buy their own yarn. The chapter in order to supply their knitters has to buy about 250 pounds of wool each month to meet the demand. The wool is purchased through the New York office at the rate of $1.50 a pound.

The New York Times said recently, "The American people want to be helpful. There is no real difference of opinion in this country on war questions; in the recent campaign both candidates saw Britain as the outpost of our own security, and both supported all aid short of war. The British danger is serious enough to demand our utmost effort."

"I honestly don't see how anybody who has any feeling for suffering humanity and realizes that the British are really fighting our battle can refuse to cooperate in the truly fine work of the 'Bundles for Britain' club," said Mr. Julian Clark whose wife is active in the local branch.

Three fine musicians are giving their talents on Friday in a concert at Southwick. Vermont students will be given an opportunity to help the British people in a tangible way by attending the concert. We feel that every Vermont student should support this fine charitable organization in its work by procuring a ticket for the concert.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

To you poor unfortunates, who read an editorial in the November 15 issue of the CYNIC entitled "Who Elected the Co-ed Major," a few words must be said to insure you that the big bad wolf did not knock down your door. I am not the wolf that shattered any democratic ideals for which Vermont stands, on which the faculty and students of our college have prided themselves for years, as our editor puts it.

According to my interpretation, facts about the election as stated in the editorial were revealed before the election was even half over. Basing her assumptions on the fact that the contest was supposed to be over on Thursday, our editor proceeded to make accusations as to the democratic principles employed by the committee in charge of the recent election. While you, the student body, were casting your ballots in the Old Mill on Friday, an article was already rolling in the press that you were denied that privilege. It seems to me that our dear editor missed the so-called boat and got scooped.

It doesn't seem quite logical to me that anyone with a minimum of common sense, which I claim to have, would leave oneself open to such criticisms, but I see that the editor didn't give this fact too much consideration. A notice of the election was published in the CYNIC previous to the date set for election, but still on the scheduled day not many students participated—however the afternoon session was omitted because of the funeral of one of our late classmates. Thus, in view of this fact the election was held again on Friday morning to give those persons who were not able to participate on Thursday a chance to vote. Notice the irony of condemning a committee before the election was even over. Quite silly, isn't it?

I suggest that we start at the beginning and pick this editorial to pieces. As to Webster's definition of democracy, I offer no disputes whatsoever. May I ask why this election should be an index as to the corruption of all Democratic ideals on the Campus? Let us narrow our sights down to this election and you, the student body, judge whether or not the committee handled it fairly.

I will refer to the editorial by quoting numerous lines that were printed. "Ballots were distributed in the Old Mill corridor on the first floor—the most crowded and least accessible section of the Old Mill." As far back as I can remember, and I think I have been here as long as our editor, with the exception of class officers elections of all forms including W. A. A. officers, Kake Walk Kings and Queens, sale of tickets for special dances, Ariel appointments and the like have been held there. How many of you students went directly to the spot across from the "Y" room when you wanted to vote? The reason—that has been the election place for years and to vote elsewhere would be equivalent to asking the voters of Burlington to go out on the breakwater and vote for the mayor, it isn't crowded down there. You students aren't compelled to vote, you have the privilege if you care to exercise it, and thus to insure a maximum number of voters, elections are naturally carried on in the center of activities, which, during school hours, happens to be the Old Mill Coffee Corner.

"Slips of paper (formal ballots were not available for everyone) were handed to the students who were fortunate to get a piece." I apologize and sincerely hope that you, the student body, will forgive us for not engraving our ballots on tidy little gold-bordered cards, as our editor would have undoubtedly appreciated. We did have modest ballots though—even though we used a mimeographing process, and we considered them to be our formal ballots. Occasionally you might have received a blank sheet of paper but if so, you were given a fair exchange—that is on receipt of any blank ballots the caretakers were authorized to issue good ones. As to the students that were fortunate to get a ballot as our editor worded it—I ask you students to understand that before a ballot can be given out it is necessary to know your name. Although we perhaps would know your name ordinarily, it was difficult to get it out while so many people were rushing to vote. Thus you see it was necessary to have you wait your turn, and sound off as we had only one directory to check names from. Thus if you were in a hurry, undoubtedly you might have become irked when we refused to give you a ballot.

"Upon the paper the students were asked to write their own names and that of their choice for co-ed major." To relieve your mind, there was just one person who wrote his name on the ballot, and he did so because he claimed he voted for the best girl and he wasn't ashamed to have the committee know who it was.

"No accurate checking system was used and we have been informed on good authority, that one student cast four ballots!" Statistics show that approximately 435 persons had their names checked. Out of this number there were 409 legal ballots, the remainder had more than one vote on the ticket thereby disqualifying them. As to any student casting more than one ballot, if he did so he did it by usurping a neighbor's name.

"Students could vote only during the second and third periods." I say, if they were in this position it was because they didn't get up early enough and because they went home too early. The polls were open from 8.30-12.20 on Thursday and from 8.30 till 12.00 Friday.

"Many students whose classes meet in other buildings on the campus undoubtedly found it difficult to vote." Any person in another building surely had to walk a distance to vote, but, dear editor, if a person had any desire to vote do you suppose that he would be so lazy that he wouldn't be willing to walk from one building to the other? If we were situated as B. U. is and had to take a bus to go from one class to another I could see your point, and furthermore if the students are this lazy as you hint—tell me why there aren't a number of girls taking box lunches to classes so they won't have to walk back to the dorms during the noon hour.

"Several students told us that the persons in charge of the ballot distribution were heard telling undecided voters whom to name on their ballots." To further democracy, which is apparently the issue, yours truly endeavored to have each girl turn in a photograph so that she could be identified. All girls were called by telephone and those that didn't have their photographs in the display case were slightly uncooperative. Thus if a person was undecided or didn't know the girls, he was shown the display of pictures and if this influenced his voting, I should say—more power to the girl with the appealing photo.

You readers are of college intelligence or else you wouldn't be here and I agree it is not wise to preach and be vindictive, dear editor, but—when you say you made a statement of facts you—dear editor—made a very rash overstatement. You made a statement of ideas which you have nestled in your bonnet; I am making a criticism of your ideas backed by facts. Therefore it is my statement with facts along, against your wad of ideas. Take your choice and judge the democratic ideas behind them.

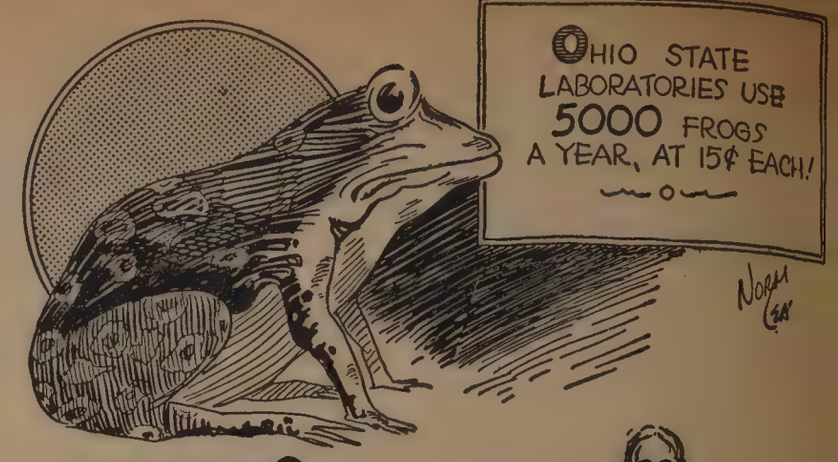
I omitted any talk about the selection of the first twelve names as these were nominated by the Battalion and thus their own selection. It is their co-ed major that they were nominating and it was their privilege to put up whom they wanted.

To you, the student body: This year you were allowed to participate in t selection of the co-ed major for the fi time in several years and I know y appreciated this honor as you turned o very well. We received one of the large number of ballots ever cast at such election.

It is understood that there is nothi that any of us do that is without criticis —good or bad—but for this election to ceive so much undue and injurious cri cism before the results or even the fini of the election seems quite unfair on t part of our editor.

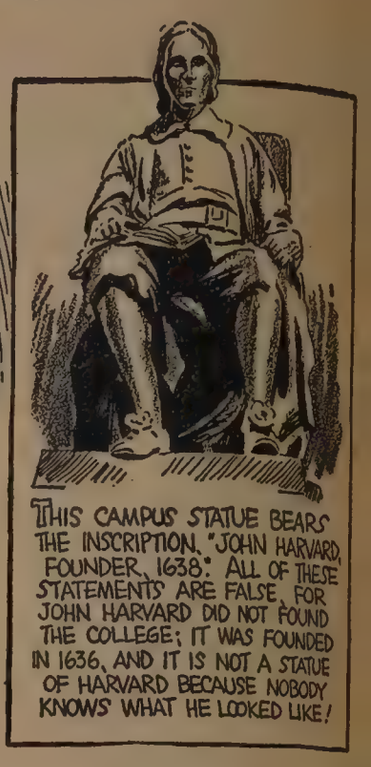
I congratulate you—the student body on your choice and assure you that Battalion was well pleased with yo selection of co-ed major to rule at o functions for the remainder of the year.

Sincerely,
L. A. SIMPSON '41



To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Say, what's the story on this conscri tion for P. O. T. C.? And especia what's P. O. T. C. stand for? I've hea all sorts of guesses ranging from Pott Officers' Training Corps to Post Off Teaching Corporation. Who does teaching, Mortar Board or Boulder?



What do we wear to this meeting. is it one of those come-as-you-were-wi you-were-drafted parties? After all, there are going to be girls there, we b will have to dress up to them the way don't on campus.

I don't want to appear self-center but how are my chances of being draft I am in fine physical condition, unmarri willing. Under the Selective Service patriots could volunteer in order to av the possibility of not being conscript Is this also true of the P. O. T. C. c scription? At any rate, I'm keeping night of Tuesday, November 26, o just in case my number is called. B are my fingers crossed! See you Southwick next Tuesday—I hope.

Gloria Oling Is Vermont Delegate

Pan-Hellenic Meets at Penn. State College

After spending a most enjoyable and profitable week-end at Pennsylvania State College, Miss Gloria Oling returned to report on the Pan Hellenic Convention. Miss Oling, a member of Delta Phi Epsilon sorority, was the representative from the University of Vermont.

Numerous colleges and universities sent representatives to the convention, among them being Boston University, Colby College, Cornell, McGill, Middlebury College, University of New Hampshire, St. Lawrence, Syracuse, University of Toronto, Adelphi College, Brooklyn College, Buckwell, Goucher, Hunter, New York University, University of Pennsylvania, Randolph-Macon, Temple, William and Mary and members of the city Pan-Hellenic societies.

There was a full program planned for the week-end. Friday was devoted to the subject "Fraternities in the World Today." After registration, the opening meeting was held at which they discussed the college member's viewpoint, the Dean of Women's viewpoint and fraternity ethics. On Saturday morning, round table discussions centered on fraternity cooperation with the institution, non-members and other fraternities; membership limitation; scholarship and how fraternities can promote it; city Pan-Hellenics and Pan-Hellenic programs. At a luncheon at Nithany Lion Inn, the guest speaker talked on fraternity's contribution in the future. This was followed by an afternoon of round table discussions, dealing with worth of fraternity membership, return to fundamental concepts and rushing.

A dinner at Nithany Lion Inn was followed by the Spinsters Skip, a dance sponsored by the Mortar Board Society. Miss Oling says that she was lucky in having drawn a grand "date" and had a wonderful time. They wound up the evening by a tour of the college and a social hour for delegates and officers. Sunday wound up the week-end with a report of the Findings Committee and recommendations.

"The trip down and back was very long," Miss Oling declared, "but the week-end was worth every bit of the tiresome journey. Everyone was so friendly, especially the sorority with whom I stayed. We really accomplished a lot, and I'm very glad to have had the privilege of being a representative to such an impressive and informative convention."

Denver University Gives New Draftees' Course

Denver, Colo.—ACP)—Students likely to be affected by conscription can obtain the A.B. degree in three years, under a reorganization of courses at the University of Denver.

Previously, summer school courses were planned primarily for persons not enrolled for normal three-quarter terms. In view of possible complications through conscription, the university is putting into effect a straight four-quarter plan to hasten graduation.

Free Press Index Work Progressing

Research Being Done in Chapel Basement.

A third volume in the Burlington Free Press newspaper index has catalogued the issues of three more years, 1856-58, bringing the index nearly up to the time of the Civil War. Volume III appeared this fall, and with the production schedule accelerating, Volume IV is reported already far along on the way to publication. The first index volume came out in February, 1940, the second in August.

All the profusion of printed matter appearing in the newspaper, from the editorials and special articles to fashions for the ladies and recipes for the kitchen, and from personal items to advertisements, are indexed much after the fashion of a library catalog. Three general divisions are made: Part I includes news items, editorials, and similar material; Part II, advertising, with an alphabetical index to advertisers, and another for advertisements; Part III comprises vital statistics, including marriage and death notices.

The Newspaper Indexing Project, working under the Historical Records Project of the Works Projects Administration, with sponsorship from the State of Vermont, the University of Vermont, and various institutions, organizations and individual sponsors, is carrying on the task of indexing the back files of the Burlington Free Press, taken from the Billings Library of the University of Vermont. The University furnishes working space for the newspaper indexing project.

Hon. Joseph T. Stearns of Burlington directs the project, which comes under the supervision of Henry Howard Eddy, State Supervisor of the Historical Records Survey, and of Sargent B. Child, National Director of the Survey. A University advisory committee for the newspaper indexing work is headed by Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University. The indexing is an undertaking which historians, lawyers, and research workers have long felt was needed. It vastly facilitates access to the voluminous files of the Free Press, which start at the year 1848, and contain within their pages much local, state, and national history. The completed volumes of the index are sent to libraries of Vermont, libraries of state universities, and the Library of Congress receives all copies. The index is mimeographed and paper bound. Mr. David W. Howe, publisher of the contemporary Free Press, has furnished stock and printing for covers of the volumes.

Faculty Members Attend Convention

Prof. Burns Speaks to Land Grant Colleges

Representing the University of Vermont, eight faculty members, Dean J. L. Hills of the college of agriculture, Dean George F. Eckhard of the engineering college, Prof. Edd R. McKee, head of the department of electrical engineering, Dr. George P. Burns, assistant dean of the agricultural college, J. E. Carrigan, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, Dr. Florence B. King, head of the home economics department, Miss Marjorie E. Luce, home demonstration leader, and Miss Marianne Muse, research home economist, recently attended the fifty-fourth annual convention of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities at Chicago. The convention meetings were held at the Drake Hotel.

Doctor Burns was on the program for the convention, being scheduled to discuss graduate work at a meeting of the section on graduate work, Monday. Director Carrigan is secretary of the sub-committee on extension work and a member of the sub-committee on land-use planning. Miss Luce is a member of the association's committee on the education of rural youth and adults in relation to national defense. As a member of the executive board of Epsilon Sigma Phi, national fraternity of extension workers, she will attend a meeting of the board to be held in connection with the convention.

This Collegiate World

Dictionary Dope: The newest volume of the Dictionary of American English being published by the University of Chicago is handing down to posterity many words and phrases dear to the hearts of slang-minded collegians.

For instance, "flunk" is defined as "complete failure in a course, examination, or an et cetera." "Gas" is unpretentious talk, especially of a political kind.

"Flumadiddle" is also included in the latest volume, which includes words from "flinty" to "gold region." It even includes "gin palace," which is a "grog shop of a pretentious or gaudy appearance."

Wonder if they've added the latest fad of the collegians, "goldfish eating?"

Smelly story: One recent evening, Prof. Clarence Gaines of St. Lawrence University made his usual right turn at number 20 Pine Street and climbed the steps to his home. As he opened the door he paused to admit what he supposed was the family cat.

Shortly afterwards his wife called to him to let the cat in. Although recalling that the animal had already come in, he dutifully opened the door, peered out, and saw the cat waiting at his feet. Thinking he must have been absent-minded, he admitted the cat and dismissed the incident.

But the incident would not be dismissed and presently a very unpleasant odor permeated even the remotest corners of the Gaines home. The first arrival was a skunk, and to add dismay to surprise, although they searched diligently, the animal could not be found!

Thus is explained Professor Gaines' departure from his customary attire and even the hornrimmed glasses the next morning.

Kent, Ohio—(ACP)—Education with your lunch is the new vogue in the college of business administration at Kent State University.

In a program of twelve noon classes at an off-campus restaurant at which students in industrial marketing sit around the table with guest sales managers of Ohio industries, students get a first-hand picture of the business world they plan to enter.

Book Store News

The University Book Store in the Old Mill renders special services, which are free of charge, to students. One of the many services is the Cash Deposit Account which a student can make at any time free of charge.

After a deposit has been made, the student can make withdrawals in the form of either mechandise of cash. If a cash withdrawal exceeds ten dollars, the store should be notified of it a day in advance; otherwise, cash may be withdrawn from an account every week day from 8.30 in the morning until 5.00 at night and on Saturday until 1.00. When a purchase is made, a charge slip is made out by the store and signed by the student, which, although held in the store files, is as much a receipt of the student as of the store. At the end of each month, statements are mailed to the depositors showing all purchases made, cash withdrawn, and the present balance. If it is desired, the parents may make the deposits and have the receipts and statements sent directly to them.

This service of cash deposits is one which the Book Store is glad to render as it is felt by the Deans that it gives the students real protection for the handling of extra cash without the expense of a checking account.

Faculty Active In National Defense

Dean Eckhard and Mr. Cannon Give Advice

Production for national defense and the training of the new manpower now about to enter the United States Army is demanding an increasing number of technically trained and skilled men. Several members of the University of Vermont faculty and administrative personnel are being called on for assistance in various capacities in the defense program.

Herbert J. Cannon, who has been employed in the Experiment Station of the Agricultural College, is now serving for a year's duty at Fort Knox, Louisville, Ky., in the radio department of the Armored Force School Detachment. After attending radio training school for three months, Cannon will spend the remaining time teaching conscripts. No conscripts have as yet arrived at Fort Knox to join the 15,000 regular army men stationed there, but the first recruits are expected soon. Cannon is commissioned as a first lieutenant. He graduated from the University of Vermont Agricultural College in 1937, taking a commission as a member of the Army Reserves at that time.

Dean George F. Eckhard of the University Engineering College recently attended a meeting on defense, held at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, Mass. Thirteen New England colleges, in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, sent representatives to this meeting. Its purpose was to study means of coordinating the facilities of engineering colleges for the training of engineers in special fields, relating to the production of war materials. Engineering colleges are to cooperate with the United States Department of Education in the effort to speed up production in industries manufacturing war necessities.

Government questionnaires have been received by a number of faculty members, in the Colleges of Engineering, Medicine, and Arts and Sciences at the University, evidently with the purpose of learning and placing on record their technical skills and training, that information as to the qualifications of such men may be available to the defense commission in the event they are needed.

Catamounts Sink Panthers In Mire 32-0; Eleven Seniors Conclude Grid Campaign

The Middlebury Massacre—they'll call it, and that's no conservative conclusion. The Vermont Catamounts mopped up the Middlebury Panthers 32-0, Saturday, at Middlebury, in the final game of the season for both teams. The Cats declared two weeks previous as definitely non-mudders, clearly revelled in the mire resulting from a wet blizzard and slid over the line five times and made two conversions in their Middlebury shutout. It was clearly a most satisfying finish of the season for the team, for a new head coach, and for the gridiron exit of several seniors—not to mention the crowd of Burlingtonians who rashly risked death from the ravages of a most intemperate weather.

Cats Score Twice for Six Points

First blood was drawn about half way through the first quarter. It was a 40-yard slash down the field and a pass by Taylor that did the trick. Spasyk, on the mid-line, slipped the ball to Taylor who took it to the 36. On a well executed fake-pass play, Spasyk then romped through the line to the 19-yard line. Spasyk, after a shift to right, ran to the weak side of the line to the 12 from where Taylor advanced it 2 yards to make it ½ yard short of a first down. Then Taylor, on a single wing formation to the right, reversed and romped around left end for a touchdown that was not counted. An offside was called on Vermont and they were shunted back to the 15-yard line. From here, fourth down and a little over five yards to go, Taylor faded back, protected by superb line and backfield blocking, and passed the ball to Spasyk, who went over the line standing for the beginning of the festivities.

"They shall not pass!!"

EARL REED

The Cats then slowed down, the Panthers continued their muddling, and the remainder of the first half was reduced to a kicking duel between Johnson and Spasyk. It was a fairly even match. Considering that the field by this time was but semi-solid and that the ball was thickly coated with mud, both men did an excellent job. Spasyk, however, through exceptional work as safety man and supported by grade A interference, gave the edge to Vermont.

Six plus Twenty-six

The second half showed a rejuvenated Vermont eleven that proceeded to blast all hopes of the Muddleburians. The start came when Broutsas paved the way by advancing the ball 34 yards in six rushes and a beautiful pass to Corbett, involving a spectacular finger-tip catch. The ball then less than 5 yards from the goal was taken over on a reverse spinner from Gilbert to Broutsas. Broutsas held for Spasyk's successful conversion. Ten minutes later after another kicking duel and some classy drives by Utley, Taylor swept around right end from the 15-yard line and over to make the score 19-0. The Cats, after their kickoff held the Panthers within sliding distance of their own goal. Johnson while trying to punt from his goal line was rushed and got off a high kick to his own 37-yard stripe. Utley, then playing safety, took the ball and was off like a shot, knees high and dodging marvelously, considering the slippery mud, and was down to the 18 before he was stopped. In six plunges the ball was worked to the 1-yard line from where Broutsas slithered over for the count of 25. Broutsas held and Taylor converted.

By this time the Vermont bench presumably felt that their chances were fairly good and decided to give some of the younger fellows some fun. After the kickoff by Taylor, which went to the 1-yard line, Johnson fumbled the slippery pigskin and Pye, alert all season on such occasions, dived down and grasped it on the 3-yard line as it was going under the mud. From here Mott, converted ex-freshman track team, went through the line for the 32nd point. Mott threw a successful pass to Utley in the end zone for the extra point, but it was not counted as he was not five yards in back of the scrimmage line. Middlebury kicked, Broutsas ran the ball to the mid-stripe from the 25—Utley plunged for four—whistle—"Vermont, Rah, Rah, Middlebury!"

NORM STRASSBURG

Sports Cast

By the SPORT EDITOR

You can now call another grid season definitely finished. And with the results of the Middlebury game in it doesn't seem so gloomy. Too bad the Cats couldn't use some of those 33 points against Norwich.

Only sad feature of the Middlebury game was the knowledge that a great many trusted veterans were seeing service for the last time. The squad will lose by graduation next spring just about a full team including such notable performers as Frankie Taylor, Boots Lawrence, Swede Carlson, Bill Pye, Jim Corbett, Norm Strassburg, Georgie Broutsas, et al. That's plenty to lose at any one time.

Averaging up this season as a whole it seems to us that the Cats didn't cash in to the limit on their strength and ability. Such performances as Saturday's clearly indicate that Vermont had an eleven capable of playing great ball but couldn't do so in all games. The chief weakness of the Catamounts—one that hampered their ball carriers all year—was the lack of good blocking.

But it's easy enough to analyze when a season is over and usually it gets everybody just about nowhere. There's still that all-state team to be picked and some sports writers are in favor of picking the Norwich team en masse. Well, that seems to be a little drastic, although you'll all agree, we think, that Domina will be on it. From Vermont Spasyk, Strassburg, Lawrence, Rice, Taylor and Carlson are possible selections. From Middlebury Jack Johnson seems to be a sure bet.

Going Up

Jumping right into the middle of winter now—did you notice the New York Times' Sunday article on the Mt. Mansfield ski lift? Labeled as one of the most modern lifts in the country this new improvement should make Vermont even more ski-minded than ever. This seems to be a good time to make skiing an official sport at this University. With Mansfield's facilities for meets available it should not be too difficult to stage contests with other schools, and certainly there are plenty of good skiers available for a full team. Right now under the coaching of Ev Bailey a group of them are practicing their snow capers.

Placed right in the middle of an excellent skiing region, the University has every opportunity to make good on winter sports. After all it isn't as though we were in the tropics. With skiing due for a big rise in the state U. V. M. should board the elevator going up.

Fraternities Begin Bowling Season

Interfraternity bowling was officially opened Friday afternoon at 1.00 p.m. at the Community Y. The first match was between Sigma Phi and Sigma Nu, the latter taking the match by 5 points for the high team score, while Sigma Phi captured the high singles and doubles, which count 1 point apiece.

Lambda Iota bowed to Alpha Tau Omega by the score of 7-0. A T O took both the high team and the singles and doubles score.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon defeated Phi Delta Theta by the maximum score of 7-0.

superior to the strong line which he had used in previous games. Unfortunately, the backfield was greatly below par defensively as well as offensively, both the Panther Cub touchdowns being the direct result of the failure of the Vermont secondary to cover the opponent's receivers.

Although the poor record of the '44's would seem to indicate a scarcity of good players, Head Coach Fuzzy Evans will be the happy recipient, next year, of several valuable members of the freshman squad who are now well acquainted with his system, thanks to the efforts of Sherry Fogg. Among those who will be waging battles for positions on the varsity are Pulde, Pacini, Barry, Kunken, Lewkowicz, Mayforth, Eddy, Sedlis, Walgren, Baxendale, Kepnes, and Smith. Any one of these boys may oust first-stringers from their posts.

There will be a meeting of the entire Sports Staff of the CYNIC, Tuesday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, in 1 North College. Attendance will be taken. All scrubs and reporters failing to attend will be dropped from the staff.

Yearling Runners Bury Middlebury

Frosh Suffer But One Defeat in Good Season

Winding up a successful season of three wins against a single loss, the University of Vermont freshman harriers defeated the Middlebury freshmen 17-44 on the Panther course last Saturday. The Kittens finished five runners in the first six, with Goodell leading the pack in, with Grant placing second, Lockwood third, Tremblay fifth, McLaren sixth and Webster and Helberg eighth and ninth respectively. The time for the run was 18.58.

In looking back over the season we find that the Kittens suffered their only defeat in their initial run made against the Dartmouth freshmen, who by virtue of placing men first and second eked out a close decision, as the remainder of the positions were evenly distributed with "Goodie" Goodell placing third and Lockwood and Grant finishing sixth and seventh respectively.

Undaunted by this setback, the Post men bounced back to dispose of the Vermont State School of Agriculture by the score of 20-35. Goodell, Jack Grant and Bob Lockwood crossed the finish line together for a three-way tie for first place, while McLaren came in fifth and Helberg ninth to give the Kittens a wider margin.

The third run of the season was a quadrangular affair in which the freshmen carried off top honors, defeating Waterbury 19-30, Williamstown 20-35, and Burlington 17-42. Again Lockwood and Goodell outclassed the field and tied for first, while Grant ran second and McLaren fifth.

Next year's varsity should benefit much by the addition of such promising material as Goodell, Lockwood, Grant, McLaren, Helberg, Webster and Tremblay, along with Cronk, Soule and Beebe, who also ran some good races.

First Mixed Volleyball to be Played at Vermont

For the first time at U. V. M., there will be a mixed volleyball game between the men and women at the Southwick Gym, Thursday, at 4.30 p.m.

Archie Post will pick eight fellows to bring, and two teams will be formed with four girls and four fellows on each. Today Miss Crowe and a committee will choose a team of girls, but all girls attending the club hockey classes will probably have a chance to play.

This game is quite a novelty, since games of this type have never been played, except in tennis and badminton. Girls' rules are to be played, and it will probably be very interesting and lots of fun.

Frosh Footballers Fail To Register

On Armistice Day the Vermont freshman football team concluded the worst season in its history by losing to its traditional rival, Middlebury, by the score of 13 to 0. Thus has ended a campaign which has seen the Kittens lose all of their games and, what's more, fail to score any points in those encounters. It was unfortunate that hard-working Sherry Fogg, in his first year as coach, should be hampered by a team which had a decided lack of reserves and, with few exceptions, even less enthusiasm.

Despite the almost insurmountable obstacles which he faced, Coach Fogg succeeded in molding a line which was equal to, if not better than the Junior College, Green Mountain, Norwich, or Middlebury frontiers. However, Sherry never did have a strong secondary for any of his games, because of the few candidates who had any backfield experience, not many remained with the squad.

In the first game with Vermont Junior College it was evident that the backfield was the team's glaring weakness. Time and time again the Green and Gold line would open gaping holes in the Montpelierites' defense, but the interference was not carrying out its assignments, which fact resulted in the ball carrier's being downed on or near the line of scrimmage.

In the Green Mountain game the Frosh were handicapped by the temporary loss of first-stringers Pulde, Kunken, and Sedlis. Two weeks ago the boys engaged an inferior Norwich team, but the breaks were not with the U. V. M.'s. The Kittens' attack was disastrously impeded more by unfavorable winds than by any resistance that the young Cadets offered.

Against Middlebury, last Monday, Coach Sherry Fogg presented a line which was

U.V.M. Harriers Win Fifth Victory

Team Tops Middlebury in Decisive 16-43 Win

The Vermont cross-country team climaxed a highly successful season this past Saturday by annexing its fifth straight dual win. With the weather far from ideal and the ground very slippery, the Catamount harriers took Middlebury College to camp 16-47. Middlebury succeeded in gaining only one place from the first ten.

Traversing the four and one-half mile course in 25:57, four Vermonters with hands clasped broke the tape simultaneously. They were Bud Hoyt, Ernest St. Mary, Merle Crown, and Dick Clark. Egbert, coming in fifth, was the lone Middlebury man to place. Not satisfied with only a tie for first, the nine remaining Catamount harriers joined hands to finish in sixth place as one. These men were Fred Webster, Charles Webster, Capt. Frank Livak, Norm Stoddard, Jack Burgess, Ed Corliss, Daan Zwick, Johnny Buttles, and Reg White.

The Webster brothers and company, thinking Egbert to be the Middlebury captain participating in his last meet, allowed their opponent to forge ahead of them. This was a good sporting gesture on the part of the Vermont team, but it turned out that Egbert wasn't the captain.

Freddy and Charlie Webster Sell Potatoes And Break Records

Fred and Charlie Webster, nineteen and twenty years old, respectively, are junior Aggies. They are native sons of Coventry which used to have 100 souls within its limits. Now that the Websters are at college it only has 98. Their farm has a telephone, but neither one could remember the phone number.

Believe it or not! Freddie and Charlie started to run, not at the age of four, nor at the age of eight, nor in grammar school; they didn't run much at high school. They started to run as freshmen in college. Now in their junior year, they rank high and fast with the best in New England.

Is it hereditary? No. "The old man claimed he could beat us when we were small, but he never did much running. Except once he ran around the schoolhouse and fell and broke his nose." Fred and Charles never saw their older brother run a step in his life.

Fred worked all summer at the University farm and Charles worked at the horticultural orchard.

What running did the two do going to and from school? "Well we used to run home from grammar school up a hill, and everywhere else we went we ran, but that wasn't much."

"Shall we tell him about how we got to high school?"

"Yes, I think we can."

"Well we drove an old nag to school for four years until she broke down the last half year, and then we had to walk."

Still there was no clear, definite reason for their success. When asked point blank, "Oh, I don't know. What do you think, Charlie?"

"I don't know."

A huddle.

"Well, it must be clean living. We don't smoke and should keep training rules."

Here Larry Gardner interrupted to negotiate the purchase of a bushel or so of potatoes. Along with Glen Streeter, Fred's trailer mate, who helped answer many questions of the interview much to their displeasure, Freddie and Charlie have an acre of "pretty scabby potatoes" which they grow and sell.

"You had better say they're good potatoes, very good, as long as we're getting free advertisement. Prices are reasonable. Just see Glen Streeter or one of us."

The money made from this helps put them through school. They are working their way through college. "Any contributions will be gratefully accepted."

"Naw. You shouldn't have said that."

Huddle of Webster and Webster.

"No. Don't put that in."

Here came more interruptions from the boys of the cross-country team.

"Now, now. Go 'way and let us have our interview. Scram, we're entertaining the press."

They didn't go but helped tell facts which annoyed Fred and Charlie. One stalwart left after throwing over his shoulder, "There's still a lot about them he doesn't know. He ought to go on a trip with them."

"Hey, ask them about their girl friends!"

"Yeah, which ones?"

"No, no. Don't listen to those guys."

It finally came out that Fred had only one girl friend "with reasonable doubt" and Charlie had one "with great doubt." No names, of course. Fred said his was pretty nice. "She isn't either!" retorted Charlie.

Interruption from Archie Post. "You two. Into the showers. Come on!"

"We're busy."

Archie invited your reporter to visit him in his office at the end of the interview to submit to official censorship. (The CYNIC proudly upholds the American tradition of a free press. Archie will read it now for the first time.)

What do Fred and Charlie think of Archie?

Freddie: "He thinks he knows it all, but he doesn't know anything."

Charlie: "He smokes too much. He can't run at all now."

Fred and his pal, Glen Streeter, live in a trailer near the poultry plant. All three own the car and trailer evidently, but Charlie wouldn't have anything to do with such a domestic arrangement. "Oh no. Not me. You live like a couple of gypsies." Fred was cautious though. "We're going to see how it is through the winter."

This brotherly love of Fred and Charlie is more or less a myth. "We argue all the time," Fred explained.

Yeah, we indulge in heated debates."

They tie races only when they are so far ahead of the field that there is no danger of anyone's passing them when one slows up for the other.

Fred plans to be a farmer somewhere in Vermont. He likes agricultural subjects best in school. Charlie's favorite is comparative anatomy. He never took it. He's going to have a farm out in California, as far away as he can get from Fred.

Fred likes to walk in the woods and doesn't read much—except, according to Charlie, "romance." He seems to miss 85 averages by just one point and "thoroughly detests studying." Charlie doesn't like to study either. "We'd rather go to a dance." His average is—ahem—one side of 80, approximately. Both think military is "terrible" and Dean Hills is a "swell fellow" and "a good egg."

Neither likes to make predictions on future meets. "We wait and see what happens." (We know they mean that they run and—see what happens!) "We never take a victory for granted till after we're done. We don't profess to be good or get conceited and don't brag, except to ourselves."

In high school, Fred was valedictorian of his class of about thirty and got a medal for being the most prominent man in his class and a Balfour medal for scholarship. He belonged to the Press Club and reported school news to the Orleans County Monitor. Charles was sports editor of the school paper. Both were cheerleaders for three years.

They aren't cheerleaders here at U. V. M. because (Fred) "we don't want to show anybody up" and (Charlie) "there isn't enough in it."

When asked what records they hold, they scratched their heads, went into a huddle and came out with records for four or five different courses and one marathon. They weren't quite sure and they couldn't recollect them all. There were varsity, freshman, and intramural records, all kinds.

Fred belongs to the Alpha Zeta honorary society, the Aggie Club, the Independents. He used to be treasurer and now is vice-president of F. F. A. Charles belongs to the F. F. A., the Aggie Club, and the Gold Key honorary society.

Museum Sponsors Varied Program

Diversity features the November program of activities planned for the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont. Native American artists are to exhibit their work in the art gallery of the Fleming Museum; a University lecturer, a famous Dante scholar, will speak in the museum auditorium; student doctors and state physicians will meet; children will find their regular Saturday morning programs. The radio audience will have available weekly programs coming over the Burlington radio station. Music, art, literature, medicine, history, children's interests, all share in the month's museum activities.

Henry E. Schnakenberg, artist, of New York City and Manchester, Vt., has selected the display of etchings which is on exhibition in the art gallery of the museum, opening last Wednesday and continuing through November 25. "National Art Week," with exhibition and sale of arts and crafts by native artists connected with the Works Projects Administration, will bring to the art gallery work by Vermont artists and craftsmen, from November 26 to December 17. Rounding out its schedule of American artists' showings, the noted woman painter, Georgia O'Keefe, of Southern Pines, N. C., will be shown on the second floor balcony of the museum from November 27 to December 19.

Rev. Gerald G. Walsh, S.J., eminent Dante scholar of Fordham University, will speak on "Dante as a Medieval Humanist" November 21. This is a regular University lecture.

The Osler Clinical Society, medical students' organizationfi recently heard an illustrated lecture by Dr. Donald McEachern in the art gallery last evening. Doctor McEachern is acting chief neurologist of the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Children's programs as planned at the beginning of November included an amateur show conducted by Reginald Nash of Burlington, November 9; an illustrated lecture on "Thanksgiving" by Mrs. Sherman R. Moulton of Burlington, November 16; a Thanksgiving play by the sixth grade of the Ira Allen School, November 23; and a demonstration of sleight of hand and tricks of magic by Calvin Tooles of Burlington, November 30.

Radio fans heard a program of accordion music by Prof. Milton H. Aldrich of the Engineering College, November 14; another musical program will be given by J. Kinsley Thomas of Burlington, organist, November 21; and "Grandmother's Thanksgiving," a dramatization, by Horace B. Eldred, November 28. All broadcasts are at 8.30 Thursday evenings.

Professor at Fifty-nine Condenses Calculus Text

State College, Pa.—(ACP)—Although nine years ago, at the age of 50, he had no knowledge of calculus, a Pennsylvania State College professor today is senior author of a new book that condenses the whole of calculus into 40 pages for students studying mathematical statistics.

"I have always believed that one can study best when face to face with the necessity for it," said Dr. Charles C. Peters, director of educational research at the college.

The new book, "Statistical Procedures and Their Mathematical Bases," written in collaboration with Walter R. Van Voorhis, a former member of the faculty, is designed to "take the magic out of statistics."

It is said that its section on calculus, containing the essentials of differential and integral calculus needed for statistical studies, can be learned in less than ten hours by beginners with only a high school background in mathematics.

Massachusetts State College holds an annual research day.

Women in Sports

There was a meeting of the State Teachers Training Institution in Physical Education on Saturday, at 10.30 a.m., at Southwick.

Volleyball Club

The volleyball challenge game between the sophomores and freshmen reached an exciting height last week, when each team won a game.

The Green and Gold Volleyball Tournament will be played soon.

Basketball Coaching

There are ten girls in the basketball coaching class, who are training for the rating test which will make them official basketball umpires in the United States. Those enrolled are: Barbara Brewster '42, Barbara Gallagher '42, Charlotte Hyde '42, Helen MacLean '43, Barbara Robinson '44, Catherine Shaw '43, Carolyn Brown '44, Barbara McIntosh '41, Dorothy Quimby '43, and Helen Squire. Graduate students are very welcome to come to this class.

Badminton Club

All girls are urged to come to Badminton Club on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The class for badminton coaching is on Monday at 4.15 p.m., and the girls attending, also assist in one other class each week. Those helping the Physical Education Department this year are: Kay Kyle '42, Lucie Pike '43, Fay Litman '43, Dorothy Squire '43, Thelma Packard '43, Mary Beth Davis '43, Mary Lessor '43, Natalie Spear '43, Mary Tuckerman '43, Ellen Stewart '44, Helen MacLean '43, Theresa Coderre '42, Beatrice Buttles '43, and Rae Sheehan '41.

Swimming Club

There are already eighteen girls enrolled in the swimming class which meets at the Y. M. C. A. pool on Friday afternoons at 3.00. Many of these girls are not taking swimming for their regular winter sports, but are earning credits for W. A. A. membership.

W. A. A. Council

There will be a meeting of the W. A. A. Council this Tuesday evening, at Southwick, at 7.15.

he remained in college, as many times he wanted to leave school and go into business.

After graduation he tried several occupations, finally settling down in journalism, his lifetime favorite. He worked up to a position of importance in the New York Telegram. His particular phase of newspaper work is investigative reporting, especially in the legal field.

He started Tom Dewey on his racket-busting career. His own greatest achievement for which he won the Pulitzer prize last year was his investigation of Judge Manton, state Supreme Court judge of New York, found guilty of bribery. This, of course, was one of the sensational political scandals of the year.

Through his work, which takes him mostly into political circles, he has become well acquainted with many of the nation's leaders, namely, LaGuardia, Roosevelt and Willkie. Today he is one of the best known figures in reporting.

In order to appreciate fully such a brilliant career one should read his autobiography. It is well written and is interesting material which should provide a source of inspiration to would-be journalists.

SOPHOMORES—Scrub basketball. Earn your class numerals and receive credit for physical education. See Bill Wright, manager, or Roger Hunting and Don Moran, assistant managers.

FRENCH CLUB—There will be a meeting of the French Club, at Southwick, at 7.30 p.m., on Tuesday, November 19. All members are urged to come.

JUNIORS are requested to go to the bookstore as soon as possible for their Ariel pictures which have just arrived.

What QUALITIES measure its value?

CARAT WEIGHT is often the only consideration by which the layman judges the worth of a diamond. But if you seek real value and quality, these three other characteristics must also be considered:

CUTTING. The style and accuracy of cutting control the brilliance of a finished diamond—greatly affect its worth as an ornament and heirloom.

PERFECTION. The degree of perfection, or freedom from flaws, influences the value of any stone. Many classifications separate the flawless diamond from the visibly imperfect.

COLOR. Traditionally, a diamond is colorless and called white, or more often blue-white. Tinges of yellow or brown decrease its desirability.

We shall gladly show you stones in which these qualities are present to varying degrees . . . knowledge which will aid you in the intelligent choice of the diamond you are seeking.

Council Accredits U.V.M. Courses

Engineering Curricula Meets High Standards

The accrediting of the curricula in civil, mechanical, and electrical engineering taught in the University of Vermont Engineering College has been announced by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development, from its New York City headquarters, in its eighth annual report, issued this fall. The Engineers' Council for Professional Development has within its membership national societies of civil, mining and metallurgical, mechanical, electrical, and chemical engineers, and also the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education and the National Council of State Boards of Engineering Examiners. In October of this year the Engineering Institute of Canada became affiliated with it.

The Engineers' Council for Professional Development has as its expressed objective the enhancement of the status of the engineering profession, toward which goal the improvement of the status of engineering education contributes. In aiming at these objectives, the Engineers' Council accredits schools which meet its standards, for the purpose of identifying those institutions which offer professional curricula in engineering worthy of recognition as such. Because of the affiliation of the major engineering associations of the country with this Council, it offers a single unified accrediting system, which replaces duplicating procedures of accrediting formerly carried on. One hundred and twenty-five engineering schools in the United States are on the accredited list of the Engineers' Council for Professional Development this year.

"Rog" Hunting '42 Plays a Jew's Harp

Meet Roger Hunting '42, editor-in-chief of the Ariel, who thinks that conscription is all right, "as long as it isn't under the U. V. M. Military Department and as long as that don't take me out of college."

Roger likes to study but he never gets around to it until the night before an hour exam. He used to read a lot in high school, but hasn't much time for it now, most of his reading being done for Political Science courses right now.

His high school life was spent in acting wherever and whenever he could and being "continually defeated in debating." The situation finally became unbearable; so Roger took up extemporaneous speaking "where nobody could talk back." He placed third in a New England Extemporaneous Speaking Contest. "You pick a subject out of a hat and talk on it for a couple of minutes," he explained.

Roger once took a course in music appreciation, but it didn't help. He still can't "make out" a symphony. The only instrument he plays is the Jew's-harp. Bob Crosby's outfit is his favorite, with Benny Goodman and Jack Teagarden coming in for honorable mention. Sweet is the preference of the Ariel's new chief.

Mr. Hunting was born in Montpelier, September 9, 1920. He has lived and attended high school in Springfield since then, except for his attendance at U. V. M.

Roger had to think a while before he remembered what he planned to be in the future. He finally decided on "some sort of work that is easy and lucrative. "I'll shop around till I find just what I want, perhaps newspaper work, which isn't too easy."

When asked what he thought of the women in general, he emphatically stated, "God bless them."

Roger's main interest in life is dramatics. He has been in all the college plays, fall and spring, since coming here, and belongs to the University Players. In high school he was just as active in dramatic clubs.

His favorite part is that of an old man, but "they always shoot him in as a juvenile." To Mrs. Taggart goes the credit for all Roger's abilities in acting. "She is one of the best instructors in acting, and all I know, I learned from her," is his tribute to her.

Roger wouldn't like to commit himself on the Willkie-Roosevelt contest, but "as long as the CYNIC is for Willkie, it will be a matter of policy for the Ariel to come out for Roosevelt."

Museum to Exhibit Modern U. S. Art

The Fleming Museum art gallery will be the scene of an exhibition and sale entitled "American Art for Every American Home," starting Monday, November 25.

The purpose of the National Council of Art Week in having these exhibitions and sales throughout the United States is to bring the work of American artists and craftsmen into the American home, the business office, the church, the club and into social groups. These sales and exhibitions are conducted solely to provide sales outlets for American art by bringing it to the attention of the American consumer.

The objects for the exhibition at Fleming Museum will be the works of Vermont artists and art craftsmen. They will be on sale to the public for several weeks beginning November 25.

Dean Swift States Recess Schedule

Dean Swift made the following statement yesterday regarding the Thanksgiving Recess:

"For the three academic colleges the Thanksgiving Recess will begin Wednesday, November 27, at 11.50 a.m. and close on Monday, December 2, at 7.30 a.m. Dates and hours should be carefully noted. Tuesday and Wednesday, November 26 and 27, classes will meet in accordance with the notice posted herewith. Students are warned to read the schedule carefully and make sure that no classes are missed through misunderstanding.

"Classes in the Medical College will meet at the usual hours on the above dates."

The attention of students is called to the following extract from Part II, Section 4b of the Regulations of the University of Vermont:

"A student who absents himself without permission (secured in advance from the Dean of his college), from any University exercise or exercises on the day immediately preceding or following a recess or holiday may be placed on probation. While on probation, the student shall be excluded from beneficiary aid for the current half year, from employment for a remuneration by the University, and debarred from membership in athletic teams, musical, dramatic, debating clubs, publication boards, and other analogous University organizations."

The above regulations will apply to all classes Wednesday, November 27, and Monday, December 2.

"Requests for permission to be absent from classes Wednesday, November 27, or Monday, December 2, must be in writing, must set forth reasons in full and must be filed with the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled (men) or with the Dean of Women (women) not later than Monday noon, November 25. Excuses will be granted only for imperative reasons."

Major Vivier to Speak

The Alliance Française will have its first lecture on Wednesday, December 4, at 8.00 p.m. in Southwick. (Please note change in place; lectures will be held in Southwick and no longer in the Fleming Museum as before.)

Speaker, Major Max Vivier. Subject, "Cinq femmes que j'ai connues." Free to public. Students most welcome.

In the spring two prizes of $15 and $10 will be offered to the students who will have written the best essay on the lectures of the year.

Student Directory Appears On Campus

One thousand four hundred and fifty- r students, from twenty states and five reign countries, are listed in this year's iversity Directory, which is being dis- uted this week to the faculty and stu- nts of this campus. This book gives eir names, college and home addresses nd telephone numbers. There is also rovided a calendar of events for the cur- nt college year, and the addresses and hone numbers of all the dormitories and aternities.

Enrollment in the Agricultural College on the upswing. There are twenty-five ore enrolled this year. But there is a crease in the number of graduate stu- nts. Some faculty members believe at this is due to increased opportunities employment.

The majority of the students are from ermont. But many other states are epresented. There are 163 New York- rs from Massachusetts there are 147, nd 83 from Connecticut. Other states ave sent the following number of stu- nts to U. V. M.: New Jersey, 42; New ampshire, 19; Maine, 8; Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, 6; Maryland and Ohio, and California, Colorado, Florida, Illi- , Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, North arolina and Virginia are represented by .

Canada has sent five students to the niversity. There are two students from ba and one each from England, the anal Zone and Panama.

French Children to Benefit by Tag Day

The needy French will receive the proceeds from the tag days to be sponsored next week by the University French Club. Students are asked to cooperate with this drive next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, from November 25 through the 27th. The sound of the loose change jangling in students' pockets will have the sound of bread and butter being laid on the bare tables of needy French families.

Prof. Millikan, Mrs. Elsa Bennett, Malone, in Concert

Concert 7.30 Tonight Proceeds to Go to "Bundles for Britain"

Three musically talented Vermonters will collaborate tonight in producing a concert at Southwick Memorial at 7.30. The soloists will be Prof. George Millikan, Thomas K. Malone '41 and Mrs. Elsa Krémers Bennett.

Thomas K. Malone '41, one of the three artists of tonight's "Bundles for Britain" concert, is well known as a soloist at many student social functions. A senior in the music education curriculum, he is in his fourth year of membership in both the Men's Glee Club and University Choir, singing in the operas of his freshman and sophomore years and in "Brahms Requiem" last year.

Mrs. Elsa Kremers Bennett, concert pianist and the wife of Prof. H. G. Bennett, is well known to all music lovers of Burlington. She received her B.A. degree in Latin at the University of Wisconsin and after a year of teaching Mrs. Bennett studied at Vassar, where she received her M.A. degree in music. She then married and going abroad she studied piano in Vienna and also history of notation under Johannes Wollfe, probably the best teacher in the world on notation.

Mr. George Millikan, baritone artist, is an instructor in the political science department. Being very much interested in music he is again a member of both the Men's Glee Club and the University Choir and has often charmed student audiences with his singing.

Besides being a fine concert from the standpoint of hearing these artists, it will be a chance for everyone to do his bit for Britain. Tonight, Friday the 22nd, all students should plan to be at Southwick by 7.30 for this concert of English music, a concert sponsored by the local chapter of the "Bundles for Britain." The proceeds from this concert will go for yarn for several hundred Burlingtonians who are knitting woolen goods for the British soldiers.

Mrs. Levi Smith, chairman of the concert committee, feels that the student body will gladly cooperate to make this concert a success. As the price is only twenty-five cents, there is no reason why this expectation should not be carried out.

Physical Education Leaders Hold Meeting

On November 16 an all-day meeting of those interested in physical education was held at Southwick in which a program of physical education and health education in the State was discussed. Those present were the heads of teacher preparation institutions and department of education at the University, the physical education teachers at the University and in teacher preparation institutions, the commissioner and deputy commissioner of education, and Mrs. Alice C. Aldrich, director of physical education in the State.

A series of meetings of members of the faculty who are giving courses in education is being held during the college year in the office of the department of education. The first meeting was held October 21 and the second November 18.

R. Kenney Draws First P. O. T. C. No.

P. O. T. C. Draft to Open Saturday

First Number To Be Drawn by R. Kenney '41

Norm Strassburg looks on as Bob Kenney draws the first number for P. O. T. C. conscription. A Mortar Board delegation composed of Dot Emerson, Liz Gurney and Mary Letta Root lends moral support in the very distant background.

The remaining numbers for P. O. T. C. will be drawn publicly on Saturday morning in the corridors of the Old Mill. The system to be used is as follows: The first number designated refers to the page on that luscious new directory you acquired the other day (the number may be somewhat hard to find for boys whose pages are already black with cryptic signs and annotations), the second number gives the name of the student reading from top to bottom. For example, numbers 47-6 and 21-29 would draft, respectively, D. W. "Shut the Door" Morgan and Dean Elijah Swift. To avoid all misunderstandings, those whose numbers were drawn will be contacted by members of Mortar Board and Boulder over the week-end; those lucky draftees will subsequently report to Southwick on the evening of Tuesday, November 26. Stand by for further details—that is all.

"Fausse Monnaie" Given at French Club

An amusing and diverting French play, "Fausse Monnaie," was read by some of the male members at the meeting of the French Club at Southwick on Tuesday, November 19. The members taking part were: Oliver Swift '43, William Pierce '43, Stanley Pike '42, Walter Maurer '43 and John Evans '41.

After the reading of the play a short business meeting was held and plans were discussed for raising money to aid French children in France. It was planned that the money be raised by having a tag day Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 25, 26 and 27. After the meeting refreshments were served.

WOMEN'S SKI TEAM—First call Monday, November 25, 4.00 p.m. 1 North.

Polish Refugee to Tell Of His Experiences

Narcyz Wasilkowski, who spoke here on the campus last week on his experiences while in Russia, will again talk on his flight from Poland to Russia and his return to the United States when he is the guest speaker next Sunday evening, November 24, at the meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the First Church. His topic will be, "I Saw Russia as It Is Today," and will describe his experiences as a student in a technical school in Warsaw at the time of the German invasion and his flight to Russia.

Realizing that many students and faculty members have not had the opportunity to hear this interesting speaker, the Pilgrim Fellowship cordially invites everyone to attend. The meeting will begin at 7.30 in the Parish House.

N. H. to Hear From Vermont

There is a lot of arguing going on and off the campus. On this Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock a University of Vermont debating team will clash with a team from New York University at Fleming Museum. Taze Huntley '41 and H. A. Durfee '41 will uphold the affirmative on the subject: "Resolved, that the nations of the western hemisphere should establish a permanent union."

Meanwhile other debating teams of the University are active outside the State. Last evening F. Bardossi '42 and A. J. Caldwell '41 met a team from Plymouth State Teachers' College at Plymouth, N. H., in a non-decision debate on the subject: "Resolved, that the power of the federal government should be increased." This evening a team composed of Jean Stewart and Kay LeBaron are upholding the negative side of the same question against representatives of Keene State Teachers' College at Keene, N. H.

These debaters, accompanied by Merrill D. Powers, coach of debating, left Burlington Thursday and will return tomorrow.

During the neutral period between November 24 and December 2 the relations of sorority women to freshmen and eligible transfers is limited to a courteous greeting.

Representatives of Interfrat Council To Go to Conference

R. Kenney, E. Guilbert And Prof. Carroll Selected to Attend

Distinguished by the presence of many notables, the thirty-second annual National Interfraternity Conference will be held November 29 and 30 at the Hotel Commodore in New York City. From campuses throughout the entire country undergraduate members of sixty national college fraternities will be included among the more than 3,500 fraternity men who will attend. As the highlight of this largest get-together of college Greek-letter men in history, a formal dinner will be held November 29, at which Wendell L. Willkie, recently defeated presidential candidate and a member of Beta Theta Pi, will be guest speaker.

Chosen by the University of Vermont Interfraternity Council, R. P. Kenney '41 and E. A. Guilbert '41 will represent the interests of U. V. M. With them, a faculty member, Prof. D. B. Carroll of the political science department, will attend.

The dinner program will be opened by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Reinald Werrenwrath, Metropolitan opera star. Lowell Thomas, news commentator and a member of Kappa Sigma, will be toastmaster, and the combined orchestras and glee clubs of Cornell University and Dartmouth College, numbering 150 men, will furnish music and entertainment.

Council Award to be Given

To be awarded for temporary possession to the undergraduate interfraternity council at any educational institution in the country which, by the judgment of the Educational Advisory Committee of the conference, has made the most constructive contribution to the educational and social program in its institution this year, will be a handsome four-foot high bronze statue. This statue, the work of a noted European sculptor and the gift of an unnamed friend of fraternities, will be presented by Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College and a member of Alpha Chi Rho, as an annual presentation. Accompanying the statue is a plaque recording the fact of the award after the statue is reassigned.

The president of Brown University and a member of Delta Tau Delta, Dr. Henry Merritt Wriston, will present a solid gold medallion, an annual, but permanent, presentation to the individual who has done the most to further fraternity cause that particular year.

L. G. Balfour, Chairman

The present chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference is L. G. Balfour, past president of Sigma Chi, who is also in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

Hostesses of Coffee Hour Soph Aides

Coffee, mints and nuts, music, a cheery fire in the fireplace and the low hum of conversation—such is the Coffee Hour, one of the chief projects of the Sophomore Aides. Two successful Coffee Hours have already been held this year, the last on November 17. A third is planned for December 8. The burden of the responsibility for these Coffee Hours falls on Marjorie E. Abell '43, president of Sophomore Aides, but each member of the organization is assigned a different specific duty each time. The usual hour for these gatherings is from two-thirty until three-thirty every second or third Sunday. The Sophomore Aides extend a cordial invitation to you to attend the next Coffee Hour on December 8.

University of Vermont's Sesquicentennial—1941

Nineteen hundred and forty-one will be a banner year for the University of Vermont for its one hundredth and fiftieth anniversary will be observed throughout the year. Under the general chairmanship of Dr. Harry F. Perkins, many plans are now being completed for the various celebrations that will take place during the year. The climax of the observance will come on October 3, 4, and 5 when the Waterman Memorial Building will be dedicated.

Prof. Leon Dean, chairman of the publicity committee, this week sent letters to all campus organization heads uring them to cooperate in the celebration. We are expanding his request by urging that you, the student body, give your whole-hearted support to the observance of Vermont's one hundred and fiftieth birthday.

A variety of stickers, jewelry, and other small articles will be on sale in the University Bookstore after January 1. The articles will be especially designed to commemorate Vermont's Sesquicentennial. By purchasing these small souvenirs students can help the publicity committee in publicizing our University's birthday. Another important and influential method for joining in the observance, we believe, would be widespread "word-of-mouth" campaign on the part of every student who is attending or has attended Vermont.

Vermont was the twenty-fifth college founded in the United States. As an institution, she has pioneered in many different fields and has grown from a college of only a few students to an institution which can boast of 1,454 students and a high place in the universities of our country. Her record is a creditable one of which the majority of the students are familiar, we think, but a record which more students could publicize.

The biggest year in Vermont's history—her one hundred and fiftieth anniversary—will begin on January 1 and will be celebrated throughout the entire year. Because we are convinced of its importance and significance, we appeal to the entire student body to support and publicize the University of Vermont's one hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration.

A "Dynamic Democracy" As a Solution—

"The task before Americans is to increase the tempo of democracy, to make it as dynamic in its action and as attractve in its appeal as the doctrine of violence. How can it be done?"

This thought-provoking quotation is from an article entitled "Dynamic Democracy," by Geoffrey Crowther, editor of The Economist of London. He frankly tells the American people that we could make an effective beginning in "selling Americanism" by seizing on the salient difference between our way of life and that of totalitarian states and by capitalizing it to our advantage.

"If an extended Bill of Minimum Rights were coupled with a Bill of Minimum Duties, the State and the citizen would have their relations on a sound and solid basis of reciprocal benefit. Democracy would have set up its charter for the twentieth century: Security without slavery, freedom without poverty, progress without violence."

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Dean Patterson of Middlebury has written me a letter expressing his regret for "the exhibition of rudeness and bad taste which some of our underclassmen engaged in between the halves of the game on Saturday." Dean Patterson indicates that both the administration and the responsible student leaders regret the occurrence.

It seems to me clear that what was done was carried out by a comparatively small and irresponsible section of the undergraduate body and by no means represents the true feeling of Middlebury College toward Vermont.

Dean Patterson complimented our students on their restraint in the face of provocation and I should like to add my own word of appreciation for the gentlemanly manner in which they behaved at the time.

ELIJAH SWIFT, Dean.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Recently I have read articles in several New England papers on the suitability of Wendell Willkie as a college president. He has everything in his favor for this type of position and would be an asset to any institution.

Of course I know very little of the mechanics behind our choosing a new president, but think it would be a most wonderful thing if we were able to have Mr. Willkie. It would also be most fitting for him to preside over a college in Republican Vermont, his greatest booster. And just think of the prestige it would give our University! Vermont would certainly be put on the map in no uncertain terms.

I don't know if these thoughts are merely pipe dreams, but I sincerely believe in the possibility of their being carried out.

All this is coming from a staunch Democrat, who can see in Mr. Willkie the makings of an ideal college president.

HELAINE GOLDBERG.

November 20, 1940.

To the Readers of the CYNIC:

My only reason for replying to the letter of last Tuesday included in this column is that I feel that it was an unjust and over-harsh criticism of the editorial which appeared in the CYNIC, Friday, November 15. I shall attempt to support the "wad of ideas" which our editor had "nestled in her bonnet" and shall endeavor to prove that they were not without foundation.

1st. The election did not have adequate advertising, for the first and only public notice of it was in the CYNIC issue of Wednesday, November 13, which was published a day later due to the Armistice holiday.

2nd. That issue of the CYNIC stated that the polls would be open on Thursday, but included no specified mention of voting hours.

3rd. The polls on Thursday were not open from 8.30 a.m. until 12.30 p.m., for they were not even set up until shortly after the beginning of second hour (9.30 a.m.).

4th. I should like to ask if there were no trustworthy persons capable of presiding at the polls who did not leave town on Thursday afternoon? (Could not a Boulder man have been drafted?)

5th. Since it was decided to keep the polls open for a longer period of time, why was no attempt made to inform the student body of this action? This might have been done through posters placed in every class building which, though hastily constructed would have contained the essential information. Could not an appeal have been made through the telephone to every dormitory and fraternity house on the campus?

The CYNIC editor is accused of being unfair in giving "so much undue and injurious criticism before the results or even the finish of the election." This does not seem to be a very strong ground for attack—for had she waited until the election was over—she would have been accused of partiality, a "sour grapes" attitude and interference with or criticism of a final choice which would have been viewed as a personal objection. Our editor was not objecting to a choice, but merely registering an objection to the way the choice was being made. Surely, that was her privilege.

In concluding, may I say that I hope that this election may serve as an example for the future. Of necessity, we must use Coffee Corner as our polling place since it is so centrally located, but a longer voting period (over two days and advertised as such) would enable students from the Engineering and Agricultural Colleges to come up during their free hours. Advertising by posters in all college buildings would insure greater student participation in voting and would increase the meaning of our elections. Four hundred and nine "legal votes" out of a possible 1,305 is a very small percentage of the student body.

Respectfully submitted,
SHIRLEY MAYFORTH '41.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Being neither one of the contestants, a member of the sponsorial organization, nor a member of the CYNIC staff I feel that I may quite impartially state that I was in the vicinity of the voting for co-ed major and saw none of the things that you wrote against in your editorial of Friday last. Mr. Simpson, in his denial of your charge, seems to have summed up the facts as I saw them and presented them in unimpeachable style.

GEO. J. HOLDEN, JR.

Have You Met Pete?

I hurried over to Science Hall, dashed up two flights of stairs, and breathlessly broke into the zoology department rooms for an interview with Pete. I put on my nicest smile and extended my hand in a friendly manner. Pete glared balefully at me and angrily snapped his jaws. Meet this friendly little creature—an alligator five years old, about thirty-two inches long, and full of pep and energy!

This newest addition to the zoological department was presented by Mrs. A. T. Maxwell of Salisbury, Vt. Pete was born in Florida but has lived in Vermont in a tub of warm water since he was six inches long. The animal weighs only about seven pounds but he packs a wallop in his tail that could dethrone Joe Louis. His favorite dish is liver and fish. When I finished the "interview," Pete was still feeling rather grumpy but I attributed that to the fact that he had been riding in a car all day out in the cold and I felt that I really had made a "warm" friend, to say the least.

Professor Dean Asks Cooperation

A suggestion has been made by Professor Dean to all organizations on campus. It is his hope that the college societies will include the theme of the Sesquicentennial Celebration in this year's program.

These organizations, which direct so many of the college activities, could do a great deal in promoting the ideas of this celebration.

Professor Dean also suggested that Kake Walk be carried out with the theme of the Sesquicentennial Celebration.

Jean Stewart to Speak

The Methodist College Group will hear a talk on India next Sunday, given by Jean Stewart, a senior at the University. Jean's home is in India, where her father is a teacher at Gordon College, and her talks are not only informative but interesting. All students are invited to attend the meeting.

Student Opinion

Student Opinion Survey of America

What About Ghost Writers?

AUSTIN, Texas, April—"Ghost writing," the practice of preparing themes and reports for some one else's class work, gets a thumbs-down expression of opinion from three-fourths of American college students.

What may be more surprising to some, however, is that the other fourth is either indifferent or openly in approval. These are the results of a poll conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys of America, collegiate sampling organization of the undergraduate press, of which the VERMONT CYNIC is a member.

"What is your opinion of the practice of students paying ghost writers to prepare themes and term papers for them?" was the question presented to a scientific cross section from coast to coast.

Disapproving were 75 per cent; indifferent were 10 per cent; approving were 15 per cent.

Answers to the query were tabulated by the interviewers in five different categories to indicate the intensity of feeling on this issue. These results are given below:

Strongly opposed	54 per cent
Mildly opposed	21 per cent
Indifferent	10 per cent
Mildly in favor	8 per cent
Strongly in favor	7 per cent

Significantly, it may be noticed that a majority of students, 50 per cent, is in the strongly-opposed class. Also, the trend of approval, looking down the preceding row of figures, dwindles down to a mere 7 per cent at a rapid rate.

The chief argument of those who favor ghost writing is that in effect it often helps students by giving them more time to study for more important and pressing courses. On the other hand, the majority of these opposed condemn it as plain scholastic dishonesty.

Dancing Classes to Meet at Southwick

All dancing classes, beginners and continuation groups, will meet Tuesday, December 3, the week following vacation, from 7.00 to 9.00 p.m.

The continuation group will meet Wednesday, December 4, and every Wednesday after this until Christmas vacation.

The beginners' groups for women and men will meet Thursday, December 5, and on Thursday of the two following weeks.

Art Class

The Art Education 1 class is very busily working on posters which will feature the campaign for Bundles For Britain. Due to the purpose in creating these posters the ideas have had a wide range and the students have expressed keen interest in working them out.

Sports Cast

By the Sport Editor

In Retrospect

This seems to be a résumé issue. Fall sports are all finished or just about to finish. Winter sports are still in the process of getting under way. That leaves us with the task of looking back and reminiscing.

The statisticians have dug up some interesting facts about the grid season. Despite a record of only four wins in eight starts this year's eleven scored more points than any Green and Gold squad since the 1922-23 season. In all, the Cats rolled up a total of 108 points. The New Hampshire and Middlebury triumphs certainly help to swell those figures.

George Broutsas takes the scoring palm away from Frankie Taylor this year. Broutsas rolled up 24 points in what was his best gridiron year. Frankie while not measuring up to his record in past years, managed to accumulate 21 points. "The Brattleboro Flash" will be remembered as one of Vermont's finest backs and his 82-point record for three years' competition is one of the highest ever made at U. V. M. The boys who play with the numbers are looking back to the turn of the century in order to find mention of a similar achievement.

All in all, it was a give and take season. Most disappointing to Green and Gold rooters were the Trinity and R. P. I. defeats. The Norwich game is being less and less regretted as the facts accumulate. After all, out of all the eastern schools only mighty Boston College can boast a better offensive record than the Cadets. Though the Cats didn't live up to their potentialities, they did hit the top on several occasions and we're willing to forgive them anything after that 32-0 defeat of Norwich.

Next year Fuzzy Evans will have a tremendous assignment facing him due to the devastating inroads graduation will make in his squad. But when one thinks back on the fight eleven-man squad of a year ago demonstrated, one is inclined to be a trifle hopeful that by the time a new fall rolls around the Cats will still be in the game.

Archie and the Harriers

The magnificent showing made by the varsity harriers this year should gain for Archie Post more than one appreciative word from Vermont supporters. Undefeated in their regular meets, the harriers added further luster to their glory by finishing fifth in the Eastern Intercollegiates. This achievement is made even more noteworthy by the fact that Rhode Island took the nationals at New York this week despite Leslie MacMitchell's third consecutive win.

Results of the voting for cross-country captain have it that the Webster brothers will be co-captains. They certainly deserve the honor. For three years now their names have been synonymous with Vermont cross-country and it is especially fitting that they should share the leadership of the squad next year.

Closing the Books

That seems to square up the accounts for the fall. In another week now there'll be an influx of the new winter stock. Stand by for some snappy numbers in the basketball and skiing sections. The athletic department promises an entirely brand new and up-to-date line of goods. Shop early and avoid the rush.

1940 Football Season in Review

Even Tally in Wins and Losses

Although losing the state grid title to powerful Norwich team, the University of Vermont eleven ran through one of its most successful seasons in recent years, amassing a total of 108 points in eight games, a feat unequalled in the last seventeen years of U. V. M. football history. The Cat unit, blessed with sufficient material for three teams, jumped into the victory column in the season's opener against Northeastern by downing them 7-0. The game was played on even terms until the fourth quarter, when end Dick Salmon blocked a goal-line kick and then recovered it, while Frankie Taylor cleared the uprights, providing the winning margin.

Despite their auspicious start, the Green and Gold received a rude jolt from a courageous little Trinity contingent who upset pre-game predictions by scoring an 18-0 victory. Completely fooled by an assortment of spinners and reverses, Vermont failed to hit its stride during the entire game, though averted a blanking when Taylor booted a field goal in the third period. Boots Lawrence's and Phil Chesarone's work in the line prevented additional Episcopalian scores, while Johnny Spasyk and Mickey Gilbert, pint-sized ball carriers, sparked the Cats' attempted touchdown drives.

Once again the Catamounts tasted defeat as a hard-charging Colby eleven, although weakened by the loss of their captain and chief threat, Johnny Daggett, who received an injury in the early moments of the game that placed him on the sidelines for the remainder of the season, eked out a 10-7 victory before a throng of U. V. M. alumni on Homecoming Day. Both teams pushed over a score in the first half, Vermont's tally resulting from a 65-yard jaunt by Capt. Frankie Taylor who, with the able assistance of the opposing center, snatched a 32-yard pass from Johnny Spasyk out of the air and by a neat reversal of field evaded the enemy secondary, crossing the goal line unmolested. The Mules, however, went out in front in the third quarter when Loring kicked a field goal and managed to retain their lead, nipping a last-minute rally by the Cats.

Vermont bounced back into the win column by blasting out a 19-7 win over a Union team boasting a string of thirteen consecutive victories. Spasyk, Red Dorian and Butch Broutsas accounted for the three Vermont touchdowns as Coach Fuzzy Evans poured thirty men into the fray.

The following week-end the Catamounts unleashed a flashy air attack and rode rough-shod over a stunned New Hampshire eleven, setting them back by the score of 33-13. Taylor heaved two touchdown passes, one to Gilbert and one to Misty Rice, putting Vermont in the van in the first quarter. Utley scored again in the second period after a beautiful run, and two passes, one from Spasyk to Pye and the other a lateral from Herb Long to Broutsas resulted in additional scores.

R. P. I. succeeded in pinning a 12-0 defeat on the Green and Gold, on a muddy field which caused the bogging down of the Cats' offensive. Although Vermont failed to tally, Lawrence, Carlson and Chesarone played great ball in the line, while Butch Broutsas provided backfield drive.

The most bitter defeat of the season was that by the Norwich juggernaught who walked off with the state laurels by pounding out a 38-7 win. The Cadets played superior ball all the way and at times appeared to be of big college caliber.

In the finale, some of the sting from the Norwich battle was removed as the Catamounts drubbed their ancient rival, Middlebury, 32-0. Taylor, Reed, Strassburg, Lawrence, Carlson, Pye, Corbett, Utley, Salmon, Broutsas and Nichols, who played their last game in Green and Gold gear, had the satisfaction of figuring in one of the worst defeats pinned on the Panthers in a number of years.

All in all, though the loss of aforementioned seniors will be felt, Coach Fuzzy Evans can look forward to a better than mediocre season next year, with such material on hand as Capt.-elect Misty Rice, Shaw, Gilbert, Spasyk, Benoit, Dorian, White and others who featured in games this year.

Varsity Ski Team Holds 1st Practice

Thirty Men Report to Coach Ev Bailey

The U. V. M. varsity ski team reported November 15 to Coach Everett Bailey for the initial practice in preparation for the approaching season. Most of this pre-season practice will consist of such exercises as cross-country, touch football and others which tend to build up wind and endurance.

This Sunday the squad journeys to Stowe for their first workout on snow. If more of these practices could be held, conditioning would be completed much quicker and with more enjoyment.

Some thirty men are included in this group taking conditioning exercises and included among these are Dave Collins, cross-country ski ace for last year's team who is this year's captain, several schoolboy stars in Art Paterson of Barre, John Hurst from Switzerland, Bud Pierce of Montpelier and Donald Marburg of Montclair, N. J., who headed the ski patrol at Sun Valley last winter. Other outstanding candidates are Bob Harrington, Sabe Rising, Ernie St. Mary, Bud Hoyt and Bill Daniels.

Coach Bailey was a star on the Catamount ski team last year and is very anxiously looking forward to the new facilities which are offered this year at Underhill. Perhaps the more outstanding of these latter mentioned is the ski jump which will afford Vermont skiers plenty of chance to practice jumping, an event in which Vermont is usually weak. There is also some discussion of the possibility of organizing a ski patrol.

The University plans to hold at least one intercollegiate ski meet here this winter, but as yet plans are indefinite.

Rutgers (N. J.) University men defeated a New Jersey College for Women team in a cooking contest.

FACULTY MEMBERS

Women in Sports

Basketball

An interzone basketball tournament is being planed by Basketball Club, under the management of Catherine Peterson '42 and Edith Libby '42. Burlington has been divided into thirteen zones, and each zone is given an opportunity to make up a team. Ten or more girls must sign up before a team can be organized. A list of the zones will be posted in all the houses and dorms. Town girls may see Miss Crowe to sign up for a team. The zones include individual house in the vicinity of dormitories.

Zone leaders:

Zone

1. Allen House and vicinity—Alison Carr.
2. Doane's, University Ter.—Virginia White.
3. Warner, Colchester Ave.—Eloise Bayley.
4. Loomis St., N. Willard St.—Jean Norris.
5. Sanders, Greene St.—Ramona Hathorne.
6. S. Prospect St., N. Prospect St., Brookes Ave.—Di Welsh.
7. Grassmount, Roberts, Crowe's—Phyllis Bell.
8. Pi Phi House, Slade, Moody's—Priscilla Perkins.
9. Gates, Tri Delt, Alpha Chi—Phyllis Pierce.
10. Redstone—Dot Arnault.
11. Robinson—Ellen Howe.
12. Henderson Ter., Robinson Ct., Kappa Alpha Theta — Natalie Spear.
13. Dresser's, Mansfield Ave., 41 Colchester Ave.—Sophie Gurney.

The town team will be made up of girls not included in the streets listed above. Charlotte Hyde will be in charge.

Volleyball

Yesterday afternoon at 4.30, the Volleyball Club played off several mixed matches. These contests with men players are an innovation in the volleyball section.

The Volleyball Green and Gold Tournament will begin later in December.

Swimming

An invitation has been extended to the U. V. M. Swimming Club to join the National Intercollegiate Telegraphic Swim Meet. The races are scheduled in the pools of colleges all over the country, and the scores telegraphed to Skidmore, where they are tallied, and the winner announced. All girls who have had some competitive swimming, or interested in signing up for the meet, please call Virginia Amidon '42.

W. A. A. is holding its annual High School Play Day on December 7, at Southwick. High schools from all over the state are invited, and a large group usually attends. Sport movies are shown, relay games, basketball and volleyball games are played, and dancing is held in the ballroom. Girls on W. A. A. Council and Council-at-large are in charge.

The second group of the Red Cross First-Aid Course has postponed its first meeting until the first Wednesday after Thanksgiving recess. Doctor Kemp of the Medical College is in charge of these courses, and he urgently requests everyone to buy a book for the course.

Cross-Country Team Registers Perfect Record; No Defeats

Capt. Livak Ends Vt. Cross-Country Career Websters—Co-captains

An inspiring note in an otherwise mediocre fall sport season was the undefeated campaign of Coach Archie Post's cross-country team. The squad won all dual meets by substantial margins against such outstanding opposition as Union, Bowdoin, Williams, Dartmouth and Middlebury and placed fifth in the N. E. I. C. A. A. Meet, a run which included thirteen notable colleges in New England.

The Webster brothers, Charles and Fred, played a leading rôle in the proceedings this fall. Fred came in first in every dual run but one, against Middlebury, when he and Charlie lagged behind to pace several other Vermont runners so that they might earn their letters. Twice, against Bowdoin and Williams, the Websters tied for the first slot. The results this year were directly opposite to last year when Charles took most of the top honors. In the N. E. I. C. A. A. Meet, Fred copped eighth place with Charles taking tenth position, a creditable showing considering the caliber of the competition and allowing for the fact that this was the first time the Cats ventured out of dual contests. Bud Hoyt, up from the freshman team, contributed greatly to his team's total, was always up among the first six and can be expected to do great things in the next two seasons. Capt. Frank Livak, the only senior on the team and veteran of three years, handed in his quota of points during his stay at U. V. M. and will be missed greatly next fall. Others who consistently placed among the top ten were Merle Crown, Ernie St. Mary, Jack Burgess, and Norm Stoddard, a newcomer, who exhibited some great running at the end of the campaign.

Prospects for next year are considerad very bright with the return of all but one letterman and a fine crop of freshmen headed by Harvey Goodell and Bob Lockwood coming up.

Fred and Charles Webster were elected co-captains for next year, and J. H. Stephen, manager. Letters (major) went to following: J. S. Burgess, J. L. Buttles, O. R. Clark, C. E. Corliss, M. W. Crown, J. P. Hoyt, F. H. Livak, E. F. St. Mary, N. R. Stoddard, C. A. Webster, F. H. Webster, R. S. White and D. Zwick.

New Cross-Country Managers Chosen

The varsity and frosh hill and dalers terminated their 1940 season by the election of managers and captains for next year.

Varsity manager for 1941 will be James Stephen '42, who will fill the key position vacated by James Root '41. The inseparable Webster brothers, Charlie and Fred, who sparked their team to five consecutive victories and the State title, were chosen almost unanimously by their teammates as co-captains.

Copeland Marks '42 will manage the frosh harriers next season. The team captain is Goodie Goodell '44.

SCRUBS—Any junior or sophomore desirous of scrubbing the 1941 Kake Walk, please contact John Royer, Bob Kenney or Bill Pye.

Billings Observes Book Week

Many Contemporary Works Newly Acquired

The Billings Library, which is the second oldest of the college buildings, was erected in 1885. It contains the largest collection of books in the State, and is also in possession of an interesting collection of rare and valuable early books, first editions, manuscripts, and autographs. It subscribes to the leading periodicals and has a large assortment of catalogues and reference books.

Miss Helen Shattuck is the head librarian and Miss Mary Bates is the associate librarian. Their assistants are the Misses Gladys Flint, Dorothy M. Dickinson, Beatrice Beers, Helen Loudon and Mr. Kenneth Raymond.

A great number of new books have been published this past year, and the outstanding ones were on exhibition last week for National Book Week.

Perhaps the most popular of these are the ones dealing with current problems, political science and government. Among these are: "A Diplomatic History of the American People" by Bailey; "A Foreign Policy for America" by C. A. Beard; "The Foreign Policies of Herbert Hoover, 1929-33" by Myers; "The New American Government and Its Work" by Young; "Inside the Department of State" by Huler; "Canada-America's Problem" by Maccormack, and "Why War?" by Butler.

There are two biographies, "Stalin" by Louvarine and "Richard Halliburton" by Halliburton; an autobiography, "Yankee Reporter," by S. Burton Heath, a U. V. M. alumnus, and "I Married Adventure" by Osa Johnson, which might be included in this group.

Some of the outstanding books dealing with the life of the people are: "A Southerner Discovers New England" by Daniels, "Forty Years a Country Preacher" by Gilbert, and "A.P., The Story of News" by Gemoling.

There are also miscellaneous books which have been quite popular, such as "The Encircling Year" by Van de Water, "The Best Plays of 1939-40" by Mantle, "New England Summer" by Van Wyck Brooks, "The Ox Bow Incident" by Clark, "Uncle Snowball" by Frost, and "Christianity and Philosophy" by Gibson.

Most of these books can be found on the shelf above the card catalog, and they have been recommended as the outstanding books of the year which the library has been able to purchase.

Miss Larson Keen About Vermont

Miss Blenda Larson, who is now taking the place of Rosemary Hazard in the U. V. M. physical education department, when interviewed at Southwick gave some interesting information concerning herself and interesting opinions concerning Vermont and U. V. M. students.

Miss Larson was born and brought up in Worcester, Mass. She is a graduate of Bouvé, Boston School of Physical Education. She has also B.S. and M.A. degrees from Columbia, has taught in the public schools in Shrewsbury, Mass., and in Y. W. C. A. in Los Angeles, Calif., and Brockton, Mass.

Her major teaching interest is dancing, but she enjoys teaching tennis, swimming, badminton and archery. She hopes to get the boys and girls interested in square dancing and later in square dance parties.

The first thing which impressed Miss Larson when she came to Burlington was the number and beauty of the trees. Never having experienced a winter in Vermont she is looking forward to it—in fact, she is saving her pennies to buy ear muffs. During the winter Miss Larson said she hopes to learn to ski the way Vermonters do.

Concerning Vermont students she stated that she believed they were a very wholesome looking group, and the freshmen an unusually young looking group. Of interest to the girls, Miss Larson believes them to be not so artificial looking as city college students.

The Collegium meeting Sunday evening at the College St. Church will include a devotional service, games, and refreshments. Everyone is cordially invited to this evening of good fellowship and entertainment.

New Equipment in Engineering College

Students Benefit by Practical Experience

The College of Engineering's program of modernizing was instigated by the University in an effort to give the engineering student a modern view of the mechanical phases of the aeronautic, automotive and power plant fields. Each student is given his chance to put this modern apparatus into actual practical use, therefore giving him a much clearer conception of his field than he would get from mere book study.

Noteworthy among the improvements are those made in the internal combustion engineering laboratory. This laboratory includes the study of all types of engines, particularly those in the automotive, airplane and Diesel power fields.

A test dynamometer is being installed which is sufficiently large to handle all large automotive engines, and plans are being made to install a test stand especially adapted to airplanes. A small Diesel engine has been set up for observation and study along with an intricate one-cylinder motor equipped with large number of test appliances especially adapted to give the students an inside view of the combustion engine.

Another new feature is the new automotive chassis obtained through cooperation with the Ford Motor Company in exchange for an older chassis. This new chassis exhibits all the component parts of the engine cut away in cross sections.

Justin Morrill Was Proposer of College U. S. Land-Grants

We owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to the man who made possible our beautiful state college. Yet, very few of us know anything about Justin Smith Morrill, the father of land-grant colleges. His is the largest record of continuous service registered in our Federal Journal. He represented Vermont for forty-four years, both in the House of Representatives and in the Senate.

In 1857, he proposed that Congress donate public lands to several states and territories in order to provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and mechanic arts. Though Buchanan vetoed the Bill, Lincoln signed one similar to it a few years later. Through his perseverance, Congress in 1890 passed the Second Morrill Bill, giving two hundred fifty thousand dollars annually to each land-grant college. Thus it was made possible for many who could not otherwise have afforded a college education, to go through a low tuition state school with flying colors.

U. V. M. paid tribute to this "Grand Old Man of the Republican Party" by erecting Morrill Hall in 1907. It has classrooms for agriculture, horticulture, veterinary service, and home economics, and houses many offices of the Agricultural Experiment Station. It is also the headquarters of Agricultural Extension Service.

The second meeting of the John Dewey Club will be held tonight at 8.00 o'clock at Southwick. Dr. A. B. Soule, professor of radiology in the Medical College, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "Socialized Medicine."

During the neutral period between November 24 and December 2 the relations of sorority women to freshmen and eligible transfers is limited to a courteous greeting.

Prof. Condon Talks To Newman Club

Discussion Follows Lecture on Evolution

"God taught nothing to man about scientific facts since it did not help man in his salvation," quoted Professor Candon from Doledo last Tuesday evening as he resumed the topic of "Evolution" before the Newman group. Following further, Doledo Professor Candon again quoted: "The Genesis was written to show the people of that time that God created all things. The Bible must not all be interpreted in its true sense." Many of its terms require a figurative explanation; for instance, the definition of the length of the day in the Genesis may mean a day of twenty-four hours or a period of millions of years.

Summarizing his first talk on "Evolution," Professor Candon stated that "Evolution is not contrary to that God is the Creator."

In conclusion, Professor Candon said: "The soul is that which makes a thing live." Thus all living things have a soul. However, the Homo sapiens is differentiated from the rest of the species in that he possesses a spiritualistic soul as compared with the materialistic soul of the lower classes of animals.

The Newman Club will not hold a meeting next Tuesday, November 26. It will be of interest, however, to all Catholic students that Prof. Rudolph Schwenger, formerly of the University of Berlin and now at St. Michael's College, will be the club's next lecturer. Professor Schwenger will center his talk on the field of eugenics and allied questions.

The next lecture will be given at Southwick on December 10, with Professor

Nat'l Council Meets

At the same time, the first region conference of the National Undergraduate Interfraternity Council will hear Frederick J. Skeker, assistant dean of men at Ohio State University. Discussed by Skeker will be "A Progressive Program for Local Interfraternity Councils." A group of fraternity experts will also consider question box material dealing with fraternities.

Friday afternoon the council will meet with the National Interfraternity Conference to listen to Hugh Clegg, first assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, speak on "Fifth Column Activities as They Affect College and Fraternities."

Other topics to be considered are: "Professional Fraternities and Recognition Societies," Dean Fred H. Turner, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, University of Illinois; "Rushing," Albert J. Hebbinger; "Regional Conferences," Dean G. Herbert Smith, Beta Theta Pi, De Pauw University; "Fraternity Schools and Instruction Courses," George W. Chapman, Theta Chi, Philadelphia; "Conference Reorganization," Dr. Charles W. Gerstenberg, Delta Chi, New York City.

The freshman Gym class which meets regularly at 2.00 p.m., on Tuesdays and Thursdays, will meet next week at 4.20 p.m., on Monday.

Rev. C. A. Hazen Speaks at Chapel

Faith and its rediscovery for world salvation was the text of the sermon of the Rev. C. Arthur Hazen, of Swanton, delivered at University chapel service, Wednesday morning. The chapel choir and University orchestra was under the direction of Prof. Howard G. Bennett.

Two hundred students and faculty members attended. The remainder of nearly 1,500 were crowded in halls and corners—while excellent music, and Ideas reached the small gathering.

U. V. M. Women Get More Health Care

Successful Tag Day Yields Large Loan Fund

On the health front, women students the University of Vermont are receiving more service than ever before, with the Health Council, made up of women students, reporting record receipts from the Tag Day sale which annually raises funds for loans to students in need of medical care and unable to pay for it. Not only has more money than ever been collected by tag sellers this fall, for financing the medical aid loans which enable some girls to have the care of a doctor, a service they otherwise could not afford, but the director of the University infirmary, Mrs. Fred H. Towne, has instituted this year a new service providing simple medical supplies for girls living outside college dormitories who need them. Girls living in University dormitories have access to the medicines dispensed by the infirmary free of charge, but up to this year girls renting rooms in private residences in Burlington were not reached by this service. Now announcement has been made that women students may come to the infirmary, located at Robinson Hall, women's dormitory, and receive medical supplies from Mrs. Towne.

Prevention of illness is another important function of the Health Council, and one way they go at it is to make and display posters illustrating good health habits of many kinds. Assigned to make posters for exhibition during the coming months are Madge Duba, Burlington, who will design a poster on nutrition; Helen Anderson, West Glover, colds; Alice Needham, Boston, Mass., mental health; Marjorie Abell, Burlington, eyes; Jane Naylor, Alburg, relaxation, rest and sleep; Virginia Mitchell, Worcester, Mass., skin; Elizabeth Kulka, New York, N. Y., exercise and fresh air; Adele Bennett, Bennington, good grooming and cleanliness; Sarah Wilson, Gray, Me., and Alma LeVens, New York, N. Y., safety and first aid; Priscilla Perkins, Augusta, Me., posture; Ruth Orr, Vershire, Jean Norris, Summit, N. J., teeth; Jareckie, Madison, N. J., tuberculosis prevention and care; Hester Carver, West child health.

Audience of 400 Attends Benefit British Concert

Mrs. Bennett, Mr. Millikan, T. Malone In Varied Program

Four hundred persons attended the concert of English music, a benefit program, in Southwick ballroom last Friday evening, sponsored by the Committee on Bundles for Britain, headed by Mrs. Levi P. Smith.

Tables in the foyer displayed knitted articles for British soldiers as well as articles with British seals which were on sale. During the performance R. N. Snider '41 of Boston was awarded a prize for having sold the greatest number of tickets.

Professor Millikan, who opened the program with a group of English songs, sang most expressively and the renditions of his rich baritone voice were well received. T. K. Malone, Jr., '41, a music student, rendered three lovely ballads, winning appreciative applause. Mrs. Elsa Kremers Bennett's contribution colored the program, and her rendition of "Country Gardens" on a virile, rollicking note brought an encore from the audience.

G. R. McKee '41 of Montpelier was accompanist. Ushers were Louise Mann '41, Dorothea Smith '41, Maywood Metcalf '41, Margaret Crowley '41 and Doris Doerfler '44.

The program was as follows:

I

The Jolly Miller
17th Century English Tune
Swanssea Town
Traditional English Sea Chanty
O No, John.....English Folk Song
Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes
Folk Tune with words by Ben Jonson
Sung by Mr. Millikan

Rev. Walsh Gives University Lecture

Talks on "Dante as Medieval Humanist"

"Humanism is the idea that if human life is lived in a genuinely human way it is almost always bound to bring human happiness." Thus the Rev. Gerald G. Walsh of the Society of Jesus commenced his lecture on "Dante as a Medieval Humanist," given to an appreciative audience in the Fleming Museum on Thursday evening, November 21. Father Walsh, professor of medieval culture at Fordham University, editor of the quarterly review, Thought, and outstanding Dante scholar, was introduced by Prof. A. R. Gifford of the philosophy department.

Father Walsh went on to say that, in the modern world, there are various types of humanism—religious, classical, rational, romantic, social, vital, etc. Dante represents not one of these types, but all of them; he is an integral humanist. He spent his life looking for happiness. First of all, Dante was a vitalistic humanist, a liver. He missed nothing that life had to offer. He was a sportsman, a student, a soldier, a politician, the LaGuardia of medieval Florence. Father Walsh mentioned that "medieval politics had New York politics sewed up in a bag." Dante was original, a thinker. He produced the first authentic autobiography, the first philosophical essays written in the vernacular. He was a lover; he reached spiritual heights through the love of Beatrice.

Dante's Ideal

Dante was an artist; he sought happiness through beauty. He was constantly looking for the beauty that God put into the world. He was what few artists are and what practically no politicians are—a philosopher, seeking happiness through truth. He wanted to find a definition of human nature, of man. Finally, Dante was a theologian. He sought a definition of Good and happiness through goodness.

Father Walsh closed by saying that Dante was a truly big man, that he represented the three major medieval traits—beauty, truth, and goodness.

The lecture was interspersed with delightful recitations of Dante's poetry in the original Italian. A discussion period followed.

Father Walsh completed his stay at the University with two group conferences, one, on Friday afternoon, "The Tradition of Medieval Humanism"; the other, "Dante and English Poetry," was held Saturday morning.

During the neutral period between November 24 and December 2 the conversation of sorority women to freshmen and eligible transfers is limited to a courteous greeting.

Final Banquets Held by Sororities

Women's formal rushing came to a close with the final parties.

Alpha Xi Delta had their party Friday evening, November 22. It was a "candid camera" buffet supper. Actual photography was done by Mr. Stevens.

At a cruise party held November 22 the Pi Phis entertained with a formal dinner. Elizabeth Gurney '41, Barbara Butterfield '42 and Phyllis Savage '43 were in charge.

Also on November 22 was the Delta Phi Epsilon party. A colored "mammy" served as the theme for this party.

November 20 Delta Delta Delta had a patriotic progressive dinner. Mildred Creamer '41 was in charge of the final party.

Kappa Alpha Theta concluded their rushing November 19. Jean Hall '42 was in charge of the party, whose theme was a night club.

On Wednesday night, November 13, the Sigma Gammas held a circus party at the home of Mrs. Rowell on Cliff Street. Elizabeth Isham '41 and Barbara McIntosh '41 were in charge.

The Alpha Chis on November 12 held a Dream Castle party. Judith Perry '42, Madge Duba '41 and Peggy Wishart '43 made the arrangements.

Juniors must return all Ariel portrait proofs to the Bookstore on December 3 in person. Remember—December 3.—R. B. Hunting.

Cynic To Sponsor Campus Radio Feature On WCAX

M. J. Levin and Staff Plan Program For Tuesday Broadcasts at 8.30 p.m.

This year, as last, the Cynic will sponsor a series of radio programs on Tuesday evenings through the outlet of WCAX, the local radio station. M. J. Levin '41, radio editor of the Cynic, will be in charge. He will be assisted by Virginia Mitchell '43, C. J. Katzew '42, Jeanne Woolley '42 and J. S. Burgess '42 in preparing, directing and announcing the programs.

The theme song of the program will be the well-known "Cotton Babes." Music by University organizations, speeches and round-table discussions by faculty members, and news of the campus will be featured on the program.

The first program, Tuesday, November 26, will feature a talk by Prof. R. Doane of the French department on "The Plight of France," as well as news of U. V. M. and college sports news.

Programs will be on WCAX from 8.30 till 8.55 Tuesday evenings. Their purpose will be "to bring the people of the city and state into closer contact with the University," as M. J. Levin '41, director, put it. These programs will continue throughout the school year except during examination and vacation periods.

Future programs will include a round-table discussion by the members of the University political science department on "American Foreign Policy." During the Christmas season the choir will sing Christmas carols. During Kake Walk a special program will be featured. Later in the year the Dramatic Club and the University Players will give a short play.

Any students or students' organizations having requests or suggestions about future programs may see M. J. Levin '41, radio editor of the Cynic. Also any news or notices of organizations may be broadcasted. C. J. Katzew '42 will be in charge of sports news and Jeanne Woolley '42 will give news summaries for women on the campus.

The radio staff of the Cynic have expressed the desire to make this weekly program the voice of the University of Vermont throughout the State.

Organized Council Heads Outing Club

Plans Program for I. S. U. Meet Here

The newly organized Outing Club Council, consisting of thirty-two members, eight representatives from each class, has elected its new members and is ready for a successful year.

The I. S. U. meet has every possibility of being held here at the University, and E. C. Bailey, president of the I. S. U., says the ski jump will be in readiness when the boys return from their Christmas recess.

The council-at-large will choose a governing board composed of president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and heads of committees who will meet once a week. The council-at-large will meet once a month or more often at the discretion of the governing board.

All committees for activities of the Outing Club will be composed of members of the committee-at-large.

Outing Club members in their first meeting saw ski movies. There will be a larger meeting on December 16, when a movie, "Ski the Americas, North and South," in technicolor will be shown. Sepp Ruschp and Otto Hollaus, ski instructors at Stowe and instructors of the U. V. M. teams, will welcome the ski season and all the enthusiastic hopefuls for the ski team at this meeting.

The new members chosen were: D. Marbury '44, F. Boardman '44, Alison Carr '44, Sidney Leitch '44, D. Zwick '43, D. Sawyer '43, J. Stevens '43, Millicent Clough '43, Gratia Pearl '42, H. Chesney '41, H. Pache '41 and F. Rising '41.

R. Stockwell '43 has been elected head of the committee for skiing this winter to organize training and to plan the ski bus trips.

Education Society Initiates Three

An important meeting of the honorary education society for women was held in Castleton Saturday at the home of Miss Caroline Woodruff, former head of the National Education Association and principal of Castleton Normal School. At the initiation ceremonies held at 11.30 in the morning Prof. Catherine F. Nulty, head of secretarial instruction, Miss Miriam Marston, member of the music department, and Miss Verna Parker, instructor in the education department, all of the University of Vermont, were initiated into a branch of the national organization, Delta Kappa Gamma.

The Vermont chapter of this national society was founded about two years ago. Faculty members active in its inception are Dean of Women Mary Jean Simpson, Profs. Sara M. Holbrook and Nelle A. Adams, and Miss Mary B. Sullivan.

Following the initiation, members and initiates were served luncheon at Miss Woodruff's home; and a business meeting followed.

Jacobs to Report

Prof. E. C. Jacobs of the geology department, as Vermont state geologist, is preparing a report on the mineral industries of the State. The report will be published late this year.

Give Thanks For What We Might Have . . And Don't

Between Thanksgiving and F. D. R.'s Thanksgiving, the country has been thanking God for a week—six more days of "merci beaucoup"s to Him than is customary or natural. With most of the civilized world in an amazing state of uncivilization, what we are so long at giving thanks about is difficult to conceive. We could speak of the United States still a non-combatant nation but that is a matter of little moment on the positive side of tottering on the brink. France has bowed. The birthplace of liberty, equality, fraternity feels the oppression of Mr. Hitler's heavy hand; but in the New York harbor the great statue-symbol still smiles. The almighty dollar retains still 60 percent of its mightiness at home—and more almightiness across the border—if you can prove to the border officials that you were born once, and the wheres and whens. There is the great blessing—that England is holding out, and we are able to trade in peace for a few ramshackle battle tubs of early vintage, and stay snug behind John Bull's broad back.

But then, how long will this sordid story continue? Only forever, I should say, looking back at history.

Reaction from cynicism comes. We have life—and living it is good. When the tumult dies, the little things are remembered. We have freedom—more freedom

Thanksgiving—1940

This year when every American is proud and happy to be a free citizen of the Western world, we all have much to be thankful for on Thursday which is set aside in Vermont for the harvest feast which was instituted by the Pilgrim Fathers in 1621. There are so many reasons why we young Americans should be grateful on Thursday that if they were properly treated they would fill a book, but to us there are a few outstanding reasons why we should be especially thankful.

We are thankful, first, that we young Americans live in a country where our future is not committed by our government to spending our lives fulfilling the grasping desires of fanatical dictators—dictators who have completely lost their appreciation of the individual man.

We are thankful, secondly, that we young Americans live in a country where opportunity still exists even though it may not be golden. Opportunity to live and work in the American way of life—the democratic way—the best way—still is a potent factor in American society.

We are thankful, thirdly, that we young Americans are fortunate enough to be enrolled in an institution of higher learning where we are daily given the opportunity to study new things, to learn new facts and to widen the circle of our acquaintances.

We are thankful, lastly, that we young Americans have homes to which we may go and families who love us when many people in the world have neither.

Poetry Stock is Rising

One of the finest, most interesting, and intelligent speakers we have ever heard visited our campus last week and was received with a large amount of enthusiasm by all the students who heard him. Father Walsh of Fordham University spoke most learnedly on the many phases of Dante. During his three-day stay in Burlington Father Walsh met with various departmental groups which gave many students an opportunity of hearing a lecturer of great personal appeal and a person who obviously had such a complete mastery of his material for discussion.

In his "Dante in English Literature" talk many students and faculty members were actually fascinated by Father Walsh's presentation of poetry. Through his interpretation we came to a much clearer understanding of poetry. His treatment of Gray's "Elegy," for example, was an entirely new conception and reading of the classic.

Since the student response to this type of literary treatment was most enthusiastic, we suggest that the members of the English department might be asked to read and interpret various English and American poems at the Coffee Hours which are frequently held on Sundays at Southwick. Professor Aiken might read selections by Milton and Professor Tupper might be kind enough to read poems written in the old Anglo-Saxon vernacular.

We are confident that such programs would have a wide appeal to students who read a great amount of poetry and to those who would enjoy poetry if they understood it. Such Sunday afternoon readings would give students an opportunity to hear poetry read and interpreted by authorities who undoubtedly would bring about a fuller appreciation and clearer understanding of the great masterpieces of verse.

Father Walsh Hits Totalitarian Way

Newman Club Hears Fordham Professor

"We are never going to have any political peace so long as we have a dozen philosophies of life," set forth Father Gerald Walsh, S.J., Friday evening before the Newman Club in speaking on the subject "Pope's Peace Program." The world of today has lost that ideology of the fifteenth century, at which time the European cosmos experienced sound philosophic and religious standards of living. "We have separated reason from things," said Father Walsh. The chaos of the subsequent reformational movements broke the fifteenth-century thought into bits until now each country has its own philosophy and thus there is political turmoil. Deductively, Father Walsh further said, "The philosophers are largely to blame for this war."

Pope's Peace Program

As the theme of his talk Father Walsh gave the five points of the Pope's Peace Program:

1. We must try to have all nations, great and small, rich and poor, have some kind of definite place; that is to say, let there be nations which have some kind of historical past.
2. Let us have progressive disarmament.
3. Let there be arbitration; that is, let wisdom take the place of weapons.
4. Put back into the mind the idea of justice and charity.
5. The statesmen must restore the notion of conscience.

"The two sins of the world today are pride and greed"; contrarily, Father Walsh said, "We must accept two norms, justice and charity. We must restore the historical phenomena by means of history and not treaties."

Isolation for Doctrine

Father Walsh still believes profoundly that the United States should and can keep out of war. "As Catholics we must assist disarmament."

Conclusively, Father Walsh further stated, "We must be against such countries as Italy, Russia and Germany because of their philosophy and not because of their treaties."

In the discussion which followed Father Walsh brought out some interesting facts concerning individual countries involved in the present chaos of war.

INTRODUCING

Marie Scutakes '43, a social science student here at U. V. M., who went to school in Athens for a year and was in Europe when war was declared.

Marie Scutakes and her sister Ann left New York in September, 1938, for Greece. They went to the Azores Islands, to Lisbon, to Algiers, to Naples and then to Greece. There they entered the American College for Girls, located in Athens. There were about forty American girls and two hundred and fifty other girls from all over Europe enrolled there. Marie says the work wasn't as difficult there as it is here; she took a regular classical course. The school was Americanized and the food was half Greek and half American, but it was very good. They were under very strict rules, not being able to go out at all at night and were allowed only two afternoons a week out. In Athens the movies are all in French and although Marie didn't know a great deal of French she went just the same.

Track is the main sport in Athens, and they do not have football or basketball. The educational system is similar to ours except there is an extra year of high school and a lot of courses made compulsory by the government, such as the study of Ancient Greek.

The first thing that impressed Marie as they docked were the mountains, which were all rocks and were a brownish orange, some different from the green ones in Vermont, Marie added with a smile. It looked dry and quiet, too.

The people of Athens are very small in build. Agriculture is the most important way to earn a living. There is a low standard of living and it doesn't cost much to live there. The houses in Athens are modern, square, and are painted very light shades. Outside of Athens they are more backward, not having running water or electricity. Just the lower classes of people work, the wealthy just sit around. The main ambition of a girl is to get married, and very few go to universities. Except for the lower classes, girls do not go into professions.

Marie said very emphatically that the roads were terrible, the worst ones she has ever seen. It is very hot in Greece, and the summer they were there it was the hottest it had ever been. It is so hot one never goes out in the afternoon without a hat. All stores close in the afternoon. The stores differ from ours in that one store sells only one particular thing. For example, a drugstore sells

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Shirley Mayforth, in her letter of vember 20, sums up very nicely the sensus of opinion of those students ested in a better system of election U. V. M.

We are indeed fortunate to have editor who, when she sees a chance improvement among student activi isn't afraid to dig down to the crux the trouble.

Most students will admit that our tem of voting is rather haphazard lax. The election sponsored by Cha plain Sabres was conducted in parti larly unethical fashion. Because this the first election of the year the edi was perfectly justified in airing its sho comings so that steps may be taken improve future balloting. As a resu elections in the future will be, witho doubt, handled in a much more effici manner.

It is unfortunate, however, that situation got out of hand in the beginnin but it is even more unfortunate that persons responsible for the conditions we unable to take criticism in the spirit which it was imparted.

Rebuttal is the right of every studen but the rude and ungentlemanly manne in which it was attempted on Novembe 18 is an indicant of very poor sports manship.

Only a diamond will do

There come occasions in the course of life when gratification and happiness are so profound that adequate expression becomes difficult. These are times when the deathless fire of a diamond can convey the emotions that defy speech.

The gems you choose for these spokesmen should be worthy of their mission. You can make sure of this by purchasing them only from a jeweler of unquestioned integrity.

We shall gladly help you in the selection of a stone for any occasion . . . shall gladly explain the four important qualities which determine the worth of any diamond.

The Lull Before

There comes a period in all the affairs of men when there is a temporary lull and this is one of them. Preparing themselves for the opening of a high-pressure hoop season, the Catamounts are holding practice sessions in the Gym. Chances for a good quintet are bright with Taylor, Corley, Pye, Maley and Beauchemin on hand. Early in the season as it is, speculation is already rife as everyone is wondering if Hank can set the pace he set here two years ago. If he can, Fuzzy will have the man he has been looking for to take Anse Belardinelli's place. At all events, Evans has a good nucleus of veterans to build a team around. The cancellation of the long traditional opening game with McGill, due to war conditions in Canada, brings the international situation closer home.

Bowl Selections

With Thanksgiving almost here and the football season drawing to a close the football experts are looking around for Rose Bowl candidates. Stanford's surprise team is almost certain of one bid. But the other selection is not so simple. The fall of mighty Cornell narrows the field of course, but that still leaves Boston College, Texas A. and M., and Tennessee as candidates. Minnesota, though undefeated, is ruled out by fact that it does not accept invites to post-season games. Well, as far as we're concerned, we'd love to have Kimbrough and Company cavort at Pasadena. And Boston College versus Tennessee in one of the other bowls would be an appetizing side-dish which might very well prove as nourishing as the main course.

Looking back on the season—Stanford's rise to glory is the best stunt of the year. Picked to win about zero games the Palo Alto boys upset everything to achieve national acclaim.—For the top-notch thrillers of the year we pick the Army-Notre Dame game and the Dartmouth-Cornell photo-finish.—For the outstanding back of the year we pick Harmon (any arguments?).—For the best plunger of the year, Kimbrough.

And seeing this is a grid column, remember Bob Hope's crack about sitting so high in the stadium that every time a plane came along he had to lift his feet to let it pass.

Well, don't let the turkey gobble you up.

Male Volley Ballers Invade Southwick

Eight boys under the leadership of Barry Gardner of the men's physical education department invaded the girls' gym at Southwick last Thursday, where they were outnumbered four to one by the girls.

Two teams of eight each played volleyball. Mr. Gardner, L. Harrington '43, J. R. Swift, Jr., '43 and H. W. Kennedy, '43 and four girls made up one team, while A. J. Senuta '41, R. B. F. Mullens '43, M. A. Cozzolino '43 and W. B. Shea, Jr., '43 and four girls were their opponents. Girls' rules were played. Another such meet is planned for Friday, December 6.

There will be no volleyball class on Tuesday, November 26, because of the rearranged class schedules.

Cynic Gets Low-Down on Misty Rice

Captain-elect Prefers Blonde Cheerleaders

"Operator, 430 please."

"Kappa Sigma house at your service."

"Is Misty Rice in?"

(Voice heard reverberating over the whole house): "Hey, Misty, telephone."

(Five minutes elapse): "Hello, this is Misty."

"Busy now, Rice?"

"Yah, gotta do some of that nauseating Spanish. What do you want?"

"We want to interview you."

"Huh?"

"We mean for the CYNIC."

"Oh, that's different."

"Will you have time tomorrow noon?"

"Yup, you can come over then."

On the morrow, at noon, we saw Harold Misty Rice '42 peering out of a window awaiting the press.

After the conventional greetings and salutations, we sank into an extremely comfortable overstuffed mohair sofa and then started to shoot the questions.

"How does it feel to be the captain-elect of football?"

"Fine! I am very grateful to have such a great honor bestowed upon me."

A captaincy is not a new experience for our athletic veteran. While at Lyman High School in his native New Haven, Misty was the baseball captain, playing at first base. He also starred in his capacity as right tackle on the football aggregation.

After high school graduation, Hal invaded Cushing Academy. There he captained the football and baseball outfits as a center and first baseman, respectively.

Misty's aptitude as an athlete and leader again appeared as a freshman at U. V. M. Here he led the frosh gridiators through a most successful season with not one defeat. Also the strength of the freshman baseball team was augmented by his invaluable services as initial sackman.

In his sophomore year, 1939, Misty centered the ball for the Catamounts until injuries prevented him from completing the season. This year Rice has shown up prominently in many spectacular plays and constantly was an integral part of the U. V. M. defense machine.

Although Misty has not played any varsity baseball, he vigorously informed us that we can expect to see him in uniform this coming season.

Changing the subject a bit, we popped a few non-athletic questions.

"Who's your favorite actress, Misty?"

"Bette Davis."

"Why?"

"Because she went to Cushing Academy."

"What is your favorite subject?"

After musing awhile, he replied, "By all means, Labor Problems."

"What is your reaction to the recent presidential election?"

"The returns were as I expected. I was certain that the majority of the Americans would see through the darkness of the political propaganda."

Misty Rice smokes a cigarette occasionally, especially "in those distressing moments."

He has no girl friends because he is "too busy with school."

In his spare moments Harold Rice soothes his nerves by playing his sax and clarinet, whose sweet melodic strains flow gently through the Kappa Sigma house.

Misty feels that the University of Vermont should carry on a very intensive athletic subsidy program. He says that since good athletic teams are essential factors in modern colleges, U. V. M. should subsidize to the extent of free tuitions and all living expenses paid.

His favorite pastime is day-dreaming and collecting unique drinking glasses.

"Misty, what's your opinion concerning female cheerleaders?"

"Ah, a fine topic of discussion. A co-ed college such as Vermont should have female cheerleaders, preferably blondes, who will undoubtedly arouse much-needed college spirit."

Although he does not take advanced military, Rice is wholeheartedly in favor of conscription. Also he stated that "students should do their utmost to preserve the ideals set down by the fathers of our country."

"What is your vocation?"

"Despite the fact that I registered and have a low order number, I want to become an aviator; in fact, I will sign up for the government aviation corps this week."

As the sun was setting, Misty started to yawn, a gentle hint. But we could not leave his suave presence without a final query: "Why did you enjoy the Middlebury game?"

"Cuz we just moidered those gallant Muddleburians for the first time on Porter Field in twenty-one years."

Congratulations!

To Prof. and Mrs. H. A. Prentice on the birth of a son, Monday, November 25.

Marie Scutakes

only drugs. Marie is very much in favor of this system.

She belonged to the Youth Movement there and marched in parades. They wore blue and white uniforms. The youth are very serious compared to the Americans.

The buildings, especially the Parthenon, impressed them a great deal. The parades are beautiful and elaborate uniforms are worn. The Royal Guards are also impressive. Dramatics are stressed in Greece and many good plays are given.

They spent their Christmas vacation visiting Greece and during their Easter recess they went to Rome for two weeks. While there they saw and heard the Pope give his message of peace on Easter Sunday. They also saw Mussolini and Goering pass by and they look just like the pictures we see of them. The girls were docked in an Albanian port the night Italy marched into Albania. They were in a practice air raid one night, and later in France they were in a real one. Sirens blew and they all went underground until they blew again for them to come up.

In the summer they rented a house in Old Phaleron and they were planning to enter the University of Paris for a year, but due to the war scare they were advised to leave Europe. At the end of August they flew from Athens to Rome and took a train to Paris. The next day war was declared. They had tickets on the "Normandie" but since France was at war they weren't any good. The girls were advised to leave Paris, and so they went to Havre, where they stayed about a week. However, there were so many Americans there that they couldn't get passage on a boat. So they decided to go back to Paris and stayed three weeks. Finally they got passage on a very small boat that never crossed the Atlantic. They went to Bordeaux and were to sail September 28 but it was postponed three times. They had to borrow money from the American Consul three times while in Bordeaux.

Finally they sailed on Friday the 13th of October, and it turned out to be a mutiny ship. They stopped at Portsmouth, England, and at Queenstown, Ireland.

Marie thinks the people of Europe as a whole are more friendly and hospitable than they are here. Marie went on to say that the people of Greece thought Americans were wonderful and that they were all wealthy. They call us "Crazy Americans." If you are an American and do anything they will excuse you because you are a crazy American.

November 1916

"Proc Night" will be held on November 24 from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. during which time there will be a period of general hostilities when sophomores and freshmen may be captured anywhere by the opposing class and held in captivity. The count will be taken at 7:30 p.m. by Boulder, followed by a series of Dummy Rushes between the two classes. At 9:15 wrestling matches will be held in the gym, and the evening will be finished off at 10:30 with the revival of an old custom—the keg rush. It's all right, it's only sweet cider!

Intramural Bowling Well Under Way

A Few Bowlers Roll Impressive Scores

Intramural bowling continued, the pin men of Delta Psi defeating both Kappa Sig 7-0, and the Phi Delt contingent 6-1, with a high team score of 981 to 978 and 961 respectively. Limey Gallup '41 took high doubles in both matches with 211, and high singles from Kappa Sigma with 110, but J. Sudbay '41 of the Phi Delts salvaged one point by taking high singles with 113.

Phi Sigma Delta defeated Tau Epsilon Phi by a score of 5⅓ to 1⅔. This unusual score is due to the fact that there was a three-way tie for high singles between Paul Dondes '44, Sumner Firestone '41 of TEP and Holzman of Phi Sig, all three bowling 109. Sumner Firestone took high doubles easily with 205. The Phi Sigs netted 5 points with a high team score of 919 to the TEP's 901.

The Independents whitewashed the Faculty by taking all 7 points in their initial match. Their high team score was 959 to the Faculty's 925. Frankie Livak '41, captain of cross-country, proved his versatility by taking high singles with 132 and high doubles with 222.

SAE defeated Kappa Sig by 7-0, by the score of 988 to 978. Ed Guilbert '41 copped high doubles with 235 and high singles with 118.

Basketeers Head For Hartwick

The University of Vermont cagers have been drilling vigorously since the closing of the football season, in preparation for their initial start against Hartwick here on December 5.

Last Saturday afternoon the Cats held a long scrimmage session with the Frosh quintet and displayed a brand of ball that gave indication of a great season. Coach Evans started Capt. Paul Corley and Hank Beauchemin at forwards, Ace Healey at center, and Don Maley and Red White at guards, with Bob Doherty alternating in various positions.

Practices will go on regularly until the opening game and the squad will remain here for further workouts during the Thanksgiving recess.

False Alarm Robs Ski Team of Practice

Unfavorable reports received from Stowe last Friday caused cancellation of the initial practice session of the varsity ski team to be held at Stowe on Sunday. Later reports obtained on Sunday, however, indicated excellent conditions, much to the dismay of Coach Ev. Bailey who was unable to gather his charges together at this late moment.

Conditioning exercises will continue up to the Thanksgiving recess, but immediately upon the resumption of college, practice will be held with skiis on snow as soon as it is available.

Sophomore Aides

In their drive for better standards of dress and for better manners on campus, the Sophomore Aides are featuring a poster-of-the-week depicting the "don'ts" of campus etiquette. Different girls are assigned to the poster, to be found in the Y room, each week.

Debaters Will Go To Washington

Tau Kappa Alpha To Convene Soon

The Vermont debating team plans to send representatives to the Second National Discussion Conference of Tau Kappa Alpha, the honorary forensic society, during Christmas vacation in Washington, D. C. All colleges with chapters of T K A are invited to send one or more delegates to the convention. Thus amid the atmosphere of holiday festivity collegiate delegates from institutions all over the country will discuss international events in the most important capital of the world.

The first of these National Discussion Conferences took place in Chicago last Christmas. At that time Gertrude Johnston '40 and Arnold Becker '41 represented T K A from the University of Vermont. This year we will probably send four delegates, two men and two women. The conference dates are December 30 and 31 and January 1 and 2.

The theme for discussion is, "What should be the policy of the United States in relation to other countries of the western hemisphere as regards defense against agression?" The speakers will be arranged in panels of six speakers with each individual representing a different college. Each group of speakers will participate in a series of seven different panel discussions arranged in a functional sequence which will treat the proposition from the standpoints of problem and causes, solution or alternatives, and action to be taken. Knowledge and ability to evaluate should become very well developed as the speakers or groups continue through the progressive states.

The last, or action phase, of the progression is probably the most important one in that it will provide a necessary and valuable follow-up into the life of the student as a citizen. In this phase the speakers will be allowed to state their final explicit statements as to what measures they believe necessary to put into effect to solve the problem.

Plaques engraved "Superior" will be awarded to the six ranking speakers of the conference. Other plaques and certificates will also be awarded.

Tri-Delts Plan for 52nd Anniversary

Delta Delta Delta members of this city are joining with those all over the nation in commemorating the founding of their fraternity at Boston University on Thanksgiving eve, 1888.

Founded with definite provisions in its first constitution for international expansion, it was the seventh women's college society established with similar aims.

Delta Delta Delta, one of the original six organizations to form the first National Pan-Hellenic Congress, has grown during the last half century and more until it now numbers 29,030 members, affiliated with 87 active collegiate chapters and 125 alumnae groups in the United States and Canada.

This year's celebration is, as always, to honor the four founders of Delta Delta Delta—Ida Shaw Martin, Eleanor Dorcas Pond, Florence Isabelle Stewart, and Isabel Morgan Breed.

Delta Delta Delta now has an endowment fund created to supplement already existing collegiate scholarships. The Fiftieth Anniversary Fellowship Fund is used to aid in specialized pursuits of graduate members, thus establishing itself as a part of the national education service that is a major policy of the fraternity.

One hundred and fifty-four members of the fraternity were listed in the 1939 volume of Who's Who of American Women.

Eta chapter will hold a special meeting Tuesday night at the chapter house in honor of their Founders' Day.

A. J. Taggart Leads First A. S. C. E. Meeting

Pres. A. J. Taggart '41 conducted the first meeting of the Vermont Student Branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers on Friday, November 22, in the Engineering Building. Short talks of interest to all engineering students were given by G. I. Palmer '41, H. S. Wilson '41, O. R. Clark '42 and Prof. M. H. Aldrich.

G. E. Rickard, chemist at the Water Filter Plant in Burlington, was elected new contact member for the students. Mr. Rickard is a member of national A. S. C. E. and hails from Wheeling, W. Va.

Museum Honors National Art Week

How many common, everyday slogans can you think of off-hand? To be sure, they are as numerous as the D's and F's which plague us every time we turn around. But, a brand new, unusual slogan has entered our midst; to you who are all ears, and to you disillusioned individuals who aren't, this precious brainchild is "American Art For Every American Home."

"And what product is this slogan plugging?" you ask. Well, we'll tell you. Its sponsor is Uncle Sam; it's plugging National Art Week, which had its premiere yesterday in thousands of cities throughout the land, and will continue for an entire week. These exhibitions of craftsmen are being held for the purpose of furthering America's interest in its native art and craft work. All exhibits are a sales exhibition, where an effort will be made to sell the handwork of our nation's artists and craftsmen.

In Vermont, six sales exhibitions are being held and in this vicinity the Fleming Museum is such a sales center. In the past months the Fleming Museum has brought many exhibitions to this community and there has been a lively response from the people of the community. During the past few weeks the staff of the museum issued a call for all local painting and craft work, and this instance proved to be no exception to this rule. The response to this call was gratifying and the staff of the museum as well as the local committee have spent a great amount of time in the preparation of this art exhibit.

There are many attractive articles of wood carving, metal work, and needle work as well as scenes of our countryside and people, on display to the Burlington public as well as the entire student body of U. V. M. All of this work is made, of course, by native artists and craftsmen.

The committee for Burlington and the staff of the Fleming Museum invite you to visit this exhibition and to make a purchase.

Be a patron of the arts by purchasing the handwork of Vermont craftsmen. To be a patron of the art, even by a single purchase, is to give encouragement to artistic expression.

This is National Art Week. Cooperate by making "American Art For Every American Home" come true.

Trapp Family to To Give Concert Tonight at 8.15

Tyrolean Singers Have Thrilled Audiences Of Scattered Globe

The Trapp Family Singers, who will be heard in this city on Tuesday evening at 8.15, December 3, at the Memorial Auditorium, are unique in the concert world today for their artistry, their infectious good spirits, their own special charm. These artists first learned to make music for their own pleasure in the beautiful Tyrolean castle which was their former home. Now, on the concert stage, the singing family still retains the same youthful exuberance, the same spontaneity and enjoyment which characterized its own private music-making. They will appear under the auspices of the Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary, the last of a series of concerts.

The group is composed of the wife, the five daughters and two sons of the aristocratic Baron Georg von Trapp, and is led by a young composer-clergyman, Dr. Franz Wasner. Maria Augusta, the wife, is a contralto, as is also twenty-year-old Hedwig. Agatha and Johanna are the first sopranos, Maria and Martina, second sopranos, Werner, tenor, and Rupert, bass. Each member of the family has perfect pitch, and they sing acappella, without need of accompaniment.

Living Room to Concert Hall

It was the beloved soprano, Lotte Lehmann, who first heard the Trapp family sing in their own Tyrolean home and urged them to start on what has become a far-reaching professional career. Thus encouraged, the family went to work seriously, won a folk song competition before former Chancellor Kurt Schussnigg who then invited them to sing at a festival he was giving at the Belvedere Palace in Vienna. Concert tours followed all over Europe. In London they sang for Queen Mary, who took them to her heart, as do concert audiences everywhere. During the past four years they have made successful concert tours in England, France, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Italy and Holland. This season will be their third in this country, where from coast to coast they have made friends and rekindled enthusiasm for the magnificent music they sing.

Songs Outlasts Country

Much water has gone under the bridge since the Trapp family roamed over the Tyrolean countryside, learning the folk songs and mountain calls of one of the happiest races of the world. Austria as a country no longer exists and the aristocratic Trapp family have left their lovely home near Salzburg to take up residence in Italy, from which country they have

P. O. T. C. Mystery Party Cleared Up

More Students To Be Drafted in Future

Well folks, it's still a mystery! (It should be if it isn't.) What those letters P. O. T. C. are hiding is still unknown to the general public, Boulder and Mortar Board members being the only legal insiders on the story. However, it will do no good whatsoever to ask any one of them the secret because all you will ever get will be a grin and a "maybe sometime."

Although they still aren't sure what it's all about, the draftees will doubtlessly tell you they enjoyed every minute of P. O. T. C. About fifty women and fifty men reported for duty at Southwick Tuesday evening at 9 p.m. after being notified that their page and list number in the new Directory had been drawn. Bits seen during this super novelty were: Professor Millikan and his trumpet—Dean Simpson enjoying it all as much as the draftees—Prof. and Mrs. W. R. Adams, Jr., dropping in at Southwick just in time for—things—Professor Ladd right in there, too—people desperately running around with queer properties—and, oh yes, cokes and cinnamon apples for refreshments.

Even though Boulder and Mortar Board are mean enough to keep their little(?) secret all to themselves, we've got to hand it to them for they did all right by it! A few Sophomore Aides helped in small ways, refreshments and other accessories.

It is hoped that in the future there will be another draft and who knows? You might be among the draftees because the entire student body is included in the Directory and any name might be drawn. And also, another time, we might find out what P. O. T. C. really means and as Bill Pye says we'll P. O. T. C. 'ing you!

Prof. Doane Speaks On Radio Program

Prof. R. Doane of the University French department spoke about "The Right of France" on the first of a series of radio programs sponsored jointly by the Cynic and Station WCAX and which will broadcast Tuesday, November 26. M. J. Levin '41 directed the program; A. J. Katzew '42 announced college sports news; and Jeanne Woolley '42 announced the women's campus news.

Plans are afoot for broadcasting skits by the dramatic club and having prominent campus personalities speak. On December 17, the choir will sing a program of Christmas carols, M. J. Levin '41, director, announced Monday. Any students or student organizations having requests or suggestions about future programs are urged to see M. J. Levin '41, director of the Cynic Radio Program.

Junior Election Postponed Again

Dean Swift in an announcement today said that the election of the treasurer of the junior class which was to have been held Wednesday, December 4, will not be held on that date. Since such a small number attended the nominating meeting on Monday, November 25, no nominations were made. Announcements regarding the election will be made later.

Vivier to Lecture Tomorrow Night

Major Max Vivier will give a French lecture entitled "Cinq Femmes que j'ai Connues" at Southwick tomorrow evening, December 4, at 8.00 o'clock. The lecture will be open to all students. A social hour, to which the students are cordially invited, will follow the lecture.

In the spring the Alliance Française, the organization which is sponsoring Major Vivier's lecture, will give two prizes of $15 and $10 to the students who write the best essay on the French lectures of the year.

Sigma Gamma Plans Founder's Day Tea

In honor of the twentieth anniversary of its founding, Sigma Gamma will hold various functions the week-end of December 14 and 15. Among these will be a banquet for members at the Hotel Vermont, and a tea at Southwick at which the active chapter will join the alumnae in presenting charter members and patronesses to its guests.

In the fall of 1920, nine college girls decided to form a new sorority, based on the democratic spirit and traditions of Vermont. Since it was established to be typical of Vermont, Sigma Gamma has never joined a national organization and in this she is unique at our university. Because of the relatively small size of the active group, the Burlington alumnae join in many of their activities.

An interest in the out-of-doors as well as other social events has always been a characteristic of these girls. They have received the Jacobs Cup for high scholarship for a majority of the twenty years of the sorority's existence.

The activities of the week-end are being given to honor the founders of Sigma Gamma and to express appreciation to those who have built it up.

JUNIORS—All portrait proofs must be turned in to the Book Store, Tuesday, December 3.—R. B. Hunting, Editor.

There will be a Staff and Sandal meeting on Thursday, December 5, at 4.15 p.m., at Southwick.—Joanna Metcalf, President.

There will be a very important meeting of the advertising staff of the Cynic, Wednesday noon, December 4, at 1.30 p.m., in the Cynic Office.

Seven Sororities Pledged 103 Women Yesterday

Alpha Chi Tops List With Thirty; Tri Delts and Pi Phis Follow

Climaxing two months of rushing teas and formal parties, the seven U. V. M. sororities last evening pledged 103 women of the 133 who received bids. Alpha Chi Omega topped the list with 30 pledges, the Tri Delts were next with 22, and the Pi Phis were third with 21 new pledges. Delta Phi Epsilon pledged 12, Kappa Alpha Theta, 10, Sigma Gamma, 5 and Alpha Xi Delta pledged 3.

Following the pledge suppers all the sororities attended a local theater with their new pledges.

The following is a list of the 103 new pledges of U. V. M.'s seven sororities:

Press Conference Held at U. V. M.

Prof. L. W. Dean Is University Host

Press correspondents of the Women's Clubs of the State held a conference in cooperation with the University of Vermont on Saturday, November 30. The conference was arranged by the clubs of the northwest district, who extended an invitation to correspondents of all other clubs in the State to be present. Town newspaper correspondents throughout the State and any others interested in publicity work were also invited.

The conference was held at the Southwick Building of the University, on the Redstone campus, opening at ten o'clock in the morning and closing at three o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Lawrence H. Marvin of Essex Junction was in charge for the Women's Clubs and Prof. Leon W. Dean for the University.

Among the morning speakers were Mrs. Newton H. Emmons of Morrisville; Mr. Howard J. Perry, manager of WCAX, Burlington Daily News radio station; and Mr. Harry R. Stevens, also of Burlington, news photographer.

Mr. Perry discussed among other things the use of the radio as a means of obtaining valuable organization publicity. Mr. Stevens spoke on the advantages of photography in organization and general news work. Mrs. Emmons talked on club publicity problems, using as a background the club publicity handbook, "What Makes You Think So?"

An effort was made to make the program as elastic as possible in order to give opportunity for questions and answers and general discussion. Members of the conference presented their individual problems and offered suggestions on the various ways in which they could obtain successful publicity.

Mr. Harry P. Mileham, Extension editor of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University, talked on the afternoon program and led the discussion. His subject was news writing, dealing with such matters as the reporting of meetings and other club activities in acceptable news form.

32 Girls Enroll in 2nd Red Cross Class

A second group of co-eds has enrolled in the Red Cross first aid course starting Thursday, December 5. Thirty-two girls are included in this second class, which has been formed because of popular demand. Dean Hardy A. Kemp of the Medical College is in charge of arrangements for all Red Cross instruction courses in this locality, and will secure a physician as instructor in the course, to be announced later. Red Cross first aid books are prerequisites to this course.

Those taking this second Red Cross first aid course are: Althea Abell '41, Jane Allen '41, Geraldine Annis '42, Mildred Belville '42, Mary Bissell '42, Barbara M. Burns '43, Anne Cohn '42, Martha Crane '41, Louise Davis '42, Flora Fifield '42, Nancy Goodwin '42, Ida Hall '42, Mary Hosley '41, Carol Isacksen '42, Frances Machia '41, Jean Mann '42, Elizabeth Marshall '41, Madeline Martin '41, Shirley Mayforth '41, Dorothy Murphy '42, Hilda Paquette '42, Marolyn Powers '42, Alice Reichman '42, Marion Roy '42, Jean Saul '41, Ruth Spiwak '42, Helen Witham '42, Mildred Cohen '41, June Riddell '42, Barbara Butterfield '42, Joyce Woodruff '42 and Peggy Dean Abbott '41.

The activities of "Fifth Columnists" are apparently becoming more threatening and may prove a menace to colleges and universities. Evidence for this observation is found in the fact that the 400 delegates to the National Interfraternity Conference which was held last week in New York, were urged strongly to help the government combat fifth-column activities in colleges and universities in the "American way." The man who urged the fraternity men to do their part was Inspector Louis B. Nichols, administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"In times of peace," Mr. Nichols said, "we can combat their activities best by blocking out their interference. In doing this we can do it in the American way without the castor-oil purges of fascism, the concentration camps of nazism or the Siberias of communism. In counseling you to be calm, but yet vigilant may I point out that assistance can best be rendered during these crucial times by calling to the attention of the FBI anything that seems to indicate possible activities of espionage agents, saboteurs or subversives."

Mr. Nichols also warned the representatives of 850,000 American college men, "Never in the history of our country has our national security been menaced as it is today. That time has arrived when we must meet the menace of massed attack by those who would despoil our liberty and our life. One thing is certain—America has become the battleground of foreign agents who weave their web of alien philosophies to ensnare America into the darkness and scuttle and destroy our national defense."

We believe that Mr. Nichols has made a significant challenge to American college students when he asks them to help our government combat the menace of fifth columnists' activities. If we are constantly alert to the problem we may be able to help bring to an end some of the problems that are now endangering the "American Way."

Hold That Line

Our Congress and the Administration are very busy at the present time deciding what measures are necessary to prevent the present war from developing into a new and greater war in which we will have to fight. The noted columnist Walter Lippmann recently stated that if Britain were to be defeated the torrent of war would break out upon all oceans and into all continents. Therefore it would seem that our country should give all the aid to Britain that she can afford without seriously crippling her own defense program. If we help to hold the line of defense which now separates us from the existing war, we are actually taking the only means by which our involvement will be short of war. As Mr. Lippmann says, "When there is no longer a firm buffer between ourselves and the three allied aggressors then our defense will no longer be by measures short of war but by total and actual war."

It would not be a wise move to form a union now with Britain for that would plunge the United States into a war for which she is not prepared. Therefore, it would seem that only by taking promptly and resolutely all the measures which confine the war within the grip of the British sea power, and therefore hold it off at a distance where no one can fight us, shall we have done our whole duty in protecting the American people from war.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

For the past few days certain members of the French Club have been soliciting funds on the campus for the relief of French children. They tell us that these funds will be used exclusively for the purpose for which they are intended, and that they can be of no benefit to the Nazis.

I believe that it is impossible for the people of this country to give material aid to the French people without materially hurting the British cause, which is the cause of all democracy. Even if things could be so managed that the particular money and/or supplies which we sent abroad would be used only in France, Hitler would still benefit. He must keep the French people supplied with the necessities of life if he is to keep them subjugated, and any aid which we send to them will relieve him of so much responsibility.

It is natural and right that we should wish to give what comfort we can to a helpless and ruined country, but is it not better that Frenchmen should suffer, and even die, than that England should be handicapped in her fight and our fight by actions of ours?

NOTICE !

At the postponed meeting of the Liquor Study Class, held at Converse Hall lounging room at 7:30 Wednesday evening, the subject of "The Psychology of Prohibition" was discussed. It is hoped that by uniting forces both the Debating Club and the Liquor Study Class will gain new members and new strength.

WANTED: students to join the A. C. Spear Fire Co. About a dozen have already joined and others have signified their intention to do so. The training which the members of a fire company receive is exceedingly valuable. How to conduct yourself at a fire is quite as practical and valuable a piece of knowledge as any of you can pick up. The University has a large amount of valuable property in the first ward and should be well represented in this company.

"Where Is My Home?" Is Title Of Czech Refugee's Theme

The first of this semester's issues of the CYNIC carried an interview of a refugee student now at U. V. M.—Jacob Katz '44. The CYNIC is publishing this theme, entitled, "Where Is My Home?" which was written by Katz as an English I assignment, as it is felt that such a student's story will be of interest to all CYNIC readers.

We sat in a compartment of a train standing at the Massaryk Railway Station in Prague. It was September 30, 1938 and about one o'clock in the morning. We were very tired. Since the end of August, the beginning of the strained relations between Czecho-Slovakia and Germany, we, members of different youth organizations in Prague, had worked for national defense almost eighteen hours a day. Since September 23, the day of the mobilization, we slept mostly at the station, because we did not have any time to go home. Too much work had to be done. Every hour, trains with refugees from the border regions came in. These people had to get food and had to be sent further inland. Every hour, troop trains went out to face the enemy at the frontiers. Under the guidance of some experienced men we did almost all that had to be done to keep the railway station working.

After midnight, we usually found some time to sleep in an empty compartment of a train which was going to leave Prague in the early morning. But we could not find sleep that night. A conference in Munich, which was going to decide our future, kept us awake. We expected every hour the result of the conference, but we did not think that there would be peace. We knew that there was no reason at all for us to give up one inch of our territory. It had belonged to us for centuries and we were strong. Fortifications, 1,000,000 soldiers, at that time the best trained and armed in Europe; 1,700 planes against 2,500 German machines, one anti-aircraft gun every inch around the big cities and vital industrial centers, and a united people of 12,000,000 standing behind its president were some of the reasons which made us confident. We knew, of course, that in spite of all we could not hold out German pressure indefinitely, but with the help of our friends (what kind of friends they were we found out later), France and England, we could not lose. In this manner we talked for some hours and, in spite of expecting or because of expecting war, all of us were in high spirits; we did not know then what war really means.

Suddenly the door was opened. One of our friends, who was working at the telegraph office of the station entered. Unfortunately my English is too weak to describe his appearance. He almost did not breathe, his face was as white as a tablecloth, and he did not speak one word. We sprang up and asked him whether war was declared and we told him that he should be glad instead of afraid. But slowly we heard something quite unexpected: "Czecho-Slovakia has to give the Sudeten region to Germany."

Nobody spoke a word. We sat down again. Everyone of us was busy with his thoughts. We did not know what was going to happen, but we knew Czecho-Slovakia would not exist very long under these conditions. Once one part was taken, Germany would like the whole and then we will not be able to defend ourselves any more, as our fortifications and natural defense lines would be lost. All our work had been in vain. It began already to dawn and still we were sitting silently. From afar we suddenly heard the tune of our national anthem: "Kde domov muj?—Where is my home?" It was lost in this very night, but not forever.

Old Newspaper Tells Of U.V.M.

A page from University of Vermont history is preserved and recalled by a 1877 newspaper, which has been on exhibition at the Fleming Museum.

The New York Daily Graphic of October 8, 1877, shows, in the journalism of sixty-three years ago, a picture of the University Medical College building of that period. The building is still in existence and is now used by the University to house Agricultural Experiment Station offices.

The Graphic also carried in the lengthy article which accompanied the picture, many facts of historical interest about the settlement and growth of the city of Burlington and further data concerning the University's founding and subsequent career.

The article states that the University of Vermont Medical College was founded in 1822, although a lecturer in Chirurgery and Anatomy had been appointed as early as 1804, the fourth year of regular instruction at the University.

The old copy of the New York Graphic is the property of the Fleming Museum and will be kept among its numerous historical archives.

Students Attend School by Radio

Ames, Iowa (ACP).—Going to school by radio no longer is a fantasy to Iowa high school students. Hundreds of them put aside their books every Monday afternoon for radio class work. The series, "It's Your Future," is being broadcast from WOI, Iowa State College station by the department of vocational education.

Its purpose is to acquaint high school students with vocational opportunities. Vocational guidance speakers, leaders in their fields, are interviewed by Prof. A. Hausrath.

Hoop Notes

Thanksgiving over and plenty of snow on the ground to let us know it's winter—all of which means that basketball and skiing are here to stay for a while. The hoopsters, having drilled all during the turkey recess, are ready for the initial plunge against Hartwick. Following that the games come in swift succession. This year's schedule marks a closer touch with the big time than Vermont has ever known. The appearance of such teams as Fordham, Holy Cross and Dartmouth on the schedule in the same season proves a growing tendency to boost basketball here. And if teams can be turned out which can capably meet high-caliber competition there's no reason why more and more big teams shouldn't appear on the schedule. For of late the smaller colleges have been realizing that basketball can be just as profitable as football. In fact the smaller number of players needed makes it easier for them to compete on even terms with bigger rivals. And the large attendance at hoop games throughout the East and Middlewest proves that the cash customers go for basketball well-played in high gear. So we're all for boosting basketball here at U. V. M. All we're praying for is a quintet which can send away the rooters satisfied.

Right now it seems that the starting quintet will be Taylor, Maley, Beauchemin, Healy and Corley if his injury doesn't keep him on the bench. With Bill Pye, Les Brown, Red White, and Bob Doherty all available it would seem Coach Evans has a good nucleus to work with. Rumor has it that sophomore Doherty is putting up a good scrap for a starting berth.

Random Shots

A sidelong glance at the football finale reveals a big Texas A. and M. upset and a very scrambled Rose Bowl situation—we're still backing the Lone Star boys for that bid but Stanford seems to be eyeing Nebraska—we can't argue with those Sugar Bowl selections of Tennessee and Boston College—anybody wanna bet—says Harmon—"Nix on professional football"—says one sports writer—"Harmon's hula hip action is not in evidence as he strides down a hotel lobby"—we have no longer any doubts concerning the Cornell-Dartmouth game—we've seen the pictures of that fifth down four times now—Bill Stearns has never heard of Walt Domina or at any rate he didn't pick him for his Little all-American team—who said there was anything wrong with our Navy—it licked the Army didn't it?—and maybe those Eastern all-Stars are going to have a team with Harmon, Franck, Evaghevski and others already signed up—and maybe I ought to shut up, what!

Presenting Wally Harding

Nowadays it is the custom to blame everything that goes wrong in this country on President Roosevelt or Yehudi, but contrary to popular belief, Yehudi is not responsible for one thing on the campus, that is the raising and lowering of the flag on the front campus every morning and night. The person responsible for this is none other than Wally Harding, head and sole janitor of the Billings Library.

Leading us down, down into the deep depths of that massive structure through mazes, labyrinths and circular staircases, he finally introduced us into his own inner sanctum where he proceeded to give us the inside dope on students on the campus. In his position of head janitor (or custodian, this promotion being very recent) and official bouncer of the library, Wally gets acquainted with many of the students before they graduate and is well qualified to state his views on this subject.

"On the whole," Wally says, "The students here are very pleasant and well-mannered, and easy to get along with. I seldom have any trouble in maintaining order in the library, and any trouble that I do have is usually with the freshmen. During the years I make friends with many of the students, and this room here (the smoking room) is often the scene of many hot political arguments. Just a minute, my soup is burning. (He was eating dinner.) I can never see a class graduate without regret, for I am always losing some friends in it, although many graduates, when they come back again, always stop in to visit me."

Mr. Harding's hobbies are many and varied. In bowling he ekes out a mean ninety-four while in fishing he is a good fisherman when the fish are biting well. Wally is also an iceboat enthusiast and has traveled as fast as a mile a minute over Lake Champlain. Another favorite sport of his is tramping through woods on a Sunday with his wife. Ast to political opinions, Wally was very cautious, although he did mention that he was for Willkie, even though it didn't matter any longer, and he thought that, since the election was over, everyone ought to forget their politics and cooperate with the President to preserve our democracy.

Working in a library, it would be strange if Mr. Harding did not like to read. But such is not the case. His favorite reading material are mechanical magazines, the Saturday Evening Post, and last, but not least, the CYNIC, his drawers being stuffed full with back copies of those as proof of his loyalty as a CYNIC reader.

A Collegian's Broadway

By JOE WHITLEY

New York City.—At Vassar they were rival queens in the campus social whirl. They beguiled their starry-eyed classmates for four long years with tales of their family background and gold hoards. They were graduated in 1938. They met for the first time since school at the Vassar Club here last winter. Each mentioned, very vaguely, a career in "interior decorating" and "social work."

They met for the second time last March. Of all places they had to bump into one another at Madison Square Garden where the little Cæsar of the extravaganza, Billy Rose, was holding one of his colossal try-outs for showgirls, dancers and swimmers for his 1940 Aquacade show. Both were picked as mermaids.

It had gone far enough. All of a sudden they retired to hold a peace conference and to tell all. One had been toiling as a taxi dancer at the Roseland Dance Hall. The other had been a candy girl at a Broadway five-and-ten.

Sounds at Midnight

On West 54th Street there is a nightly round of drama both comic and tragic.

The back-drop is a dimly-lighted room called "Night Court."

Here come the derelicts and the drunks, the brawlers and the beggars, the meek and the magniloquent.

Sometimes there is a moment of high tragic-comedy, such as we caught last Saturday night, when a dishevelled gentleman swayed unevenly before hizzoner.

It seemed that the judge knew old Yorick of old.

"Well, professor," quoth the legal one, "what'll it be this time? Thirty days?"

"Sir," volleyed the defendant. "I am, as your honor is well aware, a man of no small learning and letters. Harvard knew me well in former times. Am I, a Doctor of Philosophy, to be treated as an ordinary vagabond of the night? Thirty, your eminence? Nay, Sir, I beg of you to remember the Crimson and show it due respect. Give me ninety."

"Ninety it shall be," said the judge with a shrug. "The customer is always right."

"Poly Sci Profs" To Argue On Cynic Program Tonight

You Political Science students! Have you ever wanted to tell your "prof" where to get off? Have you ever wanted to argue with Doctor Nuquist with some measure of success? Have Professor Carroll's lectures ever bored you? Have you ever wondered why Professor Heicher smokes a pipe? Or why Professor Millikan studied Political Science instead of going into opera?

You students of Political Science and interested spectators, here is your chance! Our four "Poly Sci profs" are going to wage a dramatic four-cornered battle of words Tuesday evening, December 3, at 8.30. The combat will take place at the studios of WCAX and every blow and shot of the struggle of Carrol vs. Nuquist vs. Millikan vs. Heicher, will be broadcast on the CYNIC's regular program. The battle will be fought over "American Foreign Policy." The four combatants have been training for two months and reports from lecture rooms—I mean training camps—show all four to be in tip-top condition. Betting odds were 3-2-2-3 two days before the bout.

The battle will be started in a novel way. Meyer Levin '41 will say into a convenient "mike," "Ladies and gentlemen, I have the pleasure of presenting to you the members of the Political Science Department of the University of Vermont, Professors Carroll, Nuquist, Heicher and Millikan, who will participate in a round-table discussion on 'American Foreign Policy.'"

The four fighters, tensed for battle, will be awaiting Levin's signal at the end of his announcement. When they get it, the struggle will begin!

With a scream of sirens, Nuquist's panzer divisions will try to force their way through Heicher's armed defense. Both will be blockaded by Carroll's navy which at present controls the seas. Millikan will hew his way with a sword single-handedly through the ranks of men, all the while singing the glories of the battle at the top of his voice.

Oh, it will be an epic struggle! Don't miss it! Listen Tuesday evening!

Listen to your prof falter for words!

Listen to your prof be unable to answer a question!

Listen to your prof be disagreed with!

Listen to your prof be corrected!

Listen! Listen! Tuesday 8.30 on WCAX.

N. Y. A. Promotes Health Of Workers

A nation-wide program to promote the health and improve the physical fitness of out-of-school young people employed by the National Youth Administration is being put in operation immediately, it was announced today by NYA Administrator Aubry Williams.

As approved by Paul V. McNutt, Administrator of the Federal Security Agency, upon recommendation of Mr. Williams and Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the U. S. Public Health Service, the expanded health program will be carried out by the National Youth Administration in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service and local health officers and physicians.

"One of the major contributions which the National Youth Administration may make in the present emergency is to promote the health and improve the physical fitness of persons eligible for employment on its out-of-school work program," Mr. Williams said. "We know our young people should be toughened physically."

The extent to which the NYA can contribute to better health for the nation's young men and young women is limited by the amount of money available for this purpose. No special funds for improving the physical fitness of young people were carried in the regular NYA appropriation which became available on July 1.

"The health program will be limited to such scope as is practical within the existing financial limitations of the National Youth Administration and will be adapted to the needs and facilities of the various communities," Williams said.

Every youth assigned to the NYA out-of-school work program will be given a complete and technically competent physical examination, as soon as it can be arranged.

Health and medical service facilities provided directly by the National Youth Administration will be used to rehabilitate young people employed on NYA resident projects.

Follow-up services for youth in need of care who are employed on non-resident projects will be made available by utilization of local health facilities in cooperation with local medical officers.

The health and physical fitness of all NYA youth will be improved by physical training, health education, and environmental sanitation.

To facilitate the operation of the new program, Dr. C. B. Rice of the U. S. Public Health Service, has been loaned to the NYA to have general supervision over its health activities. He will be attached to the Washington NYA staff.

It is proposed to appoint a full or part-time physician on the staff of each State Youth Administration to give technical supervision to all NYA health activities in that state.

A state-wide health project will be operated for the remainder of the fiscal year in each state to provide competent physical examinations of all NYA youth. This project will also assist in the technical supervision of all NYA health services and will promote working relationships with existing health agencies. The state-wide project will also provide for health education and for training young people in services related to health.

The Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service has extended to the National Youth Administration an offer of the facilities of the service in connection with the developmental phases of the State programs. Experienced personnel attached to the regional offices of the Public Health Service will be available as consultants to the NYA.

"While the National Youth Administration has already made important contributions to the health and physical fitness of young people, and to better health services in countless communities, more needs to be done. As good health and physical fitness are basic necessities in enabling young men and young women to derive full benefit from work experience and to secure continuing employment, it is the responsibility of the National Youth Administration to insure these by every means at its command," Williams said.

Museum Cooperates In National Art Week

In connection with National Art Week programs there was an art exhibition of etchings, lithographs, woodcuts and other such work at the Fleming Museum from November 13 to November 25. Eight of the pictures were gifts to the museum by Mr. Schnakenberg. All the others come from the Weyhe Gallery of New York City and these were for sale. Outstanding was "Jesse James" by Thomas Hart Benton.

This exhibition was to encourage artistic expression and to further America's interest in native art. The slogan was "American Art for Every American Home."

Women in Sports

Basketball Club

The club will start on Thursday, December 5, and will be open to sophomore girls as a gym elective and to all others who are interested. It will meet after that on Tuesday and Thursday at 4.15.

Volleyball

The second mixed match between the men and the women is scheduled for Friday, December 6, at 4.15.

Archery

The Archery Club, which usually meets on Friday at 4.15, will not meet on December 6.

Fencing

All those interested are requested to read the notice posted by Miss Cummings on the Y Room bulletin board regarding the new classes.

1941 Football Schedule Released

The University of Vermont football schedule for 1941, as released by S. C. Abell, Graduate Manager, here today, lists exactly the same opponents as the schedule just completed, but with a reversal of place in playing.

The Catamounts will open their season away from home, meeting Northeastern at Boston, and the following week-end return for a "Homecoming Date" with Trinity College.

State series games with Norwich and Middlebury on successive Saturdays will terminate the season.

Following is the schedule:

September 27—Northeastern at Boston
October 4—Trinity at Burlington
October 11—Colby at Waterville
October 18—Union at Burlington
October 25—Univ. of New Hampshire at Durham
November 1—Rensselaer at Burlington
November 8—Norwich at Northfield
November 15—Middlebury at Burlington

Museum Sponsors Unique Film Pool

This is the first in a series of short articles which is intended to show the various phases of extension work carried on by the Robert Hull Fleming Museum in Vermont.

The classroom film library is a non-profit-making enterprise designed to further the general education of the pupils in Vermont schools.

To become a member of the film pool a school contributes one film and that entitles the school to use the other reels in the pool. Five years ago there were six films in the library; today there are about 250 films, both silent and sound. This indicates the increased popularity of the worthwhile project.

A school, over a period of five years, pays $75 for a silent film, this compared with the $200 that the schools in other states are charged. The sound films are slightly more, amounting to $100 for five years.

The films are obtained from the United States Government, the Vermont Department of Education, and the Yale University Press in addition to the larger number that are bought. A particularly good set of films was obtained from the Yale Press. It is called "The Chronicles of America" and records events in the United States history from the discovery of America by Columbus through the time of the Revolutionary War. This along with a collection of lantern slides, "The Pageant of America," is available to all schools in the State whether they are members of the classroom pool or not.

The museum acts as the repository for the films, making all bookings, rewinding and repairing films. Mrs. Virginia Whipple, president of the Motion Picture Council of Burlington, is in charge of the films. The Motion Picture Council annually contributes four silent films to the pool, makes it possible for small rural schools and the Burlington Bicycle Club to avail themselves of the films and meets cash emergencies.

The Burlington Lions' Club gave to the museum a motion picture projector which is loaned to schools for a year at a time; meanwhile the students earn money to buy their own projector. At present, this projector is being used at Brigham Academy in Bakersfield.

Only high quality films are used, and the Vermont schools are most fortunate in having such a worthy plan at hand to visually aid students in education. The museum wants all U. V. M. departments to feel free to use the films, and it welcomes any suggestions of reels that would be especially helpful in any course.

College Students Healthier Today

Kent, Ohio (ACP).—Entering students today are in much better physical condition than their predecessors, examinations of 1,000 freshmen entering Kent State University show.

Dr. A. O. DeWeese, director of university health services, said steady improvement has been indicated for twelve years. Outstanding improvement in nutrition has been shown, the doctor said, with body and muscular development also higher.

Delegates Return From Conference

Interfrat Meeting Airs Current Problems

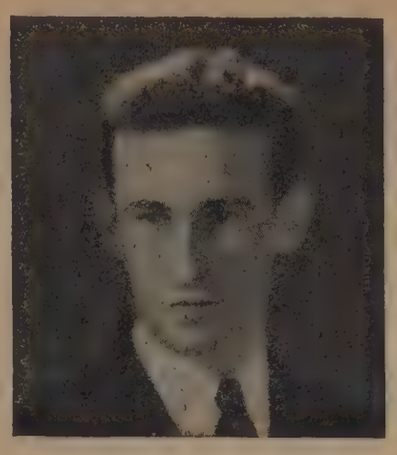
E. A. Guilbert '41, R. P. Kenney '41 and Prof. D. B. Carroll returned Sunday from the National Interfraternity Conference in New York which was highlighted by an address given by Wendell L. Willkie, recent Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States. Mr. Willkie, in speaking before the largest gathering of college fraternity men in history, pleaded with college men to assist in a campaign against the use of personal vilification so that the country's ablest and best men would aspire to national leadership.

Other notable men at the conference were Lowell Thomas, news commentator, who acted as toastmaster, Dr. H. S. Rogers, president of Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, Dr. D. R. Fox, president of Union College, Dr. N. M. Wriston, president of Brown University, and Mr. L. G. Balfour, who was re-elected chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference.

Guests at the conference were the legal fraternity, Phi Delta Phi, and members of the National Pan-Hellenic Council, of which Mrs. Willkie is a member.

Bronze Statue Presented

A four-foot bronze statue, the work of an outstanding French sculptor, was presented the National Interfraternity Conference as the gift of an unnamed "friend of fraternities" by Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, Alpha Chi Rho, president of Union College, to be awarded annually for temporary possession to the undergraduate "interfraternity council which during the year has been outstanding in the formation and execution of a program to make fraternities on its campus contribute constructively to the educational and social program of its institution."



In presenting the award Doctor Fox said:

"The college fraternity is one of the soundest and most effective instruments we have in the training of good citizens. It is a training school in the art of living together. The technique of broad and generous friendship is not learned out of books, nor from professors. I know of no place where it is so likely to be well learned as in the fraternity house."

Undergrads Discuss Problems

At the meeting of the National Undergraduate Interfraternity Council problems were discussed dealing with the effect of the selective service program upon chapters, the relationships with college administrators, cooperative buying, rushing, campus politics, preparation for a war crisis, and constructive contributions to campus life. A definite program for vitalizing interfraternity councils was presented by Frederick Stecker, assistant dean of men at Ohio State.

Art Students Make Posters For Britain

Today a great deal of our time is spent either in working for and knitting "Bundles for Britain" or at least in thinking of the Britons in their time of stress.

The students in the art department of the University have been spending some of their time this fall making posters with "Bundles for Britain" as the background theme. All the ideas are novel, but some of the cleverest are: Uncle Sam holding forth bundles across the Atlantic, guns shooting food and clothes instead of lead to the island, or airplanes dropping bombs of bandages, medicine and supplies on the stricken areas. Then there are the gay carts, animals, jolly sailboats, etc., at the dock ready to meet the long-awaited ships from the United States filled with balm for the sick and wounded—not bomb. There is the cheerful giver and the happy receiver: the farmers and workers in the United States saving to give to their unknown friends across the ocean, the latter taking their gifts to shattered huts or caves. There are ships and planes crawling up over or around the globe or across a map to get to the other side, filled with many necessary articles. One of the most outstanding posters was one of a huge ship—stars and stripes on the bow, and with the rising sun in the background, symbolizing hope for the future and liberty.

Undergraduate officers elected are: H. Edward Wagner, Phi Delta Theta, Penn State; vice-chairman, Ralph Martin, Beta Theta Pi, Carnegie Tech; secretary, William Scott, Pi Kappa Alpha, Rutgers.

L. G. Balfour, former national president of Sigma Chi, was re-elected chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference.

Jeweled badges were given by national organizations at the dinner to Wendell L. Willkie by Beta Theta Pi and Phi Delta Phi, to Mrs. Willkie by Kappa Alpha Theta, and to Lowell Thomas by Kappa Sigma.

Prof. Householder Speaks On Alaska

Kappa Phi Kappa Hold Open Meeting

On Wednesday, November 20, Vermont's honorary education fraternity, Kappa Phi Kappa, met in open meeting for the second time this semester. The brothers and numerous guests were most fortunate in having as guest speaker Professor Householder of the mathematics department, whose extensive travels are already well known to the student body of the University. Professor Householder gave a vivid description of his trip to Alaska and illustrated his talk with a wide selection of maps, slides, postcards and photographs of this picturesque region.

Starting from Seattle, Professor Householder traced his journey by land, sea and air to such interesting places as Juneau, Alaska's capital; Anchorage, which has recently figured in the news as an air base in national defense; the Klondike, scene of the gold rush in the nineteenth century; the valley of the Yukon; and back to Prince Rupert, to mention but a few of the highlights.

Following a lively discussion, refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned. It is hoped that another open meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa may be held in the near future so that the student body may become still better acquainted with the work of Vermont's honorary chapter.

Yale Starts 240th Year With Silliman College

New Haven, Conn. (ACP).—Yale University, beginning its 240th year, has opened Silliman College, completing its group of ten undergraduate colleges as originally planned.

The new college, with accommodations for 250 students, was named for Benjamin Silliman of the class of 1796, pioneer in scientific education and professor of chemistry and geology at Yale from 1802 to 1853. Filmer S. C. Northrop, professor of philosophy and member of the faculty for seventeen years, has been appointed master of Silliman College.

passports. They are in this country on temporary artists' visas, and live in a big comfortable house in rural Pennsylvania—that is, when they are not giving concerts and trouping over the country in their own private bus.

The program of the coming concert offers variety and interest for every listener. There are early chorals, madrigals and well-beloved songs by the classic and romantic composers, sung in Italian, German and English. The Trapps have revived the playing of block-flutes or recorders, the woodwinds of the fifteenth century, and accompanied by the spinet and viol di gamba they play a group of beautiful early works originally written for these instruments. The second half of the program is devoted to rollicking folk songs which they sing in picturesque native costumes. Here are lusty yodels and mountain calls which have never been written down but which belong to the Trapp family by inheritance and tradition and bring the realization, to quote Baroness von Trapp, that "although the name of Austria is dead, its culture and its art must continue to live."

Ruben's Painting To Be at Museum

To Be Hung Until December 17th

The Fleming Museum Art Association extends an invitation to the students and faculty of the University and to all art lovers to attend the initial showing of the famous painting, "Isabella of Bourbon," by Sir Peter Paul Rubens, one of the world's masters of all times.

Quoting from Dr. W. R. Valentiner: "This painting represents Isabella of Bourbon, wife of Philip IV of Spain, and is executed in 1628-29 during Rubens' stay in Madrid. It is a remarkable piece of vivid characterization, of fine coloring and brilliant execution. The brown brocade costume with purplish tints, the blue-gray collar, the red curtain and blue sky show the hand of the master who at this time was at the height of his career.

At the prevue Wednesday, December 4 at 4.00 o'clock, which will be held in the art gallery of the museum, Prof. Paul D. Evans will speak on the historical background and the art significance of the portrait. On this day, since there is no admission charge, contributions to help the cause for "Bundles for Britain" will be received.

The painting will be on display at the museum from December 4 until the 17th. Mr. Joseph Winterbotham, noted art collector and friend of the University, has borrowed it from New York for these two weeks to give the faculty, students and friends of the University an opportunity to see the original of one of Sir Peter Paul Rubens' paintings.

Their paintings have been exhibited in the outstanding national art centers.

W.A.A. Members To Entertain At Annual Play Day

High School Girls Will Be Guests at Southwick Saturday

On Saturday, December 7, Southwick will again be overrun with girls from the surrounding High Schools, all engrossed in the various activities planned for them by W. A. A. The occasion is another Play Day which will begin at 1.15.

This afternoon, put aside for the High School students, is primarily for the purpose of offering the girls the opportunity of meeting and playing with girls from other schools. Miss Barbara Crowe, of the U. V. M. physical education department, hopes that these play days will inspire the students of each school to sponsor similar affairs of their own in the future. She added that these give the coaches an opportunity to enjoy active participation in their favorite sports instead of merely helping from the sidelines.

After registering, the girls will be welcomed by Elizabeth Gurney '41, president of W. A. A. After this the girls will participate in Newcomb, relays, roller skating and social dancing, which will be under the direction of W. A. A. Council and Council-at-large members and the sport managers in both the gym and the ballroom. A film illustrating various phases of sports at U. V. M. will also be shown. An important part of the program is the demonstration and interpretation of the present basketball rules. Miss Crowe, who is the state chairman of girls' basketball, and Miss Olive Krogman, chairman of the Vermont Officials Rating Board, are in charge. At this time, any official interested may take her rating, and also, all those interested in basketball and the new rules are invited to come and watch the demonstration.

Afterwards, basketball games will be played. Each school group is to be divided into teams, so the girls may have the experience of playing with others than their own teammates. These teams which will represent different colleges, and named Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Yale, will play in round-robin fashion.

W. A. A. plans to serve cocoa at the finish of the fun to those girls who bring their own lunches.

Teams are expected from Alburg, Burlington, Cathedral, Essex Junction, Richmond, St. Albans, Waterbury and Winooski High Schools.

Sally Rome '42 is in charge of the Play

Prof. Kidder Kills 160-Pound Bear

Prof. George V. Kidder of the classical department at the University of Vermont reports that he has his garage full of bear meat. Professor Kidder went deer hunting one of the last days of the season, and while he didn't bring back a buck, he did bag a 160-pound bear and two cubs. Although Professor Kidder had never taken a bear before, he shot a deer a few years ago. He teaches Latin and Greek to University of Vermont students. Professor Kidder's hunting companion was R. L. Webster of Florence, who helped track the animals down and drive them from cover, wounding one of them.

The bears were bagged on the top of a mountain in the town of Chittenden, which was so remote from civilization that it took four hours to descend after making the kill, and all of the next day was spent in getting the animals down.

So far as can be learned, Professor Kidder is the only succesful hunter of the University faculty this year.

Phi Beta Kappa Society Elects Seven New Members

New Members to be Initiated Monday Dartmouth Professor to Address Honorary Group

Four men and three women of the class of 1941 have been elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society whose members are chosen for high scholastic standing and character.

The new members who will be initiated Monday evening are A. J. Caldwell of Burlington, enrolled in the Business course; D. V. Collins, Burlington, Chemistry course; J. M. Evans, Burlington, Social Science; Evelyn Fuller, Chester, Home Economics course; Irene Newton, West Hartford, General Science; Jessie Swann, Danvers, Mass., Classical course; and W. E. Young, Barre, Mechanical Engineering.

Initiation of the seven new members, only one of whom is not a Vermonter, will take place at Southwick, Monday, December 9, at 6.00 p.m. A banquet at Robinson Hall at 7.00 p.m will follow the initiation. The banquet will be the annual winter meeting of the Vermont Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Prof. Harold R. Bruce of Dartmouth College political science department will address the Phi Beta Kappa members on the subject "An American Challenge" at Southwick at 8.15 p.m. This address will be open to the public and the committee in charge are most anxious that faculty and students attend the lecture.

In addition to maintaining an exceptionally high scholastic standing, the seven new members of Phi Beta Kappa have been active in many campus activities. A. J. Caldwell, a member of Delta Psi fraternity, is in Men's Debating, baseball, cross country, International Relations Club and he won the Howard Prize during his freshman year.

D. V. Collins, who is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, has been a member of the ski team, the Outing Club Council, the Chemistry Club and was awarded the Sons of American Revolution Medal and was elected the Student-Affiliate of the American Chemical Society.

J. M. Evans, a member of Boulder, senior honorary society, is a member of Sigma Phi fraternity, and has been active in Le Cercle Français, of which he

Rev. S. M. Lindsay To Speak At Vespers

Speaker Is Well-Known To University Audiences

The Rev. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay, pastor of the Baptist Church in Brookline, Mass., will make two appearances before University of Vermont audiences this week-end. He is to speak at a vesper service in the Ira Allen Chapel of the University, Sunday, December 8, at 4 p.m. Members of the Men's Faculty Club with their wives, and members of the Women's Faculty Club, will hear the Rev. Dr. Lindsay at a meeting being held at the Southwick Building this Saturday evening, December 7. The two Faculty Clubs are to be the guests of the University administration at this meeting, featuring the address of the Rev. Dr. Lindsay.

Doctor Lindsay has been a visiting speaker at the University for the past two years. He was born in Scotland, and came to America as a young man. He graduated from Newton Theological Insitution. He has had pacstorates in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Brooklyn, N. Y. He has served his present church in Brookline since 1922.

The public is as usual invited to attend Sunday's vesper service at the Ira Allen Chapel.

Fire Destroys Negatives Of Ariel Photographs

Due to the fact that the Zamsky Studios in Philadelphia, Pa., burned completely to the ground last week, destroying all the negatives of photographs taken thus far for the Ariel, it will be necessary to retake all the individual junior portraits. These retakes will be made during the week of January 20 to February 1.

This loss is greatly regretted by the Ariel staff, but they beg the indulgence of the members of the junior class.

They ask that at the time of the retakes every junior be sure to make and keep an appointment, as that will be the only opportunity to have a portrait taken. At that time the two-dollar sitting fee will not have to be paid except by those who have not already paid it.

Major Max Vivier Praises French Women in Lecture

Choosing five French women with whom he had been intimately acquainted, Major Max Vivier told the Alliance Française and their guests Wednesday evening that much of France's greatness may be attributed to the French women. He described in a very interesting manner the patience, perseverance and moral courage which characterize the French woman.

Annettique, his old nurse, Regina, his great aunt, Josephine, an old servant and the noted actress, Sarah Bernhardt, were the subjects of Major Vivier's lecture which he delivered in a charming manner.

Christmas Concert To Be Given Soon

By tradition, the last Sunday before the Christmas recess is reserved for the annual Christmas concert by the University Choir and Chapel Orchestra. This year on December 15 at four in the afternoon the Choir will feature the Cantata 142 by Bach, written for the first day of the Christmas festival, "Uns ist ein Kind geboren." The cantata is light and expressive of Christmas spirit. It is a cantata of praise, exalting the Christ child. Included in the program will be:

Three French carols, "Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying" by Davison and "Chanson Joyeuse de Noel" and "Les rois mages" by Gevaert; music by the denowned Michael Praetorius represented by "To Us is Born Immanuel" and the familiar "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming"; and "Silent Night" by Gruber.

The orchestra will feature the "Pastoral Symphony" from the "Messiah" by Handel. Two other anthems by the choir will be "Hallelujah, Amen" (from "Judas Maccabaeus") by Handel and "Glory to God in the Highest" by Pergolesi. Miriam Natilee Marston, organist, will accompany the choir and orchestra and will also play the organ prelude and postlude, appropriate to the Christmas season.

The choir will be under the direction of Prof. Howard Gordon Bennett and Mr. Michael Anselmo will be concert master of the orchestra.

EDITORIALS

Congratulations to the New Phi Betes!

With the election on Wednesday of seven seniors to Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary society, the Vermont Alpha chapter again has honored men and women who have maintained throughout their college course an exceptionally high scholastic standing. Such attainment undoubtedly represents a great amount of conscientious and persevering effort on the part of these honored students.

We congratulate the seven members of the class of 1941 who have been added to the selected members of an organization which is honored and respected throughout our country. The Phi Beta Kappa key, with its Greek letters "Φ B K" and the three stars, indicating the society's avowed principles—Fraternity, Morality and Literature, is a symbol of a high goal toward which many strive but which few attain.

The University of Vermont joined the society in 1848, becoming the eleventh college in the country to join the organization. The society at the present time has one hundred and twenty-two chapters and a living membership of over seventy thousand. Our university has always stood for a high scholastic standard and to become a member of the Alpha of Vermont chapter of Phi Beta Kappa is a rare honor. Thus we say to you new members of Phi Beta Kappa—congratulations!

A National Honorary Society for Senior Men!

An election to an honorary fraternity that is nationally recognized adds immeasurably to the prestige of both its members and the university where the chapter is located. With this thought in mind we sincerely believe that the Boulder Society, senior men's honorary society at Vermont, would add much to its position and would contribute more to the men and the college if it were to become affiliated with Omicron Delta Kappa, national campus leadership honor fraternity for men. This national honorary organization, which is popularly known as ODK, recognizes eminence in five phases of campus life: scholarship, publications, forensic activities, athletic prowess and general campus leadership and influence. Its ideals are character, recognition, opportunity, inspiration and loyalty.

Mortar Board, the senior women's honor society, was formerly a local society as Boulder is, but since it became a member of a national fraternity in 1924 its standards have been raised and through contact with similar chapters throughout the country it has been able to increase its usefulness to the women of the campus as well as to the administration.

The Boulder Society on our campus takes charge of many undergraduate activities such as the Sophomore-Freshman combats and the pep rallies. The members also proctor at elections and act as a leading body for the undergraduate men. We firmly believe, however, that an affiliation with a national fraternity of campus leaders would make Boulder a much more potent force on our campus. Omicron Delta Kappa is a strong national fraternity with thirty-nine chapters which have a total membership of over six thousand men. Its program includes the control of campus movements by spiritual and intellectual leadership rather than by campus politics, the co-ordination of all constructive movements as well as many other worthwhile aims.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In a recent meeting of the Faculty-Student Council the question was brought up as to whether or not this college should send some aid to Britain. It was suggested that by joining with the other Vermont colleges, we might be able to contribute medical instruments, a field kitchen or other supplies needed to care for the wounded and homeless. Before proceeding, however, the Council must know what the student body thinks of such a plan and how much support the students would give it. Many students, like Mr. Powell, seem to oppose trying to help France. Do you students also oppose aid to Britain, or if you are in favor of it, would you do your share to carry out the plans of the Council?

ALICE NEEDHAM '43,
Member of Faculty-Student Council.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Out back of the gymnasium there is a regulation hockey rink and among the student body there are many who like to play, many who like to watch a good game of organized hockey. For several years past, efforts have been made to organize a hockey team but because of a late start in getting a team together and lack of backing from any quarter arrangements for an informal hockey team left much to be desired.

Definite plans to have a hockey team and a good one since there is no lack of good hockey material here at Vermont, are partially completed. A prominent Vermont alumnus is definitely interested in seeing that an independent hockey team does get the necessary backing that is needed to get a team organized. A local old-time hockey player and coach and a member of the faculty who captained Vermont's last hockey team some years ago have been approached. Both would like to see Vermont put back on the hockey map, both are willing to help organize and coach a team of the best players to be selected on their merits as hockey players.

Several undergraduates have made the necessary contacts. All those who are interested in playing or having a hockey team at Vermont this winter can make a University of Vermont hockey team an accomplished fact if they will but lend their support by helping to organize a team. By helping, is meant, turning out in force at the meeting to be held next Wednesday, December 11, at 5.00 p.m., in the small drawing room of the engineering annex. Turn out in force and help put Vermont on the map this winter with hockey, fastest, most thrilling of all sports! We beat Middlebury in all other intercollegiate sports, why not hockey, too?

J. STEPHEN '42.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

This letter I hope will serve as incentive to excite student opinion on a matter which to me seems very important. Simply stated the matter is: "Should we change the CYNIC from a semi-weekly publication to a weekly publication?"

For the past six years the CYNIC has run up a large deficit—succeeding business managers have tried innumerable solutions to reduce this but to no avail. Two years ago the CYNIC was not under the surveillance of the University accounting office in an effort to reduct expenditures and to reduce the deficit. Last year the figure was reduced a good deal. This year we hope to bring it down even more. But it will be a long process before we erase the whole figure and perhaps the quality of the future CYNIC will become worse and worse due to necessary budgeting.

My suggestion is this: That we should change our publishing semi-weekly to that of weekly. By this action we will

1. Make the CYNIC a larger paper having not only greater width, etc., but also more pages, more pictures, etc.

2. Make the CYNIC more appealing to local advertisers, whose participation should become greater.

3. Improve the CYNIC's financial standing by cutting out the other issue.

4. Perhaps improve the quality of the paper itself, by giving editor and staff more time to devote to one issue, rather than being pressed for time in publishing two.

We are one of a few schools of our size who are publishing semi-weekly and we are by no means heavily endowed. A majority of the New England state colleges and universities publish only weekly.

I am not stating that we should change this year for that would be impossible due to existing national advertising contracts, but I do suggest that such a change be made so that a weekly publication will be in effect in September, 1941. I am suggesting this for the good of the school, for the benefit of the CYNIC and for the extinction of an unnecessary deficit.

These are entirely my own opinions and do not represent those of any other member of the CYNIC editorial or business staffs. I hope that students will use this column to reply to these few suggestions in any way that they may please.

Very sincerely yours,
ROBERT P. KENNEY,
Business Manager, CYNIC.

Sigma Gamma Entertains

The active chapter entertained the alumnae at a buffet supper last week at Southwick. Laura Douglas '41 was in charge, assisted by Elizabeth Chaffee '42, Ethelyn Chaffee '42 and Verna Allen '42. Marjorie Smith '43 delighted the group with a humorous monologue.

What kind of Math do you call this?

It sounds crazy—but let's see how it would be perfectly possible in the telephone business.

Suppose an improved method is devised that clips just one second from the time required to handle one toll ticket in the accounting department. Apply this method throughout the Bell System—handling an average of some 55,000,000 toll tickets each month—and it would effect a monthly saving of nearly 1¾ years!

A second saved here, an unnecessary step cut out there—on such close attention to "little" things rests the Bell System's ability to provide the finest, fastest, cheapest telephone service in the world.

Why not telephone home often? Long Distance rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.

Pre-Game Rumours

With the start of a new hoop season just a few hours away, the rumours are flying thick and fast. Advance reports have it that Hartwick may walk away with a win from the Cats and even conservative reports predict a hot opening night for the Green and Gold. Hartwick sports a veteran quintet—three seniors and two juniors. Opposing them is a Vermont combination considerably different from what it started out to be last week. Bill Pye has decided to be an observer this year rather than an active squad member. Captain Corley will probably see little action due to a bothersome infection and Frank Taylor has just got back into the running after a brief layoff following the football campaign. That leaves as starters—Healy, Doherty, Beauchemin, Maley and White. As for experienced substitutes you can count them on the fingers of one hand. If you ask us it's going to be quite a job to keep such a small squad in gear throughout a grueling season. Catamount rooters might do well to spend their spare time praying for a few star discoveries to swell the sub ranks. And maybe we aren't anxious to find out if Hank Beauchemin still has his shooting eye.

The Frosh

In the frosh ranks things look very bright indeed. Coach Fogg has already picked a tentative team. Prominent in the line-up is Eddie Orban—you can't miss him—he's a six-foot-four colossus. Local fans will probably remember seeing Larry Killick (Burlington) and Gil Mannheim (Bennington) in last year's high school tournament. Cathedral, Kitten's first foe, is still an unknown quantity as Bill Hammond can't quite decide on a starting quintet but we feel pretty sure that they won't be pushovers. Fans looking for some fast hoop action may get it in this preliminary contest between a promising Frosh club and a Cathedral High quintet which may finish high in the state rankings, if it lives up to the usual Green and White standard.

Here and There

St. Michael's seems to be cooking up bad medicine for the Cats. The Winooski boys have seven veterans available as well as O'Brien and Riley mainstays of Burlington High's runner-up quintet, last year. Steve Guter, "sophomore sensation," is expected to be the Mikemen's scoring threat. . . . News from Colby says that Helin has been elected football captain. You'll probably remember the fine game he played against the Cats, this year. . . . Be seeing you at the Memorial Auditorium. Girls bring your knitting. Fellas bring your voices.

Catamounts Beat Hartwick In Opener

Cats Impressive in 44-24 Win; Captain Corly High Scorer

Before a crowd of 1,500 loyal fans the varsity basketball forces of Vermont triumphed over the Hartwick College cagers by the score of 44 to 24, on the Memorial Auditorium surface last night. The Vermont boys outplayed the New Yorkers in every phase of the game; Vermont unfolded a new system of play characterized by a passing attack and bucket plays. The Hartwick basketeers led by Martuscello fought against great odds up to the final gun, but could present no effective offensive and seemed to choke up when nearing their own basket.

Led by Capt. Paul Corley, Vermont jumped into the van from the opening gun and never relinquished this advantage. Fed by Dick Healy and Henri Beauchemin, Captain Corley proceeded to roll up 9 points in the first half and followed with 7 more in the second canto for a grand total of 16 points. A knotty leg muscle necessitated Corley's removal with about seven minutes remaining in the game; barring this injury which was not serious he might have garnered a few more points. The Cats could not find the hoop early in the game, but were content to shuffle ball in and out of bucket and waiting for a break. Doherty and Taylor replaced White and Beauchemin midway through the first half, shifting Healy to center with Doherty taking Healy's vacated forward post. This combination seemed to work equally as well and Vermont rolled up a 17 to 9 count at the halfway mark. Hartwick could do little in the way of scoring, although they gave the Catamount forwards considerable trouble on the defense.

Guard

Beauchemin and White resumed their positions at the opening of the second half and Vermont continued to bowl over their opponents. Vermont did literally bowl over the opposition. The game roughened considerably during the second half with both White and Beauchemin being ejected via the foul route. During the last half the scoring was equally divided among the Cats, with Taylor, Beauchemin and Healy contributing four each along with Corley's six counters. Martuscello, swarthy guard of the visitors, was the Liberal Arts lads only scoring threat; he deposited four beautiful long set shots through the loop from way out and was the evening's second high scorer with 10 points. The other Hartwick players had innumerable opportunities to score but capitalized on only a few of them. This hardly seems like the Hartwick team which beat St. Michael's and American International last year, the latter by some 30 points and the latter also subdued last winter's Vermont aggregation by a 40 to 35 score.

Hank Beauchemin did not play his usual fast game, but seemed content to pass and let the other Vermonters grab the glory. Vermont presented a wide, varied attack which should give their coming opponents plenty to worry about, although they were a bit ragged; this will be remedied by constant practice during the next few days.

Ski Team To Appear At Middlebury Meet

Coach Ev. Bailey's skiing squad has finally been made a subsidiary of U. V. M. As a result the team has already been scheduled for one meet, the Middlebury Carnival, and Coach Bailey has bright prospects of securing other teams for dual contests.

Although the boys will not engage in competition until after the Christmas vacation, the coach has been conditioning his men for several weeks through the medium of touch football and calisthenics. Thanks to the excellent powdery snow which accumulated during the Thanksgiving recess, the skiers were able to go on their first trial spins of the season Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday, Coach Bailey held a short, but instructive slalom practice.

The excellent form exhibited so early in the season by some members of the team indicates that the Vermonters will have consistent point-getters in the meets in which they compete. All in all, it looks as though the first campaign of the Green and Gold skiing team will be far from an unsuccessful one.

Intramural Cagers Start Play Dec. 4

The intramural basketball season will open December 4, with a match between Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Phi, and the Independents vs. Tau Epsilon Phi scheduled.

Intramural basketball is to be run on a round-robin basis, with two leagues of six teams each. The first league consists of Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Lambda Iota, Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Phi. The second consists of Sigma Nu, Delta Psi, Faculty, Alpha Tau Omega, Tau Epsilon Phi and the Independents. The league winners will play each other two out of three games for the championship.

Coach Archie Post states that those men interested in officiating in basketball should see him. This work provides an excellent background and valuable experience for any man who desires to become a national approved basketball official.

Frosh Sparked by Killick in 35-22 Victory Over C. H. S.

The Kittens blew the lid off a new hoop season by an impressive 35-22 victory over Cathedral High School in the preliminary to the Vermont-Hardwick battle at the Memorial Auditorium last night. Led by Larry Killick, former Burlington High star, who garnered fourteen points, the Frosh took an early lead and kept it right to the end of the game. Though showing the usual early season weaknesses Sherry Fogg's squad is well balanced and should be a winning combination when it gets into full stride.

The first quarter was a slow one with both teams unable to find the basket. But the Kittens picked up speed in the second quarter and at half time were leading 16-10. Picking up where they left off, the Kittens scored fifteen points in the third quarter and then coasted through the final canto.

This year's Green and White quintet boasts no individual stars and will have to improve considerably before it can be considered a contender for state honors. Evelti, veteran of last year's championship team, was the key man in the C. H. S. attack. Except for Killick's fourteen markers the Frosh scoring was very evenly distributed. All signs seem to point to a good season for the Frosh.

A.E. And Delta Psi Lead U.V.M. Bowlers

The intramural bowling season is well on its way and the standings of the teams are as follows: Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Delta Psi are as yet undefeated. SAE whitewashed the Phi Delts by a score of 7-0 and also Kappa Sigma by the same leaving them with perfect records so far. Delta Psi defeated the Kappa Sigs by a perfect score, and allowed the Phi Delts but one point.

Sigma Nu has one victory and no defeats, taking 5 points from Sigma Phi in their initial match.

The Owls bowed to ATO by the score of 7-0, and the Independents pin-men defeted the Faculty 7-0.

Phi Sigma Delta copped 5⅓ points in their match with TEP, who garnered 1⅔, there being a three-way tie for high singles.

Trapp Family Heard In Concert Tuesday

Present Last Benefit Program of Season

Last Tuesday evening a large audience heard the Trapp Family Singers in a concert which was the last program of the 1940 Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary series at the Memorial Auditorium.

Presenting a colorful scene and dressed in the gay costumes of their native Austria, the Trapp Family convinced everyone who heard their music that they are indeed a unique group in the concert world today not only in name but in technical skill, charm, and extraordinary musicianship. Whatever they sing or play, there is always that sense of happiness and warmth which makes them irresistible. All the members of this group sing with an unswerving devotion to the pitch, singing a capella, but their greatest charm of all is the unspoiled simplicity of everything they do.

After they had sung a group of songs, the mother, the Baroness von Trapp, presented the father, the aristocratic Baron Georg von Trapp, who does not take part in the concerts but travels as business manager of the group. Between numbers the Baroness introduced the other members of the family and also explained very informally to the audience the origin and meaning of songs sung and the reflected customs of the Austrian Tyrol.

The choir was at its best in motets and madrigals or shepherd's songs, most of which were of early origin when small group singing flourished.

In one part of the program several instruments of the 15th century were introduced. The virginal, a quilled keyboard instrument, block flutes or recorders and viol de gambas were explained and played upon, producing sweet sounds. Here, too, as well as in their singing, the group proved themselves to be fine musicians.

Another part of the program was devoted to a group of Austrian songs sung in native tongue including some excellent examples of yodelling which, as the Baroness explained, is a method of expression when words are considered superfluous.

The Trapp Family Singers concluded their program with the beloved "Silent Night" which had an extraordinary appeal when the Baroness related the story of its origin, that in a little Austrian village one December 24 this hymn had been composed and sung at Mass to substitute for a failing organ and from that moment it began its journey around the world.

Directing this group was Dr. Franz Wasner, a young composer and priest who has been with the Trapp Family for six years and has also been their musical coach. The oldest son of the family is a physician and the second son is a champion skier who also composes instrumental music and the daughters also all have their own particular talents and duties besides their musical studies. The family have been in this country for three years after leaving their own Tyrolean home, and some of the young von Trapps have applied for their first American citizenship papers. Their home is now a big roomy house in Merion, Pa., where the family make all their own clothes and shoes and run their own newspaper.

The lovable Trapp musicians through their charming and excellent music known from coast to coast are thus doing more than enough to help the Austrian culture and art to continue to live even though the name of the country is dead.

Prof. Daasch Attends Engineering Convention

Engineering education, national defense and the technical work of the mechanical engineering profession were the chief topics of discussion on the program of the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which was held in New York City, December 2-5. Prof. Harry L. Daasch, head of the University of Vermont mechanical engineering department, attended the meeting, representing the engineering college of U. V. M., which has a student branch of the A. S. M. E. Several meetings of the committee on relations with colleges are planned.

Theatre Club To Give Benefit Play

The Burlington Theatre Club, in conjunction with the Burlington Chapter of the American Red Cross, will present "Margin for Error" by Clare Boothe, a satirical melodrama in two acts at the Strong Theatre on Tuesday, December 17, at 8.15. Tickets at $1.10, 85c and 55c, tax included, are now on sale at Bailey's Music Store, Finnegan's Drug Store, and the Everyday Bookshop.

The proceeds from this performance are all to go to the Red Cross to help with their work here and abroad.

Lois Harrington, Kathleen Benson, Claire White, Ronald Bielli and Robert Templeton are a group of art students who have volunteered to help the publicity of the melodrama by making huge posters. These students of no mean ability are turning out posters of professional grade which will soon be up around Burlington.

Film To Be Shown By Outing Club

The ski film which, honored as one of the six best color films of 1940, was shown at the Hotel Barbizon Plaza on April 3, 1940, will be presented by the Outing Club at Southwick on Monday, December 16, at 8.00 o'clock.

"Ski the Americas," filmed by John Jay in technicolor, is a movie which casts such famous ski names as Toni Matt, Dick Durrance, FIS Sis McKean and Pat Paré. It takes its audience all over the Americas, North and South, on the most renowned trails of them all—St. Sauvers Bowl, Tuckermans Ravine, even the Inferno Race over the Headwell—as well as slopes that had never felt the touch of a ski, such as a trail in the Andes among cactus bushes and a schluss-heaven high up in the Andes.

The main skiers in the film are Vera Steudenfeld and Victor Kutschera, Austrian champions who have been forced to hold their skiing country in America because of the war. In "Ski the Americas" they go from Lake Louise to Buenos Aires, swinging down trackless slopes all year round.

Twenty-five cents will be the student admission price for this movie of which Christine Reid, ski photographer of the Boston Museum has said, "These pictures have the most superb composition and the finest quality . . . . I have ever seen in any ski film yet."

News Summary

(Editor's Note—In view of the fact that many students have no recourse to the daily news other than Sunday papers, the Cynic will henceforth carry this News Summary column as a regular feature, in the hope that it will be of interest and benefit to a large percentage of its readers.)

Cairo, Egypt, Mon., Dec. 9.—British forces have made contact with the Italians, "on a broad front" in the western Egyptian desert and have taken 500 prisoners in an engagement south of Sidi Barroni, the British African command declared today.

London, Mon., Dec. 9.—German air raiders concentrated the full force of a night-long assault on London last night and early today, swelling the toll of casualties and ruin in the capital which was kept under alarm more than twelve hours.

Athens, Mon., Dec. 9.—Fierce fighting beyond Argirocastro was reported today between Greece's advancing army and the Italian rear guard, strongly entrenched to cover the retreat of the main Fascist body to the north and west.

Rome, Mon., Dec. 9.—The Italian navy, as well as the army, functioned under new command today after a shake up by which Premier Mussolini apparently intends to intensify the nation's war efforts.

Washington, Mon., Dec. 9.—Senator Adams (D-Colo.) told newsmen that Britain should have at least 60 percent of American aircraft production, instead of the prevailing 50 percent. Senator Nye (R-N.D.) retorted that an increased allotment of aircraft to Britain "would jeopardize our defense." Nye also said that he anticipated an effort in the new Congress to wipe out the Neutrality Act entirely.

English Department Changes Junior Reading

Two changes have been made in English 26 for this year:

1. Group I now consists of two books which all students taking the course are required to read. Students who took out reading lists last spring for summer study should note the change.

2. Students taking the course have been divided into groups and each group has been assigned to a member of the English department, who will act as group counselor. Students are advised to consult their counselor about the choice of books to read and methods of study. A list of counselors is now posted on the bulletin board of the department of English.

Freshman Class To Elect Officers On Wednesday

Election of the freshman class officers nominated at the meeting Wednesday, December 4, will be held in the office of the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences from 9.00 to 12.00 a.m. and from 2.00 to 4.30 p.m., Wednesday, December 11.

Nominees were as follows: For president: Larry Killick, Charles P. Smith, III, Norris Nelson and Robert White. For vice-president: Diana Adams, Phyllis Bell, Ita Casey and Marie Lanou. For secretary: Alison Carr, Louise Howe, Nancy Mills, Betsy Roberts and Olga Sommer. For treasurer: Nancy Fawcett, Joseph Margolis, Harold Mayforth, Edward Tadejewski and Jack Williams.

Additional nominations may be made by petition signed by at least fifteen qualified voters of the class concerned and presented to Prof. D. B. Carroll, chairman of the Committee on Student Elections, at least three days in advance of the election.

The nominees placed under warning following receipt of mid-term grades will not be eligible to continue in the office to which elected.

German Professors To Attend Convention

Mr. Blume and Professor Carpenter will represent the German department in Boston at a convention of the Modern Language Association of America. The convention will meet from December 26 to the 28th.

During December the German I classes will learn the Christmas carols in German. As usual it will include "Silent Night" and other well-known songs.

Seven Initiated Last Night Into Phi Beta Kappa

'An American Challenge' Subject of Dartmouth Professor's Address

Last night, Monday, at 6.00 o'clock four men and three women of the class of 1941 were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society. These seven students were chosen on the basis of high scholastic standing and character as prospective leaders in various activities after they have received their college degrees. Besides maintaining an exceptionally high scholastic rating they are active in many college activities.

Following the initiation at Southwick, which was also the annual winter meeting of the Vermont Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, a banquet was given at Robinson Hall for the new initiates, members and also members of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society.

At Southwick after the banquet Prof. Harold R. Bruce of the political science department at Dartmouth College addressed the Phi Beta Kappa members, other students and faculty members on the subject, "An American Challenge."

The new members of Phi Beta Kappa are:

A. J. Caldwell, Burlington, business course; a member of Delta Psi fraternity, men's debating team, International Relations Club; active in baseball, cross-country and a winner of the Howard prize during his freshman year.

D. V. Collins, Burlington, chemistry course; a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, men's ski team, Outing Club Council, Chemistry Club; was awarded the Sons of American Revolution medal and was elected the Student-Affiliate of the American Chemical Society.

J. M. Evans, Burlington, social science course; a member of Boulder, men's senior honorary society; a member of Sigma Phi fraternity, Le Cercle Français, of which he was president last year; International Relations Club, cheer leading squad; interfraternity athletics and has received both the Alliance Française prize and the Howard prize.

Evelyn Fuller, Chester, home economics course; a member of Sigma Gamma sorority; the managing editor of the Cynic after being a reporter and news editor;

EDITORIALS

Mid-year Examination Schedule

Yes, it's out! Not longer ago than last week the horizon of college activity was rosy and thickly marked with the coming Christmas concert, Christmas dances, vacation plans and even distant vistas of February and the annual Kake Walk. A big smoke screen was laid on that horizon yesterday, however, when the preliminary exam schedule was posted on the bulletin boards in the Old Mill. Students have been milling around the boards for the past two days eager yet dreading to know when their "days of judgment" were going to come.

Periodically the editors of the CYNIC remind the students how one should take these dreaded exams. Back in '38 the editorial went like this: "Don't wait until the night before each exam and then groan how tired you are, start reviewing for this Waterloo right away, and then make a rapid-fire review the night before the exam of what you have reviewed. The time spent in study before the two weeks of mid-years is what counts and all the aspirin and hot coffee you take during the critical exam period will not help make up for lack of consistent daily study in the past."

To the freshmen who are probably terror-stricken by the terrible accounts that the upperclassmen give about exams, we say, "Remember, freshmen, exams can't be so wicked or you wouldn't have so many friendly upperclasmen still in residence at U. V. M."

Mid-years are inevitable, comprehensive, long and very important when the professors figure out one's semester marks. Every student should begin to organize his semester's work now and not the night before examinations start. Why not make it easier to take exams by preparing for the three-hour tests well in advance of the days when "the little fountain pen will have to be pushed"?

Freshmen, Cast Your Ballots!

The members of the Class of '44 are casting their ballots tomorrow in the election of their first officers. Every student in the freshman class should take a keen interest in the election and should vote in a fair and conscientious manner for the nominees whom they should feel are the best suited to represent a class of four hundred and fifty members.

Some may scoff at our emphasis upon what they feel is a relatively unimportant matter. It is not an unimportant problem in any sense, if students would stop to consider that the privilege of casting a vote in a democratic election is an opportunity which we in America enjoy. The fact that the officers of the various classes at Vermont do not have many duties to perform in the present scheme of things on our campus is no reason why students should not elect their officers with care. It might be possible that competent class officers could be of great help to the administration and to the faculty-student council in the future.

The recent attempts to nominate a treasurer for the junior class and the final resort to a nomination by petition are illustrations of the lack of interest that is apparent among the students in regard to the election of their class officers. We sincerely hope that each member of the Class of '44 will show his interest tomorrow casting his vote for the nominees whom he honestly thinks are the best qualified to hold the executive offices of his class.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Mr. Powell in his letter last week to the Editor of the CYNIC said that Herr Hitler must keep the French people supplied with the necessities of life if he is to keep them subjugated. I not only think that Chancellor Hitler will find the task of supplying France impossible but also that of the rest of German Europe. If the United States does not do something to change the course of events, all Europe will soon be in the midst of a universal famine.

If food and arms were sent via England to Europe a very strong "passive resistance" against Germany could be built. Any sort of resistance of this type would harass Germany and at the same time build an indestructible bridge between England and the Continent. Nothing would help "the cause of democracy" as much as such action. Let's not look at the issue any longer as if we were a league of mid-Victorian housewives.

HAMILTON ROGERS '44.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Having read Bob Kenney's letter which appeared in this column last Friday, I would like to present my opinion regarding the question which was raised, namely, "Should we change the CYNIC from a semi-weekly publication to a weekly publication?"

The writer presented four probable improvements or advantages which would result should his suggestion—changing to weekly publication—be adopted. The first is that the change would "make the CYNIC a larger paper having not only greater width, etc., but also more pages, more pictures, etc." I am heartily in favor of having more pictures in the CYNIC, but am inclined to doubt the practicability of having a larger paper as a weekly. Much of the "news matter" now appearing in the CYNIC is definitely dated material and holds little interest for the reader by the time that it reaches him. Yet in the main articles are much more timely and therefore more effective as they now appear than they would be if the paper were published weekly. For example, under the change should the CYNIC be published each Monday or Tuesday, CYNIC readers would not read of this evening's game with Dartmouth until next Monday or Tuesday. Chances are that such circumstances of time would occur frequently. If proponents of the plan propose to leave out the untimely news, I fail to see where material to fill a larger paper will come from, in view of the fact that there is even now often a scarcity of good material sufficient to fill a four-page issue.

The second "advantage," making the CYNIC "more appealing to local advertisers, whose participation should become greater," might possibly be a genuine one, though I question the degree of "greater participation."

It is the third point, that it would "improve the CYNIC's financial standing by cutting out the other issue," that is puzzling to me, though I realize that Bob, as business manager, is in a position to know more about it than I. The plan calls for a larger paper, which would obviously cost more to publish, and it also calls for more pictures, which again would add considerably to publication costs. Yet by cutting out half the issues it seems to me that revenue from advertisers would likewise be cut in half, or nearly so. Where, then, would the extra money, to cover this extra cost incurred by a larger paper and more pictures, come from? In connection with this I should like to ask if it is so vital that the budget be balanced. If the CYNIC has been operating successfully on a deficit for so many years, is there any reason why it should not continue to do so if other considerations make it desirable to continue semi-weekly publications?

This brings us to the fourth point, which was that the change would "perhaps improve the quality of the paper itself, by giving editor and staff more time to devote to one issue, rather than being pressed for time in publishing two." To this I can only point out, as one who has worked on the paper, that most of the "head-writing" and "make-up" is done for each issue on the day before the day of publication, which usually allows ample time. I doubt that any possible shortcoming of the CYNIC could be traced to the staff "being pressed for time." I might point out that even if this were a source of trouble it could easily be remedied by setting the present deadline for stories a day earlier—that is, stories for Friday issues would be due Wednesday instead of Thursday, and stories for Tuesday issues would be due Friday instead of Saturday. Though presumably this would be done were the proposed change made, since there is no reason why it could not be done under semi-weekly publications, I see no advantage along this line to be gained simply from a change to weekly publication. It should also be noted that events happening during the day before the publication day would again hold up publication (even though the paper were a weekly) or else would of necessity not be "covered" until over a week later, which to my mind would be an even greater evil.

It seems to me that a senior editorial staff of eleven, sixteen news reporters, twenty-eight reporters, and approximately sixty scrub reporters should be able to continue to collaborate and put out at least a four-page CYNIC twice a week, without too much over-exertion on the part of any one person except possibly the Editor-in-chief.

BERNARD GLASS.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In a recent address before the Vermont State Chamber of Commerce, Arthur Wallace Peach, professor of English at Norwich University, declared, "With our dimes and dollars Vermonters should buy a fighting plane and send it to the British with the name 'Vermont' plastered on the sides of it. This would be one of the finest gestures we could make." Professor Peach was not only referring to the British struggle for democracy; he was also referring to the Vermonters' innate love for democracy.

We, as Vermonters, have a great doctrine. Most of us do not realize what a symbol of sturdiness and resourcefulness our State has become to those outside. Up here in the mountains is the democratic way of life.

If our people love liberty, if they have the courage, the hate, and the same faith and vision which countless previous generations of Vermonters have had, the time has come when we should show it.

So, whether it be in fighting planes, medical instruments, or field kitchens, let us, as true Vermonters, cooperate eagerly with the Faculty-Student Council in carrying out their plans for aiding war-torn Britain.

This is my answer to the letter in last Friday's CYNIC written by Alice Needham '43.

Treasurer Nominations To Be by Petition

The Committee on Elections voted not to hold a meeting for the purpose of nominating candidates for the position of treasurer of the junior class but to have all nominations made by petition. Such nominations may be made by petitions signed by at least fifteen qualified voters of the junior class and given to Prof. D. B. Carroll, chairman of the Committee on Student Elections, not later than December 14.

The election for the office of treasurer of the junior class will be held in the office of the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Wednesday, December 18, from 9.00 to 12.00 a.m. and from 2.00 to 4.30 p.m.

Many Enjoy Coffee Hour

The increasing popularity of Coffee Hours was demonstrated on Sunday when a large number of people attended the third Coffee Hour of the year. Catamounts Ready For Dartmouth

Towering Indians In for Real Battle

Coach Ossie Cowles of Dartmouth ings his varsity basketball team to Bur- ington Tuesday night for their annual tle with Vermont at the Memorial uditorium. Dartmouth has its usual e array of talent and will start its rongest lineup against the Cats who al- ays give the Big Green plenty of trouble the Burlington game.

Gus Broberg, an all-American for two ars and captain this winter, well be at s old forward post and promises to give e Vermont guards a hectic evening. roberg along with Bill Parmer, a junior ard, are the only starters who are not phomores up from the strong fresh- an club of a year ago. Jim Olsen, 6-foot, 5-inch boy at center is the most ely looking candidate of the second- ar men. Olsen is not yet a polished ayer but has all the physical attributes of excellent center and fits into his spot rely.

At the other forward spot Coach Cowles s replaced Stubby Pearson who is un- le to recover from the football season ith George Munroe another 6-foot phomore who looks like a comer after gains a bit of experience. Stan Skaug, e third sophomore, will get the call at e other guard post. A reserve center, "Shorty" Shaw, measures 6 feet, 8½ ches and reminds Dartmouth followers Moose Dudis of their 1938 champion- ip team. The Big Green basketeers ave captured three straight E. I. L. hampionships and look like a sure bet r the fourth if these new second-year en live up to expectations.

Vermont will probably start the same neup which had little difficulty in dis- sing of Hartwick last week. This eans Paul Corley and Dick Healy at e forwards, Henri Beauchemin at center ith Red White and Don Maley at the ard spots. Frank Taylor and Bob herty will be in reserve and will prob- y see action in the early part of the test. There is a possibility that Tay- might start in White's guard slot but is thought that he has not quite re- vered from a strenuous football cam- ign so White will in all probability get initial call.

This Dartmouth game is always a hotly- ested affair with the Catamounts ver awed by the famed Indians and m all past performances should be the ghlight of the local court season. Ver- ont always rises to great heights in this ch and should give the Hanoverians interesting evening.

kiers Prepare for ake Placid Meet

Although the recent thaw clamped a raining hand on practices scheduled last week-end, the ski team managed get in some good workouts during the tter part of the past week on local runs, topped it off by a strenuous slalom actice on the Tear Drop Trail last nday.

Plans are under way to send a repre- tation of four or five to the Intercol- iate Meet to be held at Lake Placid on 27th and 28th of this month.

everal candidates have shown up well ring the recent practices, and with Capt. e Collins exhibiting the form that won numerous honors last season, the ski m may well look forward to a success- year.

Introducing the Team . . .

Robert C. Doherty, forward, height 5′ 11″, weight 165, class of '43—this is Bob's first year of varsity play, though he played for the Frosh quintet last winter. Bob attended Meriden High School and is an Independent.

Francis M. Taylor, guard, height 5′ 11″, weight 185, class of '41—Frankie is a four-sport man, playing football, baseball and basketball and has further displayed his talents as a member of the track squad. He attended Black River Academy and this will be his third season of varsity basketball. Frank is a member of the S. A. E. fraternity.

Paul Corley, forward, class of '41, height 6′ 1″.

Paul attended Burlington High School and is now playing his third year of varsity ball for Vermont. Culminating a very successful season last year he was chosen to lead the Green and Gold aggregation for the season of 1940-41. Paul is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Donald W. Maley, guard, height 6′ 2″, weight 170, class of '41—Don was graduated from Searles High School, Great Barrington, Mass., and has been a member of the varsity squad for the past two years; he worked at end for the football squad a few seasons back and last year covered first base for the varsity ball hawks. A Boulder man, Don is also a Kappa Sig.

Henri J. Beauchemin, center, class of '41, height 6′ 3″, weight 194—Hank prepped up at Wilbraham Academy and this will be his third year of varsity play. Besides basketball, Hank played varsity football two years back and also performed at first base for the baseball team. Henri is affiliated with the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Richard G. Healy, forward, class of '41, height 6′ 1″, weight 160—Dick attended Lynbrook High School and has played varsity ball for the last two years; he also plays a lot of shortstop for the baseball team and is a Boulder man. Dick is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Women in Sports

Volleyball

The Gold volleyball team were victors Tuesday afternoon over the Green team, in a match having a final score of 40-29. The following girls participated:

Gold—H. Potter, E. Gove, S. Runnals, A. Keelan, Rowe, B. Deming, M. Pickard, G. Sherman, A. Mulholland, P. Perkins.

Green—N. Carter, D. Thornton, D. Welsh, P. Fellows, P. Savage, P. Pierce, C. Peterson, C. Willard.

Another mixed match with men was played yesterday afternoon at 4.15.

Basketball

Basketball club met for the first time Thursday afternoon at 4.45. Members of the club will meet regularly at 4.15 on Tuesday afternoons, but on Thursday afternoons are invited to come at 4.15 to practice.

The zone leaders of the Basketball Zone Tournament have met, and arranged twenty matches to be played at scheduled time, on either Thursday nights or Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

All basketball zone teams are invited to come to the gym to practice today at 4.15.

Skiing

Skis may be rented at Southwick at the following prices under Mr. Turnbull's supervision:

New skis with harnesses 25 cents for half a day.

Second-hand skis with harnesses 15 cents for half a day.

Archery

Archery Club will not meet this week.

Girls' Fencing Class Will Begin Today

A new fencing class with a limited membership of seven girls will meet at Southwick for the first time this afternoon. First Lieut. D. M. Curtis, Field Artillery Reserve, and Capt. C. D. Lang, Field Artillery, from Fort Ethan Allen, are teaching the class on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Those taking the course are: Adelaide Bennett '42, Elinor Nolan '44, Doris Doerfler '44, Margaret Palmer '44, Katharine Holden '42, Jean Hall '42 and Priscilla Bennett '44.

Girls Knit for Britain at Tea at Redstone

Dean Harris and Mrs. Pilcher, house director at Redstone, held a tea for students living at Redstone and other girls living in private houses Friday afternoon at 4.30.

Several girls combined pleasure with usefulness by knitting on articles which are to be contributed to the "Bundles for Britain" drive.

Fraternity Pinmen Continue Battles

Intramural bowling continued Friday afternoon with eight fraternities fighting a touch-and-go battle for the championship.

Lambda Iota defeated Phi Sigma Delta by the score of 6-1. The Owls total team score was 993 to the Phi Sigs 982. H. Howe '43 took high singles for the Owls with 122, and Jack Machanic '44 garnered a point for the Phi Sigs by bowling 224 for two strings.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon subdued Lambda Lota 7-0 in the afternoon's matches with a high team score of 1,025. Ed Guilbert '41 annexed both high singles and high doubles for S A E with 127 and 238.

Alpha Tau Omega toppled S A E by a narrow margin, taking six points with a total of 1,026 to the S A E 1,025, Spider McCormack of the A T O's bowling 239 for a double score.

Sigma Nu still maintained a perfect record by taking two matches, one from Delta Psi 7-0, and another from Phi Delta Theta by the same score. With a five-man score of 1,079, the highest so far this year, a singles total of 127 for A. Jacob '41, and a 240 chalked up for H. Parker '43, on two strings, the Delt's 1,022 and the Phi Delt's 913 were to little avail.

Phi Delta Theta dropped another match to Sigma Phi by the score of 7-0. The Sigma Phi aggregate was 982, which took five points, and Bob Sutton '43 garnered two more points with 121 on one string and 209 on two.

"BUNDLES FOR BRITAIN" is sponsoring a Benefit Christmas Party on Sunday, December 15, at 8.00 p.m. Tickets will be sold by students. Price 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CLUB will not meet this Wednesday as planned. However, there will be a meeting on the following Wednesday, December 18, 1940, in the Club's dark rooms at Slade. All members urged to come. Prospective members welcome.

Sports Cast

Post-mortem or Leftovers

The Hartwick game is so much cold hash but it's still pretty tasty hash. Though somewhat confused at times by their new style of playing and considerably slow in getting started, the Cats were surprisingly smooth considering it was an opening game. For a supposedly doubtful starter, Captain Corley did all right for himself. It was an especial treat to see him flip in those one-handed shots from the side. Hank Beauchemin definitely could not find the basket but he was a great help keeping the attack running and time and again pulled off some very neat assists. Doherty and White clearly demonstrated they are first-string contenders and you'll probably be seeing a lot of tthem in coming games. Though it needs a lot of polishing up the new style Catamount attack seems good.

With Dartmouth and Fordham due here this week, the Cats can count on no breathing space. The Cats will have to jump to mid-season form pretty suddenly if they plan to give the Rams and the Indians a hot reception. As defending Eastern Intercollegiate champions, the Hanoverians will probably be out for scalps tonight. But everybody who remembers last year's split-second finish will probably be at the Memorial Auditorium expecting another knock-down drag-out affair. With Frank Taylor rounding rapidly into his accustomed good form Fuzzy Evans should have seven good men and true to man the front line against the invaders.

Fogg's Frosh

In the Frosh ranks signs all point to a boom season. Larry Killick took up where he left off in high school and spent the evening in his old pastime of annoying the Cathedral Indians. It was a very well-balanced squad that Sherry Fogg put on the floor Thursday night and in the words of the venerable cliché—one that showed great potentialities. Cathedral, even though allowances must be made for early season weaknesses, did not show the power Green and White teams of the past two seasons have demonstrated. Chances are good for some other team to wrest the title from them this year.

Wanted

A little reform in the press box based on these main points:

1. Reporters should refrain from taking their female friends with them and letting them sit in aforesaid press box.

2. Editors of high school journals should sit alone in the press box and not bring along the "rest of the gang."

3. Only reporters should be allowed to sit there, anyway.

Or maybe we should come early and avoid the rush, what?

By the way, when it comes to all-American selections we claim the credit of having hit the mark with Bob Suffridge, Tom Harmon, John Kimbrough, Rudy Mucha, Marshal Robnett, and Dave Rankin but some of our other selections were pretty wild judging by the general consensus of opinon. It's a wise sports editor who can spot his all-Americans.

Rev. S. M. Lindsay Speaks At Vespers

Pastor Pays Tribute To the Late President

"Today we are witnessing one of the greatest dramas in history, one which may prove to be the greatest tragedy since the fall of the Roman Empire." So spoke the Rev. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay, pastor of the Baptist Church in Brookline, Mass., at the vesper service in the Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday, December 8.

Then he proceeded with clear and vivid description to present the picture of this drama to us. First Reverend Lindsay introduced the characters, the Mikado of Japan, Mussolini, Stalin, Hitler, Chamberlain and Daladier. He has seen all but one of these men and knows something of their personal characteristics.

Next the Reverend Lindsay, in a very ingenious manner, unfolded the drama itself in five acts covering the signing of an agreement between Mussolini, Stalin, Hitler and the Mikado of Japan, the conquest of parts of China by Japan, the seizure of Abyssinia and Albania and the attempt to conquer Greece by Italy, the taking of northern Poland, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and Finland by Russia, and the seizure of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France by Germany.

Hitler, he represented as snapping his fingers to snuff out candles before maps of the various countries he has taken. A hand came between Hitler's and the flame of the candle before the map of Britain, and, though badly burned, was still there when the curtain dropped for intermission of the drama.

The challenge of the present crisis, continued the Reverend Lindsay, is for us to build bridges to a better world. These bridges should consist of education to eliminate illiteracy from the world, bridges of brotherhood to eliminate racialism, bridges of international justice to eliminate jealousy through a redivision of the earth's surface, bridges of good will to eliminate hatred, and bridges of character to eliminate sin from life.

In conclusion the Reverend Lindsay paid a fine tribute to our late President Bailey in saying that he was such a builder of bridges to the world which is to be, that he lived in both worlds and exhausted his energy in building these bridges. "His death is a challenge to us to take up the task and build bridges to the world of tomorrow."

Fleming Museum Holds Auction of Arts Objects

In connection with National Art Week which ended December 2, an auction of art objects was held at the Fleming Museum. To add to the interest, on two evenings during the week, a professional auctioneer was procured. The exhibits were very attractively arranged and a great variety of articles were shown and sold. The idea behind the week which was observed in 1,000 communities in the United States (10 in Vermont) was that American art was being received into the American homes.

Much thought and effort went into the advertising, selection of objects and arrangement. The cooperation of the campus and the community was in great evidence—the Museum, faculty, WPA project and Women's Club all assisting. The chairmen for Burlington were Mr. Joseph Winterbotham, Jr., Prof. H. F. Perkins, and Mrs. Mazie Ewert, who worked with many community leaders in numerous fields.

The public is invited to attend a card pary at the Sigma Nu Lodge, 57 Williams St., Thursday evening, at 8.00. Both auction and contract bridge will be in play. Prizes will be awarded and refreshments served.

Reservations may be made by calling any member of the committee in charge: Mrs. N. J. Boyden, 1398-M; Mrs. H. F. Wakefield, 3203-R; or Mrs. L. G. Irwin, 3457.

Photographic Club meeting is to be held December 11, 1940, in dark rooms of Slade, at 7.30 p.m. All members urged to attend. Prospective members welcome.

Terrill Help Fund Begun by Weaving

Prof. Bertha M. Terrill, who retired last June as head of the department of home economics at the University of Vermont after spending thirty-three years founding and developing that department, didn't retire to sit and fold her hands, even though such repose would have been her right. Instead, Professor Terrill has kept her hands very busy for the past year, weaving by hand many articles which, last Tuesday, she exhibited and offered for sale. The proceeds of Professor Terrill's hobby will start a scholarship fund for girls at the University of Vermont. She will add to it by further sales of her weaving in the future. Many Vermonters and others who were interested in fine weaving were present at the exhibition.

This exhibition and sale was held at the Brick Barn, formerly known as the Vermonters' Club House, which is located at the rear of the Home Management House of the home economics department, at 26 Summit Street, from three o'clock on. University girls of the Omicron Nu society, honorary home economics organization, served tea throughout the afternoon.

Professor Terrill has studied weaving for some time during the past year at the Mackay Homecraft Studio in Montreal, Canada. The Norwegian style of weaving is taught at this studio, and those who have seen Professor Terrill's handiwork say it differs considerably from most of the hand weaving done in this vicinity.

Looking about for a hobby following her retirement Professor Terrill, already interested in weaving, was inspired by the example of Dr. Mary Dole, practicing physician of Northampton, Mass., a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, who has earned $5,000 by weaving and presented that money to her alma mater for a medical scholarship fund.

STUDENT UNION SCHOLARSHIP—There will be a Student Union Scholarship meeting Thursday, December 12, at 4.30 p.m., at Southwick. Report cards are due in the "Y" room Monday, December 9.

Meeting of all those interested in playing or having a hockey team at Vermont this winter, in the small drawing room of the Engineering Annex, at 5.00 p.m., on December 11.

WED., DEC. 11 DEAN'S OFFICE

ATTENTION!—Students are advised that the Christmas recess begins on Saturday, December 21, at 11.50 a.m. and closes on Monday, January 6, 1941, at 7.30 a.m.

On Saturday, December 21, classes in the three academic colleges will meet in accordance with the following schedule: (Military Science) 7.00-7.50; 8.00-8.50; 9.00-9.50; 10.00-10.50; 11.00-11.50. Classes in the College of Medicine will meet as usual.

The above dates and hours should be carefully noted to avoid unnecessary absences.

The attention of all students is called to the rules concerning absences immediately preceding or following recesses, University Regulations II, 4b. Students desiring excuses for absences must submit applications conforming to the following:

(1) Applications must be made in writing, must indicate mail address, must set forth reasons in full and be filed with the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled (men) or with the Dean of Women (women) not later than Monday, December 16, at NOON. The responsibility for proper and prompt filing lies with the student. It should be clearly understood that belated applications will not normally be considered.

(2) EMPLOYMENT—Each applicant will file with his excuse request a statement in writing from his proposed employer on the employer's letterhead, giving date when, time of day when and place where he is to report, setting forth the nature of the work to be done and the need of reporting prior to Saturday, December 21. This signed statement and his personal request should be filed as indicated above under (1). If the applicant's collegiate record justifies favorable action, excuse will be granted, effective at such time as will enable the applicant to reach his destination at the time indicated.

(3) Excuses will be granted to men by vote of the Council; to women in the discretion of the Dean of Women.

Applicants should note that failure to file their applications by NOON, December 16, may result in denial of their petitions. Applicants are advised to hand all papers personally to their respective Deans and not to trust them to others, or to the mails, or to lay them on some desk. No excuses will be granted except for imperative reasons. The citing of trivial reasons will simply result in waste of time.—E. SWIFT, Secretary, University Council.

Sigma Gamma Gives Tea

Several of the founders of Sigma Gamma will be presented at the tea celebrating its twentieth anniversary Saturday. The faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences as well as those in home economics, the deans, mothers of the girls, and representatives of the fraternities, the sororities, and all the honorary societies have been invited to attend.

British Aid Group To Give Benefit

Variety Program To Be Presented

The benefit Christmas party for Bundles for Britain will be held Sunday evening, December 15, at eight o'clock in the Memorial Auditorium.

A varied program will be offered, some of the numbers being a play, tap dancing, circus, and a group of Miss Dorey's dancers. Prof. G. Millikan is one of a quartet that will sing.

It is hoped that everyone realizes the serious need of money for Bundles for Britain.

Tickets for the Christmas party are fifty cents and may be bought from the following students on the campus: Frances Abel '42, Margaret Crowley '41, Dorothy Smith '41, Louise Mann '41, Gloria Oling '42, Sally Rome '42, Virginia Mitchell '43, L. Felsenfeld '44, Bernard Glass '43, L. Bayarsky '44, J. Burgess '42, J. W. Harris '43, W. Nestler '43, E. Guilbert '41, R. Kinney '41.

Students who feel that they would like to help in any way are asked to call Mrs. R. F. Doane, telephone number 2089-W.

U. V. M. Women to Use Local Rifle Range

Mr. Adsit of the Bowlaway has offered to the women of the University the use of the rifle range below the alleys. Instruction will be provided for an hour and a quarter with a small fee of 25 cents per lesson. Classes will be held once a week throughout the winter sports season, and all girls interested are asked to sign up on the Y Room bulletin board. The Women's Rifle Team of Vermont was very prominent a few years ago, and we feel that there are many girls who would like to participate in this sport now.

A National Red Cross representative will be here on the campus from May 3 to May 21, and will give a course on Senior Life Saving and First Aid instructing. All girls who plan to take this course are required to have fifteen hours of preliminary experience.

Bundles for Britain To Sponsor Comedy Revue Sunday

Attempt to Raise Funds to Aid British War Relief

The climax of a series of benefit programs sponsored by Bundles for Britain in an attempt to raise funds for wool to be knit into garments and to aid in the purchase of a mobile kitchen for British war relief will take place Sunday evening at eight o'clock in Memorial Auditorium. The affair will be in the form of a Christmas party of song, dance, comedy and color.

One of the high spots of the two-hour program will be featured by the Burlington Players, who will present "The Country Slicker," a one-act play by Howard Baermann. Included in the cast will be George Hagar, Arnold Drew, Roger Hunting, Eleanor Douglas, Harold Sloan and Holland Smith. The play will be directed by Fannie P. Wood and Marie Chaperon.

Among the tentatively scheduled variety acts are an opening "glamour chorus," with music by the Cathedral High School Band; Lefty Girard's Chuck Wagon Riders; and the Harry Gallup and Elks' quartet. Mac's Circus will be featured with clowns, goats, ponies, monkeys and dogs. Miss Dorey's dancers with Annabelle Riley and Sally Clark will do special dance numbers.

Master of ceremonies and general arranger of the show will be Reg Nash, Burlington radio entertainer, who will open the program with a rousing chorus number of seventeen girls in an animated alphabetical revue spelling out "Bundles for Britain."

American Legionnaires will be in charge of the refreshment concession.

Of particular interest to University students and faculty will be the tumbling acts by Frank Swift '43 and John Buttles '43 and the musical solo by Professor Millikan of the political science department.

Tickets for the entertainment are being handled by the Burlington Rotary Club and the Lions Club is supplying ushers, stage hands and minor services. On the University campus, tickets have been distributed for sale by Mrs. Roland Doane. Among the sponsors of the event are Mrs. Levi P. Smith, Burlington chairman of Bundles for Britain; Joseph Winterbotham, state chairman of British War Relief, Inc.; William Appleyard, chairman of the committee on tickets; and Mrs. Roland Doane, chairman of the Burlington committee of British war relief.

Vermont Independents Elect C. Webster '42

Charles Webster '42 was elected secretary of the Vermont Independents at the first meeting, while G. C. Streeter '42 was elected reporter. A poster committee headed by J. A. Root '41 was formed for the purpose of publicizing the organization of which Frank Livak '41 is president.

"Vermont Independents was formed so that non-fraternity men will not be isolated from social and athletic activities on the campus. The dues of fifty cents per semester are mainly to finance equipment for teams, scores for the glee club, and such social activities as the organization will sponsor.

The next meeting will be held in the North Lounge of Southwick Memorial on Monday evening at 7.30. Nominations for a vice-president from each class and faculty advisor, and a discussion of Bicentennial publicity will form a part of the business meeting. Keith Calkins is forming a glee club to represent the Independents in the Interfraternity Sing, and part of the meeting will be given over to him.

Men's Formals Usher In Xmas Holidays

Kappa Sigs, S A E, And A T O Hold Dances Tonight

Three of the ten fraternities on the hill will hold their formals tonight, Friday, December 13. All the rest of the men's formals will take place the night before Christmas vacation begins except the Owls' dance, which will be on Saturday, January 11.

F. E. Ford '41, who is in charge of the A T O dance which will be tonight, announces that Ray LaBelle will furnish music and decorations will be in green. Prof. and Mrs. Bickford are to chaperone the affair.

At the S A E formal tonight the S A E's and their guests will dance to the music of the Catamounts against a background of pine boughs. J. S. Noble '43 and P. V. Sundberg '43 are co-chairmen of the affair. Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and Prof. and Mrs. Pond will be the chaperones.

The third dance scheduled for tonight is the one at the Kappa Sigma house. The Kappa Sigs have engaged Red Dower's orchestra. Prof. and Mrs. Witham will chaperone. R. L. Swift '43 is chairman and his committee consists of R. W. Thompson '44, J. S. Cronk '44 and D. V. Collins '41.

The Owls' formal, which will come after vacation on January 11, will be from six to twelve o'clock, with music furnished by the Catamounts. Chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. Rowell and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry. Co-chairmen are R. L. Marcalus '44 and R. F. Darling '43.

The Sigma Nu dance, planned for December 20, is in charge of H. C. Parker '43. Decorations will be appropriate for a Christmas formal. The Collegians from Montpelier will play and Capt. and Mrs. Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Post will chaperone.

Students Broadcast Views On War

The CYNIC broadcast over station WCAX on Tuesday evening was opened with a medley of U. V. M. songs.

M. J. Levin '41, director of these programs, then introduced Maywood Metcalf, editor of the CYNIC, who presented an editorial, "College Women's Part in Service to America," in which she urged college women to "help make America impregnable by keeping it free."

The college news was presented by C. Katzew '42. This was followed by an impromptu discussion of international affairs and the extent of our aid to Britain.

The speaker on the next program Tuesday, December 17, at 8.30 p.m., will be Prof. Bennett C. Douglas, whose subject will be "Trends in Education." There will also be Christmas carols sung by the choir.

Varsity Debating Team Hold Fall Banquet

On the evening of December 3, under the sponsorship of the local chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary forensic society, the varsity debating squad and faculty members of T K A, numbering twenty-three in all, enjoyed a supper meeting at the Paragon. Harold A. Durfee '41, president of Tau Kappa Alpha, presided. Between courses and after dinner President Durfee called on former debate managers and members of the faculty for short responses on humorous topics.

T K A keys were presented to the new members who were initiated last spring. Those receiving recognition and keys were: Alan Caldwell '41, Kathleen LeBaron '41, Harriet Nelson '42, Fulvio Bardossi '42 and Julius Cohen '42.

British Embassy Writes to Dean Swift

Encloses Specific Request For 75 Ambulances

Recently the Faculty-Student Council of U. V. M. discussed the possibility of sending an ambulance to aid war-stricken Britain. As many universities and organizations throughout the United States have been sending ambulances to England, the students and faculty thought that the University of Vermont might like to contribute aid also. Plans were made to put the idea before the student body, when information came from several sources that ambulances were not being shipped to England, as there was no room aboard the vessels for bulky machines.

Dean Swift immediately wrote to the British-American Ambulance Corps in New York City for information concerning this news. The following letter signed by Richard Wilbur was received on December 4:

"Thank you very much for your letter of November 29.

"The British Embassy, like ourselves, is completely mystified by the report that ambulances are no longer desired, since all advices have said that ambulances are urgently needed. The Embassy has asked that we make no public statement until it can get a correction of the report from official sources in England.

"The British Ministry af Shipping has also been in touch with this office, and has assured us that there is ample room for ambulances bound for England. Since our ambulances are extremely light machines, there is always room for them on steel ships, which cannot carry more than a certain weight of steel shipments.

"I enclose a list of specific requests we have for 716 ambulances; 410 of these are either in England or on order, but 306 are still required to fill these specific requests. Just four days ago, Mr. Buxton received a cable asking that 75 ambulances be rushed to England.

"As soon as we receive an official state-

Music Department Plans Annual Christmas Concert

Choir and Chapel Orchestra Directed by Prof. H. G. Bennett

"Glory be to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men!" On Vermont's campus again will ring the joyous Christmas message when the University choir and the chapel orchestra present the annual Christmas concert under the direction of Prof. Howard G. Bennett, head of the University music department, Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in Ira Allen Chapel.

The feature of the concert will be Bach's Cantata No. 142, written for the first day of the Christmas festival: "Uns ist ein Kind geboren" (To us a child is given). The exact history of the cantata is not known even though it is ascribed to Bach and included in his published works. Schering believes it may have been written by Kuhnau who was Bach's predecessor at St. Thomas' in Leipzig. Schweitzer, world-famed biographer and authority on Bach, feels that this cantata is Bach's and is one of the more joyful. He points out that much of its beauty is due to the simplicity of form. Choruses are taken from Isaiah 9:6 and Psalms 69:30. The last chorus is a hymn of exaltation.

The bass aria, "Now has come again Thy birthday," will be sung by George Lee Millikan, a member of the Political Science staff. Mr. Millikan studied voice under a private instructor while attending the University of Southern California. He was in the Yale University choir and glee clubs while doing graduate study work there. He is now soloist at the College Street Congregational Church, and he sings with the University choir. Mr. Millikan's greatest musical experience came when he sang in an intercollegiate chorus in Hollywood Bowl.

Thomas K. Malone '41 will sing the tenor aria, "Jesu, Thanks to Thee We're Singing." Mr. Malone has been associated with the Cathedral choir for several years. For the past five years he has studied with Mme Bradish of the University music faculty. He has sung solo parts in two operas, the joint concert with the Harvard Glee Club, and in Brahms' "Requiem." He is a member of the men's

Students To Make Foreign Broadcast

Last week Dean Swift received a letter from the General Electric Company in Schenectady stating that they planned to give foreign students in eastern colleges and universities an opportunity to broadcast Christmas greetings to their relatives and friends in their home countries on Sunday evening, December 15.

It appeared there were five students from Canada and eight from other foreign countries here at U. V. M., although several of these are registered as living in the United States. Since the broadcast is to originate in Schenectady, not all the students felt they could make the trip, but C. H. Schaefer, Jr., '43, whose home is in the Canal Zone, and A. A. Duque, Jr., '44 of Panama are taking the trip. Schaefer will probably broadcast in English and Duque in Spanish.

Sunday evening the students will be the guests of General Electric at a buffet supper at the Van Curler Hotel, after which they will be taken to the studio in the WGY Building.

The broadcast will be over short wave starting at 6.30 or WGEO, 9,530 kilocycles, and on WGEA, 15,330 kilocycles for countries in Europe, Asia, Near East and east and west of the United States. This will be followed by a period of Christmas music from the Union College chapel. Then there will be the broadcast by Latin American students beginning at 8.30.

There is no time limit to the messages, although they are usually two minutes, and personal greetings are permitted as long as they remain in the range of the season's greetings. The messages may be delivered in whichever language is convenient to the people listening at the other end.

This is the first time U. V. M. students have been invited to participate in such a generous offer.

Dean Swift has received no word as to how many will take part, but it is reasonable to assume that a substantial number of foreign students in eastern colleges will take advantage of this excellent opportunity.

Dr. S. A. Levine Addresses Osler Clincal Society

Dr. Samuel A. Levine of Boston, Mass., will address the Osler Clinical Society of the University of Vermont in the auditorium of the Fleming Museum. He will take for his subject "Auscultation of the Heart."

Doctor Levine is assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School and senior associate in medicine at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. He is the author of numerous papers on cardio-vascular disease as well as two textbooks: "Coronary Thrombosis: Its Various Clinical Features" and "Clinical Heart Disease."

Outing Club to Show Film Mon.

Staggering technical difficulties were overcome during the production of "Ski the Americas," the technicolor film which is being shown by the Outing Club at Southwick Monday night at 8.30 o'clock.

During the filming of "Ski the Americas" sometimes whole days were wasted simply because the soft fluffy snow necessary to attain the beautiful pictorial effects that are shown could not be found every day. Hot sun would sometimes ruin the whole trail from the technician's viewpoint, and often work was done in danger of possible avalanches.

Every shot was made from skis, sometimes with the cameraman as well as his subject moving at high speed. John Jay, the producer, is a fine skier himself, and while working on "Ski the Americas" he followed the experts starred in the picture along steep trails and sheer peaks for 250 miles, and much of it uphill!

Altogether, two years were spent in the making of this technicolor movie, and 25,000 miles were traveled to obtain the finished product of 6,500 feet of Kodachrome film.

Effort is being made to have fraternity meetings end a little early on Monday night so that the Greek-letter men as well as the other students and the townspeople will be able to attend this single showing of "Ski the Americas."

What Vermont Can Do for Britain

In the past two issues of the CYNIC letters have appeared in the Campus Column urging that some organized attempt be made on the part of the students to materially aid Great Britain. At the women's mass meeting last Wednesday Dean Simpson told the women that she had been asked by the "Bundles for Britain" organization to help form a branch of that service on our campus. The Faculty-Student Council has also made some tentative plans for raising money for British service projects. All these groups have been "sounding out" the students' opinions on the matter and we understand that the response has been very favorable.

No student can possibly fail to realize the very many blessings that we students in America enjoy which the young men and the young women of England can no longer have and may never enjoy again. If, too, we consider the fact that the British are really fighting our battle (as so many leaders of thought in our country have pointed out in the past few months), we should all be eager and willing to sacrifice something when the youth of Britain are "giving their all."

Colleges throughout the country are contributing to the various funds and service projects for Great Britain. Amherst gave all the money usually spent for the Senior Week Dance to the "Bundles for Britain; Florida State College for Women has a very active group of knitters; Union and St. Lawrence have been raising money for various projects for the British since October 1; and colleges throughout Canada are raising funds for "Spitfires."

Many suggestions have been made of ways in which we students at Vermont could help; an all-campus tag-day, a plan whereby the sororities and the fraternities could omit their spring formals and give the money generally spent to the British relief and substituting an all-campus benefit dance and the reduction of the amount for the Junior Prom dance band from $600 to $300. We feel that the students would undoubtedly have many more excellent means of helping the British if they became seriously interested in this worthy project.

Action, organization and planning exactly what the students could do on our campus to give material aid to England is the next step. The Faculty-Student Council has taken the lead in making tentative plans. Since they represent both the men and the women, they would be a logical and effective head of the movement. The suggestion has been made that the sixteen class officers of the four classes could serve as a committee to help plan and execute the work of such a project in conjunction with the Council. The women students through their student government could also organize a branch of the "Bundles for Britain" if enough of the women responded to such a project.

Sympathy for Britain is generally felt among everybody, we believe, but how much better it would be to actually give something or do something NOW that would really help the British people. We appeal to the student body at Vermont to remember the courageous Britishers who are fighting and defending our civilization and our democracy from brutal aggression and to cooperate wholeheartedly with any movement on our campus to help Britain.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT CHANGES—Two changes have been made in English 26 for this year:

1. Group I now consists of two books which all students taking the course are required to read. Students who took out reading lists last spring for summer study should note the change.
2. Students taking the course have been divided into groups and each group has been assigned to a member of the English Department, who will act as group counselor. Students are advised to consult their counselor about the choice of books to read and methods of study. A list of counselors is now posted on the bulletin board of the Department of English.

At its last meeting the Y. W. C. A. voted to give five dollars to the Student Christian Movement of New England and five dollars to the World's Student Christian Federation. It was decided not to have a Christmas party for the Rock Point girls this year but to give a Valentine party for them on February 14. All Y. W. C. A. members were requested to give ten cents for the Children's Aid Society of Burlington to buy toys for Christmas.

The Y. W. C. A. is to have a mass meeting on January 8, Wednesday night at 7.30, at which time a plan for February discussion groups will be formed under the supervision of the student and faculty members.

It was announced by Shirley Gray '41, president of Y. W. C. A., that Mrs. Pilcher is the new member of the advisory board for Y. W. C. A.

"Margin For Error" To Be Given Sunday

"Margin for Error," an outstanding dramatic success on Broadway last season, will be presented by the Burlington Theater Club at the Strong Theater, Tuesday, December 17, as their first production of the season. The play will be given in conjunction with the Burlington chapter of the American Red Cross, to whom half the proceeds of the play will be donated.

"Margin for Error" is a comedy melodrama written by Clare Boothe, whose biting wit turned into smash hits her earlier plays, "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Good-bye." Her latest play, which is a skillful mixture of mystery, comedy and melodrama, ran in New York for nearly a year and was widely known for its clever lines and comments on current national and international problems. In the Broadway production were such outstanding actors as Bert Lytell and Sam Levene. The Theater Club will be one of the first community theater groups to present "Margin for Error" which was only recently published.

The play is under the direction of Ann P. Middlebrook and Helen Murray. In the cast, which includes many actors well known in Burlington, are John D. Swan, Charles M. Dodge, Frances A. Slocum, Arthur E. Dietrich, Robert F. Dalton, Arthur R. Datnoff and H. Moore Payette. Properties are in charge of Bertha T. Parkhill and Gladys E. Dietrich and settings arranged by E. G. Twitchell.

Tickets for the general public are now on sale at Bailey's Music Rooms, Finnegan's Drug Store, and the Everyday Book Shop and on December 17 at the Strong Theater.

Christmas Concert

double quartet, the men's glee club and the University choir.

Singing the alto recitative, "Immanuel, Accept with Grace My Adoration" and the aria "Jesu, Thine be Praise with Singing," will be Miss Marjorie Southworth '43. Miss Southworth as a student at Whitcomb High School, Bethel, was active in all the vocal music activities there. She studied privately for four years. She won places in the district and state scholarship contests sponsored by the University. While at Vermont, she has been studying with Mme Bradish. She is a member of the University choir and was soloist in last year's Christmas concert.

The orchestra will feature the well-known "Pastoral Symphony" from the "Messiah" by Handel. Mr. Michael Anselmo is concert master of the orchestra.

The men of the choir will sing as a response "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming," a work of the late sixteenth century composer, Michael Praetorius. They will also sing the French carol, "Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying," arranged by Davison.

Miss Miriam Natilee Marston, University organist, will present as the prelude three selections based on Bach's "Chorales."

The complete program follows:

Organ Prelude: Three Chorale Preludes—
"Der Tag, der ist so freudenreich,"
"Puer Natus in Bethlehem," and
"Vom Himmel hoch da komm' ich her."
Processional Hymn 137: O Come,
O Come, Emmanuel.....Traditional
Sentences and Collect
Response: Lo, How a Rose E'er
Blooming .....Praetorius
Cantata No. 142.....Bach
(For the First Day of the Christmas Festival)
Chorus: To us a Child is given, a Son is born.
Aria: Now has come again Thy birthday.
Chorus: Ever the name of God I'm praising with song.
Aria: Jesu, thanks to Thee we're singing.
Recitative: Immanuel, accept with grace my adoration.
Aria: Jesu, Thine be praise with singing.
Chorale: Alleluia, give praise to our God.

Brickbats and Bouquets

By ROGER HUNTING

A word of explanation: This is the opening number of a weekly column which is designed to point out the people and things about this University who deserve commendation or criticism. Possibly the brickbats will be more frequent than bouquets, but we will try to give credit, if any, where credit is due. The opinions expressed are those of the author and his sole responsibility. Any complaints may be referred to him.

A delayed but merited bouquet for the administration for the completion of the road behind the Old Mill. This was an improvement to the school which was often demanded by the students which they despaired of ever seeing. Now one less complaint is available for students to make—but thanks anyway.

A vigorous brickbat, however, must be awarded to the shortsightedness of whatever department or branch of the administration which refuses to allow the completion of the road through the trees up to Converse Hall. It is provided for obviously, why not have it? Is the military department afraid to give up a part of its drill field, or does the athletic department refuse to yield one of its tennis courts to progress?

Brickbats for all those who loiter around the CYNIC office, preventing those with definite business to do from getting in and out. The Coffee Corner may be used by loiters. Let's keep the CYNIC office for busy CYNIC workers.

Bouquets to the women's fraternities for a good rushing season. They certainly showed up the rather inefficient rushing of the men's houses who got substantially fewer men with more houses rushing.

Duck next week—the brickbats will be flying again—if the author survives.

"Thank you so much for your interest in the cause. I sincerely hope that the University of Vermont will want to aid it. Perhaps you would be interested in joining with the townspeople of Burlington, or with Middlebury College and Norwich University, in donating an ambulance."

Dean Swift also wrote to the British Embassy at Washington, D. C. He received a reply similar in content to that one from the British-American Ambulance Corps, saying that the interest of the University of Vermont in sending help to Britain was appreciated.

When it is determined whether more ambulances can be sent to England, the rest of the work lies with the students here. If the men and women on the campus agree to aid England in her greatest hour of need, an opportunity for all to participate in some sort of drive to raise money in order to buy an ambulance will be planned.

Program Notes

The Cats just couldn't stop those Indians. They did make a good ry at it in the early minutes of the first half but after that it was just a ase of seeing how close they could keep the score. One outstanding ifference between the two quintets was the speed with which they could o into their zone defenses. The Hanoverians were in defensive posi- ion almost as quickly as the Cats started to take the ball down the oor and two Indians started to delay the Vermont attack even before passed the mid-stripe. The Green and Gold on the other hand were ery slow in getting in position. As a result Dartmouth had sufficient pportunity to work into scoring territory and with such dead shots as Broberg peppering the basket that was risky business. It was an eye- pener to see the way those Indians could flip the ball in instinctively rom any point near the basket. Some of the shots had a tinge of sorcery. Paul Corley, however, demonstrated that when it comes to one-handed hots he doesn't need lessons. We're still wondering how he ever pulled hi one of those flips in the first half.

Prize sketch of the evening was the leather-lunged official with the ggressive personality. . . . White looked pretty good on some of those neak scoring plays when he caught the Dartmouth defense flatfooted. . . . We're wondering if it isn't better to switch to man-to-man defense against such fast teams as Dartmouth. . . . Hank Beauchemin hasn't shown that he is up to his old form as yet though there was a certain minute when he dribbled through the entire Indian squad with a nonchalance worthy of a Luisetti.

Recognition

Best news of the week is the better-late-than-never recognition of the ski team. According to figures issued for the distribution of the Student Activity Fee, the team will get a good-sized appropriation. We think this is a proper move towards the establishment of a high class winter sports program here at the University. Ev Bailey and others have done a great job in stirring up interest in skiing as a sport here at the University and this official recognition is no more than a fair reward for their spirited endeavors. We're looking forward to some big doings this winter.

If you've read the papers lately (as if we had) you probably have noticed that Pye and Carlson got honorable mention on the A. P.'s annual Little All-American. And in case you're interested the Cadets failed to get even Walt Domina on this select list. Colby and New Hampshire, by the way, both had a player receiving honorable mention.

Freshmen Will Meet B. F. A. Team Tonight

The Frosh basketball team will meet the Bellows Free Academy team Friday, December 13, in the preliminary to the Vermont-Fordham game.

With most of last year's starting team back and Coach Bob White as new mentor, it is expected that B. F. A. will be a power to be reckoned with in state high school basketball circles this year. The team has won its first two games, but against weak opposition; so Friday night's contest will be a real test of B. F. A.'s strength.

Coach Sherry Fogg's charges have shown themselves quite talented in defeating Cathedral by a decisive margin and thus giving their coach trouble in picking a starting five. As things stand at present Killick and Saltzberg will start at the forward positions. Goodrich at center, and Bennett and Manheim will start at the guard posts.

Hockey Candidates Discuss Plans

At a meeting of the candidates for the new independent hockey team last Wednesday afternoon in the Engineering Annex, Jim Stephen '42 outlined the plans for the coming year. Problems discussed were: practice and game schedules, a team name, and the problem of transportation. About twenty enthusiastic prospects turned out, but it was hoped that more would come out after practice starts.

The games, which are to be played with nearby schools and colleges, are not as yet definite, but practice will start directly after Christmas vacation.

The meeting is an outgrowth of a widespread desire for organized hockey. "Doc" Marvin, a Vermont alumnus and former hockey player, and "Hy" Abraham, former Dartmouth hockey player have volunteered their services as coaches.

Catamounts Meet Fordham Tonight

Fully recovered from the effects of the defeat at the hands of the Dartmouth Indians, the University of Vermont basketeers are primed to repel the invasion of the Fordham Rams on the Memorial Auditorium surface this evening.

Last year the Cats put up a great battle against the Fordhamites but were set back by a narrow margin, however, the Rams were badly riddled by graduation and this year have to rely on three inexperienced sophomores who constitute the offensive line, a fact that gives the veteran Vermont aggregation a slight edge.

Last Tuesday night, Fordham fell prey to Brooklyn College by the score of 38 to 34. The Rams were puzzled by the revolving attack of the Brooklyn aggregation and solved its intricacies too late to stave off defeat.

Bob Sherry and Dick Fitzgerald, junior guards, are the mainstays of the New Yorkers while the three sophomores Loeffler, Babich and Savage are unknown quantities.

Coach Fuzzy Evans will probably keep the same lineup of Capt. Paul Corley, Don Maley, Ace Healy, Red White, and Hank Beauchemin, who started against Dartmouth, with Doherty and Taylor as first replacements.

Interfraternity Basketball Enters Second Round With Hot Battles

The interfraternity basketball season opened last Wednesday with games between Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Phi, and Tau Epsilon Phi and the Independents.

A strong, well-coordinated Phi Sig team, sparked by Goldberg, who amassed 16 points, whitewashed the Sigma Phi's by the score of 28-6. With many tricky plays, and a tight defense, the Phi Sig quintet defeated their hard-fighting opponents with seeming ease. Starting for the Phi Sigs were Rynowecer, Goldberg, Brill, Dolinsky and Kaplan. Substitutes were Leavy, Fieber and Chernekow. Sigma Phi's hoopsters were Blakely, Moore, Page, Tucker and Salmon, with Hay, Wedge, Harrington, Burgess, Kimball and Pond alternating.

Tau Epsilon Phi suffered a defeat at the hands of the Independents that night by the overwhelming score of 42-11. There was little the T E P's could do to stop the Independents landslide, started by Willson and Smith, who garnered 11 and 6 points respectively. The Independents passed their way to the opposing basket, and made every foul shot count. The starting line-up for the Independents was Dunn, Smith, Willson, Stoddard and Kipp, with Sisco, Corsonnes, Copp, Urie and Helberg the substitutes. T E P started Bloom, Berman, Kunken, Dondes and Schuman, with Glazin and Sedlis substitutes.

Phi Delta Theta defeated Lambda Iota by the score of 32-7 Thursday afternoon in the third of the season's scheduled games. Shooting from all angles the Phi Delts quickly shot ahead until their lead was well-nigh impassable by the valiant Owl contingent. Starting for the Phi Delts were Logan, Spasyk, Cronin, Daniels and Dennis, with Mayforth, Flynn, Lockwood, Carpenter and Lempton going in at half-time. White, Moffit, Burgess, Powell and Thurber started for the Owls and Babits and Bigelow subbed.

In the closest battle so far this season Sigma Nu edged out Delta Psi by one point in a 25-24 victory. The game seesawed from time to time, with first the Delts and then Sigma Nu leading, and the winning basket was made just as the final horn blew. Reed of Sigma Nu led in the scoring by making 8 points, with Riddle of Delta Psi closely following with 6. The Sigma Nu squad consisted of Reed, Tulip, Wright, Bloomer and J. Reed. Sawyer and Neil started in the second half. Delta Psi started Riddle, Carlson, Roby, Gallup and Davis. D. Davis, Harrington, Patterson, Craig, Small and Cheney entered at the half.

Kappa Sigma and Sigma Alpha Epsilon battled it out with the final score 24-14 in favor of Kappa Sig. The game was hard fought and a battle was fought for every point earned. At the end of the first period the score was tied 4-all, but Kappa Sig slowly drew ahead to 13-7 at the half. From then on the S A E's fought to no avail, for the opposing Kappa Sigs defended their lead by a fast-moving offense. Starting for Kappa Sigma were Williams, Laramie, Lynch, Crossley and Rice. Sullivan, Corbett, Costello, Bassini, Lee, Royer, Thomas, Hennessey, Richardson, Guilbert, Zellinger and Dyke composed the second and third teams. S A E's line-up consisted of Utley, Kennedy, Keager, Salmon and Shaw, while Massuco, Parris, Putnam and Strachan substituted.

Alpha Tau Omega defeated the Faculty 37-8 in a contest which featured good-natured kidding by members of both teams. The A T O's buckled down, however, and ran up basket after basket in swift succession in the second half. Noyce was the high scorer in the game, having amassed 18 points, more than half his team's total. Sherry Fogg and Roy Wietz scored 3 points apiece, while J. Dodd scored 2 to complete the Faculty scoring. Clodza, Noyce, Dorian, Chesarone and Bicoulis were the starting five for the A T O's, with Dudley, Wysolmerski, McCabe, McCormack and Pekala substituting. Luidens, Fogg, Dodd, Brown and Wietz composed the Faculty team, while Leeder, Irwin and Post went in at the half.

Phi Delta Theta defeated Phi Sigma Delta 16-14 in a tight battle Wednesday night. Both teams were fast moving and well balanced, displaying excellent teamwork. Jerry Didinsky of the Phi Sigs led in scoring by amassing a total of 9 points. The Phi Delt line-up was composed of Logan, Mayforth, Cronin, Daniels and Carpenter. Shortle, Spasyk, Pache and Dennis substituted. Phi Sigma Delta's team consisted of Goldberg, Didinsky, Brill, Rynowecer and Levine. Kaplan and Fieber subbed in the second half.

Indians Overcome Catamount Team

Broberg and Olsen Pile Up Big Scores

The Big Green basketeers from Dartmouth College overcame an early Vermont lead and gradually drew away, trimming the Cats by a 54-32 score. The Vermont defense had the Indians puzzled for a few minutes but soon the big Dartmouth guns led by Broberg and Munroe opened up to put the contest on ice.

Hank Beauchemin put in two beautiful follow shots after foul throws by Maley and Corley to start off the scoring and give Vermont a lead which was short lived although they were again momentarily in the van some moments later on baskets by Corley and Beauchemin. At this point Olsen 6 ft. 5 in. Indian center took over and scored four quick field goals to give Dartmouth a 20 to 10 lead.

Taylor and Doherty replaced White and Corley but the Dartmouth streak still continued in spite of frantic Vermont efforts and the half ended with Dartmouth out ahead by a 23 to 12 count.

Dartmouth continued their scoring debacle throughout the second half and Vermont never got within striking distance although they never stopped fighting until the final gun barked. The Catamounts were tiring in the last minutes of the contest and could not stop the fresh substitutes sent in by Coach Cowles. More capable Vermont subs would have kept the score within more respectable bounds. With a scant fifty seconds to go Broberg, Emslie and Olsen all scored in quick succession to give the Big Green the game, 54 to 32.

Broberg and Munroe kept the rotating Dartmouth offense functioning throughout the contest and succeeded in breaking through the Vermont zone a great share of the time. Dartmouth used a checking zone which kept the Vermont forwards away from the basket and forced them to shoot from way out where they enjoyed a minimum of success.

Foul shots were a glaring Catamount weakness, out of twenty-nine attempts the Cats converted but twelve whereas Dartmouth deposited fourteen out of twenty through the hoop.

Broberg with seven field goals and one foul took high scoring honors closely followed by Big Jim Olsen, behemoth at center, with 14 points. Paul Corley and Hank Beauchemin led the Green and Gold forces with 12 and 11 points respectively. Beauchemin was a continual nemesis to the Indian forwards with his clever ball-handling tactics and much credit is due to him and Corley for assists in other Vermont scoring,

Heredity Class to Travel to New York

Will Tour Museum Of Natural History

Thursday, December 19, a group of thirty-one students will travel to New York for a tour of the Museum of Natural History, accompanied by Professor Perkins and Doctor Moody. This group is made up of students from the Heredity and Evolution classes, and as about forty-eight signed up for the trip and the limit being thirty-two, selection was made on the basis of scholarship. This group has the reputation of having the longest uninterrupted trips of the farthest distance. For the most part the students of this group live in the vicinity of New York.

The tour will be divided into two mornings, Friday and Saturday, instead of being all in one. Each morning the group will visit certain chosen halls and rooms with view to one thing, for example, Evolution. Therefore, there will be a specific purpose rather than a general sightseeing tour of the Museum and this objective will be kept constantly before the group.

The hall groups will be visited first and then the laboratories where the models are made and other work is done, which include many interesting groups. Several Museum department heads will act as guides.

Friday there will be three lectures at 2, 4 and 8 p.m., respectively, by different staff members of the Museum. At 2 p.m., Doctor Fisher, Director of Hayden Planetarium, will present a lecture, which the students will not be required to attend but which will be of great interest to them. The group will be free in the afternoon and evening of Friday and will disband Saturday noon.

Carnegie Room Open For Christmas Music

The following phonograph records, of special interest at this time of the year, are available for listening in the Carnegie Room at the Music Building. This room is open at the following times: every afternoon, Monday through Friday, from 2 to 5:30; Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9.30 to 12; Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7 to 9; and Saturday morning from 9 to 12. Student supervisors are in charge during these hours.

Pilgrim Fellowship To Sing Carols Sunday

The Christmas meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship to be held next Sunday evening will feature carols, old English customs and a story read by Reverend Jones.

The group will meet at the church promptly at 7.30 and from here will go to the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Grandy, 54 Brookes Avenue, as guests of Merton Pike.

Education Department

Prof. B. C. Douglas, head of the department of education, attended the annual convention of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools held at the Hotel Statler in Boston on December 6 and 7, at which many modern aspects in the field of education and various topics in other fields were discussed.

Faculty Clubs Hear Musical Program

Members of the Men's Faculty Club with their wives and members of the Women's Faculty Club were guests of the University administration at Southwick on Saturday evening.

Rev. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay of Brookline, Mass., was the scheduled speaker of the evening, but bad weather grounded the plane in which he was traveling so that he was unable to attend. The guests, however, were awarded by a fine evening of music furnished by Prof. and Mrs. Howard G. Bennett, pianists, and Michael Anselmo, violinist. Mrs. Bennett rendered two piano solos also.

The meeting closed with refreshments. Mrs. Elijah Swift, Mrs. Guy M. Page, Dean Mary Jean Simpson, Assistant Dean Freda Harris and Mrs. E. O. Herreid presided at the table.

Vermont Debaters Defeat Harvard

Word has been received by H. A. Durfee, manager of debate, from James A. Pattee, manager of debate at Harvard, that the decision in connection with the Vermont-Harvard debate, held in the studios of WAAB in Boston, on the afternoon of November 28, lacks only one vote of being unanimous in favor of Vermont. This decision results from letters and telephone communications received by the Harvard debate manager following the broadcast.

This debate was held during the Thanksgiving week-end trip of the debating team to the Boston area, at which time a debate was held with Boston University and participation in a round-table discussion between Tufts, Harvard and Vermont.

The debate with Boston University was a no-decision debate at the request of the Boston University manager.

The University of Vermont was represented in these debates by Harold Durfee '41, Taze Huntley '41 and Julius Cohen '42.

Men's Ski Team Have Full Schedule

Because of the present lack of snow due to the week-end thaw, Coach Ev Bailey's skiers may enter the Lake Placid meet, during the Christmas vacation, with little actual skiing experience under their belts. However, the boys will be far from out of condition, for Coach Bailey has had his charges running gruelling cross-country races all week.

The coach will have his work cut out for him between now and the Lake Placid junket, because he isn't well enough acquainted with the ability of each of his men and thus cannot yet select his team.

The wearers of the Green and Gold are facing a busy season, for to date, aside from the aforementioned Lake Placid engagement, the members of the U. V. M. skiing team are scheduled to compete in two February contests, the Dartmouth and the Middlebury Carnivals, and there are great possibilities of their participating in the New Hampshire Carnival.

Fleming Museum Gives Exhibition for Blind

This is the second in a series of articles describing the extension work of the Fleming Museum.

The number of blind people in Vermont is not large—not over 500, but many are aged and at a distance from Burlington, many are too feeble to travel, and a few are too proud to accept free service, such as transportation. Therefore, this project was adopted by the Fleming Museum to bring to the blind an hour's experience of visiting a museum.

After the annual exhibition in the Museum about 100 objects are sent to the blind. Cards describing the pieces are attached, one side printed for the seeing, the other in Braille for the sightless. These objects include pottery, Indianware, Oriental pieces, rare vases, and any other objects of beauty and art that would bring cheer and interest to those unable to see.

Heaven is Now Home Of Some U. V. M. Girls

"This is Heaven. Which one of the angels would you like to speak to?" These are the words which greet all those who telephone McCormick's, one of the Burlington homes where University girls take their meals. It's a new telephone greeting the University girls figured out. No business-like "999 Narrow Lane—Miss Jones speaking." No threadbare "Hello." No unimaginative "Yes?" It warms you, somehow, and in spite of yourself you're willing to take the "angels" at their own valuation. Don't all call at once, please, or the telephone company will be after us. We won't tell you the number. You'll have to find "Heaven" for yourselves.

The lecture and slides will feature el glimpses en route from New York Alexandria and Cairo, and with street nes, bazzars, and mosques, picturing the of today. Also the lecture will fea- Egypt's treasures of art and arche- gy—the ancient pyramids, the golden s of Tutankh-amen, and the great ks of temple sculpture and architec- e.

Craske has developed his color photog- hy as an artistic medium, and as an ist, presents his pictures of Egypt in istic arrangement as well as natural s. As usual this lecture is open to the lic and all University students.

Campus Carolers to Season Spirit

With Professor Millikan, as leader, twenty students will pep up the campus Christmas spirit by singing Christmas carols around at the various dormitories, sororities and fraternities on Thursday evening December 19 from 8.15 to 10.20. All are urged to receive them and join in this caroling.

At 10 o'clock Professor Millikan and his twenty choristers will be entertained at a party at Southwick.

The following are the twenty students in this group: Anne Bottomley '42, Betty Cole '41, Gloria Farrell '43, Margaret Crowley '41, Elizabeth Gurney '41, Shirley Mayforth '41, Louise Mann '41, Marjorie Southworth '43, Maywood Metcalf '41, Doris Doerfler '44, T. K. Malone '41, P. R. Poulin '41, W. Salmon '44, R. L. Norton '44, P. D. Eisenwinter '43, W. R. Barrows '41, R. P. Kenney '41, Dick Otis '42, R. Salmon '41 and A. L. Shaw '42.

Prof. Douglas To Speak Tonite On Cynic Program

To hear the best of U. V. M.'s vocal talent tonight, tune in on your dial to WCAX at 8.30 when you will hear the aforementioned talent on their first radio appearance of the year led by Prof. Howard G. Bennett in a rendition of appropriate Christmas carols. The University choir will sing during the broadcast the following selections:

1. To Us Is Born Immanuel..Praetorius
2. Chanson Joyeuse de Noël....Gevaert
3. Les Rois Mages.....Gevaert
4. Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying
   A French carol arranged by Davision

Guest speaker on tonight's program is Prof. Bennett C. Douglass, head of the Department of Education, who will discuss "Trends in Modern Education" in which he will talk about new ideas and techniques that have been evolved recently in the fields of education.

Fulvio Bardossi, sports editor of the Cynic, will present a sports revue and announce the college sports editors' all-American choices for 1940. Charles Katzew '42 will summarize the news of the week, and a co-ed representative will report on women's activities on the campus. M. J. Levin '41, director of the Cynic Radio Program, will be in charge. This is the last of these programs to be broadcast for 1940. The series will be resumed shortly after Christmas vacation.

Mrs. Donahue Chosen As Slade House Mother

Mrs. James E. Donahue of Essex Junction, librarian in the Wilbur Library of Vermont documents and books at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont, has taken over the duties of housemother at Slade Hall for the winter months. Mrs. Donahue is taking the place of Mrs. Andrew Louden, who has gone South to spend the winter with Mrs. Mabel B. Bailey, widow of the late President Guy W. Bailey. Mrs. Donahue has served as housemother before in other University dormitories and is well known among women students at Vermont.

Dom Michael, O.S.B. to Address Newman Club

There will be a meeting Tuesday evening at 7.30 p.m. at Southwick in the South Lounge. Dom Thomas Michael, O. S. B., of St. Michael's College, will be the speaker. His subject will be "Christmas—and the Peace It Should Bring."

There will be a meeting of the officers and executive board with the faculty advisory committee immediately afterward.

Huntley Returns From Conference

Council for Democracy Discusses Defense

T. R. Huntley '41 returned yesterday from New York City where he attended a "bull session" of representatives from all the leading colleges sponsored by the Council for Democracy. The Council for Democracy is a non-political organization whose purpose is to engender the will to defend and promote that American Democracy and to stimulate the participation of each individual in the activities necessary for its defense and promotion. Among the many eminent men on the board of directors are Herbert Agar, Thomas Hart Benton, John H. P. Gould, John Gunther, Charles E. Hughes, Jr., Alvin Johnson, Alfred Lunt, Grantland Rice, Alexander Woollcott, and Robert Sherwood.

Student attitudes toward propaganda and its effect on democracy, conscription, aid to Britain and many other topics pertinent to students were discussed. Discussion leaders included Mr. George Britt, New York newspaperman, Mr. Walter Millis, leader in political thought, Mr. John Tunis and Stephen Vincent Benet, eminent writer.

Fourteen Eastern colleges sent representatives to the meeting—Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Brown, Cornell, Dartmouth, University of Pennsylvania, George Washington, Williams, Amherst, City College of New York, Swarthmore, Boston University and the University of Vermont.

Throughout the conference, according to Mr. Huntley, it was emphasized that the greatest danger that our government faces today does not come from a foreign foe but from forces within our own country.

College students, who will be, regardless of their professions, the leaders in political thought in a few years, do not understand nor attempt to understand the problems that face our form of government. Organizations for the discussion and the study of such problems are in abundance on all campuses and yet students are not interested enough to take part.

The majority of the colleges in the opinion of their representatives accepted the conscription bill as a necessity. The colleges were in favor of all possible aid to Britain except the sending of men. Williams College, according to their representative, is willing to send men. Increased interest in R. O. T. C. is evident in the enrollment in the basic courses at Harvard and Boston University.

The Council for Democracy has a vast supply of eminent speakers and they would be glad to cooperate with any student organization that wishes to engage a speaker or records.

Rev. Smith is Chapel Speaker

The Rev. Linwood Smith of Shelburne will conduct Wednesday's Chapel service. This will be the last service before the Christmas recess.

Junior Nominations

The following candidates for the position of Treasurer of the Junior Class have been nominated by petition:

Roger B. Hunting,
Robert C. Steinman.

The election to fill this office will be held Wdnesday, December 18, in the Office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. The polls will be open from 9.00-12.00 a.m. and 2.00-4.30 p.m.—E. Swift, Secretary.

Professor Bennett Directs Annual Christmas Concert

Well-balanced Program Is Attended by Hundreds

Directs Concert

Prof. H. G. Bennett

On Sunday afternoon at 4.00 the Christmas concert, which is given every year by the University Choir, was presented in Ira Allen Chapel under the direction of Prof. Howard Bennett. The musical service, witnessed by a crowded Chapel was assisted by the Rev. Skillman E. Myers.

As well as selections by the choir of forty-five voices, the Chapel orchestra of nineteen people played the Pastoral Symphony from the "Messiah" by Handel and assisted the choir.

The Christmas concert opened with three Chorale Preludes by Bach—"Der Tag, der ist so freudenreich," "Puer Natus in Bethlehem," and "Vom Himmel hoch da komm' ich her." They were played by the Chapel organist, Miss Miriam Natilee Marston.

Then the large congregation joined in singing the Christmas hymn, "O Come, O Come Emanuel," and this was followed by "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming" from the men's choir.

Bach Cantata

Next on the program, Bach's Cantata No. 142 for the first day of the Christmas festival was sung by the choir, which was assisted by the orchestra and solos by Miss Marjorie Southworth, Prof. George Millikan, and Thomas Malone. This cantata is the one which is claimed by some for the composer, Kuhnau, who came before Bach at St. Thomas' in Leipzig, although it is included in the Bach Gesellschaft's collection of the works of Bach.

The Scripture Reading by the Reverend Myers preceded Praetorius' "To Us is Born Emanuel" presented by the whole choir, and this was followed by the traditionally beautiful French piece, "Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying," arranged by Davidson.

After these came two selections in French by the French composer Gevaert, "Les Rois Mages" and "Chanson Joyeuse de Noël. These were done by the complete University choir.

The "Pastoral Symphony," from the "Messiah," by Handel, was then played by the Chapel orchestra and following this the orchestra and the choir gave 'Glory to God in the Highest," by Pegolesi and Handel's "Hallelujah, Amen," from "Judas Maccabaeus."

Then everyone sang "Joy to the World," and after the prayer and benediction, the respones was "Silent Night." The recessional hymn was "O Come, All Ye Faithful" and the concert closed with a "Rhapsodie on Christmas Themes" by Gigout.

The members of the choir are: Sopranos, Theresa Coderre '43, Elizabeth Cole '41, Gloria Farrell '43, Betty Hall '44, Nora Hill '41, Ruth Hopkins '41,

Student Opinion

By Joe Belden, Editor

Although still more optimistic about the United States staying out of war than the general public is, American college students have lost some confidence during the last twelve months that we can avoid the conflict.

This is the tenor of national campus opinion today expressed through the cross-sectional samplings of Student Opinion Surveys of America. The Cynic is one of the 150 college newspapers cooperating in conducting these scientific polls.

The defense expansion program that this country is now witnessing will be a factor in helping to keep us out of the European conflagration, two out of every three collegians believe. Asked by Survey's interviewers whether they "felt the enlargement of our army and navy will help to keep us out of war or draw us closer to war," these were the answers given, in percentages:

Will help to keep us out.....67%
Will draw us closer 33%

Exactly one year ago, in December, 1939, Student Opinion Surveys sampled the college world with this question: "Do you believe that the United States can stay out of the present war?" That was shortly after the German invasion of Poland and the beginning of general hostilities. The question has been repeated, and this is the comparison:

Believe we can stay out, Dec., 1939..68%
Believe we can stay out, Dec., 1940..63%

Cross-tabulations show that opinion among college men and among co-eds is identical.

The answers in the present poll have been further broken down to make possible a study of qualified opinions. Of the 63 percent who believe the United States will not be involved, 7 percent attached an "if" to their answers. Most of these qualifications included the idea expressed by a University of Vermont senior, "Yes, we can stay out if Britain can hold out long enough." Another opinion prevalent among students was exemplified by the comment made to the Georgia State Teachers College interviewer, "Yes, if the United States could get busy and eliminate spies and fifth columnists." But there were many who feel this nation has already taken too many dangerous steps. "We're already in it, for we are fighting economically for England," said a St. Edward's (Texas) University sophomore.

College youth has better hopes for the international future of the country than does the average American voter. The most recent Gallup poll (November 30) on the subject reveals that although optimism is growing, a majority of 59 percent still feels the United States will eventually have to fight. College sentiment has increased in the opposite direction, towards the pessimistic side, but a majority remains firm in the belief war will be avoided.

Last Dancing Classes

The dancing class for beginners will have its next meeting tonight, Tuesday, December 17, from 7.00-10.00.

The continuation group will meet tomorrow, Wednesday, December 18, from 7.30-10.00.

These will be the last dancing classes until second semester starts. The reason for this is due to the fact that there are only two weeks in January before midyears, which it is necessary to devote to studies.

Announcements will be made the latter part of January concerning the February meetings. Watch for notices regarding the nights on which these classes are to be continued. The same classes, beginners and continuation, will meet next semester, but the time may be changed so watch for the nights scheduled.

Peace on Earth?

Merry Christmas! We give you that greeting in spite of the fact that in all the centuries, and they are many, since there was first a celebration of the birthday of Christ there has been no Christmas Day that brought to the world less cause for rejoicing than this one of 1940 will bring. Only twenty-five years ago the men of the world were waging a war that was a bloodier war than this one has been so far. Theirs was a war in which all the combatants might be called Christian nations. Our world is different for today there are four great militarized, mechanized and greedy nations who range against our Christian concepts. To them, and in them man's rights—basic in any true civilization—are non-existent.

One of those nations has denied that God entirely; the second hasn't gone so far as to deny God but it practices brutality and callousness; although its people believe in God officially, the third has adopted a religion that denies Him and the fourth nation is pagan.

These four nations have spread throughout the world a pall of gloom not so much because of their power, which is tremendous, but because of their ideologies. The faiths of these four nations have led them to break faith with all mankind, including their own people, who are told that they live only for the State. The world realizes, however, that these millions of men and women are being used solely for the glorification of Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and Japan's "Son of Heaven." These hated men have broken treaties, murdered nations, and exalted power in such a way that this Christmas finds the world afraid as it has never been afraid before.

Are hope and faith still present? Doesn't the future promise something better than a horrible war which, if it lasts for an extended length of time, will in all probability destroy the Christian civilization that has been the light of our world for nearly 2,000 years? We think so. No nation can decree that God no longer exists for no such fiat can abolish God. Throughout the centuries history records the name of no man who subdued the world although many have aspired to be King over all. Always the empire crumbled; always the conqueror lost because there were those who clung desperately to the hope of freedom. Even Napoleon Bonaparte who succeeded in becoming the ruler of a large part of the earth before he was beaten, said, "Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and myself have founded empires. But on what did we rest the creations of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded His empire on love; and, at this hour, millions would die for Him."

Christian faith and the hope of freedom have won in the past and they will conquer again. Germany can't conquer the world even with the help of the awe-inspiring nations that have joined her unholy cause. Discord and disunity among allies can never win a war and in Hitler's alliances are the roots of much hate.

This then is Christmas 1940! Not a bright picture, we grant, but a picture which is not entirely black and devoid of hope. There are some things in this world that do not change. There is a God although Russia has officially declared that there is none. Germany sets up its own God but it is only a poorly conceived imaginative one. Christmas will come to the people of these nations though it will bring neither peace nor hope. Christmas will come to England fighting one of the bravest and most important battles in the history of the world. Christmas will come to us in America and there will be no blackouts to hide the candles.

There will be an important meeting of the Business Staff of the 1942 Ariel, Wednesday, December 18, in Room 1, North College, at 1.30 p.m. All scrubs and anyone who wishes to scrub should plan to be present.—CLARK G. MILLER, Business Manager.

It is necessary for ALL Ariel proofs to be turned in. Juniors who still have their proofs are requested to leave them in the Bookstore or return them to Nancy Goodwin or Stanley Pike immediately.

Photographic Club will have its meeting this Wednesday, December 18, at 7.30 p.m., in the club's dark-rooms, which are in Slade Hall. All members urged to attend. Attendance will be taken. Prospective members welcome.

SOPHOMORES ATTENTION—Scrub business staff of the Ariel. Give your name to Clark Miller, Phi Delta Theta House, now.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT CHANGES—Two changes have been made in English 26 for this year:
1. Group I now consists of two books which all students taking the course are required to read. Students who took out reading lists last spring for summer study should note the change.
2. Students taking the course have been divided into groups and each group has been assigned to a member of the English Department, who will act as group counselor. Students are advised to consult their counselor about the choice of books to read and methods of study. A list of counselors is now posted on the bulletin board of the Department of English.

SCRIBES meets for the last time before Christmas vacation on Thursday night, December 19, at 7.30 p.m. Since the meeting will really be a Christmas party, complete with refreshments(!), members needn't bring any manuscripts. They are strongly urged, however, to bring their wits. For further details call Fulvio Bardossi, Marolyn Powers, Huddee Zwick, or Doris Jareckie.

There will be a Gold Key meeting at the Sigma Phi Place on Wednesday, December 18, at 7.30 p.m.

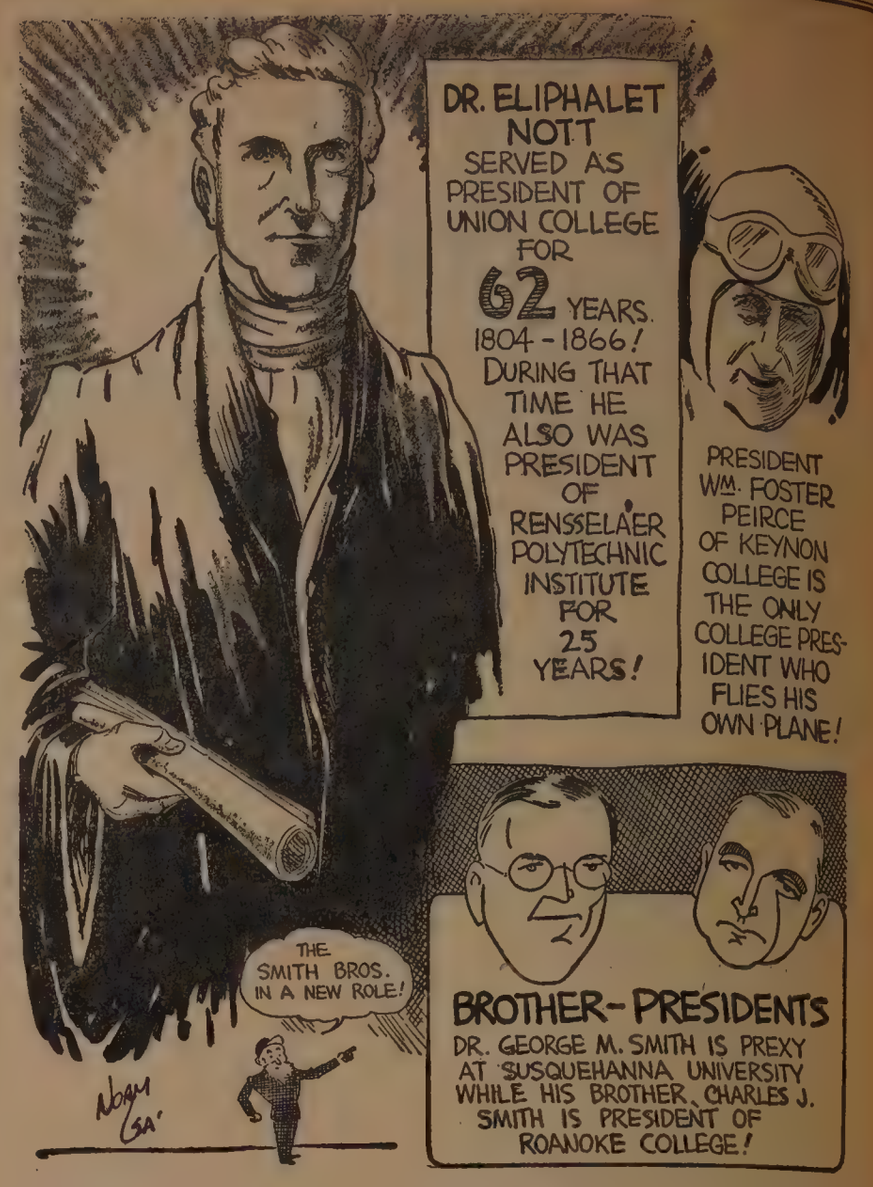
What Do You Want For Christmas?

This was the question that your roving reporter fired at a number of students. As a result you may find some helpful hints in deciding just what to give "him or her."

Our editor-in-chief, Maywood Metcalf '41 would like a fountan pen and plenty of good ideas. Can't someone help her out?

The editor of the Ariel, R. Hunting '42, would like some heavy blankets for these cold winter nights, more funds for the Ariel, and a personal guarantee that all juniors will have their pictures done at the scheduled appointments. Why not give Roger his Christmas wish, Juniors?

Our next candidate has a fairly long list. Dorothea Smith '41 wants Santa to bring the following: a season ticket on chair-lift at Stowe, Rockwell Kent's Shakespeare, records from Strauss, and the rest of Beethoven's fifth. Dot would also like some red flannels.



Jack Burgess '42 asks for a left rear curtain for his car. It is getting too cold for him. Jack also would like Kenneth Roberts' late novel "Oliver Wiswell."

Julie Fletcher '44 wants the guarantee that she will be on the campus of U. V. M. after the mid-year exams. Julie would also like to have check dancing inaugurated at Mrs. Tracy's, 49 Henderson Terrace, between seven and eight o'clock.

Ed Corliss '42 has a very unusual wish, he feels the need of a pair of boxing glove mittens similar to those that the girls have been wearing. Ed feels the need of protection.

Many students couldn't decide "what they wanted for Christmas," we hope they will soon.

May your inquiring reporter wish you a very Merry Christmas.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

As a list, or the number of fraternity and non-fraternity men and women and their participation in campus activities and organizations, is not available at the registrar's office or elsewhere on the campus, I compiled the following statistics to appease my curiosity. These unofficial statistics are passed on as they may prove of interest to the rest of the student body.

These compilations may prove to be very inaccurate as they were based on the meager information readily available to me. Also the numbers of persons in groups, organizations and activities is constantly changing, which would tend to alter the compilations as they are here.

The statements set forth do not intend to determine any conclusions or indicate any trends whatsoever.

Students in Residence, 1940:

Graduate College, Medical College	Total	Percent of Entire University	Percent of All Women	Percent of All Men

Looking Them Over

Trying to go big-time twice in the same week, the Catamounts were definitely unable to stand the pace. It took the Rams about twelve minutes to get their shooting eyes in focus and after that it was just a fancy shooting exhibition by Fitzgerald and Company. The Rams didn't try to crack the Vermont zone defense for close-up shots but merely kept their distance and laid down an artillery barrage which the Cats couldn't match. Fitzgerald is about the most accomplished long shot artist we've ever seen on the Memorial Auditorium surface.

Paul Corley was the only Vermonter who seemed able to find the basket. The Green and Gold were definitely off—the way they were missing easy scoring chances was agonizing to Vermont supporters. The statistics show that the Cats were outscored on set shots and rebounds as well as on foul shots. The weakness in the free shot department was evident, as it was the other night against Dartmouth.

News from other fronts highlights a 52-23 Cadet victory over Plattsburg Teachers. This is somewhat of a bad augury for other state title contenders if compared with St. Michael's 39-38 photo-finish against the same team. It's very easy to make early season predictions that don't jell but it seems as though the Norwich athletic revival covers not only football but basketball. Middlebury is an unknown quantity but if a loss to Williams means anything it is the weakest contender for state honors.

All-American

Though somewhat late, we finally have the National Intercollegiate Sports Writers Association All-American football team. This team selected by a poll of eighty college sports writers (of which ye scribe was a humble one) represents pretty fairly colleges all over the nation. At the risk of boring you we'll shoot the works with the full team of which we successfully picked five.

Ends—Rankin, Purdue; Gene Goodreault, Boston College.
Guards—Bob Sufferidge, Tennessee; Ed. Molinski, Tennessee.
Tackles—Nick Drahos, Cornell; Mike Erich, Iowa.
Center—Rudy Mucha, Washington.
Backs—Tom Harmon, Michigan (capt.); John Kimbrough, Texas A. and M.; George Franck, Minnesota; Francis Reagan, Pennsylvania.

Only one of the eighty writers by the way failed to mention the Michigan Flash, and that seems to tuck away the 1940 grid season for good.

News Summary

Cairo, Mon., Dec. 16—Vanguards of Britain's army in the western desert are "well across" the border in Italian Libia, a general headquarters communique reported today. A communique issued by the R. A. F. stated five direct hits on a concentration of cruisers and destroyers in a British air raid on the Italian port of Naples Saturday night.

Athens, Mon., Dec. 16—An Italian general and a colonel were reported killed when Greeks stormed an important position Fascist forces were trying desperately to hold. "Their death was the sign for a wholesale retreat and abandonment of the height."

Washington, Mon., Dec. 16—The elimination of all legal obstacles in the way of expedited aid to Great Britain was urged today by Chairman Bloom (D-N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs committee.

Bern, Switzerland, Mon., Dec. 16—The fate of conquered France's Vichy Government and possibly even total Nazi occupation of her soil was believed here today to depend on how the axis takes the dismissal by Premier Petain of Vice-Premier Laval. Laval was succeeded by former French Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

Old Buildings Project Reaches Many States

A book by Herbert Wheaton Congdon, "Old Vermont Houses," appeared in March, 1940. This did much to arouse interest in this project. It was published by the Fleming Museum, and was an outgrowth of the Old Buildings Project. The plan is to encourage Vermont communities to preserve intact or to restore to their original state the churches, town halls, and residences of the 1770-1850 period, and to keep a permanent record by means of photographs and writings of the these old buildings.

There is a collection of enlarged photographs that have been used greatly in the past year. A great many of them were sent to Seattle, to the San Diego Fine Arts Gallery in California, to Sacramento Junior College, and to the Eastern Illinois State Teachers College in Charleston, Ill. Smaller groups of photographs were sent to various galleries, libraries, and other institutions in Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine, and West Virginia. This is an indication that the work of the Museum reaches all over the United States, shown gy the interest of other states, as well as Vermont, in the Old Buildings Project.

Fordham Seals Up Catamounts 44-24

But Corley Saves Team's Losing Face

The Fordham basketballers invaded this hamlet December 13 and routed the local Green and Gold defenders to the tune of 44-24. Dick Fitzgerald, who found the range on the Memorial Auditorium court last year, seemed better than ever Friday night as he led the boys from Rose Hill to a smashing victory.

The game started off as a repetition of the opening minutes of the disastrous Dartmouth encounter. Capt. Paul Corley broke the ice with a push-up shot. Hal Savage, Fordham forward, tied the score shortly afterward, but Don Maley put the Green and Gold ahead on a foul shot. Then Fitzgerald gave an encore of his brilliant exhibition last year by sinking a beautiful shot from mid-court. The U. V. M. rooters were beginning to think in terms of a Vermont victory when the Cats began to bewilder the Rams by their excellent passing attack. This coordination led to the Vermonters going out in front 6-4 on Beauchemin's basket from close up and Dick Healy's foul shot.

But then came the deluge of long shots. Fitzgerald scored two baskets from mid-court to put his team into a lead which they never relinquished. Practically all of the Fordham scoring in the first half was due to shots made from the vicinity of the center of the floor. Coach Fuzzy Evans substituted White and Doherty in an attempt to stem the tide, but all his efforts were in vain. By half-time the New Yorkers had amassed a total of 22 points while having held their hosts to a meager 8 tallies.

In the second canto the Fordham mentor, Ed Kelleher, substituted freely, and as a result this frame saw a very close game played. The Fordhamites unleashed spasmodic attacks in which they utilized their passing ability in order to make close-ups. However, the Vermont defense was frequently breaking up the smooth Fordham offense, and finally the Cats began to give the visitors a taste of their own medicine with Corley sinking long shots in a game but fruitless rally. In spite of his efforts the Rams outscored the local basketeers in this half, and at the final gun they had garnered 44 points to 24 for the Cats.

Long shots comprised the Fordham offense in the first half. The Rams kept constantly feeding Fitzgerald, and Fitz never let his teammates down, for he seldom missed a shot from mid-court all evening. The Rams brought along another fellow named George Babich and it was his outstanding defensive game plus his setting up of scoring plays that brought the spotlight to shine on him.

Vermont was handicapped by lack of height, for the Fordham starters towered over everyone on the Green and Gold squad. The U. V. M.'s couldn't match the skill of the Rams at sinking long shots, and rarely did they dribble and pass their way through the Fordham team to score on set-up shots. The Cats used an offense similar to Dartmouth's in the second half; yet, try as they might, the Vermonters found the Rams' defense too tough a nut to crack. The Catamounts were still failing to convert foul shots and were feeble in their attempts to get the ball off the backboard.

Perhaps the reason for the Vermont defeat is that the Cats had an "off" night on Friday the 13th. Perhaps Fordham was just too good. Whatever the reason, the Green and Gold will have to improve a great deal before next Thursday night if it expects to gain revenge on the Dartmouth Indians at Hanover.

Cats To Engage Big Green, Lord Jeff Tomorrow And Thursday

Frosh Mentor

SHERRY FOGG

Leave Tomorrow First Amherst Start

Having completed a mediocre home stand that netted them one win in three starts, the varsity cagers will leave for Hanover, N. H., tomorrow noon to engage a Dartmouth juggernaut which was responsible for one of their last week's defeats, and then continue on to meet Amherst on Thursday night.

As the Vermont game will be Amherst's initial start, little can be said as to the probable strength of the Lord Jeff quintet. However, viewing the fact that they are the defending champions of the Little Three league, they will undoubtedly field a strong team.

In Joe Kelly, forward, and Norris, center, Amherst has a scoring combination that may prove a definite threat to a Vermont victory.

Coach Fuzzy Evans will probably start the unit of Capt. Paul Corley, whose offensive work has been outstanding thus far this season; Hank Beauchemin, who is due to hit his stride any time now; Dick Healy, hard-playing forward; Don Maley, who has played some swell defensive ball this year; and either Red White or Frankie Taylor in the fifth position.

Killick, Saltzberg, Mannheim, G'drich Star

Before a group of 1,500 dozing fans in a half-filled auditorium the Vermont Kittens rolled over the Bellows Free Academy basketeers last Friday night by o 37-9 count. Larry Killick, former Black Garter star, led the Vermont advance on the diminutive lads from St. Albans and although playing only half the game and not being quite up to his usual form Killick proceeded to deposit six field goals through the hoop and assist his teammates in several others.

The Yearlings took the lead at the outset and never relinquished it; the Academy players were simply outclassed in all departments of the game and were also handicapped by their lack of height. Coach Sherry Fogg of the Frosh shuffled his players constantly with Killick easily the outstanding performer. Mannheim, Saltzberg and Goodrich also exhibited a fine brand of play which marked them as comers for the remainder of the season.

Vin Clancy, manager of the Burlington Cardinals Baseball Club officiated in this preliminary contest and provided his Burlington acquaintances no end of entertainment in an otherwise drab, one-sided affair.

The following officers were elected by the Delta Phi pledges at their meeting on December 9: President, Estelle Berkson '44; Vice-President, Constance Colodny '44; Secretary, Cecile Rosen '44.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

A pledge tea is to be given at the house on Thursday, December 18, from 4.30 to 6.00. All sorority pledges are cordially invited. Catherine Grier '42 and Phyllis Bell '44 are in charge.

Priscilla Newton Wood '38 and Margaret MacMartin '38 were week-end guests at the house.

A Christmas party for a group of poor children is to be given at the house on Wednesday, December 17. Katherine Holden '42 is in charge.

Martha Rist '39 passed chocolates at a recent sorority meeting to announce her engagement to John Suitor.

A Christmas supper and party for active members and pledges was held at the house on December 15. Janet Dike '43 was in charge.

PI BETA PHI

A pledge tea was held at the house on Saturday, December 14. The guests were received by Mrs. Bell, the housemother; and Mrs. Taggart poured. Mary Quinn '44 was in charge.

The active members were entertained by the Pi Phi pledges at a Christmas party on December 16.

Post Urges That Harriers Train

"Few of the track men who should are taking advantage of the opportunity to practice now in preparation for the spring season," Coach Archie Post stated recently. Both prospective weightmen and pole-vaulters and experienced vaulters and weight-throwers may now practice in the cage, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. Only about five are now coming regularly, according to Archie and more should do so if they have the time.

Archie stressed the importance of fundamental and body-building exercise. These events require much training and more can be accomplished during the season if these preparatory exercises are done now.

Campus Gallants Giving Gala Dances

Mistletoe and Holly To Cover the Halls

The regular Sunday night bull session was in order and the girls were discussing the coming Christmas formals. There was a little trouble however for, being so popular, they had invitations to all the formals and couldn't decide which ones they wanted to attend. There was no way they could decide by weighing the merits of their respective escorts-to-be so, when I walked in on them they were just about to discuss the goings on at each of the houses and hoped in this way to settle their problems. Jean's voice was the first I heard.

Well, gee, I think we'd have more fun if we went to the Sigma Phi affair. No one knows what's going on there. Jack Burgess is in charge of the entertainment and I talked 'til I was blue in the face and I didn't get anything much out of him. All he'd tell me was that Prof. and Mrs. Pond and Mr. Millikan were going to be the chaperons and that Red Dower's orchestra was going to play. That's enough to make me decide what one I want to go to. Why don't you all go, too? We'd have loads of fun and if Jack's planning it, it's sure to be good, food and favors and all—and 'specially the decorations. She looked hopefully around—for they all hoped they could agree on one function and go together. But before anything was decided, Betty had a word to put in about the Sigma Nu function.

Sigma Nu and Owl

"I think the Sigma Nu affair will top them all—look, the Collegians from Montpelier are going to play, and I've never danced to a better orchestra. And besides that they're going to have swell favors and Santa Claus is going to pass them out. Harry Parker is in charge of it and he told me that they were going to have the whole house decorated with evergreens and there'd be mistletoe scattered all around. Now who could ask for a better opportunity? They're going to have Captain and Mrs. Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Post there and I don't think they could have picked any better chaperons. Aw please, kids, let's go there—besides I've almost accepted my date."

"Well, I think the Owls' dinner dance is going to be the best of all," said Helen. "Why look, it's the oldest social function on campus, it started way back when Yehudi's granddad was young. They're going to have theirs on the 11th of January and we can all go to it—besides, they're going to have the Catamounts and I just love to slink to them! Let's definitely plan to go to that. With Ray Darling planning it, it's sure to be the social highlight of the season! It's the 105th year of Owl tradition and they'd be so disappointed if we weren't there to help them celebrate."

"Well, we can all go to that and still go to the Phi Delt dance," said Grace—"they're having a super affair. Johnny Spasyk has charge of it and he told me they were having the sunroom decorated as a ski hut and Jack Collins' orchestra to give out—now what more could you ask for. Besides, remember last year's formal—the favors are sure to be original! And anyhow I've just about decided that I like Hank best of all" she pouted, "let's go to the Phi Delts."

Delt, TEP and Phi Sig

"Look," said Pat, 'the Delta Psis are having theirs, too—and they're having a formal dinner with turkey and all before their dance. Ed Corliss was telling me all the other delicious things they were going to have and then after that we go up to the ballroom to dance. Hazen Wood has charge of that and he's got Wayne Barrows' Catamounts for the music—and they're all swell dancers—don't you think we should do there?"

"Gosh I'm glad I don't have all those to decide between," said Jean. "I definitely decided on the T E P dance. Sumner Firestone has charge of it. They're holding it at the Vermont and having the Rhythm Makers from Barre—don't you think that'll be swell—they wouldn't tell me what the favors are going to be."

"Well, I still think you should go to the Phi Sig dance," said Ruthie, "they're having it in that new ballroom they made when they knocked out that partition. Bob Jary's orchestra is playing and Prof. and Mrs. Bickford are chaperoning—doesn't that sound wonderful? They've a big secret about the decorations and favors, though—I couldn't find out a thing about those!"

My, such babbling I've never heard, and I still don't think anything's decided, but I had so much Latin to do, I just had to go—so I never did find out which one the gals decided on!

Novel Calendar Shown At Store

Among the numerous novel gifts and new stock now on display at the University Stores is a special feature, the Sesquicentennial Anniversary Calendar which pays tribute to the founder of the University of Vermont, Ira Allen, and its late President Guy W. Bailey. With a limited supply and priced at fifty cents this calendar gives in short histories a résumé of the history of the University. It portrays with short drawings the building history including the new Waterman Building now under construction.

The University of Vermont was founded in 1791 by Ira Allen. Since that date it has had thirteen presidents, among them some famous scholars who have added greatly to the prestige of the institution. It has also had two "Old Mills," the second of which was remodeled twice, three Medical Buildings, two Libraries, and many other buildings which are material evidence of the efforts of these thirteen men illustrated on the calendar.

Listed among their exclusive line of seal Christmas novelty gifts are: bracelets, compacts, pins, charms, cigarette cases, key chains and Christmas cards. Of especial attraction is the stationery with the house cuts of three sororities and four fraternities. Also due for display at an early date is an extensive line of stickers and decals. There will be added two new kinds, one to celebrate the sesquicentennial and the other to keep pace with the college comics.

Local Sorority Holds Celebration

Sigma Gamma Completes Its Twentieth Year

The only co-ed local at U.V. M., Sigma Gamma, has just completed its twentieth year. Anniversary celebration took place last week-end to honor the founders.

A tea at Southwick Saturday presented several founders to the college. In the receiving line were Hester Carver '41, the president; and Mrs. Consuelo Northrup Bailey, Mrs. Marian Barrows Sylvester, Miss Alice Sunderland, Mrs. Bertha Little Larrabee, and Mrs. Dora Chamberlain Cady, all of the group who organized the sorority. About 150 faculty members, students and friends were served. The ladies who poured were Dean Simpson and several of the patronesses: Mrs. Elijah Swift, Mrs. C. P. Cowles, Miss Margaret Whiting, Mrs. G. H. Barrows, Mrs. Frances Sparhawk, Mrs. W. O. Lane, and Mrs. H. A. Brown. The room was decorated with evergreen, flowers, candles, and silver balls. Two small Christmas trees added to the holiday atmosphere.

A banquet for members and patronesses was held Sunday at the Roof Garden of the Hotel Vermont. Several out-of-town alumnae were present, including Kathleen Naramore '40 who acted as mistress of ceremonies. Mrs. Elijah Swift, charter patroness, spoke on the early days of the sorority, as did the founders, Mrs. Cady, Mrs. Larrabee, Mrs. Sylvester, and Mrs. Bailey. Two of the earliest pledges, Misses Marion Lttle and Miriam Ellicot, added a few words. The secretary, Mrs. C. W. Knickerbocker, read letters from absent alumnae. Mrs. L. W. Dopp, Jr., and Grace Baldwin '38 spoke for the alumnae; Evelyn Fuller '41, for the actives; and Jeanne Knickerbocker '44, for the pledges. After the banquet Sigma Gamma went in a body to the Christmas concert.

The committee in charge of the week-end included Mrs. Dopp, Mrs. Knickerbocker, Miss Baldwin, Martha Baker '41 and Beverly Carr '43.

Miss White to Speak

Miss Ruth White, assistant 4-H Club leader of Vermont, will be the guest speaker at the Home Economics Club meeting to be held Thursday, December 19, at 7.30 p.m., in the Brick Barn.

All Home Economics students are invited to attend.

Santa Claus is Christmas Party Guest at Robinson Hall

Sororities and Dorms Hold Christmas Parties

The dormitories and sorority houses on campus have been giving their annual Christmas parties this past week for the underprivileged children to help them believe there really is a Santa Claus who has something for each of them.

On Saturday afternoon the girls at Grassmount entertained nine children from three to eight years of age from the Red Cross unit. Each child was given a present of a pair of mittens and a toy, and Sally Rome '42 was in charge of the Christmas tree and refreshments.

Mary Hosley '41 was in charge of the Alpha Chi party Saturday afternoon. The members took sixteen children to the movies and then brought them back to the house for the Christmas tree, gifts, games and refreshments. Ethel Shippee '42 played the rôle of Santa Claus.

Fifteen children were brought to the Theta party at the house on Wednesday afternoon. The children were presented gifts by Santa Claus, and there were games and refreshments with Kay Holden '42 in charge.

The Alpha Xis entertained thirteen children from the Community Center on Saturday afternoon with a Christmas tree, games, gifts, and refreshments.

Redstone, Robinson, and Slade Halls each secured the name of a child from the Children's Aid Society, and Sunday evening each house had a party and wrapped the gifts which had been contributed to make some child supremely happy on Christmas Day.

Sanders Hall had its Christmas party Sunday evening, and then gifts were given to the Howard Relief Agency for needy children.

Dorm Parties Successful

Last night Prof. and Mrs. G. G. Groat, Prof. and Mrs. J. A. Bullard, Prof. and Mrs. J. T. Metcalf, Mr. G. L. Millikan, and Dean Mary Simpson were dinner guests at Grassmount. Jean Stewart '41 of Rawal Pindi, India, spoke on "Christmas in India" which was followed by group caroling.

The women of the Redstone campus had their Christmas party with all the fixings on Wednesday evening, December 18. Prof. and Mrs. B. C. Douglass were honored guests. Bright red candles and Christmas wreaths were used as the novel Yuletide table decorations. During the dinner hour a male quartet composed of Thomas Malone '41, Burlington; Paul Poulin '41, Plattsburgh, N. Y.; Paul Jenks '43, Burlington; and Robert Goss '44, Wilder, entertained the women and their guests by singing familiar carols.

Dean Mary Jean Simpson was the guest at the Christmas dinner at Gates House on Wednesday evening. Guests at Allen House at their party Wednesday evening were Mrs. Elizabeth Bradish and Prof. and Mrs. H. P. Levine. The girls at Allen House under the direction of Earlene Jenness '43 prepared the entire dinner.

The women of Prospect Hall at their dinner collected a fund which was given to the Children's Aid Society.

Rev. Ladd Conducts Christmas Service

The Rev. Percy C. Ladd, pastor of College Street Congregational Church, conducted Wednesday's Chapel Service. The last to be held before vacation, it was in keeping with the Christmastide.

The congregation joined with the choir in singing three Christmas carols: "O Come All Ye Faithful," "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," and "Holy Night." After a Responsive reading, "Messiah's Golden Reign," the choir gave "Chanson Joyeus de Noël" by Gevaert. Reverend Ladd's sermon consisted of a selection from Scripture which was chosen with student appeal in mind. Benediction closed the service.

Home Eccers and Aggies Have Gala Xmas Party

Red and green crepe paper and mistletoe transformed the Brick Barn into an appropriate setting for the Home Ec-Aggie Christmas Party which was held on Tuesday night, December 17.

Robert Storey '43 was general chairman of the affair, and assisting him were Ralph Evans '41 and Floyd Campbell '42. The enjoyable program consisted of singing Christmas carols, exchanging of gifts and dancing. Prof. and Mrs. M. H. Campbell and Miss Florence Bailey acted as chaperones.

Marie Lanou '44 was in charge of refreshments which consisted of ice cream and cookies.

Zoo Students and Debaters Leave for Christmas Trips

Zoology Students Make Annual New York Trip To Study at Museum

Thirty-one students from classes of the Zoology Department left Thursday for New York City, where they are to visit the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Henry F. Perkins, head, and Prof. Paul A. Moody, of the Zoology Department accompanied them.

The tour through the Museum will take place today and tomorrow. Each morning the group is to visit certain selected halls and rooms, with one central purpose in all it studies. Several museum department heads will act as guides, helping direct the attention of the science students to exhibits which have a bearing on the specific subject they are studying, and giving technical explanations.

Hall groups are to be visited first, and the visiting students will then go farther back into the laboratories where models are made and other work is done on exhibits which are to be put on public display later.

Three lectures were to be heard today, Friday. These are at 2.00, 4.00, and 8.00 p.m., and will be delivered by Dr. Clyde Fisher, director of the Hayden Planetarium.

Nearly fifty students signed to take this popular trip, the annual Christmas season excursion for Zoology students here, but because the number who might go was limited, the thirty-one who made the trip were selected on the basis of scholarship standing from the fifty who applied.

H. Martin, J. Nelson Attend Conference

Two Vermonters crossed the United States to California last week and are this week attending sessions of the American Vocational Association in San Francisco. The convention is centering its attention this year on the theme, "Vocational Education for Preparedness, Protection and Peace." The Vermonters who traveled to the far West for the vocational convention are W. Howard Martin, assistant professor of agricultural education at the University of Vermont, and John E. Nelson, director of secondary vocational education in the State of Vermont, who are representing the State at the California meeting of the American Vocational Association. Leaving Vermont for California, Monday, December 9, they were scheduled to attend the first meetings of the convention Saturday, December 14, and will attend the final ones this Thursday, December 19. Professor Martin will be back at the University of Vermont next Monday, December 23.

Because of the growing program of vocational education for preparedness now being instituted throughout the United States, in which University of Vermont agricultural and engineering colleges are taking their part, all state supervisors of vocational education and agriculture were urged to attend the American Vocational Association's meetings.

There will be a meeting of the French Club, Tuesday, January 7, 7.30 p.m., at Southwick. All members are urged to attend this meeting.

Three U. V. M. Debaters To Take Part in T. K. A. Discussion Tournament

The U. V. M. debating squad will be represented at the annual Tau Kappa Alpha Progession Discussion Tournament to be held in Washington, D. C., December 31, through January 2. The members attending the tournament will be H. H. Durfee '41, J. C. Cohen '42, and T. R. Huntley '41, all members of Tau Kappa Alpha, national forensic society.

The question to be discussed will be: "What Should Be the Policy of the U. S. in Relatian to the Other Countries of the Western Hemisphere as Regards Defense Against Aggression?" The method of attacking the question will be a series of conferences in which the groups will work from an analysis of it to the conclusions which may be drawn.

Throughout the tournament students will be graded on their ability as speakers and debaters and at the conclusion those with superior ratings will be awarded plaques and certificates of merit.

Co-eds to Knit For War Victims

Will Also Roll Red Cross Bandages

About thirty University of Vermont girls will busy themselves with making warm knitted gifts for destitute French and British victims of war, when they go home for their Christmas vacation. The University branch of the Young Women's Christian Association has just finished a drive for scraps of wool and old knitted garments which may be raveled and knitted again, to supply the girls' knitting needles. The students are to try their skill on these materials, demonstrating how well they knit, so that they may work later as a unit under direction of the Burlington Red Cross committee. Most of the girls will make mittens and socks as they practice, later perhaps taking up more difficult articles such as sweaters. These first articles, done mostly during the University's Christmas recess, will go to the American Friends' Service Committee, and thence probably to France. Ten University of Vermont girls are already knitting for the relief of the war sufferers, but many more will give part of their time during the holidays to the work. Elizabeth Cooper, Merchantville, N. J., is in charge of the wool drive and the knitting.

University of Vermont girls will also roll bandages for war relief under Red Cross supervision, but this project probably will not start until after the Christmas recess. It has been delayed throughout the fall, due to a shortage of cotton, occasioned, according to Y. W. C. A. officers, by the vast increase in government defense needs, multiplied at the beginning of conscription. For some time, Red Cross officials said, all cotton produced was needed in the manufacture of defense essentials, so that none could be spared to the University group for making bandages to send abroad. Thirty University of Vermont girls have joined the bandage rolling group, which is also in charge of Elizabeth Cooper.

"'Tis the Season to be Jolly!"

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year! What excitement! What fun to see mother, father, sisters, brothers and all one's old friends! Christmas trees with gaily colored lights! Christmas gifts! Christmas carols! And then "Auld Lang Syne"! Twelve strokes of the clock! A new year—1941!

Tomorrow everybody at Vermont will be dashing to take buses, automobiles, trains, and planes to go home for the Christmas recess. Christmas is the happiest time in the year for almost everybody in the Christian world. It is certainly the season that the youth of America most enjoy. Books, work, thesis papers, and examinations are put on a shelf for two short weeks to be substituted by family reunions, gay parties with "the ole gang," and a spirit of good fellowship toward all.

At this time of friendship, good will, and merriment, we would remind you of some of the gifts which aren't wrapped in bright cellophane and which you won't find on your Christmas trees. First, there's the gift of life. How often do you stop to think how lucky you are to be living, playing and working in a world which is one small planet suspended in a vast amount of space? Do you ever consider the gift of Christian civilization and what it means to you? Have you ever thought how lucky you are to have the gift of a family who loves you and believes in you? Do you ever stop to think about the gift of science which makes living in the present-day world so much more comfortable than it was even twenty years ago? Do you ever think about the gift of education which gives men the chance to live full, rich lives? Do you realize how fortunate you are to be attending an American university where you can broaden your knowledge and so increase your chance for success in this decidedly upset world? Do you ever think about the gift of friendship and how unhappy your lives would be without your friends? And have you considered recently that wonderful gift we have every day—the opportunity to live in a Christian world under a democratic way of life where man's freedom of thought and freedom of worship are still precious and cherished gifts?

It is true that you won't find these gifts beautifully wrapped under your Christmas tree on Christmas Day but we think that they are some of the very best that anyone could ask Santa Claus to bring them. Don't you think so, too?

Ring Out the Old! Ring in the New!

With this issue of the CYNIC we suspend publication until next year—a new year—1941. When January 1 comes this year it will have a special significance for us at Vermont for it will mark the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the University of Vermont! The new year promises to be a big and an important one for Vermont with the opening of the new Waterman building and special sesquicentennial celebrations throughout the year.

As we review the events of the past year we observe that much has happened on our campus. The year 1940 was marked by one of the greatest losses that has ever come to the University—the death of our beloved President Guy Bailey. An inspiring leader, he was beloved and respected by students, faculty, and a limitless number of people throughout the state.

As the new year approaches there is much toward which we can look forward—Kake Walk, Junior Week, examinations, and many events connected with the celebration of Vermont's sesquicentennial. Although the world outside of our campus is in a decided chaos there is still hope in the world and so let's defiantly ring out the old and ring in the new!

How's It Done Down Your Way?

Christmas is probably without exception the favorite holiday of every student in this University. Tomorrow when trains, busses and private cars stream outward from Burlington to all parts of the United States, there will no doubt, be fewer unhappy or disgruntled faces than at any other time in the school year. Yet it isn't the thought of presents, it isn't wholly the prospect of seeing friends and relatives nor is it entirely the pervading atmosphere of good-will and cheerfulness that will make this Christmas a success. Everything hinges on the more or less strict adherence of each family to the customs and traditions of that family.

In fact Christmas today has more or less lost its deeper religious significance amidst the mass of traditions of the tree, presents, carolers, etc. As for the customs of the individual family it doesn't matter particularly what they are, it's the fact that they have been carried on year after year until they are practically a ritual. For instance one family may spend Christmas Eve sitting around the fire while another may spend it at a cocktail party but each is as much a part and parcel of Christmas as the other because it has become a custom. Anything contrary to it would create an atmosphere of strangeness and unfamiliarity.

Try switching the time of opening presents from Christmas Eve to Christmas morning or vice versa and watch the results. Or try inviting a crowd of friends into a home accustomed to a strictly family Christmas. Some people even rebel if the tree is removed from its accustomed corner or mince pie is substituted for the traditional plum pudding. Why is it such a tragedy that some students are unable to get home for Christmas? Surely not the loss of presents or even the fact that they cannot see their friends and relatives. It is simply that Christmas, the one day in the year when custom and tradition should run rampant, is to be held in an entirely strange environment.

With this fact in mind Christmas 1940 in war-torn Europe becomes doubly desolate and appalling. In thousands of homes next Wednesday the traditions of Christmas will be impossible—many will not even have homes. Yet all those who are able to carry on any celebration at all will cling valiantly to the age-old customs and rituals.

In short if Christmas is to have any real significance for any of us this year it will be because we have been mindful of those ancient traditions which have been handed down to us as a precious heritage.

Music Dept. Swings Out With Ye Yuletide Cheer

In case you've been looking for a good example of Christmas cheer, we suggest you go down to the Music Building at 70 Williams Street. There the Yuletide spirit is at its height.

As you walk in, you hear the strains of Handel's "Messiah," or some other beloved Christmas piece coming from the Carnegie Room, which, in case you hadn't heard, has lots of Christmas music waiting for anyone on campus to listen to. From upstairs comes a mixture of soprano vocalism, bass (what shall we call them?) rumblings (?) and violin exercises. Then you notice the melody of some favorite Christmas air, for students in the music department will be on demand in their home churches over the holidays.

In the reception room is a brightly lighted Christmas tree. In the vocal studio of Mme Bradish, which is tastefully decorated around the theme of blue, is a beautifully decorated tree with blue lights. All through the building are small earthern bowls filled with sprigs of evergreen.

Just brimming over with holiday cheer the Music Building extends its most cordial "Yuletide Greetings."

Scribes in Novel Party

Come as a title of a book, ruled Huddee Zwick '43, Marolyn Powers '42, Doris Jareckie '42 and F. Bardossi '42. And all the Scribes came to Southwick December 19 for a novel party. As an icebreaker, each Scribe worked out a pantomime illustrating his character. Then the characters were divided into two casts and from these an original play was produced.

Bouquets and Brickbats

By ROGER B. HUNTING

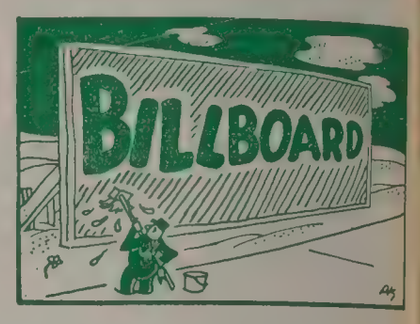
A brickbat.—To last week's column—of all the flat, insipid trash that was the worst. If better brickbats cannot be conceived—then the author had better pawn his pen.

A bouquet.—To Dean Swift for liberality in allowing post office workers to go home early for vacation. Many schools follow the letter of the law without allowance for special cases, here one has a chance for treatment of his case—that is, if he has a leg to stand on.

A brickbat.—Long and heavy, directed at the administration in general, but at Howard Prentice in particular. Where are the jackets that our Boulder men usually wear? Rumor has it that Mr. Prentice in his new position as Director of Student Finances has shouldered the burden of keeping the University from bankruptcy, and in doing this has decided that the Boulder men's coats are too expensive, and must be eliminated.

In the opinion of your author this is probably the rawest deal that has ever been put over, and steps should be taken to correct it. Our Boulder men are the most prominent men in their class, they have been elected as the leaders in all walks of campus life, theirs is the highest honor which can be given to a Vermont man. Let's save money by cutting down on what reward they do get, says Mr. Prentice.

Our Boulder men are the hardest working men in the school. They are forever conducting some meeting, organizing some event, carrying on some contact between administration and students. But Mr. Prentice feels that they cost more than they are worth.



If the University of Vermont is so hard up financially that the price of nine coats is going to push it over the brink, then it seems to me the students should know something about it. If the University is not that hard up, let's give our most outstanding men the reward that is due them. Cut down expenses somewhere, eliminate the cost of such enlightening, timely lectures as "To Asia for Apes," but let's give the Boulder men a bit of reward, both for the work they have done, and the honor they have achieved.

Let's see those Boulder men in coats!

A bouquet.—To Mr. Millikan and his twenty Christmas carolers. They certainly did a fine job of making the Christmas spirit felt. Let's have this an annual affair.

Final Brickbat.—To the almost defunct University Players, who through sheer laziness, laxness, and poor management have failed both in putting on the Group plays in November, and the Fall play, which should be coming off this week. Let's have some life in this organization, which until two years ago was one of the most active on the campus. Other Universities have good and active dramatic [illegible] what is wrong with Vermont?

That's all.—Let's hope we get by the censors and we'll see you after a Merry Christmas.

SOPHOMORES ATTENTION—Scrub business staff of the Ariel. Give your name to Clark Miller, Phi Delta Theta House, now.

It is necessary for ALL Ariel proofs to be turned in. Juniors who still have their proofs are requested to leave them in the Bookstore or return them to Nancy Goodwin or Stanley Pike immediately.

During the Christmas vacation the Billings Library will be open week days except holidays and Saturday from 9.00-12.00 a.m. and from 2.00-4.00 p.m. Saturday it will be open from 9.00-12.00 a.m. only.

Books falling due during the vacation are considered on time if returned or renewed the day college reopens.

FOUND AT CHRISTMAS CONCERT—A man's glove; scarf; several handkerchiefs; money. Please see Mr. Wheeler at the Ira Allen Chapel if you can identify any of the above.

There will be a French Club meeting on the Tuesday immediately following Christmas vacation, at 7.30 a.m., at Southwick. The date is January 7. All members are urged to attend.

U. V. M. Finds Yeheudi

Flash! Flash! At last Yeheudi has been discovered. His name was uncovered in the alumni file of the University of Vermont and it seems that he was quite a man. After attending Middlebury College he came to the University of Vermont, where he received his Master of Arts degree in 1815. For several years he was a professor of classical literature at different universities.

In 1822 he was sent to Liberia by the American colonization group, where he was in charge of a group of colored emigrants. He soon became principal agent of Liberia and restored discipline to the colony.

Compelled by broken health to leave Africa he sailed for the United States in 1828.

The Staff of the CYNIC wish the faculty and the students a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Frosh Quintet Squelch Cocky Schoolboy Five

Killick and Saltzberg Lead in Scoring

In a game replete with thrills and spills, the Vermont freshman basketball team edged the powerful Burlington High School team, Wednesday night, by the score of 29-24. The Kittens received quite a mauling as the evening progressed, for the schoolboys played a hard-fighting game throughout.

Although B. H. S. scored first, the freshmen went into the lead due to the excellent marksmanship of Itzy Saltzberg. At halftime the Green and Gold had held a lead, having amassed 14 points to the hosts' 10 tallies.

In the second half, the townies managed to tie the score and finally go into a 22-21 lead. However, with five minutes remaining, the freshman offense began to click, and the U. V. M.'s scored four quick baskets, while B. H. S. could get but one.

The Vermonters didn't work as smoothly as they have in past encounters, but the reason for this fact may be attributed to the roughness of the Burlington players. The freshmen played against a strong, well-trained, and inspired team, and the fact that they copped this contest is added proof that the 1944's have a up-and-coming basketball aggregation.

Life Saving, First Aid Classes to be Taught

National Red Cross headquarters in Washington, D. C., will offer women of Burlington and vicinity, including women who are students at the University of Vermont, the opportunity of learning how to be instructors for courses in First Aid and Life Saving. These two subjects will be taught in an eighteen-day course, with Mr. N. A. Parker of the Washington staff of the Red Cross as instructor, at the Burlington Community Y. M. C. A., March 3-21, 1941. The two subjects will be taught on alternate nights throughout the course. Satisfactorily completing the courses will mean receiving certificates entitling the right to teach First Aid and Life Saving.

Those who wish to take the Life Saving course in order to qualify as Life Saving instructors must have earned their badges as Senior Life Savers. An important requirement for those taking the Life Saving course, which was stressed by Mrs. D. V. McNaught, of the Burlington Red Cross, is fifteen hours of preliminary training, which enables non-swimmers, who lack all-year-long swimming opportunities, to brush up on fine points of swimming. This fifteen hours of preparation is essential for those who wish to take the course, and it will be given this winter at the Community Y. M. C. A.

Women in Sports

Basketball

The latest returns of the basketball zone tournament show that the combined team of Pi Phi, Slade and Moody's defeated the Redstone team by a score of 18-2.

Badminton

In the Green and Gold badminton tournament Margaret Crowley of the Green team defeated Jean Stewart of the Gold. However, in the other two games the Gold team was victorious, Ellen Stewart and Kay Kyle defeating Rae Sheehan and Fern Magee respectively.

Skating

There will be skating on the rinks behind the gym after Christmas vacation. Girls may use the big rink on Monday afternoons through Friday from two to four o'clock. The smaller rink is open to women students all the time.

Naola Carter has offered to teach figure skating on Saturday afternoon from 2.30 to 4.30 and on Sunday from 3.00 to 5.00 o'clock. She has had a great deal of experience and is very eager to help the girls as much as possible. Any girls who are interested in instructing with her are asked to contact her immediately.

Skiing

Mr. Phillips will be the recreational ski coach of the classes which will start directly after Christmas vacation, and will be held at the Country Club on Mondays and Thursdays from 3.00 to 5.00. On Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons instruction will be given at Centennial Field from 3.00 to 5.00 o'clock.

Varsity Beaten By Dartmouth 59-40

Healy and Beauchemin Retired by Fouls

Capt. Gus Broberg led Dartmouth's undefeated basketball forces to a belated victory over the Vermont hoopsters by a 59-40 score. The Catamounts in a repetition of their previous games this winter went out ahead for most of the first half, only to have the Big Green embark on a scoring spree in the waning minutes of this period and lead 35-20 at half-time.

Coach Cowles chose three second-team men for his starting line-up but soon injected Olsen, Parmer and Skaug into the contest when the Green and Gold ran up an early lead and these three first-team men proceeded to put on the heat and deposit the game on Dartmouth ice.

Vermont was considerably handicapped by the loss of Captain Corley in the opening half when he had three fouls called on him, but he came back in the last period and to lead the scoring in that period with 13 counters. The scoring in the second half was evenly divided, but the first-half Dartmouth splurge gave the Green their victory margin.

Broberg with 15 points, along with Munroe and Pearson following up with 12 and 13 points respectively, were the big guns for Dartmouth. Captain Corley maintained his hot pace with 13 points and probably would have obtained more if he had not spent most of the time until intermission on the bench. Another blow to the Vermont cause was the ejection of Ace Healy and Hank Beauchemin on fouls about mid-way in the second half.

Score by periods:	1	2—T.

Intramural Competition Results In Basketball and Bowling

Bowling

The fourth week of play in the interfraternity bowling league finds the S A E's out in front with a point total of 23, while the Sigma Phi's are following closely behind with 22. However, many of the teams that are behind now have not yet played all their matches up to date and may be leading contenders in a few weeks. Attention is called to the change of schedule for January 3, now posted on the bulletin board in the gym.

The leading S A E's garnered six of the seven points in their match with the Delta Psi's, netting a total pinnage of 1,002 to their 986. L. W. Gallup '41 of Delta Psi registered 224 for high doubles while R. Salmon '41 of S A E took high singles with 122. The T E P's defeated the Kappa Sigs 7-0 with a total pinnage of 941 to 888. H. S. Robinson '43 captured high double and single honors with the scores of 213 and 123 respectively. The T E P's in their second match this week beat the Independents by 6-1. H. S. Robinson '43 again won the high single string with 123 while S. J. Sysko '42, Independents, bowled the high double string of 222. The T E P's collectively outbowled the Independents by 941 to 917. In the Sigma Phi-Independents match the Sigma Phi's won 6-1 by virtue of the 976-917 score. S. J. Sysko '42 again bowled the high double string of 222 but R. H. Kempter '44 of Sigma Phi bowled 118 for high singles. The Sigma Phi's captured all the honors in their match with the Owls with a 976-914 score and Kempter's bowling a high singles and doubles of 118 and 216 respectively. The Kappa Sigs defeated Phi Delta Theta 7-0. The total pinnage was 969-888, while E. B. Mott '43 bowled 108 for high singles and 208 for high doubles.

Basketball

S A E defeated Sigma Phi in a hard-fought contest by the score of 35-23. The game was continually on the fire, with the score in the third period 23-all, but S A E rallied and made 12 points in the last frame to win the game. Starting for S A E were Utley, Massucco, Keough, Salmon, Shaw and Putnam, who took high-scoring honors with 8 points, and Cozzalino alternated. Sigma Phi's squad was composed of Moore, Tucker, Salmon, Blakely and Burgess. Hay, Pond, Kimball, Wedge and Reynolds saw service in the second half.

Kappa Sigma whitewashed the Owls in a 32-5 victory, thus keeping their slate clean with two victories and no defeats. With over three full teams, they completely outplayed the Owls, who used but one substitute. Laramie and Lynch of Kappa Sig both scored 6 points. Their teammates were Williams, Sullivan and Crossley. Royer, Thomas, Rice, Corbett and Condon relieved them at the half, while Hennessey, Dowling, Caccavo, Harvey, Dykens and Sullivan replaced them in the third. The Owls started Howe, Thurber, Bigelow, Babits and Darling. Marcalus subbed.

Tau Epsilon Phi defeated the Faculty for its second straight victory by the score of 26-20. With Howard Prentice, Archie Post, Sherry Fogg and Fuzzy Evans playing, the Faculty was indeed a difficult combination to defeat. T E P got ahead to an early start and the Faculty could not quite catch up. Stroyman of T E P and Prentice of the Faculty both scored 8 points. The T E P team consisted of Bloom, Kunken, Shuman, Weg and Basch. Stroyman, Savin, Berman, Sedlis and Glazin substituted. Post, Leeder, Prentice, Brown and Fogg represented the Faculty, while they were relieved by Evans, Leeder, Dodd, Erwin and Wietz in the second period.

Reign of the Pessimist

Wednesday night and the Cats are probably doing their darndest at Hanover. Much at a disadvantage due to a strange floor and the memory of a previous defeat at the hands of the Indians, the Green and Gold can only hope that they can hold the score low. At Amherst tomorrow night there's more hope but there again the Cats have the disadvantage of playing on foreign territory as well as getting no rest after tonight's grueling contest. The Cats have an outside chance but once again our nod goes to the opposition. (My, such an optimist as we're getting to be.)

Our Necks Are Out

And now since this is the last issue before vacation we're going to go the whole hog and try to pick some Bowl winners. By the time vacation is over these rash predictions ought to be well forgotten.

Stanford versus Nebraska—Nebraska is tough and rarin' to go but we're counting on the Palo Alto boys to end a miracle season with a victory in the Rose Bowl.

Fordham versus Texas A. and M. The Rams have Filopwicz (is that right?) and a few other plug-uglies. The Rams are noted for their love of rough company. The Rams should be at their peak. But the Aggies still have Jarring John Kimbrough and Marshal Foch Robnett. And the Aggies despite a lapse against Texas have shown true gridiron class. So one vote for the Aggies in the Cotton Bowl.

Tennesse versus Boston College. Even the Delphic Oracle would have a tough time with this one. Boston College has the goods—any team that can knock over Georgetown and other such teams must have. Boston College also has its stars such as O'Rourke, Gladchuck, Kerr and Goodreault. Tennessee did not play as tough a schedule but was impressive nevertheless in keeping a spotless record. Besides the Vols have Sufferidge, Mobinski, Foxx, Shives, and Cifers. With a pang of misgiving and a crossing of thumbs we go off the deep end for—Tennessee.

Whew! Quick Watson the needle! What's that. Oh yes—Merry Christmas, Joyeux Noël, etc., etc.

U. V. M. Ski Patrol Holds Time Trials

Gliding gracefully over the hard-packed base ski trail at Stowe, the University skiers went through a most encouraging practice session last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, December 13-15.

Under the able supervision of Coach Ev Bailey, the snowbirds also participated in time trials which will be resumed after the Christmas recess.

At the present time there is a roster of twenty-five, a number which will be reduced owing to monetary considerations.

Although the ski squad is in perfect condition, no meets have been scheduled until February 7, when the Vermonters will encounter the Dartmouth Indians.

Vermont-Amherst Results

Vermont—40

Amherst—51

Quite a few of the University skiers will enter the Lake Placid competition under the Outing Club name, but expenses will be self-paid.

While at Stowe this past week-end Ev Bailey had the pleasure of seeing Lowell Thomas, world-famed news reporter, being taught the finer points of skiing.

Asked about the new ski lift, Bailey exclaimed, "Gee, what a thrilling ride!"

60,000 Books Read By Students in '39

Interest Grows in Foreign Affairs' Books

The active interest of the students in the writings of the past and present is clearly shown by the fact that 60,000 books—including references—were read last year by Billings Library readers Thus the average reader at this University read forty-five books during that period. The most extensively read books fall under the heading of International Relations and English Literature. Mr. Kenneth L. Raymond, who has been attached to the staff of the library for more than four years, thinks that the biggest change which occurred since he has been working here, is the keen interest of the students in books on foreign affairs. He traces this back to the changing political developments in Europe, and stated further that newspapers are now read more thoroughly and on the whole students do much more general reading than in previous years.

Though its funds are limited, the library maintains a constant influx of hundreds of magazines and periodicals. Mr. Raymond also stated that the number of periodicals maintained at this library is probably much greater than that maintained by libraries of other schools of the size of this University. Since the number of books that may be purchased is of necessity limited because of limited funds, selections of new additions are made carefully by the library staff together with the various department heads.

Lists Will Be Published Monthly

Feeling that it will be of interest to CYNIC readers, the CYNIC will publish regular monthly lists of new additions to the library collection. Reviews of outstanding books will also be made.

The following books have been purchased during the last six weeks and may now be obtained at the library:

"The Tragic Peninsula," Anastasoff; "Woodrow Wilson," Baker; "A Synoptic History of the Granite State," Bartlett; "A Foreign Policy for America," Beard; "Best Plays of 1939-40" (edited by Mantle); "Matching Youth and Jobs," Bell; "American Foreign Policy in the Far East," Bisson; "Children of the Sea," Bronson; "New England Summer," Brooks; "How We Learn," Bode; "Inorganic Synthesis," Booth; "Why War?" Military Dept. Has New Secretary

Miss Caroline Douglas is a newcomer to the University of Vermont.. She is here doing secretarial work in the Military Department, having taken her position last Tuesday, December 17. Miss Douglas will take over some of Capt. Arthur Tudhope's duties when he leaves U. V. M. to go on active duty with the National Guard.

When asked why she chose to work up North, she said that she liked Vermont very well as she loves to ski. Miss Douglas was enthusiastic about the skiing at Stowe she has done already.

One of her interests is music, playing the violin in her spare moments.

Miss Douglas' home town is Plainfield, N. J., but she has spent the past several years in New York.

Mortar Board Members Plan Nativity Scene

The Crèche scene or nativity scene at Southwick was planned by Mortar Board.

This scene is to be found in the North Lounge.

Thursday, December 12, a joint meeting with Boulder was held at the Theta house.

German Classes Sing Carols

Xmas Trees First Used in Germany

Beginners' German classes at the University will sing carols, but they will sing in German. An annual custom of the German department, this year the carol singing will occur on Friday morning, December 20, just one day before University students start their two-week Christmas vacation. "Silent Night," a German Christmas carol, composed by Grüber, is always sung by the German classes, and another favorite is "O Tannenbaum" ("O Christmas Tree"). Germans were the first, according to early report, to use evergreen trees as "Christmas trees." It is recorded that the first known instance of the use of an evergreen for a Christmas tree as we understand it was at Strasbourg, Germany, in 1604. History says of this ancestor of the millions of Christmas trees which now blossom every holiday season that the tree was trimmed with apples, paper flowers, and something resembling our present-day tinsel decorations. From that time the use of various evergreen trees, including, in some sections, the yew, for Christmas trees spread and became established, and it is believed that the custom appeared in England about 1740. Old records of Christmas celebrations, the forerunners of ours today, tell of metal or wooden structures, some of them built on lines similar to those of the evergreen tree, which were used before anyone appears to have thought of using trees to celebrate this season.

A. Amee and O. Brawn Join Kappa Phi Kappa

Alfred F. Amee '43 and Orrin M. Brawn '42 were initiated into Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, national honorary education fraternity, Wednesday evening. H. K. Riggs, president of the Vermont chapter, presided.

Plans were made for an open meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa to be held early in February and open to all men students who are interested in education and enrolled in one or more of the education courses which the University offers. H. F. Wood '42 and R. O. Slack '41 will be in charge.

Newman Club Hears Rev. Michael on Xmas

"Glory be to God on high and peace be to men of good will," quoted Rev. Father Michael of St. Michael's College, last Tuesday evening before the Newman Club.

Father Michael centered his talk around the liturgy of Christmas. The festival announcement of the birth of Christ is the symbol of our faith. It is the beginning of a time of peace.

Father Michael concluded his talk by describing the beautiful Christmas services celebrated by his Order of the Benedictine Monks in their cathedral in Germany.

Profs. Bennett and Douglass on Radio

The last CYNIC Radio Program for 1940 was broadcast from station WCAX, Tuesday night, December 17. The University choir, under the direction of Prof. Howard G. Bennett, sang the following Christmas carols during the broadcast:

"To Us Is Born Immanuel"..Praetorius
Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying
A French carol arranged by Davison
Chanson Joyeuse de Noel.....Geraert

Prof. Bennett C. Douglass who is head of the Department of Education, discussed "Trends in Modern Education." He brought out the fact that the greatest experiment in education the world has ever known is going on in the United States today.

F. Bardossi '42, sports editor of the CYNIC spoke, and Dorothea Smith '41, manager of the women's ski team, reported on the organization of the team.

M. J. Levin '41 who is in charge of the CYNIC Radio Programs, announces that they will be resumed shortly after Christmas vacation.

Outing Club to Show Colored Film

There will be an open meeting of the Outing Club at eight-fifteen on Thursday night. It will be followed by a ski movie in technicolor starring Freidel Pfeiffer who now heads the ski activities of Sun Valley, Idaho.

The last ski movie which the Outing Club sponsored, "Ski the Americas," was well received by all who saw it, and while the reels to be shown Thursday night take to the slopes of but one continent, the quality of Mr. Pfeiffer's skiing is expected to make an even more interesting picture than "Ski the Americas." Freidel Pfeiffer is one of the United States' greatest skiers at this time. He holds many records in this country and in addition he has never been beaten in foreign competition. This movie of his technique will show to the amateur what he does and to the better informed skier how he does it.

The Outing Club urges all its members to attend this open meeting, as activities for the year will be discussed before the showing of the movie.

St. Michael's Game

The game between St. Michael's College and Vermont to be held at the Memorial Auditorium tonight is St. Michael's home game. Students may purchase tickets at twenty-five cents each at the Bookstore today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Faculty Members Attend Convention

Read Research Papers At U. of Pennsylvania

Six University of Vermont faculty members were on the programs of science societies which met jointly as the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, December 30, 31 and January 1, 1941. They read papers reporting on research they have conducted in various branches of zoology and botany.

Dr. Alexander Gershoy, associate professor of botany, and Mr. John D. Dodd, research fellow in botany, read papers at the meetings of the American Botanical Society. Dr. J. W. Marvin of the botany department also attended the convention. Doctor Gershoy read two papers, entitled "Pollen-tube Growth and Internal Differentiation of Violets" and "Allopolyploids in Violet Hybrids." Both were illustrated with lantern slides. Mr. Dodd's paper had as its subject "The Technique and Results of Grafting Species of Violets," with lantern slide illustrations.

Reads Paper

Dr. Walter A. Stultz of the anatomy department of the University of Vermont College of Medicine read a paper at the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the American Society of Zoologists at the Philadelphia convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His subject was "The Effects of Removal of the Spinal Cord Segments in Amblystoma" (salamander). Doctor Stultz has produced many unusual limb and body malformations in the salamander by removing sections of spinal cord from two to seven segments in length from salamander embryos. The paper was illustrated by lantern slides. Dr. F. W. Dunihue of the department of histology and embryology in the College of Medicine read a paper at the American Society of Zoologists meeting on "The Effect of Cellophane-perinephritis on the Afferent Glomerular Arterioles of the Rabbit." Lantern slides also illustrated this paper. Dr. Vance Tartar of the zoology department read a paper at the American Society of Zoologists meetings, titled "Nuclear Reactions in Paramecium." Doctor Tartar told in his paper of various operations performed with very fine glass needles on the paramecium, a tiny single-celled animal called a protozoon, which is about one-fourth of a millimeter long. Lantern slides illustrated the paper.

Dr. Jean Piatt of the anatomy department, College of Medicine, who is absent on leave this year, represented the University of Vermont at the meeting of the

Prof. Schwenger to Speak At Newman Club Tonight

Prof. Rudolph Schwenger of St. Michael's College will speak before the Newman Club tonight at 7.30 at Southwick. Professor Schwenger's topic will be "Eugenics" under which he will also consider certain questions allied to it.

The talk will be followed by discussion and answering of questions asked by the members. Do not forget that if you are a Catholic you are automatically a members of the club and every other Catholic member expects to see you there.

Transferred to Kelly Field

E. R. Thomas To Be Air Corps Officer

Randolph Field Has Huge Graduating Class

Largest class of Flying Cadets ever to complete their basic flight training at Randolph Field, Texas, graduated from the "West Point of the Air" during Christmas week. Two hundred eighty future pilots of the expanding Air Corps, including one former student from University of Vermont, were transferred to the Advanced Flying School at Kelly Field for a final ten weeks instruction before receiving their wings and commission as second lieutenants. Earl R. Thomas, Westport, N. Y., '40, B.S., Alpha Tau Omega, was among the 12,000 new Air Corps officers to be added to the newest branch of national defense during the coming year.

Classes start training every five weeks under the accelerated training schedule that transforms young college men between twenty and twenty-seven into full-fledged military aviators in thirty-five weeks. Sixty-five hours flying time in ten weeks on primary training planes prepare them for the second phase of training either at Randolph Field or one of two other basic flight schools.

More than 350 low wing monoplanes with a top speed of 175 miles an hour are in daily use at Randolph Field alone where 4,200 cadets will be trained this year. Seventy hours additional flying time is logged during the secondary phase of training, much of it at night or under the instrument flying hood.

An innovation in the general Air Corps training program was announced recently. In addition to training fliers, 3,600 aerial navigators and bombardiers will be turned out during each calendar year. These graduates will receive the same pay as a Flying Cadet during training, $75 per month, in addition to quarters and food. They will be commissioned as second lieutenants as will the pilots. Pay of the navigation officers and bombardiers will be the same as for pilots, $205 per month plus quarters.

Certain selected college men with a technical education will get a nine months' course in engineering and airplane and engine maintenance. Physical requirements are high, it was pointed out, but not as high as for those applying for pilot training.

Donahue Becomes Ensign

Harry A. Donahue, Jr., '37, of Essex Junction, recently received his commission as an ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserve and was awarded the navy's coveted wings of gold. Moreover, he was held over at the U. S. Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., as a flight instructor.

While at Vermont, Ensign Donahue was enrolled in the mechanical engineering course. He graduated from the preliminary flight training course at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Squantum, Mass., in November, 1939, and qualified for an appointment as an aviation cadet, reporting for the advance training at Pensacola in March of last year.

Outing Club to Sponsor I.S.U. Meet On Feb. 20-22

One Hundred and Fifty Skiers to Compete In Six Events of Intercollegiate Ski Meet

The 1940 Intercollegiate Ski Meet will be held under the auspices of the University of Vermont Outing Club at Burlington and Underhill on February 20, 21, 22. Approximately 100 men, thirty women and thirty officials are expected to attend the meet which was held last year at Norwich University.

The ten teams which compose the senior division of the Intercollegiate Ski Union have been invited to compete in the I. S. U. meet. These teams will represent Harvard, Dartmouth, Norwich, New Hampshire, Middlebury, Maine, McGill, Amherst, Syracuse and Vermont. Eight men, a coach and a manager are included in each team. The women's teams who will compete have not been announced.

The six-event meet will include competition in cross country, downhill, slalom, jumping and two combined events—downhill and slalom and cross country and jumping. The cross-country races will be run off in Burlington on Thursday, February 20. On February 21 and 22 the downhill, slalom and jumping events will be held in Underhill where the recently completed Outing Club ski jump is located.

Dorothea Smith '41, president of the Outing Club is general chairman of committees who are arranging the many details for the meet which is one of the outstanding ski meets among the eastern colleges. The members of the various committees will be published on Friday of this week.

The prizes and awards for the I. S. U. meet will be presented at a Ski Banquet which will be held at the Hotel Vermont on Saturday evening, February 22. Several ski editors and reporters from metropolitan papers in the northeastern part of the United States will also attend the meet.

Forty Men Qualify As Expert Riflemen

Announcement Made By Colonel Spaulding

Forty men of the freshman class at the University of Vermont, it is announced by Col. M. E. Spalding, head of the Department of Military Science and Tactics, have qualified as expert riflemen in rifle small-bore tests as prescribed by Army regulations. The men are students in the First Year Basic Course, Senior Infantry, Reserve Officers Training Corps, at the University of Vermont.

The men who received the rating of Expert Rifleman are D. H. Steenburn, Southbridge, Mass.; F. W. Miller, Longmeadow, Mass.; R. B. Howard, Jr., Nichols, Conn.; G. J. Holden, Jr., Burlington; H. E. Crossley, Jr., Burlington; H. J. Helberg, Chester; W. B. Brainerd, Tenafly, N. J.; L. E. Burningham, Berlin, N. H.; P. A. Fortuna, St. Albans; R. E. Waldo, Burlington; E. J. Pangburn, Upper Montclair, N. J.; R. P. Goss, Wilder; W. Salmon, N. Bennington; E. N. Craige, E. Fairfield; T. A. Dietrich, Burlington; L. N. Hazen, Richmond; R. C. Darling, Brockton, Mass.; C. R. Denton, Burlington; R. Mayersohn, New York, N. Y.; S. Boyarsky, Burlington; M. B. Allen, Burlington; J. W. Goodrich, Montpelier; R. S. Upton, Burlington; E. S. Boyden, Burlington; C. W. Tooles, Burlington; W. F. Goettlich, Willimantic, Conn.; H. J. Machanic, Burlington; D. Marburg, Montclair, N. J.; L. D. Whitworth, Warren; A. H. Kehoe, Rutherford, N. J.; L. F. Killick, Jr., Burlington; J. R. Hendrick, Rutland; R. W. Thomas, W. Rutland; E. Conedera, Barre; H. W. Jones, Burlington; E. R. Stockwell, Hartford; M. R. Whitcomb, Springfield; L. H. Thomas, Burlington; J. B. McGill, St. Johnsbury; T. J. Keighley, Burlington.

T.K.A. Convention Held At Washington

Three University of Vermont debaters joined other college leaders from institutions all over the United States for the second national progression discussion tournament of the national honorary society for debaters, Tau Kappa Alpha, in Washington, D. C., December 31, January 1 and 2. The Vermonters who made the trip were Harold A. Durfee, North Bennington, president of the University chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha and manager of the men's debate team; Taze R. Huntley, Morrisville, and Julius G. Cohen, Burlington, leading members of the debate team. They took part in discussion of the subject, "What Should Be the Policy of the United States in Relation to the Other Countries of the Western Hemisphere as Regards Defense Against Aggression?" Treatment of this subject by the student speakers was handled in seven stages, by divisions of the whole body of delegates. Plaques and certificates of merit were to be awarded to students with superior ratings in the discussions. Hale Aarnes, University of South Dakota, was the tournament director.

Ernest Johnson To Sing

Ernest Johnson, negro tenor, who has several times visited our campus, will conduct the Chapel services on Wednesday, January 8.

Broadcast To Carry Message To England

Bristol, Vt., To Send Talk By Prof. L. W. Dean

Perhaps the first international broadcast ever sent out from Vermont will be put over short waye station WRUL, Boston, on Thursday afternoon, January 16, at 3.45, carrying a message from Bristol, Vermont, to Bristol, England.

The message was prepared at the invitation of Mrs. Harold Coolidge, 45 Devonshire St., Boston, who is in charge of such programs for the New England Committee to Defend America. According to the requirements, the messages must be the work of the communities that send them. The Bristol message was written by Merritt P. Allen, author, of Bristol, and recorded through the courtesy of the transcription facilities of the National Life Insurance Company of Montpelier, with Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University of Vermont, a native of Bristol, doing the speaking.

An introductory description of the message was broadcast by the National Life Insurance Company Monday morning, December 30, at 8.30, on its regular program from Station WDEV, Waterbury. The message itself was broadcast in a pre-audition for Vermont listeners over WDEV at 8.30 Wednesday morning, January 1.

Station WRUL, Boston, from which the message will be sent to England, broadcasts two regular short wave programs to the British Isles, and it is said that about 100 letters a day are received from England in reply.

EDITORIALS

Here's a New Way to Meet the New Year!

A year which is destined to be a most decisive one for all Americans began last week. To meet the challenge of this new year, in a time when much of the civilized world is at war and when America is desperately working to build up a strong national defense, we all must have faith—faith in our work, faith in ourselves, faith in others and faith in our nation.

Henry Ford, the seventy-seven-year-old multimillionaire manufacturer who started his career during his boyhood by tinkering with engines on a small farm in Michigan, has written a splendid article entitled "Faith" which appeared recently in a well-known magazine. We believe that in his timely editorial Mr. Ford has presented some powerful thoughts which point the way by which Americans can meet the challenge of this new year.

"Faith is one of the most effective tools in the human equipment. A man can prove this negatively by looking at himself or at anyone who has lost faith, and noting how helpless he is. Lack of it holds us back as individuals and as a nation. The world needs it now.

"Frequently someone says to me, 'But how do you get faith if you haven't any?'

"There is only one answer: Everyone believes in something, but many are not aware of it. They have never tested themselves along that line. The way to find out is to do something to 'spark' your hidden capacity for assurance. Start doing the thing that seems hardest. Talk to the man you are afraid to talk to. Compel yourself to read the book you ought to read but think too difficult for you. Learn the thing that you think that you are not smart enough to learn. This sheer act of starting sets in motion unsuspected forces within you.

"Begin with faith in anything which you can believe in, and you'll be surprised how far it will take you. If you begin with belief in yourself, you get confidence in other men, you gain faith in your country, and finally you reach the conviction that somewhere there is a Law of Right which makes things go right. And when you reach that, the whole wide range of faith is open to you.

"A man cannot fully trust anything except what is right. If you think so, just try to believe that lies are stronger than truth, that idleness is better than industry, or that you can build a more substantial career on deception than you can on straight dealing. And if you are unable to believe these fallacies, it is sure sign that you have faith.

"I believe that faith works. If a man starts doing something that he believes in, and does it with a motive which the universe can respect—that is, to make life more livable for others as well as himself—his belief in his work will draw to him the means to do that work.

"A man may say, 'But I have no work—what am I to do?' Well, if that man ever does get work it will be because he, or some other man, had confidence enough to start some work. All work comes from some man's faith—your own or that of the man who hires you. Of course, it takes more assurance to be a 'self-starter' than to be on the payroll of a 'self-starter,' but belief operates there, too. When confidence decreases in this country, you will notice that 'self-starters' decrease and employment decreases also. I hope to see a new race of 'self-starters' arise; we need them.

"One of the great discoveries that a man makes, one of his great surprises, is to find he can what he was afraid he couldn't do. Most of the bars we beat against are in ourselves—we put them there, and we can take them down."

They Cut Down The Old Pine Tree

Vermont, my Vermont, my heart yearns for thee,
Yearns for thy campus and the old pine tree.
Long may we cherish those dear days of old,
Long may we cherish Green and Gold.

The ignorance of Vermont students in matters pertaining to school traditions, songs and institutions was shown even more vividly by a poll taken on the campus recently.

A duly authorized interviewer without any experience under Doctor Gallup (No, it won't do any good to look in the directory—he's not the new "chem prof.") asked a representative number of students picked at random the following scientifically and impartially worded questions. The answers of those persons most flagrant in ignorance of school institutions were duly recorded to serve as a warning to future students of the University.

The question: Where is the old pine tree mentioned in "Vermont, My Vermont"?

What do you know about it?

The shocking lack of school spirit is shown by the following answers:

R. P. Kenney '41: You've got me! It must be that one out there. (He pointed at a tree on the front campus opposite the "Sci" Hall.)

A. A. Thorpe '44: What old pine tree on what campus? Is there one?

G. Goldsmith '44: Is there an old pine tree? I thought they chopped it up to make chem lab benches.

F. Bardossi '42: I don't know a thing—that is, about the tree.

C. H. Marks '42: What one? I think they cut it down.

T. J. Keighley '44: O. K., I'll bite.

Rosemary Thayer '44: In the third line. Ha! Ha!

C. J. Katzew '42: I yearn for it cut in slabs and nailed together when exam results are posted.

K. Calkins: Good Lord! I never heard of it. Oh, yes. They have a song about it. Somebody must have cut it down.

Huddee Zwick '43: Wasn't it cut down? Some students must have been cutting up.

Harriet Koble '41: There are a lot of old pine trees, but I never really saw one worth singing about for a four-year interval.

B. L. Glass '43: I didn't have a thing to do with it.

R. G. Healy '41: Oh, fudge, what in the heavens is it?

J. M. Evans '41: It's a great thing.

Paula Berger '44: I wouldn't know. Maybe they chopped it down after they wrote the song.

Maywood Metcalf '41: Near the flagpole.

A. F. Amee '43: In the forest primeval.

Have You Tried Your Hand At Being A Sidewalk Boss?

Are you a sidewalk superintendent? Do you believe that your advice is necessary where building construction is going on? In case you didn't know it, there is a swell opportunity to indulge in your baser instincts at the corner of College and Prospect Streets. A building called the Waterman Building is being constructed there, and expert advice is needed on cement mixing, brick laying, and the installation of steel girders. A featured attraction this week is the boiler which is being put in now.

Previews of coming attractions are the giant arm of the crane swinging to and fro, which if you are lucky, you may see picking up the steel girders. Then there is the elevator that runs without an elevator boy, scurrying up and down the building. If you are the kind that takes things for granted, you will be properly amazed at the immensity of the structure and the vast amount of activity going on around it. But just peek inside and you will be promptly disillusioned. For there is nothing there but a jumble of wooden outlines and beams heaped together in very bad taste. One can see that they are badly in need of a little technical advice from some sidewalk superintendents. However, do not be dismayed if constructive criticism doesn't seem to be welcomed. Assert yourself and stick to your recommendations for persistency always gets results.

An examination of the blueprints reveals the large extent of influence which the building may exert on college life in the future. It provides special rooms for recreation, study and lounging which will go a long way toward making the Waterman Building a college center. It also has large scale cafeterias and dining rooms for students and faculty and will take the place of the Medical Building as an administrative building. But by far the biggest improvement is the new CYNIC office which provides a total of three rooms in which to carry on the many activities of a college newspaper.

The new edifice will consist of four floors, a basement, and an attic. On the ground will be some lounges, billiard and recreation rooms, a bowling alley, kitchen, cafeteria, and two engineering laboratories. Most of the administrative offices along with the CYNIC offices and file vaults will be on the first floor which is also the first floor above street level. The second floor will consist of classrooms, seminars (group study rooms), more offices, a reading room, and library. A dining room, more offices and labs, another lounge, and drafting rooms will be on the third floor. There are not many class and lecture rooms in the building, most of it being devoted to student accommodations and administrative purposes, which will relieve congestion in many other college buildings on the campus.

Student Opinion

By Student Opinion Surveys

Austin, Tex.—Do college students read the editorials in their campus newspapers? The college editor often feels what may be the apparent futility of composing and publishing editorial comment, but statistics on college reading habits just produced by Student Opinion Surveys of America bring a new note of encouragement and furnish one measurement of the power of the undergraduate press.

Nearly two out of every five students in a national sampling declared that they had read the editorial matter in the current issues of their respective school papers published when the poll was being conducted.

Interviewers over a cross-section of representative colleges and universities stopped students on their campuses, and placing before them the editorial page of their own newspapers, asked, "Have you read any of the editorials on this page?" Those who answered "yes" were further queried, "Completely or only partly?" Here is the national tabulation:

Had read editorials—
Completely	39%
Only partly	35
Had not read editorials	26

Only 2 percent of the students contacted declared they did not remember.

It is not possible to assume that those who said they had read the articles only in part may be included with the regular editorial-reading public college newspapers enjoy. Some of the "part readers" may have gathered the gist of the articles, while others may have read just a few lines. What is sure, however, is that only one-fourth of the national enrollment during this typical week selected for the survey had not as much as skimmed the editorial columns.

The following sectional tabulations reveal that although reading practice is quite uniform over the country, students in western schools are the most avid readers:

Read:	All	Part	None
New England	34%	33%	33%
Middle Atlantic	36	48	16
East Central	36	36	28
West Central	45	34	21
South	33	26	41
Far West	51	28	21

New Hours Announced For Using Carnegie Set

New hours have been announced for listening to phonograph records in the Carnegie Set at the Music Building. The Carnegie Room, which is on the first floor of the new building at 70 Williams Street, is open every afternoon, Monday through Friday, from 2.00 to 5.30; Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9.30 to 12.00; Saturday morning from 9.00 to 12.00; and Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7.00 to 9.00. The room is supervised all the hours when it is open. The Music Set is intended for the use of all students and faculty of the University, not for music students alone. The public is also welcome.

Cats To Meet St. Mike's At Auditorium Tonight

First State Championship Game Of Season Will Start With Odds For The Ryanmen

The lid will be torn off the 1941 Green Mountain Conference series tonight when the University of Vermont Catamounts meet the defending champions of St. Michael's College on the Memorial Auditorium surface.

Thus far this season, the Cats have not made an impressive showing having garnered but one win in five starts while the Michaelmen have fared much better with three wins to one loss to their credit; however, this is not a just basis for comparison considering the fact that Vermont has faced such teams as Dartmouth and Fordham.

Just before the Christmas recess St. Mike's ran off a string of three consecutive victories taking Plattsburgh 39 to 38, then downing Clarkson and lastly pulling an upset by defeating Williams.

Vermont has failed to register a victory since the season's opener when they took the measure of Hartwick having fallen prey to Dartmouth twice and were also downed by Amherst and Fordham in their last four starts.

Steve Guter and Jules Pequignot have starred the Ryanmen's victories this year, while Capt. Fred Coffey and Hank Stannard have also shown up well on various occasions. Bud Riley, stellar freshman guard, has been declared ineligible so the starting five is not definitely set; however, the above four will undoubtedly be in there with FitzGibbons or Connors in the fifth position.

The Catamounts looked considerably better during the late vacation practices and Coach Fuzzy Evans plans to keep the same line-up of Captain Corley, Healey, Beaudoin, Maley and Taylor intact with White and Doherty as first-string replacements.

Dancing Classes

Announcements regarding the nights, the second semester, for the same dancing classes to be continued will be made the latter part of January.

Ten Years Ago In Sports

Superior handling of the ball combined with a greatly improved passing game gave the Green and Gold quintet its first victory of the season when it emerged triumphant over the strong Clarkson Tech five by the score of 30 to 22 in a contest featured by the spirited play and spectacular shooting of goals on the part of both teams.

Vermont, aided and abetted by the spectacular performance of "Chet" Taft, 13-point left guard, trounced the McGill five by the overwhelming score of 39-27. Thus the Catamounts tucked their second straight victory under their belts and look forward toward tackling "Dolly" Stark's Dartmouth quintet with renewed vigor.

Resuming practice after a glorious victory over the Canadian provincial champions, Montreal A. A. A., the fencing team is showing great promise of developing the best set of swordsmen in the history of U. V. M.

Three quintets are in a three-way tie for the leading position in the interclass basketball tourney, with two wins and one loss each. The freshmen have clinched fourth place with no wins and three losses to their credit.

He is Ernst (Putzi) Hanfstaengl, former Nazi foreign press chief and friend of Hitler, who at the outbreak of war was interned in England, where he was in exile. St. Mike's J. V. Team To Meet Frosh Here

Evenly Matched Teams Promise Close Contest

Resuming their basketball togs after a two-week layoff the Vermont Frosh engage the St. Michael's Junior Varsity Tuesday evening in a tilt preceding the varsity contest which is scheduled as a home game for St. Michael's although it is to be played on the Memorial Auditorium surface. Not much is known of the parochial school boys except that they lost to Vermont Junior College, a team which eked out a slim victory margin over the Frosh. It appears on the comparative score basis that the two teams are equal but both teams will no doubt show the effects of the Christmas holidays.

Bud O'Brien former Burlington High and Vermont Junior College star is the main cog of the Junior Varsity attack but he may not be available because of sickness in his family. Several other Burlington boys are in the lineup including Bob "Wilbur" Lynch of Cathedral's championship outfit last winter, Don Akey and "Meat" Medlar two more Cathedralites. These lads form a nucleus which may be hard for the Kittens to crack and promise to make this preliminary contest an interesting affair.

Larry Killick will lead the Frosh from his forward post where he has scored 49 points in four games for quite a respectable average. Under Killick's guidance the Frosh have lost only to Vermont Junior College by two points and scored decisive triumphs over Bellows Free Academy, Cathedral High and Burlington High, the latter two ranking powers in Vermont scholastic ball. The other starters will be "Izzy" Saltzberg at the other forward post, Orban at center, along with Mannheim and Bennett at the guard slots. Coach Fogg has several capable reserves in Clairmont, Conti, Goodrich and Pulde, all of whom will see their share of action.

This affair should be an interesting one as it brings together two former teammates of Burlington High, Danny O'Brien, varsity center, if he were eligible and Larry Killick, a much improved ballplayer since his high school days.

Fraternities Fight In Basketball Games

The hard-fighting Independent quintet virtually overpowered the Sigma Nu basketeers December 17, by the score of 34-23. The close teamwork of the Independents was a great factor in deciding the outcome of the contest. C. Smith of the Independents led his team in scoring with 13 points. Starting for the Independents were Smith, Dunn, Wilson, Stoddard and Kipp. The Sigma Nu line-up consisted of Tulip, Neill, Reid, Wright, and J. Reid, Bloomer and Sawyer subbed.

S A E whitewashed Phi Sigma Delta to the tune of 41-27. The Phi Sigs led at the half 20-17, but the S A E held them to seven more points, while their attack, sparked by Utley, who garnered 17 points started rolling. Kennedy, Utley, Keough, Salmon, and Shaw started for S A E, while Massucco, Cozzolino, Putnam, and Strachan went in at the half. The Phi Sig team was composed of Rynowecer, Goldberg, Brill, Harris and Fieber. Baum and Levine were the substitutes.

Delta Psi defeated the A T O 31-18 in another of the current series of intramural basketball games. At the half the Delta Psi led A T O 19-8 and never alowed their opponents to endanger their lead. Carlson led the Delts with 13 points for the game's highest single scorer. Riddel, Craig, Roby, Carlson and Gallup started for the Delta Psi, while Davis, Smith and Harrington substituted. The A T O team consisted of Noyes, Koladza, Dorian, Ricoulis and Dudley with Chesarone starting the second quarter.

In the first overtime game held so far, the Owls edged out Sigma Phi 24-20. At the half, Sigma Phi led by one point, but the Owls evened the score to 20 all in the last period, and garnered 4 more points in the overtime period to clinch the game. The Owls started L. Burgess, Howe, Thurber, Moffit and Babits, while Sigma Phi started Blakely, Salmon, Moore, Hay and Burgess. Substitutes were Wedge and Pond.

Sigma Nu edged out T E P 24-22 in a hard-fought battle with both squads playing bang-up basketball. The close of the third period showed T E P ahead 16-12, but Sigma Nu put on a spurt and went ahead to take the game.

St. Michael's Game

With vacation over and things back in the groove again, the Catamounts this week will be playing what is known as "crucial" games. Tonight's contest with St. Michael's and Friday's tilt with the Cadets will probably determine whether or not the Cats will take the state title this year. St. Mike's has a fast quintet which seems to be even better than last year's snappy combination. Not in Dartmouth's class but plenty tough to stop. A Catamount loss to them would be hard to overcome in the race for the title. However, a double win this week over the Winooski and Cadet teams would put the Cats way out in the lead.

The question is—can the Cats hit their stride again after a two-week layoff? Successive losses to Fordham, Dartmouth and Amherst were hard on the squad's members. Perhaps the two-week period enabled them to rest up from such a grueling string of contests. One point in the Cats' favor is the fact that they have had to play their best ball to even hold Dartmouth and Fordham even whereas St. Mike's and Norwich have met few really strong teams. So the Cats should have the edge on playing experience. This is the time to cash in on all their potential power, otherwise the season might well turn out to be a trifle disastrous.

Football Reforms

The recent changes in the football rules seem to indicate that the boys are tired of making the game complicated. Three minor changes is somewhat a record for a group which believes in making it hard for the spectator to figure out what's going on down on the field. The free substitution ruling will make it a lot easier for the smaller squads to keep a fresh team on the field. As for the rule permitting a back to hand the ball forward behind the line of scrimmage that is merely making legal a practice which is becoming more and more common among players.

The fact that we picked two out of three Bowl winners is somewhat reassuring after certain other fatal setbacks in the fortune-telling field. But don't ask us how we would have voted in the Georgetown-Mississippi fracas (which we conveniently forgot to mention) because we might have to be painfully honest with you.

Dr. Florence King, new head of the home economics department, also attended the meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Doctor King was a delegate to the convention of Sigma Xi, national honorary science fraternity, from the University of Vermont.

Other Christmas vacation meetings of learned societies, from Boston to Baltimore, called University of Vermont faculty members for discussions with colleagues from other institutions, and new viewpoints on subjects in their fields of interest.

Attends Convention

Prof. Frederick Tupper, head of the English department, and Prof. Julian I. Lindsay of that department attended the convention of the Modern Language Association, which was held in Boston, Mass., at the invitation of Harvard University and Radcliffe College, December 26-28. Prof. Fred D. Carpenter, head of the German department, and Mr. Albert M. K. Blume of that department also attended the Modern Language Association convention, as did Dr. S. L. Johnston of the department of romance languages. Professor Carpenter, German department head, attended meetings of the American Association of Teachers of German, which convened in Boston, December 29, immediately following the modern language meetings.

Prof. William R. Adams, associate professor of botany and forestry, was in Washington, D. C., attending the fortieth anniversary meeting of the Society of American Foresters which assembled in the Mayflower Hotel, December 18-21. Forestry and National Defense was an important problem which the meeting considered, and another taken up was regulated forest management in the United States.

Prof. Lester M. Prindle, head of the classical department, went to Baltimore, Md., for the meetings of the American Philological Association, which occurred December 26-28.

Prof. Herbert E. Putnam of the history department went to New York City for the holidays and attended the convention of the American Historical Society there, December 27, 28 and 30.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Since so much enthusiasm has been shown by both the students and the faculty about Father Gerald G. Walsh's lectures in connection with Dante's works, it has been suggested that the English department of the University read and interpret selections from outstanding poets at the coffee hours for the remainder of the year. For instance, the professor who has made a particular study of Milton would read and interpret selections from his works at one coffee hour while another professor would interpret a different poet the following week.

The English department has very kindly consented to follow this suggestion, and I am sure everyone will appreciate their using valuable time to give us a deeper understanding and appreciation of famous pieces of literature. Not only will the coffee hours be more interesting, but certainly the time will be invaluably spent.

The Sophomore Aides and all the students to whom the suggestion has been made are very enthusiastic about it, and I think that everyone is grateful for the English department's interest and hopes that they will carry out the plan.

Museum Sends Out "Traveling Exhibit"

Also Sponsors Music Program of Students

Although Fleming Museum is connected directly with U. V. M., it nevertheless carries on work which is of benefit to those outside of the campus. Among these contributions, is what the staff of the Museum term as "traveling exhibits." These exhibits are prepared by the staff, and after a preview showing on the campus they are sent to surrounding towns and cities to be exhibited to the public.

One of the most favorably accepted of these exhibits is the Technique Show which has recently been exhibited at Bangor, Me., and which was prepared by the Museum staff from the contributions of several artists of this state. This exhibit consists of a series of twenty-four panels illustrating how pictures are made. Two of the panels in the exhibit illustrate effects obtained by various uses of color and by various uses of line and form. Two other panels show the production of a dry point etching. One of the most interesting panels illustrates how a painting in oil is made. Each panel or group of panels shows the various steps by which a picture is made in one of several media.

The technics of making oil paintings, dry-point etchings, pencil sketches, pen-and-ink sketches, linoleum block prints, lithographs, pastel drawings, crayon drawings, and water-color paintings are also illustrated and explained in this novel and absorbing exhibit.

The exhibit is the joint work of a number of Vermont artists; among them are Isabel Mills, Arthur Healy, Ronald Slayton, and Edward Sanborn.

This technic show was shown at the Museum several years ago and was very favorably received. Since that time, it has been making the rounds as a "traveling exhibit," traveling as far north as Bangor. The exhibit is not only for students of the graphic arts in any of their forms, but also for any person who likes to look at pictures. In Bangor, the exhibit was well attended and much appreciated. A commercial artist who viewed it remarked, "It is the best exhibit you have ever had."

Musical Program

On December 19 U. V. M. listened to the radio. No, not to Baby Snooks, Fred Allen or Mr. Miller and Company. U. V. M. was supporting local talent which took part in the Fleming Museum show.

This program was most entertaining and the performances were flawless. The program was shouldered by three musically talented Vermont students, namely Miss Nora Hill, Miss Marjorie Southworth and Keith Calkins. The varied entertainment consisted of vocal and piano selections. Miss Southworth rendered four selections—"Second Minuet" by Bisly, "Hedge Roses" by Schubert, "Little Boy Blue" by Nevin, and "Come to the Fair" by Martin. Mr. Calkins, who is a freshman, pleased his air audience with his singing of "Oh Isis and Osires" by Mozart, "The Friar of Orders Grey" by Shield, "Clang of the Forge' by Clay, and "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte. Miss Southworth is an alto while Mr. Calkins is a bass. Miss Nora Hill who accompanied the soloists throughout the program, contributed with the piano solo, "Liebesfreud" by Kreisler.

These Fleming Museum programs are broadcast regularly every Thursday evening at eight-thirty. The presentations are alternatingly historical and musical.

Next Thursday, a political theme is to be carried out by Prof. Leon W. Dean of the English Department. Professor Dean has chosen "The Commonwealth" as his topic and will describe the early political history of Vermont.

Tune in—Thursday is U. V. M. night on your radio. Station WCAX.

Police Training Needed

Salt Lake City, Utah (ACP).—The Utah Association of Civil Service Commissioners believes colleges and universities in the state should offer training courses for policemen and firemen. Their basis for this conclusion is that such public servants receive larger salaries than teachers. And teachers, they point out, certainly get plenty of attention from institutions of higher education.

Professor Sees Need Of More Campus Dates

Berkeley, Calif.—Noel Keys, Professor of Education and Family Relations, told students of the University of California the other day they were not having enough dates. He declared the students as a whole needed more dates to maintain mental health. He decried social affairs of the stag and exclusively co-ed type.—Submitted by a Vermont co-ed who prefers to remain anonymous.

W. K. Manning '41 Chosen Air Cadet

Will Leave Soon For Training at Boston

Mr. Warren K. Manning '41 of Burlington has recently received his appointment as an aviation cadet, U. S. M. C. R., and according to information supplied by the commanding officer of the Naval Reserve Aviation Base at Boston (Squantum), Mass., he will shortly depart for advanced flight training at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Jacksonville or Corpus Christi, Tex. Upon completion of this intensive course of seven months, which is designed to produce the finest aviators in the nation, Mr. Manning will be commissioned a second lieutenant, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, will be designated a naval aviator, and will be awarded the navy's coveted wings of gold. Then he will be ordered to active duty with the Aircraft Squadrons of the U. S. Fleet.

As a long waiting list is now being moved forward into the flight training centers, the Navy Department has announced that applications are being accepted by the Flight Selection Boards in the various naval districts throughout the country. Candidates who live or are attending college in the First Naval District (Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, including Block Island) should write or apply to the Flight Selection Board, First Naval District, Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Boston (Squantum), Mass.

Why Not Attend Wednesday Chapel?

Have you ever counted the people attending Chapel? Have you ever nearly fallen over the edge of the balcony trying to see how many there are beneath you? Well, you must try it some time. It's worth it. The bird's-eye view of your friends' backs is most inspiring. One slouches this way, one slouches that way, another twists his neck so far to see around those in front of him that you fairly suffer for him.

All this, to bring to you the following startling facts: Eleven faculty members and 125 students attended Chapel Wednesday, December 11. These figures do not include the choir, the director, the organist, and the speaker; they have to be there. This doesn't speak so well for our campus, the percentages being very low—about 9.5 percent of the entire student body and about 6.8 percent of the faculty. The medical students and faculty are not included in this tabulation, and we are being lenient with the number of faculty we are considering. All of the teaching staff are included and about one-half of the administration body because we realize that the executives can't just "shut up shop" and go to Chapel. But we do feel that the attendance is decidedly small, and the striking fact is that the student body is better represented than the faculty. Perhaps this has always been the case, for in a "Thing We'd Like to See" column printed in an 1890 CYNIC, one of the items was "More of the Faculty in Chapel." Of course, the above figures are the result of only one day of reckoning, and they may not present an infallible picture, but we're sure they're not far wrong.

So, faculty and students alike, let's try to do something about this vital issue—"Come to Chapel; you're really missing thirty very worthwhile minutes."

Will all Juniors and Seniors who have not filled out activity sheets please do so immediately at the Bookstore. —ED. CORLISS and JEAN WOOLLEY, Biography Editors, 1942 Ariel.

It consisted of seven negro ituals, most of which are well known. congregation participated in the sing-of two spirituals. Mr. Johnson sang, conclusion, "Swing Low, Sweet ariot."

ere will be no Collegium meetings until after exams, and the next meet-ng will be February 2.

Explosion At Sigma Nu House

If you have been wondering why the Sigma Nus have been walking around half-frozen all week, it's because they had an explosion at their house Sunday afternoon, January 5, and they have been without a heating system ever since.

It seems there was a blown valve on a radiator in one of the rooms, and when the heat was turned on upon the return of the boys the water from the boiler was drawn out, and an explosion resulted. There was no special damage to the house, but installing a new boiler calls for a large expenditure amounting to $1,200.

Thanks to Charles Cooper '44, the difficulty was discovered before fire broke out causing further serious trouble.

Kake Walk Band to Be Announced Soon

Fraternity Regulations Are Given by Directors

Kake Walk plans are well in progress, according to Directors Bob Kenney, Bill Pye and John Royer, and it is expected that the name of the band to play at the Masquerade will be announced in the near future. Due to the fact that Norwich is not having their big Winter Carnival at the same time as Kake Walk, it will not be possible to use the arrangement of previous years of having the same orchestra. This fact has caused a slight delay in selecting the band.

There will be a meeting of the directors Tuesday to select the various committees. Letters will be sent out to the alumni and parents, as usual in the near future.

The Kake Walk Regulations are as follows:

1. There are ten fraternities and the Independents who are eligible to have competitive stunts at Kake Walk time.

2. The ten fraternities and Independents are required to submit a complete plot in detail together with a complete statement of all proposed properties and lighting with an explanation of their use to a committee composed of three judges on or before February 6 at 12 o'clock, noon. No changes in the original stunt as written will be allowed without the approval of the committee, nor will any fraternity be eligible to compete who has not submitted their plot in detail as stated above.

3. Six stunts will be chosen from the detailed plots submitted not later than Saturday, February 8.

4. One fraternity will be eliminated from the six selected at a dress rehearsal with all properties and lighting in effect on Thursday, February 13. The five remaining fraternities will be the final entrants for Kake Walk on Saturday evening, February 22.

5. The six fraternities originally selected will be reimbursed up to an amount of $30 for expense of properties and any other expense incident to the perfection of the stunt. Payment will be made only for actual expense as established by receipted vouchers.

6. The fraternity or group having the winning stunt will receive an additional prize of $50.

French Club to Send Relief Funds to France

The French Club held a short business meeting at Southwick Tuesday evening. It was decided that a French play would be given this next semester.

The amount received from the sale of the red tags is $20. The total sum shall be sent to France through a reliable relief agency toward the purchase of milk for the French children.

The next meeting of the French Club will be some time after the mid-year examinations.

Vermont Forms War Relief Committee

Margaret Crowley and John Evans, Chairmen

Margaret Crowley '41 and J. M. Evans '41 have been selected as the joint chairmen of a War Relief Committee as representatives from Mortar Board and Boulder, according to an announcement made by Dean Simpson and Dean Swift. Working with them on this committee are representatives from the Faculty Student Council who are: F. W. Nye '41, subchairman, R. D. Paterson '42, J. R. Royer '41, Barbara Butterfield '42, June Hoffman '43, L. F. Killick, Jr., '44, Phyllis Bell '44. W. I. Pye '41 is the sub-chairman of a group from the class officers who are: Elizabeth Gurney '41, J. D. Sawyer '42, Sally Rome '42, W. M. Eddy '43, B. L. Glass '43, H. A. Mayforth, Jr., '44 and Louise Howe '44. There are also to be five members at large, Miriam Rubin '41 and Dorothea Smith '41 and three more to be appointed by the Faculty Student Council.

This large, very representative group will be broken down into small groups to handle particular jobs. There will be one general meeting before the close of this semester in which the committee will decide what measures to take on war relief. Notice of the meeting will be posted and all members of the committee are asked to watch for it.

Methodist Group

Elizabeth Lake '44 will speak to the Methodist College Group Sunday night. Having lived in Hawaii, she is well acquainted with the islands and will give an interesting and informative talk.

Joene Agard Elected To Staff and Sandal

Joene Agard '42 was recently elected to membership in Staff and Sandal, honorary society for junior women. She is Scholarship Chairman of Student Union, a member of Classical Club, Joint Council and Delta Delta Delta sorority. Miss Agard is enrolled in the classical course.

Cynic to Conduct Popularity Poll

Contest To Be Held From January 10 to 16

A popularity poll of student preferences will be conducted from January 10 to January 16 by the Vermont CYNIC according to an announcement of the editorial staff of the twice-weekly publication. The student body will be given a chance to vote by using the ballot printed on the last page of this issue of the CYNIC. Ballots should be clipped and deposited in the box designated for the purpose in the Book Store.

Fifteen superlatives are listed on the ballots. Students can name one man and one woman for each of the first nine items. Men may name their choices for the last six items on the ballots on the left side of the ballot and women may use the right side.

Any name from all four classes at Vermont can be written on the ballot. Every student is eligible to vote. Only one ballot should be cast by a person. As the canvass is school-wide, seniors alone should not be considered.

The results of the poll will be published in the CYNIC on January 17.

The following fifteen superlatives are listed on the ballot: Most Brains, Most Likely to Succeed, Most All-round, Most Popular, Done Most for College, Best Looking, Best Athlete, Best Leader, Hardest Worker, Favorite Magazine, Favorite Book, Favorite Professor, Favorite Song, Favorite Subject, and Favorite Place on Campus.

Newman Club Hears Prof. Shwenger

At the meeting of the Newman Club Wednesday night at Southwick, Prof. Rudolph Shwenger of St. Michael's College was the guest speaker, his topic being 'Eugenics and Allied Questions." Professor Shwenger explained the Eugenists' movement which began in 1900 and spread very rapidly especially in the United States. In explaining this movement he gave the meaning of "Eugenics" as defined by the Eugenics Education Society. He said, "that it was the application of our knowledge of our laws of hereditary to improve the quality of the human race." He stated further that although twenty-eight states in the United States have Eugenic Legislation, only two or three of them inforce it. As to the viewpoint of the Catholic Church on Eugenics he explained that it never opposed a sound Eugenics based on true philosophy, but that it was opposed to a materialistic Eugenics which was against the Natural Law of God. In closing, Professor Shwenger said that the idea of race culture is perhaps not as fantastic and grotesque as it may seem. However, it all depends on the race culture which the person has set for himself. If his ideals are based on false philosophy, they are wrong; if they are based on true philosophy then they are true and may be accepted.

An open discussion including all the members of the club followed the lecture.

Harvard University in the last year received gifts totaling $4,857,942.

Dr. Karl Polanyi British Lecturer Will Speak Here

Trends in Education To Be Subject of Talk At the Fleming Museum

"Education and Society in Central Europe, England and the United States" will be the subject of the University lecture to be given at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont at 8 p.m. the evening of next Tuesday, January 14. The lecturer, Dr. Karl Polanyi, now a British citizen, was formerly a member of the Budapest bar, and also of the faculty of the Peoples College in Vienna. More recently he has been Oxford University Lecturer, and also lecturer in University of London Extension Courses. In 1935, again in 1936, and now in the present year, he has lectured widely before American colleges under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

American Trends

European "Leaders" and "Comrades" and their "Ideologies" have found in education a powerful leverage for social policies and a mighty weapon of nationalistic fanaticism. Quasi military training of children, youth movements, ministries of propaganda and a controlled press are forms of education which supplement book-learning and school-room discipline. A press that knows neither logic nor reality reflects and contributes to the debauch of public opinion in Russia, Italy and Germany. In our own country we have long realized that the fortunes of democracy and its institutions are indissolubly bound up with the adequacy of educational programs and the effectiveness with which we implement them.

Whither trends American education? What of representative government and majority rule? What of civil rights? Can we combine justice with order, and progress with stability? Are our schools and colleges training enlightened and public-spirited leaders? Are they developing open-minded, fair-minded, socially-minded, attitudes and sentiments? Are they inculcating loyalty and patriotism? These are some of the questions suggested by educational trends in Central and Eastern Europe.

Doctor Polanyi, trained in economics and law, familiar with our American scene, and with his background of experience in Central Europe and England, brings an important message to all concerned with the fortunes of democracy and the aims of education.

This University lecture is as usual open to the public without charge.

Group Conferences

Dr. Karl Polanyi will hold group conferences with Vermont students on Monday and Tuesday mornings, January 13 and 14. 'New Empires in the Making" will be the subject of the conference which Doctor Polanyi will hold with the Political Science students on Monday at 9.30 a.m. in Room 37, North College, in the Old Mill.

History majors will hear Doctor Polanyi's views on civilization at 10 a.m. on Monday when he will discuss "European Civilization in Transition" in Room 34, South College. "Devices for Moulding Public Opinion" is the subject of the conference which the Social Psychology students will hear discussed at 10.30 a.m. on Tuesday.

The committee on University lectures is confident that these special student conferences with Doctor Polanyi, who is an authority on education in Central Europe, England, and the United States will be of particular value and interest to a large number of students. The committee urges that all students interested in Doctor Polanyi's discussion topics attend these special conferences on Monday and Tuesday, January 13 and January 14.

EDITORIALS

Outstanding and Upstanding!

It's the season of the year when colleges publish lists of outstanding students. Judges and juries of all kinds draw up lists of the outstanding books, plays, movies, musical performances and radio features of the year. College sports writers select the outstanding athletes and learned societies feature their outstanding scholars and scientists.

At this period when the proper distribution of honors and rewards is taking place, we must not think only of those who are receiving the recognition. Our lively sense of gratitude and thoughts should go to the vast majority of men and women who do the work of the world and lay the foundation for other people's fame. They are not the outstanding but the upstanding. They do not stand out in the eyes of the world but it is they who stand up to their jobs and lay the foundation for those who do receive recognition.

Here at Vermont, as in many colleges, it is an unquestionable fact that we have outstanding students because we have a vast number of average students who do their work according to the best of their ability. The outstanding students emerge out of the widespread diffusion of educational opportunity. Many people have the urge to scribble on paper and a number do it passably well; it is from these that the exceptional writer is likely to appear. The outstanding masters of music will be born where a great many people hum tunes and strum a guitar or saw on a fiddle.

The rôle of the rank and file, however, deserve more praise than this. The background for exceptional talent is not the only purpose that they serve. Their own services which may appear insignificant when isolated become imposing when in their aggregate form. A music-loving people does more than produce a Beethoven or a Verdi. The sum total of their own amateur strumming and humming and caroling represent a vast amount of joyous self-expression.

Where are the outstanding heroes of the war in Europe? Hitler has bestowed marshal's batons, medals, and iron crosses by the bushel. Britain has given recognition to her R. A. F. fighters and her aircraft foremen. But to say that the saviors of Britain are the R. A. F. forces is not correct. Modern war is being fought less and less by the outstanding champions with flashing swords and more and more by those whom we have called the upstanding—the average men and women who stand up to their duty whether in factories, shipyards or in the mines.

Cast Your Ballot in the Cynic Popularity Poll!

In this issue of the CYNIC we are printing a popularity poll ballot of student preferences. The two weeks between the Christmas recess and the mid-year examination period is purposely not crowded with events of our campus; therefore, we think that every student could spare the few minutes that the clipping and the marking of such a popularity ballot would require.

The purpose of the ballot is to obtain an expression of campus-wide student opinion as to which students they consider best typify the superlatives listed.

The poll is not being conducted for the sake of humor but is a serious attempt to obtain facts that we feel will be of interest to the readers of this student publication.

We ask that each student clip the ballot from the last page of this paper and cast his ballot independently and conscientiously in the Book Store between January 10 and January 17.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

Greetings, reader, are you still with me? Then let's get on the 1941 crop of brickbats (and bouquets if any are merited).

A BOUQUET—to the Outing Club under the efficient leadership of Dot Smith, for the fine job they have done thus far this year, especially in getting such a big event as the I. S. U. ski meet to be held at Vermont. Coming Kake Walk week-end it should make this year's Kake Walk one of the biggest events ever. As the most up-and-coming organization on the campus the Outing Club deserves every credit for getting this meet and every bit of cooperation from the students and faculty in general to put it over in a big way.

A BRICKBAT—A rather complicated one may have to be thrown at a number of different targets. Who is responsible for the athletic policy of the University of Vermont? What is happening to our teams? I don't refer to the loss of games by the present teams, but to the prospects for the future when these teams are gone. Next year the majority of our best athletes will no longer be with us. June takes away Carlson, Strassburg, Taylor, Broutsas, Corbett, Lawrence and all their gang from the football squad, with Corley, Maley, Healy, Beauchemin and Taylor from basketball and similar losses in the baseball field. Where are men of caliber to replace them coming from? To be sure we have a number of athletes left. Spasyk, Rice and some others, but the bulk of our first-rate athletes have no replacements coming up. This applies especially to football. This year's Frosh squad carried on the four-year state championship record of "Fuzzy" Evans' Frosh squads in such a noble way that they won absolutely no games and scored not a point. Are these going to step in and fill the shoes of the men who are graduating? Not by a long shot. Next year we may get by on the residue of first-rate players left in our junior class, but the year after, unless an immense supply of material comes in next fall, we may as well drop out of college competition and take on High School opponents.

This then is the situation. What is to be done about it? Athletes must be convinced that the University of Vermont is a good school to attend and scholarships should be provided for their assistance. After all, if one boy can go through college on this ability to do Latin and win a scholarship, why should another not be helped on his athletic ability, when he gives from 2 to 3 hours a day during the season to each sport?

Let's have some action on the athletic line. Let's not get to the point when Norwich, Middlebury and St. Michael's are as much out of our class as Tennessee and Stanford.

A BOUQUET—To anyone who has read as far as this without quitting.

More next week—we'll see you.

"National Defense" To Be Forum Topic

Prof. Andrew E. Nuquist of the Political Science Department of this University has announced the program of the second forum in the series presented by the Burington Community Forum. Professor Nuquist is program chairman of the Forum, which will be held Monday evening, January 13, at eight o'clock.

The first speaker will be Liam Donlon, C. I. O. Field Representative of the New England region, who is coming from Boston. As the general subject of the Forum is "National Defense," Mr. Donlon will speak on "Labor and National Defense." Speaking on the subject of "Industry and National Defense" will be Mr. L. W. Webster of Randolph, President of the L. W. Webster Manufacturing Corp., and a member of Associated Industries of Vermont, an affiliate of the National Association of Manufacturers, under whose auspices Mr. Webster is speaking.

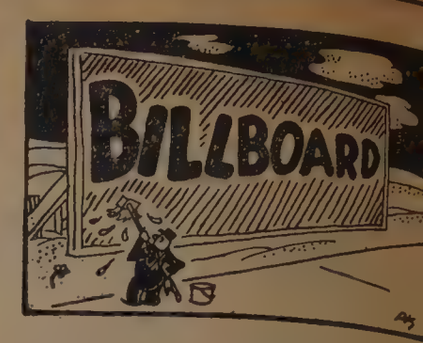
Prof. George Dykhuizen is again acting as presiding chairman, and there will be the usual discussion from the audience.

Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., recently awarded honor scholarships to eleven students.

NOTICE JUNIORS

Due to the recent conflagration at the Zamsky Studio which destroyed all negatives taken for the Ariel up to this time an immense amount of photography will have to be done during the week of January 20 when the photographer is making his next visit here. It is regrettable that this will be during the mid-year exams but there is nothing we can do about it since the Studio is hard pressed for time to take our pictures as well as Colgate, Yale, etc. Therefore, I must ask for utmost cooperation not only from the juniors but from the other students who will be required to be in group pictures, etc., taken at this time. Make every effort to be present at the exact time groups you are in are scheduled. This work must be done, and in a hurry if the Ariel is to come out before the middle of 1953.

As for juniors, sign up for portrait appointments and KEEP THEM. There will be no second chance. Those who have not paid the $2 sitting fee, be sure and have it at the time of the appointment.



That is all.

R. B. HUNTING,
Editor, Ariel.

Andre Frere to Act

An extraordinary treat is in store for this campus: Monsieur André Frère, in 1939 the prime-mover in the French Theatre in New York, "Théâtre des Quatre-Saisons," will be single actor in amusing sketches on January 16, at 8 o'clock in Southwick. Mr. Frère is coming under the auspices of the Alliance Française. It has been said of M. Frère that he has all the verve and skill of Cornelia Otis Skinner or Ruth Draper!

This entertainment will be free of charge for students.

COFFEE HOUR—Sunday, January 1 2.30 to 3.30 p.m., Southwick.

There will be a Coffee Hour in the sout lounge of Southwick, at 2.30 pm., o Sunday.

RECREATIONAL SKIING, 1940-41

Developing better apparatus of many kinds at lower cost is a continuous process in the Bell System. It plays a major part in making your telephone service the finest and cheapest in the world. Here is one of many cases in point:

Above you see two telephone loading coils—one old, one new. Such coils are spaced at regular intervals along telephone circuits. They reduce electrical losses... help to bring your voice through clearly, strongly over long distances.

Through the years, engineers at Bell Telephone Laboratories have succeeded in making these coils smaller and smaller. In so doing, they have greatly reduced the cost per coil, which... multiplied by the millions in use... has helped to keep the cost of out-of-town service low.

Why not telephone home at least once a week? Long Distance rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.

Post-mortem

Apparently the boys were still suffering from New Year's hangovers, for they were off the pace, way off. St. Mike's wasn't playing what you would call high-grade basketball, but it was far superior to anything the Cats could do. The Purple's three Musketeers—Guter, Pequignot and Fitzgibbons—were very much in the Catamount's hair. They alone tossed in 29 of the Winooski quintet's points. All this while Vermont was giving a very illuminating performance of how not to handle the ball.

Two weaknesses were especially glaring—failure to capitalize on foul shots and inability to tighten up under pressure. The Cats netted exactly 8 out of 18 charity tosses. The Purple, by the way, also was way off on free tosses, getting only 4 out of 10. As the game grew hotter the Cats got wilder. While the Mikemen took time and made sure of their shots, Vermont hurried down the floor and uncorked wild shots which were seldom good for a score. Their ability to control the ball under the backboard aided the Purple cagers no end. All in all, it was a pretty mournful night. Captain Corley's 10 points were the only bright features of the program.

Norwich Next

We don't go for this funereal style of writing but thus far it's been a crepe-lined season. Dartmouth and Fordham were acknowledged as out of Vermont's class, so losses to them were not major causes for sorry. But when St. Mike's starts walking away with a game (to quote Jack Benny), "Well."

One thing is certain—the Cats will have to snap out of whatever is ailing them tonight or never. A loss to Norwich will probably mean "Adios, state title." Norwich has a rangy, aggressive squad and unless the Green and Gold starts pulling rabbits out of hats, tonight's contest will keep said Green and Gold plenty active. We haven't left the ship yet, but we're looking around for lifesavers if the Cadets go home victorious. They certainly will if the Cats play as they did against St. Michael's.

Come on, gang! How about a little pep? After all, it's a lot more fun awarding laurels than hanging crepe. We'll be at the Auditorium tonight with our hopes high and our fingers crossed. Let's fight, Vermont.

Intramural Cagers Play Two Games

The Kappa Sig contingent defeated the Phi Delts 24-15 Wednesday evening in a hard-fought battle. Only one point ahead at the half, and leading 13-10 at the third-quarter mark, the Kappa Sigs put on a sudden spurt in the final period to win the game. Dennis of Phi Delt led with 8 points scored. Kappa Sig started Laramie, Williams, Lynch, Rice and Crossley. Sullivan, Corbett, Royer and Swift were substitutes. The Phi Delt squad was composed of Dennis Mayforth, Cronin, Daniels and Spasyk, with Logan, Pache, Moore and Lawton relieving them during the game.

Delta Psi whitewashed the Faculty 21-8. Getting ahead early in the game, they led at the half 12-2, and it was virtually impossible for the Faculty to even up the score thereafter. Roby of the Delts scored 13 points. His teammates were Riddel, Craig, Gallup and Davis, with Caldwell and Small subbing. The Faculty started Gershoy, Post, Dodd, Leeder and Erwin. Wietz was the only substitute.

St. Mike's Quintet Overpowers Vt.; Corley High Scorer

Sloppy Ball Handling And Wild Shooting Hinder Catamounts

The sharp-shooting basketeers of St. Michael's College sent a floundering U. V. M. quintet down to defeat by a 38-26 score last Tuesday night on the Memorial Auditorium surface. The Catamounts, wallowing in a five-game losing streak, were never in the ball game after the first five minutes, although they did manage to outscore the Mikemen in the second half. This last-period spurt, however, was offset by the Hilltoppers' wide margin at half time.

Steve Guter, Jules Pequignot and Fitter Fitzgibbons paced St. Michael's to an early lead which they never relinquished. Fitzgibbons started the scoring with a long heave, Captain Corley tied the game with two free throws, but Fitzgibbons scored again with a short shot.

Bob Doherty and Paul Corley tallied in quick succession to give Vermont a short-lived lead. At this stage of the game, with ten minutes left in the half, the Mikemen scored 16 points to the Cats' lone foul toss to pile up a 21-7 lead at intermission. In the last half the wearers of the Green and Gold came back to battle their opponents on even terms, but this was to little avail as the damage had been done in the first period.

Pequignot, Fitz and Guter dominated the scoring throughout the contest with their long-range shots which easily gave St. Michael's its victory margin. The Mikemen played a slow, deliberate style with an occasional long shot or fast break. Vermont, however, clearly showed the effects of their long lay-off and played a wild, slip-shod game while missing many a scoring opportunity, although Paul Corley maintained his high level by hitting the double figures for the sixth time this season and tied with Pequignot and Fitzgibbons for high-scoring honors.

A small group of 1,200 fans, mostly St. Michael's rooters, witnessed this one-sided encounter which marked the opening of the state title series. The Ryanmen, led by play-maker Steve Guter, were impressive and promise to provide plenty of tough opposition to their remaining opponents this winter. Two freshmen, Bud O'Brien and Bud Riley, will probably be in the line-up after the mid-year exams and will do much to strengthen the line-up.

Golden, Colo. (ACP).—For the first time in the United States, college students will get a chance to analyze a collection of meteorites in the classroom.

Three alumni of the Colorado School of Mines presented the institution with 180 meteorites ranging from pure nickel-iron alloys to all sorts of stony structures.

Although other colleges have meteorites in museums, school officials here say this is the first time students in classrooms are able to study stones in connection with weather forecasting, aeronautics and ballistics.

Cats Tangle With Cadets At Auditorium Tonight

Norwich Boasts Unbeaten Record Cats Out to Snap Losing Streak

With five setbacks in a row and only one game to show in the win column, a Vermont team that so far has failed to impress its followers will entertain a strong Norwich aggregation this evening at the Memorial Auditorium.

Sloppy ball handling, extremely poor foul shooting and inability to follow up on their shots have caused the Vermont hoopsters to be content with their sole victory, and that against a weak Hartwick team. On the other hand, the Norwich Horsemen have made an impressive showing with the competition they have faced. It's true that the Horsemen didn't have to encounter teams like Dartmouth, Fordham and Amherst, but their present record, comparatively speaking, gives them a decided edge.

In their opening game against Plattsburg Teachers the Cadets romped to an easy 52-23 win. Eighteen men were used by Coach Don McCallister in that fray. In a return engagement the Horsemen triumphed by ten points. St. Michael's also played Plattsburg Teachers and barely eked out a one-point victory. Last Tuesday night the Mikemen subdued Vermont with ease. On the basis of scores, Norwich should remain a heavy favorite to whitewash the Cats, but all previous records are discarded when rivals clash, especially when the Catamounts still recall the shellacking suffered in football.

The visitors have a veteran team excluding Dean at guard, but Dean has more than proved his worth as the fifth man of the starting five. Along with Dean at the guards will be Captain Hughes, an accurate shooter and dependable ball player. The center position will be handled by 6' 5" Joe McCloskey. McCloskey was a sore spot to the Catamounts on the gridiron, and his basketball work is as good, if not better, than his football chores. Durhee and Maynard are the aggressive forwards who round out the starting quintet. Besides these men Coach Don McCallister has a host of reserves who have all seen plenty of action.

The Cats will line up with Capt. Paul Corley, the mainstay of the Vermont five, and Rich Healy at forwards; Hank Beauchemin will trade tap-offs with McCloskey, and Don Maley and Frankie Taylor will bring up the rear.

Women in Sports

W. A. A. is starting the year off with a bang, so to speak. Great plans are being made for the clubs and winter sports get-togethers immediately after mid-years. Ski races held either at Centennial Field or Underhill for girls divided into Green and Gold teams and skating races and figure skating competitions will be held on a Saturday afternoon soon. The day may be concluded with a big W. A. A. sleighride and a dance at Southwick.

Skiing

Twenty girls are trying out for the U. V. M. women's ski team. Two girls from this group will participate in the Middlebury Carnival held on February 14.

Bowling

The bowling tournament began this week and the following girls are in charge of the different teams:

Team 1. Beatrice Wright.
Team 2. Jean Murphy.
Team 3. Peggy Durfee.
Team 4. Alice Brown.
Team 5. Elisabeth Doud.
Team 6. Dorothy Murphy.

Badminton

The results of the singles and doubles tournaments played off before Christmas vacation are as follows: The Gold team was victorious in both groups. In the doubles matches Peggy Palmer '44 and Diantha Geer '44 of the Gold team defeated Agnes Mulholland '44 and Dorothy Arnault '44 of the Green. Also, Rosemary Thayer '44 and Edith Libby '43 bowed to Shirley Price '44 and Margaret Fake '44 of the Gold team. Both games were very close. In the singles tournament Patricia Crowley '44 defeated Jean Stewart '40. Ellen Stewart '44 defeated Rae Sheehan '40, and Kay Kyle '42 was victorious over Fern Magee '42.

A large exhibition match is being planned directly after mid-years.

Intramural Bowling Well Under Way

The interfraternity bowling contests continued, with Sigma Phi outscoring Phi Sigma Delta 7-0. With a total team pinnage of 1,066 to the Phi Sig 934, and the excellent bowling of Moore, who took both high singles and doubles with 114 and 220, respectively, the Sigma Phi's had little difficulty in annexing the 7 possible points. Hay, Moore, Sutton, Stephen and Kempter composed the Sigma Phi squad, while Machanic, Rynowecer, Warsaw, Goldblatt and Katzew bowled for Phi Sig.

Sigma Phi took another match from the A T O's, this time garnering but 5 of the 7 possible points, due to the fact that Warden of A T O bowled 134 and 263 to cop 2 points for singles and doubles. Kilburn, Diforio, Warden, McCormick and Bicoulis amassed 1,005 for A T O.

A T O also defeated Sigma Nu 6½-½. This unusual score is due to the fact that Warden and Boyden were tied for high singles with 134 apiece. With only 973 points, however, the Sigma Nu squad of Paulson, Brown, Long, Jacob and Boyden had little chance of capturing the 5 points for total team score.

Sigma Nu defeated the Owls 7-0 with a total team score of 973 to 891. Boyden took high singles with 134 and high doubles with 241. The Owl pinmen were Darling, Bigelow, Thurber, Burgess and Babits.

The Owls dropped another match to the Independents 7-0. The Independents amassed 1,004 points and Sysko averaged 132 and 224 to garner the 2 extra points. Willson, Gage, Smith, Sysko and Bickford bowled for the Independents, who were also victorious over the Phi Sigs 7-0.

The T E P team, composed of Robinson, Bloom, Fisher, Dondes and Sedlis, defeated the Faculty, represented by Post, Wietz, Evans, Rooney and Fogg, 7-0. Bloom and Fisher both averaged 204 to cop the doubles, while Dondes with 111 took singles. The total T E P team score was 1,001 to the Faculty 937.

Ski Team Holds First Time Trials

With David Collins '41 setting a very fast pace, the University skiers went through a most auspicious session of cross-country time trials. Following Collins' speed of 27' 25" were E. St. Mary '43 and R. Goss '43, whose marks were 29' 17" and 31' 35", respectively.

This week the snowbirds went to Underhill to determine the roster of the slalom team.

In view of the forthcoming ski meets, the team has been working feverishly in preparation. All components of the squad seem to be quite formidable save for the jumping event, which demands considerable attention and practice.

On February 2, at the Underhill Nose Dive, the U. V. M. skiers will compete in the Vermont downhill championship and in the following week-end Vermont will be aptly represented at the Dartmouth Carnival.

College Students Sprout Wings

University of Vermont Offers Complete Aeronautics Course

Vermont is air-minded; are you? To all of you who are interested in the airplane and its place in our times, here is an opportunity uncomparable in its excellence. Eager to keep U. V. M. students in tune with our changing pattern of living, the University of Vermont is offering a complete and progressive course in civil aeronautics.

There has long been a need for such training and Vermont as well as other leading colleges and universities throughout the United States have succeeded in favorably introducing such a course into their curriculum.

This course in air training, however, is nothing new here at U. V. M.; it has been conducted for the past two years and has resulted in several very satisfactory accomplishments.

This aeronautics course is supervised by Prof. George F. Eckhard and is a single semester one. This year's second edition of the course is to start in February and will be similar to the previous ones. Anyone who is interested should report to the office of Professor Eckhard in the Engineering Building not later than January 18. The course will, of course, last from February to June.

The course of study includes 72 hours of ground work here at U. V. M.; 35 hours of flying at the Burlington Airport; and 18 hours of ground work also at the Airport. A Private Pilot's Certificate is awarded to anyone who satisfactorily completes the course.

The following are the only requirements for enrollment:

1. All applicants must be at least 19 years of age. The age limit is 19 to 25 inclusive.

2. The course is open to women to the extent of 10 percent of the total enrollment in the course.

3. The cost of the course is $25 which consists of $10 tuition; $6 for physical exam, and $9 for insurance which covers a student in the amounts of $3,000 against personal injury and $1,000 for hospital and medical reimbursement.

The schedule of classes will be arranged after enrollment which is open to all the colleges.

Last year the course trained thirty college students, some of whom became associated with the U. S. Air Corps. Among these are Roger Thomas, R. Walker Robinson, Louis Zambon, William Koch and Nathan Abbott, all of the class of '40.

This course is under the control of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Among the instructors are Mr. Mills of the Weather Bureau staff, meteorology; Professor Butterfield, navigation; and Professor Millington, civil aeronautics regulations. The curriculum includes brief courses in mechanics and theory of flight and is carried out under the direction of Mr. Harold Pugh.

Anyone interested in such a training course in civil aeronautics remember—report to Professor Eckhard's office in the Engineering Building not later than January 18. Here is an opportunity that you have been waiting for. Make the most of it!

"West Point of the Air" Increases Facilities

Familiar sight over the South Texas plains are the low winged monoplanes of the Army Air Corps, for at Randolph Field more than 4,000 future pilots of our expanding aerial forces get their basic training annually. Uncle Sam's giant "West Point of the Air" has increased its pilot training facilities many fold in the past two years and today more than 350 basic training planes such as those pictured above roar through the skies each work day. Flying Cadets pile up seventy hours of flying time in ten weeks, much of their training being either night flying or aerial acrobatics. Ten weeks after completing the secondary phase of training they will get their wings and second lieutenant bars. Under the expanded pilot training program classes of 1,600 selected young college men start flight instruction every five weeks. Much less than a year later they have been transformed into full-fledged military pilots.

Museum Notes

Again the Fleming Museum presents to the University of Vermont and to the city of Burlington an incomparable opportunity in the field of art. For a limited time the Museum staff is presenting to the public an original painting created by the brush of one of Italy's greatest oil painters. This masterpiece is in the art gallery and is an exceptional exhibit since it is a genuine original as painted by the artist himself. This portrait is entitled "Francesco Duodo" and was painted by Tintoretto about 1540, which makes it about 400 years old. The canvas on which it is painted is over six feet high and five feet wide.

Tintoretto's real name was Jacopo Robusti but he was better known as il Tintoretto, meaning "the little dyer." As a boy he is said to have helped in his father's dye shop. Probably it was here that he first became interested in colors and the effects of various color mixtures.

Tintoretto lived from 1518 to 1594. Michelangelo of Florence wts in his prime when Tintoretto was a young man.

From almost the beginning, Tintoretto was a self-taught artist. He made manikins and suspended them from the ceiling of his room in order to learn how to foreshorten figures and how to draw figures flying through the air. He set up miniature stages and experimented by casting light on figures from various angles. He had casts of Michelangelo's statues sent to him from Florence in order to master Michelangelo's drawings.

Tintoretto was content to work for little pay or for no pay at all so long as he had an opportunity to express his ideas. These ideas were expressed with such rapidity and enthusiasm that the volume of his work far exceeds that of any other Italian. Not only did he produce a great many pictures but he preferred to work on very large canvases. His last picture, painted when he was seventy years old, is the largest oil painting in the world. It is the "Paradise" now in the Ducal Palace in Venice. It is thirty feet high and seventy-four feet long and contains about 500 figures.

Tintoretto painted many portraits of contemporary Venetians such as the senator "Francesco Duodo," the original of which is in the Museum. But Tintoretto is better known for his large canvases of religious and mythological scenes.

Foreign Students In Cynic Broadcast

Most of Them Stress Prompt Aid to England

To the familiar strains of "Cotton Babes" the first CYNIC broadcast of the new year was presented over WCAX on Tuesday, January 7, at 8.30 p.m. M. J. Levin '41, the master of ceremonies, played host to a group of students who had the distinction of being foreign-born or much-traveled.

Jean and Ellen Stewart, from Rawal Pindi, India, were first to be interviewed. Their father is a botanist and both their parents are deans at Gordon College in India. They chose Vermont for various reasons—their mother was a Vermonter and urged them to come here; they wanted to leave India for their schooling, but they wanted a school in the mountains, as was their home. Both girls are going to have a choice of citizenship, and intend to choose American.

London, England, sent us H. G. Twitchell, for he was marooned here when the war broke out in Europe five days after he left England to visit America. His father is an engineer and the family has traveled extensively. Harry was born in Portugal and has visited the United States many times before. Relatives advised him to go to school in their home state and he is very glad that he took their advice.

J. W. Hurst, from Switzerland, came to the United States with a brother and mother to take advantage of the opportunities for making a living, as small Switzerland has comparatively less to offer. Having skied all his life, John appreciates the good climate and excellent skiing conditions in Vermont.

J. Katz, of Prague, Czechoslovakia, came to America as a refugee when his homeland lost its freedom. He had many exciting experiences to relate, having traveled across Europe and sailed to the United States during the war. Vermont was recommended to him by an organization which helps foreign and American students place themselves in schools suited to their tastes.

Hailing from Panama City, A. A. Dugue, Jr., has come to the United States to finish his schooling. He loves climate here and claims that Vermo the best skiing center he ever found, he has visited many. Al regards his h as the link between the Americas a much enthused over the growing American friendship.

Peggy Flint, from Omaha, Nebra is, on the other hand, an army daug While at school here, her parents w sent to California and she has not been to her new home. Being a for native of Nebraska also, our intervie and Peggy had a grand talk about t home state.

Our Canadian neighbor, Alice Ho comes from Toronto, Ontario, where father is a professor in the University Toronto. She has a choice of citizens also, and will probably choose Americ

When asked if they had any mess for the radio audience all agreed that t were much in favor of United Sta aid to England. It was also agreed t they couldn't have picked a better sch than Vermont.

Ushering Committee: Margaret Crowley '41, Dorothy Emerson '41, co-chairmen.

The directors, who are completing arrangements for the Kake Walk band, will announce their decision in Friday's issue.

News Summary

Washington, Mon., Jan. 13—The administration won today the first Congressional skirmish over the lease-lend bill for aiding Britain when the House upheld procedure charted by the leadership for speeding consideration of the measure.

Washington, Mon., Jan. 13—The American Federation of Labor gave Congress to understand today that it would fight any attempt to legislate away labor's "right to strike" in defense production.

Moscow, Mon., Jan. 13—If German troops are entering Bulgaria they are doing so without the knowledge and consent of Soviet Russia, the Soviet Government states, because neither the German nor Bulgarian Government has raised the question with Moscow.

Cairo, Mon., Jan. 13—Big British field guns which helped crack Italian resistance at Bardia joined the ring of cannon pounding the defenses of the beleaguered Libyan port of Tobruk today. Other British forces reported cutting off the important Italian outpost at Giarabub Oasis.

New York, Mon., Jan. 13—Wendel. L. Willkie favors passage with modification of President Roosevelt's aid-to-Britain bill and plans a flying trip to England to study the war situation.

New York, Mon., Jan. 13—Former Vermont Senator Ernest W. Gibson took the helm of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies today after stating the group's objective involved the risk of going to war.

Recreational Skiing classes are open to all upperclassmen at no cost. To date, the response has been very poor and unless the numbers pick up, it may be necessary next year, to eliminate offering skiing instruction to students without charge.

P. O. T. C. to Sponsor Joe College Dance

Novel Party to Scatter Post-Mid-Year Blues

To drive away those mid-year blues, Mortar Board and Boulder will hold a "Joe College" dance on Saturday, February 8. In line with the Joe College idea, suits and dresses will not be worn (now don't get us wrong); just what to wear is left entirely to your discretion and originality, and prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. During intermission, a red-hot jitterbug contest will be staged as the orchestra swings into a jam session.

Only a limited number of couples can be accommodated, so an impartial lottery will be held to draw the names of the lucky boys. Please note that, unlike the former P. O. T. C. drawing, only boys' names will count, and they themselves will ask their dream girls. This public drawing will be held on Monday, February 3. As before, the first number will refer to the page in the University Directory and the second number, reading from top to bottom on that page, will give the name.

The admission price will be ab-so-lute-ly nothing, and the lucky boys bring the queens of their own choice.

So remember the date fellows: Saturday the eighth of February, and get your dates early for an evening of free entertainment—if your number is drawn.

The Aggie Club Elects Next Semester Officers

The Aggie Club held a meeting in Morrill Hall on Thursday evening, January 9, for the specific purpose of electing new officers for the coming semester. The newly elected officers are: President, G. Gifford '41; Vice-president, A. Smith '42; secretary, M. Crown '43; treasurer, G. Bailey '41; news reporter, C. Marks '42; faculty advisor, Prof. M. H. Campbell.

Forum Leader

PROF. GEORGE G. DYKHUIZEN

Prof. Dykhuizen Conducts Forum

Professor Dykhuizen, head of the Philosophy Department, presided last evening over one of the most enthusiastic of the Burlington Community forums. Under the heading, "An Open Discussion of Today's Problems," Professor Dykhuizen presented Liam Donlon, C. I. O. Field Representative of New England, who spoke on National Defense; Leon W. Webster, a member of Associated Industries of Vermont, who spoke on National Industries; and Prof. A. E. Nuquist, a member of the Political Science Department, who took an active part in the discussion.

Admission to the open forum was free, and Burlington residents took advantage of the opportunity to discuss these pertinent problems with the above leaders.

Key and Serpent to Entertain at Ski Meet

According to Johnny Spasyk the Key and Serpent is taking an active interest in the coming ski meet. The Key and Serpent, the junior men's honorary society, hopes to take charge of the entertainment at the ski meet and its present activities are wholly taken up with this plan.

Ruth Spiwak Pledges

Canine College Career Receives Serious Setback From Faculty

New developments in the case of Butch vs. U. V. M., which the authorities have tried to keep secret, are as follows:

1. Doctor Nuquist expels Butch from class.

2. Professor Aiken takes sides by allowing Butch entrance to English I.

3. Racial issue cited by prominent senior.

4. Butch's guardian refuses to pay tuition.

Because of the controversial nature of the issue the facts of the case have been suppressed till now because of the possible scandal. The CYNIC is proud to announce a scoop on this sensational case!

One day last week Butch came into Doctor Nuquist's 8.30 Monday, Wednesday and Friday political science class. Butch intended to be patriotic and learn the "history and function of our American institutions" as taught to the other intelligent students of U. V. M. by the political science department.

Eye-witnesses relate that Butch entered class and sat down near the professor's table intending to absorb all the knowledge that was going to be poured forth. The students, among them Butch, sat there awaiting Doctor Nuquist impatiently. Finally he entered the room. One witness tells that Doctor Nuquist entered and, as usual, opened a couple of windows. (He always keeps them open during his lectures.) Then he turned to go to his table.

He saw Butch!

Immediately this professor of ours whistled to Butch; grabbing him by the collar, he ejected him from the room. He gave no reason to the astonished members of the class, who sat there in fear and trembling lest they should be next. Grinning as if it were a common, everyday incident, Doctor Nuquist then approached his table and proceeded to lecture on civil liberties!

Butch enrolled for freshman English (A group, mind you) before the present controversy on his eligibility to enter University circles started. Professor Aiken, more kindly than others on the faculty, accepted Butch into his class on

Boston Symphony to Give Concert at Observance of Vermont Sesquicentennial

Three-Day Celebration to Feature Concert, Dedication, Reception, Dance

A program full of outstanding events climaxed by a concert given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been planned for the observance of the University of Vermont Sesquicentennial which is to take place on October 3, 4 and 5. Dr. Harry F. Perkins, chairman of the arrangements for the celebration met recently with the members of the committee to complete the plans for the important three-day celebration.

The different colleges of the University on Friday afternoon, October 3, will hold individual meetings to which each college is inviting eminent scholars in various fields. Most of the colleges will also hold banquets on Friday. The meeting of the College of Medicine will be held in conjunction with the Vermont State Medical meeting. Various departmental exhibits will be displayed on Friday at the meetings of the different colleges.

A large, general meeting led by prominent men and women who are recognized authorities in various fields will take place on Friday evening, October 3. The general purpose of this meeting will be to summarize and coordinate the work of the individual college meetings held earlier in the day.

The official convocation is scheduled for Saturday morning, October 4, at 10.00 a.m., followed by dedication of the new Waterman Memorial Building at 11.30 a.m. Saturday afternoon will be filled with a football game followed by an open house at Southwick.

A gala reception and dance will be held at Southwick on Saturday evening.

Special Vesper services will take place on Sunday afternoon, October 5, and the Fleming Museum will hold an open house following the services.

The three-day celebration will be climaxed Sunday evening by a special performance of the Boston Symphony under the direction of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky at the Memorial Auditorium.

Noted European To Lecture Tonight

"Education and Society" Is Dr. Polanyi's Topic

"Education and Society" will be the subject of the University lecture to be given at the Fleming Museum Tuesday, January 14, at 8 p.m. Dr. Karl Polanyi, the lecturer, now a British citizen, was formerly of the Budapest Bar, and also of the faculty of the Peoples College in Vienna. He has been Oxford University lecturer, and also lecturer in University of London Extension Courses. In 1935, in 1936, and now in the present year, American colleges under the auspices of the Institute of International Education have heard him lecture widely.

Doctor Polanyi, familiar with our American scene and with his experience in Central Europe and England, is messenger to all concerned with democracy and education.

Two one hour conferences were held Monday morning on the topic of "Education and Society" and on Tuesday morning the Social Psychology class held a conference with Doctor Karl Polanyi lecturing.

Men's Ski Team To Be Real Threat In I. S. U. Meet

The men's ski team held a team practice at Stowe last Sunday, where they worked on slalom and downhill. Coach Ev Bailey was very satisfied with the team's performance. He said, "If the practice Sunday is any indication of the quality of the team, they ought to have a successful season this year, and with a little practice under their belts, they ought to be a real threat in the coming Intercollegiate Ski Meet. Right now our main difficulty is the lack of a ski jump. Since the Underhill jump isn't completed, we intend to try out the North Avenue ski jump for preliminary work. However, Norwich University has very kindly offered the use of their ski jump until the Underhill jump is completed."

The following men are members of the ski team:

H. Pache '41, F. Rising '41, R. Flynn '44, J. Hurst '44, C. B. Smith '42, P. Harrington '44, F. George '44, P. Sutton '43, R. Stockwell '43, D. Collins '41, A. Paterson '44, L. Brigham '43, F. Boardman '44, F. Pierce '44, E. St. Mary '42, H. Goodell '44, S. Katz '44, D. Warburg '44, P. Hoyt '43, R. Goss 44.

Owls Hold Dinner Dance Saturday Night

The Lambda Iotas held their dinner dance last Saturday night, January 11. Music was furnished by the Catamounts and the chaperons were Dr. and Mrs. Stultz and Prof. and Mrs. Perry.

R. C. Darling '43 and R. L. Marcalus '44 were in charge of the dance.

JUNIORS—Sign up for Ariel portrait appointments at the table in the Coffee Corner.

Commissioner Noble Addresses Faculty

At a meeting of the men's Faculty Club of the University held Saturday evening at Fleming Museum, State Commissioner of Education Ralph C. Noble spoke.

Mr. Noble gave an outline of some of the important objectives in public education. He also spoke of preparing students to meet their civic and social duties as well as the problems which will confront them.

Commissioner Noble gave reports on public school enrollment, finances, and the teaching staff of the state.

There was a general discussion following Mr. Noble's address.

Copies of the late President Bailey's last public address were given out at this meeting.

Delta Phi Epsilon Head Attends New York Meeting

Jean Saul '41 represented the U. V. M. Chapter of Delta Phi Epsilon at a convention held at the Hotel Park Central in New York City, on December 25, 26 and 27. The main features of the convention were two dances and a luncheon.

There will be no Collegium meetings until after exams, and the next meeting will be February 2.

EDITORIALS

Is America Trifling with the Man from Mars?

Editors in almost every paper in the United States from the New York Times to the Grove's Corners Bi-Monthly have been discussing for many weeks the problem which is so vital to our lives and our form of government—national defense and America's position in the ever-spreading pattern of this war. The parade of opinion was last week given more policies to pro and con when President Roosevelt delivered his opening address to Congress.

Destined to be one of the most important speeches in American history, it included many views which will shape the most critical period in our democracy. President Roosevelt said, "We are committed to full support of all those resolute people everywhere who are resisting aggression. The immediate need is a swift and driving increase in our armament production." Not only did he say that England's cause is our own, but he said that America must become the arsenal for England. He is now working out large scale plans to give England all the arms and supplies she needs without even mentioning a down payment. Our country on its own account is preparing to spend not far from twenty billion dollars, largely because of England's game fight for democracy.

The streamlining of our defense production by the appointment of William S. Knudsen as head of the Production Management should make up for the six or eight months which were lost in building up our "arsenal of democracy" during the recent political campaign. President Roosevelt has been stressing in the past few weeks the all-important part that American labor will play in this armament program which must be speedy to be effective. Knudsen has been constantly urging that labor go back to the old six-day week for the obvious purpose of speeding the gigantic defense program.

The skeptics and the isolationists have taken an attitude against the support that is being given England, but they have, we believe, been immune to the changes which have occurred in our national psychology and viewpoint since the developments in Poland in 1939. To us it seems clear that "since the future and the safety of our country and our democracy are overwhelmingly involved in events far beyond our borders," America's line of defense has hopped an ocean and is now closely allied with England's.

This war is plainly not a war of man power, but of machine power—destructive machine power. England has all the men she needs to operate these machines. What she does need desperately, however, is a tremendous amount of armaments with which to strike back at an enemy whose supply of arms seems almost inexhaustible. Life is precious. If the sending of armaments now to Britain will save the lives of British subjects and also ward off the necessity of sending American troops, we honestly believe that President Roosevelt's plans (even disregarding the fight for democracy) are worthy of the support of all Americans.

"The American people are now facing the dark abyss of war with a calmness and have girded their spirit and arm far beyond what seemed possible to the sleeping democracy of 1939. They are facing it calmly, but they have not apparently abandoned their resolution neither to be pushed nor descend into it if they can safely keep their footing on the rim."

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

One of the British American "Thumbs Up" Cavalcade ambulances will arrive in Burlington in the near future; at that time an effort will be made to have the ambulance come on campus, in hopes that as many students as possible can see it, and obtain a clearer picture of what such aid to Britain involves.

The purpose of the Cavalcade, according to the British American Ambulance Corps, Inc., is: 'First, to raise funds for vitally needed airplane ambulances as well as medical and surgical supplies. Second, to help crystallize, in a dramatic and conclusive manner, American opinion in favor of immediate and all possible aid to England, her Dominions and her Allies."

Five ambulances are traveling from San Francisco to New York along various routes; they will go through every state, visit 828 cities, and cover nearly 30,000 miles. James Poole, who will come through Burlington, is one of the five drivers who are all college graduates and nationally-known players of the New York Giants.

The visit of this ambulance should prove to be a memorable event of great interest to us all.

By pooling the contributions of the various Vermont universities and colleges, we might be able to pay for some similar unit. Does the idea appeal to you? Please feel free to offer suggestions at any time; they are more than welcome. Further notices will be forthcoming soon.

Dear Fellow Students:

There are signs on this campus of poor sportsmanship and lack of school spirit, but I think one of the most telling of these is shown at the basketball games. You all know what I mean, it is the booing and shouted defamations that fill the air when a foul is called on our team or when one of the opposing team is trying for a foul shot.

Smarten up you students of U. V. M. and let's not have it said that one of our faults is poor sportsmanship.

THE FORTYNINERS.

Will all Juniors and Seniors who have not filled out activity sheets please do so immediately at the Bookstore. —ED. CORLISS and JEAN WOOLLEY, Biography Editors, 1942 Ariel.

Sports Cast

By the SPORT EDITOR

"The Cats will go into the game determined to win."—News Item.

You said it, brother. Everyone is still wondering what happened. Two nights before the Cats were wandering around hopelessly trying to stop St. Mike's. And then came the resurrection. Maybe it was all done with mirrors.

The most refreshing sight since the season opened was Hank Beauchemin's sudden return to his old form. Both on offense and defense Hank had Norwich stymied.

But it's almost discourteous to mention individual players. It was a new team. Dropping their former standby—the zone defense—the Cats adopted a man-for-man style that more than once almost brought the Norwich offense to a dead stop. It was really pathetic to see McCloskey and Maynard trying so hard to score while handcuffed by the Cats' close guarding. Now and then some of the Horsemen forgot themselves and started using football tactics.

Things looked rather serious in that first half when it came to fouls called. The way those officials were calling them it looked very much as if the entire Vermont quintet would be yanked before the period was over. The crowd was pretty noisy and there was much free advice handed the officials.

The pace in the first half was terrific. Once the Cats got started, they didn't seem to know when to stop. Especially outstanding was the manner in which they controlled the ball under the backboard. A Vermont scoring try was usually followed by three or four follow-up shots before Norwich could get the ball. At the other end of the floor the Cats' mastery was just as obvious—some Vermont man always recovered after a Norwich shot.

Of course, it wasn't all due to Vermont's playing, as the Cadets were certainly not a very powerful offensive club. It was very evident that their attack was not too smooth and their shooting resulted in a good number of misses. In the second half they were playing hard enough but were gambling desperately on long shots in an attempt to offset Vermont's big lead.

Still you can't rob the Cats of any credit. Clicking as they were it would have taken a pretty fast quintet to stop them. The weaknesses of earlier games were not present and the team as a whole was functioning together, capitalizing on every opportunity. Providing the victory doesn't make them too cocky and providing they can work together as they did Friday night, the Cats may yet take that state title. However, they can't afford to slacken their pace because St. Mike's and Norwich will be doubly watchful in future encounters.

All in all it was a gala night—with the frosh taking the opener, Butch (the canine intellectual) cavorting between the halves, girls dropping their yarn out of the balcony and the band furnishing musical accompaniment.

Frosh Basketeers Look Impressive in St. Mike's Victory

Killick and Goodrich Lead Offensive Attack In 34-23 Triumph

The Frosh basketball team won their fourth game out of five Friday evening at the Memorial Auditorium by beating the St. Michael's Jayvees 34 to 23 in the preliminary to the Vermont-Norwich game.

Much of the credit is due to Killick and Goodrich who piled up 16 and 12 points respectively, mostly in the third period.

The Kittens were behind at the end of the first period, but managed to even things up at half time. The Frosh went ahead by a safe margin in the third period for good although the reserves were outscored by the Jayvees in the fourth period.

Killick was the outstanding player on the floor both in eagle-eye shooting, and excellent ball-handling. Akey and O'Rourke starred for the Jayvees with 10 and 4 points respectively.

At times during the game ball-handling was poor and often easy shots were missed by both teams.

Middlebury Will Meet U. V. M. in Game on Jan. 18

After a disheartening five-game slump, the Vermont courtmen finally came to life last week and unleashed a fury of vengeance in the Norwich game which literally threw the Catamount rooters from their seats.

This week the basketeers are working diligently to smooth out their newly-installed man-to-man defense, a method which proved its worth in the Norwich encounter. Also the men are polishing up on floorwork and plays and in general seem pretty well primed up for the Middlebury tilt on Saturday, January 18.

In view of the Norwich vistory and the peppy drill sessions, the Catamounts will probably display such "blitzkrieg" tactics as in the previous venture.

Controversy Rages Over Butch

presentation of the usual study card signed by the registrar.

Butch came to the first class with the other students at 2.00 at 3 North College on a bright Wednesday afternoon. All the bright, shining-faced scholars entered at the last minute and scampered to their seats.

Butch chose a spot in the sunshine and made himself comfortable. Professor Aiken opened the lecture with a discussion of Hardy's novels. Butch didn't contribute to the discussion, but during class Professor Aiken was heard to remark to himself, "What an attentive student! Never has a scholar acted so intelligently in class."

After the discussion a book report was read, then another. Meanwhile, Butch in the warm sunshine had difficulty in following the discussion and dozed off.

On awakening, the poor dog looked up in amazement. He was so embarrassed that he ran to the door in confusion and scratched mightily. When it was opened he ran out in shame.

After class, one of the students more accustomed to the ways of our University, was heard to say, "He'll learn yet. Sleeping in class doesn't embarrass us like that."

"Butch is an American citizen by law, having been born in the United States and has satisfactorily completed all requirements demanded of those entering U. V. M. The admission to a university should not be restricted for race—white, black, yellow or canine. Yet Butch is being denied entrance to classes merely because he was born to the wrong parents.

"It is entirely contrary to American principles, the principles of our constitution and the declaration of independence, and the intentions of our founding fathers to allow one being to be barred from an institution of higher learning merely because he isn't born to the right parents."

So stated a high official of the senior class, who preferred to remain anonymous last night when interviewed by the press.

This leading individual of the University went on further to praise the attitude of the CYNIC in supporting the crusade for the rights of all beings.

His opinion is representative of that of most Vermont students who, in a recently conducted survey, were found to be 79 percent in sympathy with Butch. Typical of the comment was this, by a still bewildered freshman: "Huh?"

As is the policy of the University, bills were recently mailed out this week for all uncollected tuition and laboratory fees. Since Butch has been attending classes regularly, a bill, it is rumored, has been sent to H. J. Machanic '44 for the $150 semester tuition fee and $35 activities fee for Butch.

It is reliably reported that on receipt of the bill, Machanic, Butch's guardian, threw it in the basket with the words, "What! One hundred and eighty-five dollars for that dog!"

It was learned by a CYNIC reporter that Butch was born in Shelburne, Vt., some years ago. He didn't attend public schools in Burlington.

Butch couldn't be reached for a statement, but Machanic, his guardian, stated that Butch was "inconsolably grieved" over the disturbance being made.

Butch, he stated, is a normal American, very conscientious in studying every night. She (?) can't dance yet and has a weakness for male dogs. That interest has been dulled by an operation which he had some time ago.

Machanic stated further that Butch is not in the least interested in the CYNIC or Ariel editorships, but has an eye on an honorary society post.

Late Bulletin

Butch was absent from 7.30 military and his regular 8.30 class this morning. His guardian, H. J. Machanic '44, reported that Butch was confined to bed with a slight fever this morning. He attributed it to the excitement over the controversy Butch was causing. This has weakened his otherwise rugged constitution.

Machanic stated further that Butch was out howling at the moon Tuesday evening and chasing cats. The fever may be due to bronchitis and laryngitis.

Dean Kemp of the Medical College couldn't be reached this morning, but a petition is being circulated among students asking him to appoint a board of three medical professors to watch over Butch's bedside.

Vermont Ends Five-Game Losing Streak In Norwich Victory

Beauchemin Shines In Decisive Victory With 19 Point Total

Bolting out of the doldrums of a five game losing streak an improved U. V. M. quintet led by Henri Beauchemin downed the Norwich University five by a 58-37 margin at Memorial Auditorium last Friday night. Beauchemin, showing much of his former finesse deposited 19 points through the hoop during the course of the evening.

With a crowd of about 1,500 yelling itself hoarse, the Catamounts, after starting off slow and trailing by two points for a few minutes, shot to the front as every member of the starting five began finding the range and bombarding the Horsemen's basket with two pointers.

This sudden awakening of the Catamounts, or perhaps it was the slowness of the big Norwich team which did not show much in the way of offensive moves until the second half, came as a surprise to the followers of the Catamounts.

Cats Really "Come Back"

Vermont, however, with all veterans and seniors in the starting line-up, is a much better team than it has appeared in its previous appearances at the Auditorium. After last Tuesday's debacle with St. Michael's, the Cats were bound to either show improvement, or else reach the absolute depths of poor basketball.

They came back with a bang. The awakening after last Tuesday's game was more than twofold, it popped into the reserves, too, and was evident from start to finish, although the Cats slowed up the pace in the second half.

Once Vermont went out in front, and halted the scoring attempts of Giant Joe McCloskey, it was just a matter of what the final pointage would be.

With Beauchemin "hot," the others were feeding him, and he kept pouring the points through the strings. He wasn't the only one piling up the lead in the first half. Paul Corley, Dick Healy, Don Maley and Frankie Taylor were slapping the netting with regularity.

Vermont Doesn't Crack

Norwich worked hard, desperately hard, but it was facing a team which didn't crack in half, one which was passing and shooting with accuracy, and which used a man-for-man defense which at times was impossible to break through.

The Horsemen were missing many shots, however, and couldn't control the ball under the baskets. With Beauchemin, Taylor and Maley playing like demons on defense, one of the three usually came out of the jams under the nets with the ball.

The score see-sawed for five minutes, with Healy's follow-up of his long shot shooting the Cats ahead. Durkee converted a foul for the Horsemen, making the score 8 to 7, then the Cats went to town.

Beauchemin slapped a follow-up through, Maley registered from mid-court and Healy's foul shot was good. Beauchemin, Healy and Maley registered from under the strings, and Beauchemin popped a field and a foul. Healy's free toss was good and Corley's field swished through to put the Cats in front 25 to 7 before Jack Hughes countered twice on long shots for the Horsemen.

Cats Lead at Half, 33-13

Maley, Corley and Taylor twice, snapped the strings before the half, with Don Maynard countering for Norwich just before the half, leaving Vermont in front 33 to 13.

In the second half the Horsemen could not close up the gap, being outscored by the Cats 25 to 24.

Score by halves:

Vermont	33	25—58
Norwich	13	24—37

Vermont To Sponsor Playdays for Women

Miss Crowe Visits Many High Schools

This year will probably see more playdays than ever taking place in Vermont. The playdays in question are attended largely by high school girls, who get together and join in group games, with a number of teams recruiting girls from different towns, so that by playing together strangers get acquainted. Basketball demonstrations and moving pictures of the game play a large part in these gatherings. One of the objects of the playdays is to raise the standards of girls' basketball in Vermont. The University of Vermont women's physical education department has been holding playdays for several years, and this year they have grown popular. Several high schools in different sections of the state will hold playdays this winter, and Middlebury College is also planning one.

Last high school playday was at North Bennington High School on January 11. Miss Barbara Crowe, of the University physical education staff, and Chairman of the State Basketball Committee for Women, who has been active in directing and promoting the playdays, expects at least two or three to take place during the next few months.

A playday at Springfield High School, held last week-end, brought girls from Bellows Falls, Claremont, N. H., Springfield, and Brattleboro High Schools. A basketball demonstration, relays, moving pictures were on the program, and after its conclusion, Miss Crowe and Miss Olive Krogman of Burlington went to Rutland and gave tests for intramural referees' ratings to Rutland High School girls who are enrolled in a refereeing course there. Miss Krogman is Chairman of the Officials' Rating Board for Women's Basketball in Vermont.

Miss Crowe will attend a meeting of the National Section on Women's Athletics, with delegates from schools in the Eastern States, held at the University of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn., January 18, which will consider especially small school problems in teaching physical education.

Frosh Basketeers To Meet B.F.A. Next

Fresh from their triumph over St. Michael's College J. V., Coach Sherry Fogg's basketeers will be gunning for their fifth win in six starts when they invade St. Albans tomorrow night for a return engagement with Bellows Free Academy. In the second game of the season the Kittens handed the B. F. A. quintet a thorough whitewashing on the Memorial Auditorium floor, and they will be out to duplicate that feat tomorrow. The B. F. A. lads did not look too impressive in their Burlington appearance, and Coach Sherry Fogg utilized his opportunity by putting his entire squad into action.

Last Friday night the St. Albans aggregation fell before Burlington High School's fast stepping team, which in turn fell prey to the Kittens. At the present, the Bellows Free Academy is sharing cellar honors with Spaulding High in the Northern League.

One of our green frosh met up with this one on a Latin Hour Test: "Give the principal parts of any Latin verb."

The freshman was in no condition for the exam but he thought and pondered, but to no avail.

Suddenly a thought struck him. He wrote: "Slippeo, slippere, falli, bumptus." But that didn't go too well with the prof. The returned paper had these parts: "Failo, failere, fluncto, suspendum."

Two Vermont Professors Go to New York Meeting

Three men who are active in promoting the education of Vermont youth along vocational lines will attend a defense meeting in New York City, which opened Monday, January 13. They are Prof. G. Maynard Trafton, of the department of industrial education, and Prof. W. Howard Martin of the agricultural education department at the University of Vermont, and Mr. John E. Nelson, Montpelier, Director of Secondary Vocational Education in the State of Vermont.

The meeting, called by the National Defense Board, will be at the Hotel McAlpin in New York City, Monday to Wednesday, January 13-15. It will be attended by supervisors in charge of vocational education in trades, industries and agriculture in this part of the country.

Newman Club Plans New Lecture Series After Mid-Years

The executive committee of the Newman Club is planning a new series of lectures to be given during the next semester. In the meantime, the club will hold no meetings during the mid-year examinations.

However, the Newmanites are reminded that the club's next general communion will take place on February 7, the first Friday of the month. Confessions will be heard at the Cathedral during the afternoon and evening of the preceding Thursday. Let us all, Catholics on this campus, cooperate to make this first Friday's devotion the most edifying we have yet had.

The Newman Club would be most happy to see non-Catholics coming to the lectures and joining whole-heartedly in the discussions. The deferring opinions which they might express on some of the questions considered, would certainly add color to the debates and make more animated discussions.

The Newman Club is essentially a Catholic club but that does not imply that other religious sects are debarred from its meetings. The word "catholic" means "universal"; consequently as a Catholic Club it is one which everyone may join.

French Actor to Give Program of Sketches

The Alliance Française presents Monsieur André Frère in an entertainment to be given Thursday evening January 16 at 8 o'clock at Southwick.

Monsieur Frère, who in 1939, was the prime-mover in the New York French Theatre, "Théâtre des Quatre Saisons," will be the single actor in a series of four amusing sketches. In each sketch, M. Frère's only property will be a straight, comfortable chair. The titles of these sketches follow:

"Un Voisin de Compagne"
"Soirée dansante"
"Rue de La Paix"
"Le Choix d'une Cravate"

The Alliance Française is presenting this entertainment to the students without charge.

Otto Hollaus to Coach Women Skiers

The time-trials for the women's ski team for the purpose of selecting the eight women who will compose the varsity squad will be held on Thursday afternoon, January 16, at 2.00 p.m., at Centennial Field. The women who are selected for the varsity team will make twelve trips during the winter to Stowe, where they will be coached by Otto Hollaus of the Sepp Ruschpp Ski School on Mt. Mansfield. Three members of the women's team will compete in the meet which will be held at the University of Vermont on February 20-22 and two will compete in ski competition at Middlebury College.

Registration at Kent State University (Ohio) hit 2,536 to break all records.

Johnny Messner and His Orchestra To Play at Kake Walk Masquerade

FLU or EXAMINITIS ...?

Kake Walk Directors Sign Popular New York Band For Annual Masquerade

After three busy weeks of negotiating with New York and Boston agencies by telephone and telegram, the Directors of Kake Walk announced today that they have secured Johnny Messner and his orchestra, a popular New York band noted for their distinctive smooth and flowing rhythm, to play at the Kake Walk Masquerade on February 21. Messner, who at present is playing at the Hotel Roosevelt, popular Miami Beach, Florida, resort hotel, was formerly in the Marine Grill of the Hotel McAplin in New York City. He was frequently heard on the airwaves over the National Broadcasting System Network.

The directors were fortunate in securing the band between engagements at a Boston hotel and a large hotel in Syracuse, N. Y. where Johnny Messner and his orchestra will open an extended engagement on February 22.

Jeanne D'Arcy—Featured Vocalist

Featured singer with Messner is charming Jeanne D'Arcy, a talented brunette whose distinctive singing is rapidly increasing her popularity with orchestra audiences. Johnny, himself, a vocalist with no small amount of talent will also sing the lyrics. This versatile orchestra leader, famous for his unusual arrangements and the surprising amount of drive and the smooth, flowing rhythm of his orchestra, is one of the best clarinet players in the business. His special numbers on the licorice stick have received the plaudits of orchestra fans for three years.

Super Decorations

Johnny Messner and his band, in addition to being entirely different in style, have an excellent brand of music for dancing. The Masquerade, which is scheduled for the first night of the Kake Walk festivities will be held at the gym, with dancing until 2.00 a.m. Chairman of the Masquerade E. A. Guilbert '41 has announced that a new and beautiful "Storm of Colors," two large crystal showers, each with over eight thousand mirrors to reflect colored beams thrown on them will be featured in the decorations.

As a special added attraction this year, the directors are going to award a prize to the best ice sculpture piece made by Vermont students. The ice sculptures which were built last year showed amazing ingenuity and skill and the directors hope that this year the ice pieces will even be more effective and numerous.

Juniors! Notice

All juniors must sign up for their Ariel photographs before tomorrow noon. This is the last time the photographer will come to the campus to take individual junior pictures! Girls are required to wear black sweaters with white collars, and boys, dark suits. A fee of two dollars is to be paid at the time of appointment, if it has not been done at a previous sitting.

We realize that it is a great disadvantage for Ariel pictures to be taken at this time, but that makes it all the more necessary for each one to be at Southwick on time for his appointment. Each sitting will take only ten minutes, and we will greatly appreciate your cooperation. It's your yearbook, too!—NANCY GOODWIN, STANLEY PIKE, Photographic Editors.

R. Evans '41 To Be New F. F. A. Head

The publicity director of the Future Farmers of America has released information concerning new initiates, election of officers, and committees. He intimates that F. F. A. will be an extremely active organization during the coming semester.

Initiation: N. Z. Knight '44, R. O. Sinclair '44, R. Carlson '42, W. M. Corey '44, E. O. Eaton '41, H. Long '42, C. Long '42, C. H. Marks '42, L. Partridge '42, R. Story '43, C. L. Park.

Election of officers: Mr. C. L. Park, Jr., advisor; R. Evans '41, president; G. Streeter '42, vice-president; F. Campbell '42, secretary; R. Bickford '43, treasurer; C. Webster '42, reporter; N. Knight '44, watch dog; F. Nye '41, Parliamentarian; O. Slack '41, grammarian.

For future radio broadcast:

Committte: R. Carlson (chairman), H. Long, R. Bickford.

Plans for sleigh ride:

Committee: Arnold Smith (chairman), W. Walker, N. Knight.

Meeting adjourned.

News Summary

Washington, Thursday, January 16.—Secretary Stimson declared today that "I think we are in very great danger of an invasion by air in the contingency that the British navy should be destroyed or surrendered."

London, Thursday, January 16.—The British announced tonight that last Friday's attack by German dive bombers and Italian planes on a Mediterranean convoy was so effective that British naval forces were forced to sink their own badly damaged 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton.

Aboard Aircraft Carrier Illustrious, with the British Mediterranean Fleet.—Battered but still able to move under her own power, the aircraft carrier Illustrious has reached the comparative safety of a Mediterranean port after weathering one of the most punishing attacks a British warship has undergone in this war.

Tokyo, Thursday, January 16.—The Foreign office controlled Japan Times suggested today that "the best way" of keeping President Roosevelt's "pledge that no troops will be sent to foreign soil" would be to withdraw the U. S. Navy to home waters.

Pilgrim Fellowship to Continue During Exams

Kenneth Johnson '41 will have charge of both the Pilgrim Fellowship meetings which come during the mid-year exam period. At both meetings, Sunday, January 19 and January 26, he will discuss "Christian Faith." All young people are urged to come and forget their exam troubles.

Are You Worried About Exams? Here's a Three Point Program

Are you worried about how to go about your exams? Take the advice of three who know.

Allen J. Caldwell, 1941, and Phi Beta Kappa, stresses above all sleeping plenty. "You can't study too long anyway so you might as well rest. Don't try to study too much at one sitting."

Dean Swift says that if a student's work has been done all semester and he is in good condition, there is nothing to dread. Some students are inclined to overworry and be too nervous. In the exam the professor is merely trying to find if the student has reasonable knowledge of the course. The questions can be answered. The student should go to the exam with confidence.

The Dean advises further that a clear head is better than a few last minute details. "Don't sit up and study the night before. Get some exercise and fresh air and keep in good condition. (Incidentally Doctor Prentice announced that the skating rink will be open during exams for those who wish to make use of it.)

Dean Swift brought out another point which will be important to many. "Sometimes a student comes to an exam well prepared, but the first question bothers him. He should go on to the others and then return to the first one instead of getting wrought-up and losing time. When taking the exam, plan your time well!"

Professor Metcalf of the Department of Psychology stresses the fact that most failures can be traced to faulty study and reading habits. He suggested several books for students who are interested in detailed suggestions. They are a booklet on "How to Study" on sale at the bookstore and two books on reserve at the library, "Silent Reading" by O'Brien and "How to Study in College," by Headley.

Because of the importance of proper reading habits he prepared the following statement for the aid, especially, of the freshman class:

"The importance of quick and effective reading for good work in college courses can hardly be exaggerated. There are great differences in the rate at which people read, and equally great ones in their comprehension. Often those who read most rapidly comprehend best, while those who read most slowly sometimes fail to grasp the subject matter effectively. In courses in which a good deal of outside reading is required slow reading is a great handicap, while failure to grasp what has been read is a handicap in any form of college work.

"Probably most people think of reading as something that is learned in the grades, and believe that they read perfectly because they have passed beyond the grades in which reading is taught. As a matter of fact comparatively few people read really well. Probably a good many college failures are due chiefly to this cause.

"Learning to read is like learning anything that requires skill—swimming for example. A person may join a swimming class and learn to swim across a twenty-five-yard pool at a slow rate. He is then graduated from the class as having learned how to swim. But compare him with a swimming champion or near-champion, and his level of ability is very low. When people have finished the grades they are considered to be able to read, but their ability in this field may correspond to that of the swimmer who can just get across the twenty-five-yard pool. They must

Eight Chosen For Women's Ski Team

Time trials for the women's ski team were held Thursday, January 16, at Centennial Field. About fifteen girls tried out and the following were chosen to take the trips to Stowe for further instruction from Otto Hollaus of the Sepp Ruschpp Ski School. Dorothea Smith '41, Lane Burns '43, Sidney Leitch '44, Sara Peters '41, Doris Doeffler '44, Rosemary Thayer '44, Carolyn Brown '44 and Julia Fletcher '44. Invitations to several winter carnivals have been received by the team manager and plans are being completed to send two of these girls to the Middlebury Carnival, February 13 and 14.

For Whom the Gong Tolls!

There is now less than ninety hours remaining before the gong will ring in the gym and the first mid-year exams will be distributed to worried and tense students. Exams are an ordeal which every student must go through. They are extremely important because they furnish the professors with a means of determining exactly how much students know about the important factors in the particular subject—information which gives the professors a reliable criterion upon which to base students' semester marks.

Examinations are dreaded not only by the students but also by the professors who have to spend many hours reading and grading papers, many of which are often written in an illegible hand. We are sure that carefully worded, specific answers written in good, readable writing are the type of answers which will receive the most desirable reactions from the faculty.

Professors, in order to become professors, have to be outstanding in intelligence. Therefore, we point out that professors through the practice of many years have learned to spot answers that merely "throw the bull." No student should think that he can pull the wool over the professor's eyes by writing a great amount of material about subject matter that is not pertinent to the question asked.

Every student has his own particular method of preparing for an exam so that any advice we might suggest is necessarily of a general type. Outlines of the course material and conscientious study of the subject matter are two most important factors. Plenty of sleep is another important essential which many students disregard. Psychological tests have proven however, that a person whose mind and body are tired does not receive as good a mark as one whose mind and body are rested and alert.

With this issue of the CYNIC we suspend publication until after the examination period is over. We wish everyone the best of luck in the exams and remind you that U. V. M.'s gala Kake Walk week-end and the I. S. U. ski meet will be held only three short weeks after the close of the exam period.

Kake Walk Week-end

With the selection of Johnny Messner and his orchestra as their choice for Kake Walk Masquerade, the 1941 directors have chosen a band that should be popular with everyone. In the past three years the orchestra has played in both Boston and New York where their unusual style has made them a favorite

The selection of an orchestra was delayed this year because the directors were faced with the problem of signing the best orchestra they could without the cooperation of either Norwich or Middlebury. Because neither of these colleges are having their carnivals at the same time as Kake Walk, the arrangement used in former years of signing a big-name band to play at the Masquerade on Friday and at Norwich or Middlebury on Saturday was necessarily out of the question.

We were glad to read that a prize is to be awarded for the best piece of ice sculpturing this year. Many colleges that hold mid-winter frolics have awarded prizes for a number of years for the best ice work and the number and quality of the pieces has increased each year.

What's Your Favorite Food?

The people on campus love to eat! And what marvelous kinds of food they name as their favorites.

Miss Mary Jean Simpson, dean of women, likes rare roast beef, sauerkraut, fresh fruit and pie! She loathes peanut butter, though, and says "Nobody will speak to me until I've had breakfast."

Now Pat Fellows '43 could eat peanut butter at every meal and also enjoys hot mince pie.

Red Delano '43 insists on cold mince pie. He likes raw oysters, too.

"Boy, I love to eat," says Janet Dike '43, "Give me chow mein, or steak with fried potatoes, lots of sundaes, but no cokes! I like 7-Up."

'I don't know if I dare say," laughed Jean Young '42, "but I like raw onions when I peel 'em myself."

Prof. J. E. Pooley likes his onions creamed. Mince pie is a favorite.

Nita Falby '41 says, "Give me baked Virginia ham with cloves and brown sugar on it. Spinach is swell and peach shortcake is super."

Herbie Comings '44 likes macaroni and cheese, turnips and Gaspé salmon.

Julia Fletcher '44 would order fried chicken. She loves chocolate cake with chocolate frosting.

(— anybody getting hungry?)

Mr. Anselmo, instructor in music, holds out for spaghetti with meat balls.

George West '43 mentions crackers and cheese with beer.

Harry Winchell '43 remembers that old favorite, apple pie.

Ruth True '44 admits she likes tripe, also "Adam and Eve on a raft"—that's poached eggs on toast to you.

Frankie Taylor '41 likes "sweet, sweet potatoes."

Barbara Bishop '42 loves big cream puffs.

"When I was little," explains Huddee Zwick, "Mother told me carrots would make my hair curl. So I didn't eat them, because my hair was too curly already. But now I eat carrots to keep from getting bald. I like peppermint ice cream when I make it myself, and oh, boy! fried eels!"

Mrs. Rand says the medics drink more coffee than anyone else. She told me that in the fall the freshman men would come in for breakfast at 6.45 before military—for a while. Then they began to drop out until at Thanksgiving, hardly anyone came. But they make up for it after military.

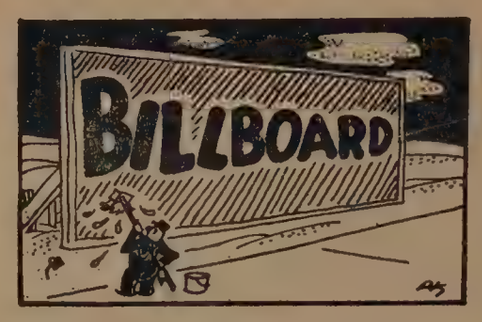
Offhand, you might say U. V. M. knows good food. So long, I'm off for a ham-on-rye right now!

Professors Stress Exam Health Rules

To the freshmen, and whomever else it may concern (if there be any such). Mid-years are almost here (or had you heard?), and you are probably shaking in your boots (well, you girls, anyway). If you are becoming more and more alarmed as the dread days approach, try to stop this worrying. As Mr. A. T. Post, Assistant Professor of Physical Education for Men, so aptly puts it, "The time for that was during the semester."

No-doze pills for last minute cramming are definitely out. They will do you more harm than good I was told by Miss Eleanor Cummings, Associate Professor of Physical Education for Women.

Professor Cummings and Mr. Post both stress the importance of relaxation, providing, of course, that it is preceded by some studying. Although "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," all play and no work has even worse results.



Get outdoors for a while every day. "An hour of exercise in the open air," says Mr. Post, "is far more refreshing and beneficial to mind and body than two or three hours in a hot, stuffy movie house." Let that be a lesson to you.

Of course, plenty of sleep is to be found on any list of health rules. Average at least eight hours a day—the more the better—as long as you don't sleep right through an exam. That, you will find, has rather disastrous results. Professor Cummings recommends learning to take frequent cat-naps. After all, Edison did it.

Perhaps you did not know that eating affects your studying. Be sure to eat moderately. Stuffing yourself quite often produces a drowsy feeling.

And, another thing, keep away from people with colds, and you who have colds, be considerate enough to keep away from those who are well.

Well, here's hoping that freshmen and upperclassmen alike may have healthful and hapyy mid-years.

Recreational Skiing classes are open to all upperclassmen at no cost. To date, the response has been very poor and unless the numbers pick up, it may be necessary next year, to eliminate offering skiing instruction to students without charge.

New Phi Beta Kappa Member Tells Interesting Story About Pres. Bailey

"And how did you happen to come to U. V. M.?" is probably the most frequent question asked those of us who are from out of state. Jessie Swann has an interesting story to tell in connection with her coming here to college.

When Jessie was about seven, and living in Danvers, Mass., there was a big flood in Vermont. Hearing over the radio repeated requests for help, she determined to send her savings of the past few months to the Red Cross in Burlington. She wrote a letter saying that she knew she was not sending very much but hoped that what she sent could buy something for someone her own age. She was very persistent in requesting that the recipient of the money be someone of her own age. Not long afterward, she received a letter from the late President Bailey who was then in charge of Red Cross work in Burlington. He said he thought she deserved a special letter and told her that if she were ever in Burlington he would be glad to show her around. So when during her high school years she came to visit U. V. M. she introduced herself to President Bailey and he remembered her letter. These friendly relations with Burlington and the University put a great deal in its favor when she was deciding where to go to college.

Jessie's favorite subject is Math, but she was discouraged from the idea of trying to teach it, and is majoring in English with the hope of teaching that. She believes teaching a good starting point for almost everything, and would like later to do work in educational psychology.

Jessie has plenty to do here besides study. She is a member of Sigma Gamma, W. A. A., the Press Club, the John Dewey Club, I. R. C., and Classical Club. Of the latter she is program chairman.

"Well, how does it feel to be a P Bete?" I finally asked.

"Wonderful," she replied.

"It must be," I said with awe.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

A banquet.—Information from a reliable source tells us that the Women's Administration is on the verge of announcing that smoking by the co-eds will be allowed in the dormitory and fraternity houses. If so this will be a welcome relief to girls who heretofore have had to stand on back porches or walk to Rand's for a cigarette. That the rule is as outmoded as the bow and arrow as a weapon of war is apparent, but action has not yet been taken in the matter. If at last the Women's Administration is waking up and recognizing the fact that the co-eds are human, at least in this matter, they certainly merit a bouquet.

A brickbat.—An old growl, but a legitimate one. The lack of a reading period before exams. This brings about such a situation as Bob Kenney who has four exams in the first three days and must go to classes through Saturday, preparing his regular assignments, before he can start studying for his first four exams. We know the old comeback of the administration and faculty which says, "Well, if you would do your work from day to day. . ." That is just so much tripe—the average student does not do his work from day to day, and even if he did it would take a superman to even review the work of four courses in the time given Bob (not implying whether or not Bob is a superman).

Let's have a realistic view of the situation by the faculty and administration—the students do get behind, and must have some time to prepare, unless the administration want to flunk us out—so let's have a little time, a three-day reading period at least, so we will have a chance. Granted, we all won't study those three days, but at least those who want to and have to will have the chance and no excuse for failure.

A bouquet.—To the basketball team and "Fuzzy" Evans for sending Norwich back to the riding hall. Those boys have been getting too big for their britches and it was time that somebody took a fall out of them. We trust they will remember now that nobody who wants to go to college goes to Norwich. Also congratulations to the team for breaking back into the win column so convincingly. Let's keep it up.

A brickbat.—To the student body in general for their complete lethargy in any matter requiring thought or slight activity. This applies to those who should sign up for Ariel photographs. For those who should fill out activity sheets and most of all to the whole student body which cannot work up enough energy to fill out and pass in the Popularity Poll ballots published in last week's CYNIC. A grand total of five were handed in. A fine spirit for which the student body should be warmly commended.

A brickbat.—The girls who have gone completely overboard for ski pants on figures which can't stand the strain. Don't let the "New Freedom" go to your heads too much. Don't let this deter those whose figures can stand it—that isn't a strain on anyone.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Many people have asked us who wrote the story on Butch's college career which appeared in Tuesday's CYNIC. The story was written by S. Borsarsky '44 who is enrolled in the general science course. He would appreciate any new bits of information about Butch's antics.

A parrot was sitting in the salon of a luxurious steamer watching a magician do tricks. The magician served notice that he was now going to do a trick never before accomplished. He pulled up his sleeves and then proceeded to make a few fancy motions. Just at that moment the ship's boilers blew up, demolishing the ship. About five minutes later, as the parrot came to, floating about the ocean on a piece of driftwood, he muttered, "Damn clever, damn clever."

Those Panthers

Due to the baleful influence of a case of grippe and approaching mid-years, we are inclined to view this bright celestial sphere with a somewhat jaundiced eye. But we aren't so far gone as to admit of a Catamount loss to Middlebury. The Middmen seem to have a mediocre quintet this year. Loss of their ace player a week ago doesn't help any. Vermont should find this its easiest contest since the season opened. All this presupposes that the Cats will continue playing their best brand of ball. One thing the game should show—whether or not the Cats' revival was merely a flash in the pan. We're inclined to doubt it.

Only three home games appear on the post-mid-year schedule. The Holy Cross tilt, February 6, and the St. Michael's game on February 18 should be good entertainment. The latter contest might well be the deciding tilt in the state series if both the Cats and the Michaelmen can polish off the remainder of their state games without a loss. If this does happen, they'll probably be jamming the auditorium to the rafters for a sight of the fracas.

For the present, however, we're only rooting for the Catamounts to go into mid-years fortified by a victory over the Panthers. We'll grip(p)e if they don't.

Looking Ahead

That Kake Walk Week should be a wow. The I. S. U. meet will make this annual Vermont festival a bigger event than ever. It sure is a heartening sight to see winter sports booming on the campus. No end of credit goes to the Outing Club for its fine work in this direction. It is not too much to expect that soon enough Vermont will be playing host to as many ski meets as Dartmouth and other large schools. Since this year marks the University's first attempt to sponsor a large meet, a lot depends on the degree of success it enjoys. There is no reason why it shouldn't be a success for the facilities at Mt. Mansfield are now of high order. The sponsors deserve all the breaks—here's hoping no thaws put the Indian sign on the festivities.

And now back to the quilts for us. It's a mean world, by the time we roll out of bed mid-years will have a grippe on us. (Or have you heard that one before?) Happy landings into the next semester when the tuition fees will grippe our pocketbooks. (Say, this is getting out of control!)

Women in Sports

Sophomore women for second semester are permitted to make a change in their class. All first semester classes, however, will be continued so girls may continue in their regular sports, if they wish. Some of the new classes are:

Community Recreation Leadership on Monday at 4.20. An interesting bulletin has been placed in the "Y" Room for all girls to read.

Beginner's Tap Dancing on Wednesday at 3.20.

Archery on Friday afternoon at 3.15.

Badminton or Archery on Tuesday at 5. The new members are to decide which sport they wish to spend their time at.

Golf. There are several vacancies in the golf classes given on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 5 o'clock with Mr. Dan Wilson.

Bowling on Wednesday and Thursday at 4-15.

All sophomores are asked to sign up for second semester gym this afternoon and tomorrow morning. It is very important.

Rifle Team—All girls who have signed up for rifle practice are asked to watch the bulletin board for the schedule of class times.

Sleigh Ride—W. A. A. is planning a big sleigh ride for its members on February 9. A number of sleighs have been procured, and all girls can bring their dates. The ride will last from 7 o'clock until 10, finishing at Southwick with hot drinks and food. Bobby Gallagher is in charge and tickets will be on sale at the Bookstore beginning February 2.

Intramural Skating and Skiing to Begin Feb. 1

The intra-mural winter sports season will open the afternoon of February 1, with skating races, consisting of the following events: Quarter-mile, the mile, and the one-mile relay. The following day, February 2, slalom and downhill races will be held at Underhill at 9.45 a.m. Down-mountain events will also be held at 1.00 at the Stevens Trail. It is suggested that those planning to enter the competition be punctual. Weather permitting, half-mile, one-mile and a relay race will be held at the Country Club. These events are as yet unscheduled.

Frosh To Meet Green Mountain

Fast Game is Expected From All-Star Teams

The fast stepping Vermont Frosh will find a worthy opponent this Saturday night, when they encounter a Green Mountain Junior College team at Poultney. Although Green Mountain has played only one contest, which resulted in a loss, they boast a squad of ten capable men, all of the same calibre, and who at any time may prove extremely dangerous. Their first team is composed of five former school star captains. The loss suffered came at the hands of a formidable Norwich Frosh aggregation by the score of 38 to 36.

Meanwhile the Vermont Kittens are riding on the crest of a three-game winning streak. Beaten only by Vermont Junior College by the mere margin of two points, after having led their opponents by seven points with only three minutes of playing time remaining, the Frosh added B. F. A. once again to their list of victims Wednesday.

Larry Killick has been the main cog in the Kitten's successes, but Goodrich, Orban, Mannheim, Bennet, Conti, and Didinsky to mention a few, have all contributed fine ball playing to help the Vermont cause.

Coach Sherry Fogg contemplates a very tough evening for his stalwarts in the Green Mountain engagement, and is making no prognostications.

Seventeen Men Report For New Hockey Team

Tuesday afternoon produced a good turnout of enthusiastic candidates for the informal varsity hockey team. A brisk practice spoke well for the chances of the team.

Under the able coaching of "Doc" Marvin and "Hy" Abraham, the team, as they modestly put it "looks pretty good."

Practices are Tuesday and Thursday from four to six and Saturday from one to four. All aspirants are cordially invited to come out for the team.

The candidates so far are: J. Stevens, M. Lawrence, F. Bundy, E. O'Connell, J. McGill, A. Senuta, S. Bermann, R. Lockwood, G. Babits, J. White, R. White, "J. P." Nestler, C. Shortle, J. Moore, E. Conedera, J. Duckworth, H. B. Coburn.

Frosh Score Easy Victory Over B F A In 42-19 Spree

Killick Maintains High Scoring Pace in 17-Point Evening

Led by Larry Killick, their high-scoring forward, the Vermont Frosh scored an easy victory over a crippled Bellows

LARRY KILLICK '44

Free Academy team by a 42-19 count in St. Albans, Wednesday night.

The Frosh went into an early lead and were never in any danger. Killick was easily the outstanding player with his 17 points and fine floor game. Lemnah was high man for St. Albans with seven counters.

B. F. A. was greatly weakened by loss of its three star players, Bowles, Manchester and Denault, and weathered the game with a makeshift line-up.

Intramural Hockey Starts After Exams

"The ice is fine—let's play hockey."

With this beckoning call in mind, the Intramural Council went into a huddle this week and decided that the 1941 Intramural Hockey season should be made more interesting by placing the league on an elimination basis. The reasons which prompted such a decision are the consideration of the popular demand for the rink and secondly, the uncertain Vermont winter weather which we are now trying to endure.

Immediately following mid-year exams, the hockey league will commence and games will be run off strictly according to schedule.

Archie Post informed the press that designated students will officiate, and the rules set down by the Intramural conclave will be abided by . . . or else . . . "None of that professional body-checking!" Archibald uttered vehemently.

Team managers are expected to take care of and are responsible for their respective team equipment.

"Also, let it be known," said Archie, "that the league schedule will be made up during the exam period, and all applications after that time will be rejected."

Outing Club to Run Ski Bus to Underhill Slopes

Bus to Run Every Sunday Beginning After Exams

The Outing Club will run a ski bus to Underhill every Sunday that skiing conditions are good, beginning February 2.

As the slopes of Underhill include practice slopes as well as more advanced runs, all skiers will derive benefit from the bus service.

Outing Club members will receive four-trip tickets for two dollars, and those who are not members of the Outing Club can get these transferable tickets for a dollar more. Ticket holders will have first preference for seats, but if there are any seats left on Sunday morning, individual tickets will be sold before the bus leaves.

The bus will leave the gym at 9.20 a.m. on Sunday and will return at 4.30 p.m.; this arrangement will give the skiers about five hours on the slopes. Because final reports on snow conditions are not available until Saturday morning, a notice will be posted on the Outing Club bulletin board in the Old Mill during third and fourth hours on Saturday mornings.

This year, because of the new ski tow, on which members of the Outing Club receive reduced rates, conditions at Underhill are much improved. There is the large cabin that provides a lunch counter and "juke box" as well as a warm place to eat lunches, and also Stevens' trail for more courageous skiers.

Tickets may be secured for the ski Sundays from Bob Stockwell '43, telephone 741, or from Frances Abel '42, telephone 3080. Tickets are also being sold in the Bookstore.

Catamounts Engage Middlebury Five

Cats Shooting for Second State Win

Shooting for their second victory of the state series, the University of Vermont quintet trek southward tomorrow to meet the Middlebury College Panthers in the last game before the mid-year layoff.

The "Panther-men," playing on their match-box court have been conceded by some quarters a slight advantage, but, the Cats as indicated by their performance against Norwich will prove formidable.

As yet the Middmen have failed to crash the win column, with defeats by Massachusetts State, Williams and a 30 to 27 loss to Norwich received earlier in the week and are somewhat weakened by the absence of Capt. Nick Krauzer, high scoring center, who is temporarily out by a broken index finger.

Fred Lapham, Neilhart, Adsit, Talbor and Ouimet will probably constitute the Panther line-up, while Coach Evans will start Capt. Paul Corley, the much improved Hank Beauchemin, Don Maley, Dick Healy and Frank Taylor.

Interfraternity Basketball and Bowling Competition Results

Interfraternity basketball entered into its final stages, with Kappa Sigma defeating Sigma Phi by the one-sided score of 39-9. With an extremely large pool of reserves, the Kappa Sigs left no doubt as to the outcome of the contest. Starting for the Kappa Sigs were Wiliams, Laramie, Lynch, Rice and Crossley. For replacements, Corbett, Sullivan, Pacini, Thomas, Royer, Simpson, Lee, Albert, Hennessy and Dykens constituted the Kappa Sig auxiliary teams. Sigma Phi started Blakely, Salmon, Burgess and Tucker. Hay, Wedge and Reynolds started at the half.

In a nip-and-tuck battle, A T O nosed out Sigma Nu 25-23. The game swung from one side to another, with both teams battling fiercely for every point. The Sigma Nu squad consisted of Reid, Neal, Wright, Bloomer and Sawyer. J. Reid, Foti, Tulip and Cooper were the Sigma Nu subs. A T O's quintet were composed of Bicoulis, Koladza, Dudley and McCormack, with Noyes and McCabe the replacements.

The Independents whitewashed the Faculty squad 31-11 in a clearly one-sided encounter. Smith, Kipp, Stoddard, Sysko and Urie were on the Independent line-up, while Post, Erwin, Brown, Dodd, Luydens were the Faculty cagers. Copp was the only Independent replacement, while Gershoy, Weitz and Evans were the Faculty substitutions.

The standings thus far show Kappa Sigma ahead with four victories and no defeats, and the Independents closely following with three victories and no defeats. A T O and Phi Delts have two wins, one loss, Delta Psi and the Owls one win and three defeats. S A E has three wins and one loss, while T E P and Sigma Nu both have two victories and the same number of losses. The Phi Sigs have one win to their credit and two losses, leaving Sigma Phi and the Faculty with no victories and four defeats.

In the latest of this season's intra-mural bowling contests, Kappa Sigma defeated Sigma Phi 7-0. The Kappa Sig team, composed of Swift, Simpson, Cronk, Tooles, and Collins, garnered 960 points to the 921 of Sutton, Burgess, Hay, Kempter, and Stephen of Sigma Phi.

The Kappa Sigs were defeated, however, by Sigma Nu, which bowled 1,020 points to take the match. Boyden of Sigma Nu was high man with 133 for singles and 257 for doubles. Parker, Long, Boyden, Jacob, and Brown of Sigma Nu also defeated the Phi Sigs, 7-0, with Gold, Goldblatt, Katzew, Machanic, and Rynowecer bowling for the Phi Sigs. Phi Delta Theta, represented by Pache, Ramsdell, Daniels, Foster, and Shortle, bowled 799 to lose a match, 7-0, to the Phi Sigs, who had 887.

Gallup, Roby, Davis, Boardman, and Small bowled 1,023 for Delta Psi, to take a match from Sigma Phi 7-0. Gallup of the Delts led with 137 and 248 for the singles and doubles points. The Delts also defeated the faculty team, composed of Post, Fogg, Rooney, Evans, and Weitz, 7-0.

The faculty defeated SAE 5-2, with a total of 975 to the SAE's 949. Taylor of SAE annexed his team's two points by bowling 115 and 222. Taylor, Neal, Guilbert, Utley, and Salmon bowled for SAE.

The standings thus far in intra-mural bowling show Sigma Nu leading with 40½ points, and Delta Psi following with 32. Sigma Phi is in third position with 29 points, and ATO follows with 26½, with SAE close behind with 25. The Independents follow with 23, and TEP has garnered 21⅔ points. The Kappa Sigs have 10 points, Phi Delta Theta 7, Phi Sigma Delta 6⅓, the Owls 6, and the faculty 5.

Fourteen states and the Canal zone are represented in the student body at Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C.

Eleven Skiers on Tentative Team

Candidates Ineligible For Interfrat Meets

Coach Ev Bailey who has been working steadily with his charges, has chosen a tentative team consisting of eleven men. It is the usual procedure to select ten outstanding candidates and declare them ineligible for interfraternity competition, but there is so little to chose between them that Coach Bailey picked eleven. There are eight on the "B" team, who will be able to compete in interfraternity meets. There is nothing permanent about these selections and it is highly probable that some member of the "B" squad might improve to such an extent that he will be promoted to the "A" in place of someone else.

The "A" squad, headed by Capt. Dave Collins, consists of Art Paterson, "Brud" Sutton, Ernie St. Mary, "Goody" Goodell, Bob Goss, Charlie Smith (C. P.), "Bud" Pierce, Johnny Hurst, Don Marburg, and Sabe Rising. The "B" squad consists of "Lymie" Brigham, Bob Stockwell, Bob Harrington, Gil Rood, "Bud" Hoyt, Fred Boardman, "Hank" Pache and Fred George.

It seems of some significance that one-half of the candidates are freshmen and only three are seniors, all of which should point to a promising future.

Workouts will of necessity be curtailed during mid-year examination, and practice will have to be individual.

Owing to this Coach Bailey feels that it will be quite impossible to accept an invitation to the Williams College Winter Carnival on the week-end of January 31.

The downhill team will be entered in the Vermont Downhill Championship Meet on the Nose Dive on February 2.

Final selection of the squad will be based on the time trials preparatory to the Dartmouth Winter Carnival on the week-end of February 7, which is the first team meet.

No Chapel Services During Mid-Years

"Fight the Good Fight with all Thy Might" by J. S. Monsell opened Wednesday's Chapel service. The hymn was followed by a responsive reading entitled, "Paise to God for His Goodness." Then the choir, accompanied by the Chapel orchestra, sang a selection from Judas Maccabaeus. The Rev. A. Ritchie Low of Johnson delivered a short sermon on the strength and courage that can be derived from Christian belief and faith in God. No services will be held during mid-years.

Sabres Will Sponsor Dance at Southwick

A "Whoopee" dance to celebrate the end of the coming two weeks of exams will be held at Southwick on Saturday, February 1. The Champlain Sabres are sponsoring the novel affair which they guarantee will drive away all post-mid-year blues.

Low cost, good music, and plenty of fun are promised by the committee in charge of the dance which includes G. I. Palmer '41, B. W. Hill '41 and W. M. Colehamer '41.

Further information about this novel dance will be found on the bulletin boards during the next two weeks.

How To Study

carry their ability to a very much higher level if their reading is to meet the requirements of college work and intellectual life.

"Following are some suggestions looking toward improvement of reading ability:

1. Make sure that your eyes are in good condition and that, if you need them, you have the right glasses.

2. Be sure that what you read is in a good light and that you are in a comfortable and not a strained position.

3. As far as possible do your reading and studying where you will be free from disturbing noises, interruptions, and other distractions.

4. Find out about what your rate of reading is by comparing yourself with others.

5. If you find yourself slower than your associates remind yourself constantly that you must read as rapidly as is consistent with understanding. Try to take in more at a time with the eye and, if possible, to get the meaning without pronouncing the words to yourself. This applies if you are reading for information. If you are reading for appreciation—to savor the style of an essay or to enjoy the music of a poem—it does not apply in the same way. Indeed, it may be better to read such material aloud, in which case speed is limited by a person's capacity for rapid articulation.

6. Form the habit of enlarging your vocabulary by looking up in the dictionary any words you don't know. Try relating words to each other and to words in other languages by their form or sound.

7. In reading any part of a book or article think of its relation to the whole. The table of contents, chapter headings, and paragraphs headings are an aid in this. Ask yourself what the author is trying to convey in the book as a whole, what his scheme of thought is, and how he covers the ground. Then think of the particular section in the light of these things. It is often a help to "skim" a book or article or passage, in order to get its drift (before reading it).

8. Always read with a question in mind, and expect what you read to furnish an answer which will in turn lead to further questions. If you read with this questioning attitude of mind, what you read will have more meaning, partly because of being given better attention, and partly because a better connection is formed between the new material and your own past experience. The best way to learn a thing is by relating it to something you already know. It is then built into the structure of your knowledge and becomes an active part of your equipment of ideas. If you fail to relate a new thing to knowledge you already have, it is of little practical value even if you remember it, because you cannot use it intelligently.

9. Form the habit of thinking over and talking over what you read as soon after reading as possible. When you do this you soon find out what you have failed to grasp and can return to the text and make it clear."

Vermont Schools Use Museum Safety Cards

The last in this series of museum extension articles deals with the project for Vermont schools.

This is a project which was carried on first under the supervision of Mr. Clarence G. Bailey of the museum staff, later by Mr. John Hart of the Works Progress Administration.

The units consist of sets of cards which are sent out to the schools. On the cards are mimeographed sheets and hand-colored pictures illustrating such pertinent subjects as biology, health, safety, and early housing. The pupils study and discuss the cards and finally are examined on the various topics by the teacher. This method makes the child aware of the importance of safeguarding his health and preventing accidents.

In the past year 112 separate deliveries were made, indicating the extent to which the units are used. At present this project is carried on partly with the help, in distribution, of the Tuberculosis Association, Johnson Normal School, and 4-H Clubs.

Short Engineers' Course Offered to Aid Defense

Grand Forks, N. D. (ACP).—Short-term engineering courses are being offered at the University of North Dakota as part of the nation's defense program.

Principal reason for the twelve to fifteen-week courses, according to Dean L. C. Harrington of the Engineering College, is that there will be only 16,000 engineering college graduates in June to fill 30,000 jobs. The aircraft industry alone is expected to require 22,000 engineering-trained men.

Under present plans there will be no tuition or fee charges for the federally sponsored short courses. Classes in engineering drawing, machine design and materials testing will start early this month.

Kake Walk of Vermont's 150th Year To Feature Johnny Messner's Orchestra

Masqueraders to Hear Professor Koleslaw and Popular Jeanne D'Arcy

Featuring the music of Johnny Messner and his orchestra the Annual Masquerade Ball scheduled for the evening of February 21 promises to hit an all-time high for smooth music, distinctive decorations and fun for all.

Messner's orchestra, a popular New York band, is rated for its smooth and flowing rhythm. Featured singer with the band is popular Jeanne D'Arcy. Vocals will also be handled by the versatile Mr. Messner himself, who is also by way of being one of the best clarinet players in the business. Johnny Messner's orchestra has been heard over the NBC network, at the Marine Grill of the McAlpin Hotel, New York City, and at present is playing at the Hotel Roosevelt, Miami Beach, Fla.

Chairman of the Masquerade, E. A. Guilbert '41, has announced something new, distinctive and beautiful in decorations.

As an added attraction this year the directors are going to award a prize for the best ice sculpture piece made by Vermont students.

The Masquerade which is scheduled for the first night of the Kake Walk festivities, will be held at the gym with dancing until 2.00 a.m.

Five Musical Messners

About fourteen years ago a young man named Johnny Messner was busily engaged playing in an orchestra at a New York radio station, located at the time on the roof of the McAlpin Hotel. As the fates would have it, Johnny returned to the McAlpin a few years later and three successful years of leading his own band at the hotel's famous Marine Grill.

In a short period, Johnny and his orchestra have moved along rapidly to gain a deserved place among the leaders of the profession. Taking over his brother Dick's band some five years ago, a musical group that began as the Messner Brothers Orchestra—it contained five Messner brothers at one time—Johnny went into the McAlpin in 1937 and remained for nearly four complete seasons.

Messner is a native New Yorker, born on the big town's West Side. His family is extremely musical. Johnny's own training on the clarinet and saxophone includes the completion of a course at the famed Juilliard School, one that was obtained by means of a scholarship. His legitimate musical experience was gained by playing with such noted conductors as Walter Damrosch and Frank Black. It's a far cry from the time when he traded his stamp collection for a second-hand flute before he could convince his father that

Fraternities to Submit Complete Plans for Stunts on February 6

With less than three weeks remaining until Kake Kalk week-end of February 20-23, preparations are going into their final lap. Directors Royer, Kenney, and Pye have announced rules and prizes for the mid-winter carnival.

An award of $50 will go to the winning stunt. A cup will be competed for by the Greek-letter societies and the dormitories in ice sculpture. This contest was unofficial last year, but has now become a definite part of the program.

Fraternity tea dances will preface the annual Masquerade Ball. Johnny Messner, whose recordings have become famous, is expected to be at his rhythmic best. Final plans, however, are being kept secret by the committee.

The Sesquicentennial publicity committee stresses the point that this is a very special Kake Walk, celebrating our 150th anniversary. Kake Walk scrubs are writing press releases which will be distributed to some of the smaller Vermont newspapers.

From a sports viewpoint the I. S. U. ski meet makes the Vermont festival outstanding in the North. The Ski Union meet at Underhill and in Burlington, February 21-23, is the biggest college meet of the season. It will bring more college teams to Burlington than have ever gathered here before.

The colorful and unique Walkin' fo' de Kake itself will be on Saturday night. Five selected fraternities will present stunts immediately before the walking.

The following are the rules for kake walking as released by the Kake Walk Committee:

1. Each fraternity is allowed an entry of one couple.
2. Each couple will be given two minutes of kake walking, and a warning bell will be sounded one-half minute before the time is up.

Kake walking will be judged on the following basis:

1. Carriage, position of head and shoulders, knee action, position of toes—30 points.
2. Teamwork and smoothness—30 points.
3. Grace—20 points.
4. Costumes—15 points.
5. Stunts—5 points.

Kake Walk Regulations

1. There are ten fraternities and the Independents who are eligible to have competitive stunts at Kake Walk time.

Ten Coeds Chosen For Ariel Contest

Students Will Select Most Beautiful Girls

Ariel's editors have almost come to the final stop in their beauty contest in an effort to find the four most beautiful girls on campus. The Ariel staff and campus leaders as a preliminary to this end all gave to the editor of Ariel lists of the ten girls on campus whom they considered the most beautiful. From those represented on these lists ten girls were chosen. They were photographed and when the pictures are completed, a student poll will be held to determine the four best-looking girls in school. The ten so far in the running are: Jane Allen '41, Barbara Butterfield '42, Shirley Buckingham '44, Ita Casey '44, Esther Gustafson '44, Mary Jane Hammond '41, Frances Lynch '43, Jeanne Woolley '42, Sally Rome '42 and Marjorie Witham '43. The voting will not take place for about two weeks until the pictures are ready.

The other pictures, including all junior pictures, were finished during exams, as well as the majority of group pictures. Concerning the inconvenience caused by the destruction of the negatives and the necessity of having to retake the pictures, R. B. Hunting says, "My thanks to the student body in general and to the juniors in particular for their cooperation in exam time."

The photographers will be here around Kake Walk time to cover Kake Walk, Masquerade, and exams missed. Ariel has also obtained informal pictures of the heads of most departments.

In the forthcoming issue some of the pictures will be in green as they were last year, but the others will not. Ariel's editors plan something new in the first part of the book and, in fact, hope to present an Ariel different from any before.

Newman Club Plans Social Friday Night

The Newman Club is holding its first social of the year on Friday, February 7, in the Cathedral High School Auditorium. Dancing will begin at eight o'clock. All Newmanites and their guests are cordially invited. There will be an admission charge of twenty cents.

The members of the Newman Club are again reminded that Friday, February 7, is also the general monthly Communion for the club. Masses at the Cathedral will be at six, seven and eight o'clock in the morning.

THROUGH ACTION taken by the Student Union Council on Thursday and approved by the administration, a modification of the "no smoking" rule for women students has been authorized for the second semester.

Kappa Phi Kappa Meets Tomorrow

Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa will hold the second of its open meetings Wednesday evening at 7.30 in the Education Office. President H. K. Riggs will preside. Professor Nuquist of the Political Science Department will be the guest speaker. Refreshments and a social hour will follow.

All University men who are interested in education and who are enrolled in one or more of the education courses are free to attend. The committee in charge of the evening's events is H. F. Wood '42 and A. Maltbie '41.

Alpha Gamma is the 124th chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, the national honorary education fraternity. Professor Douglass of the Education Department is one of the national vice-presidents.

Ice Sculpture Winner Will Receive Cup

It has been announced by W. I. Pye '41 that a cup will be given to the fraternity, sorority or dormitory which is adjudged to have the best snow sculptoring on display during the week-end of Kake Walk, weather permitting. The judges are yet to be announced.

Joe College Dance To Benefit British

Next Saturday's Affair Will Be for War Relief

The newly created War Relief Committee of the University will start its first active work by giving a novel Joe College dance at the University gymnasium, Saturday, February 8, at which the Catamounts will play. Originally announced as a P. O. T. C. party, the dance is now open to all students. The boys will ask the girls but the directors say that it is to be strictly a "Dutch treat" affair with each member of the couple paying a quarter, fifteen cents of which will go for war relief.

The idea is for everyone to come dressed in his most comfortable clothes —formality taboo. Prizes will be given for the best get-up. The model for ensembles should be the popular conceptions of Joe College and Betty Co-ed. For those who are definitely on the swing side, a jitterbug contest will be held. No holts barred. With the popular Catamounts providing the music the dancing should be easy.

The directors urge everyone to attend this novel dance and do his bit for war relief as well as enjoy a swell evening of entertainment. Remember fifteen cents out of every quarter goes to a worthy cause.

Health Council Will Give Dance Soon

Saturday evening, February 15, will be the night of the annual Health Council dance at Southwick.

Sarah Wilson '41, who is in charge of the dance, has announced that Red Dower's orchestra will furnish the music, and the chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. Pond.

The complete plans will be announced in a later issue of the CYNIC.

NOTICE TO BUSINESS STAFF AND SCRUBS: There will be a special meeting of all business scrubs and members of the CYNIC advertising staff Wednesday, February 5, at 1.00 p.m. in Room 1, North College.

NEWMAN CLUB Dance on February 7 in the Cathedral High School Auditorium. Admission 20c.

Vt. Writers League To Convene Soon

The League of Vermont Writers will hold a mid-winter meeting at Southwick on Saturday, February 15, opening at 10.00 a.m. and closing at 4.00 p.m.

Nine clinics for practical aid in various forms of writing will be held in connection with the meeting, conducted by experienced writers in their respective fields. A special clinic for members of sesquicentennial committees has been arranged. Other clinics include one-act play writing, pulp writing, short stories, poetry, press photography, radio skits, feature stories, and oral story telling. Among those conducting the clinics is Miss Mary B. Sullivan of the English department. The clinics, in session from 10.30 to 12.30 and from 1.30 to 3.30, will be informal and open to anyone interested to attend. Those attending are invited to bring manuscripts.

Prof. Leon W. Dean, assistant professor of English and president of the League, is in charge.

An Eye Witness Tells About Britain's War

A letter from Vermont's Czech refugee was stuck in our mailbox when we returned yesterday from a two-week tussle with those unpopular blue books. The letter is particularly important now when Congress is considering the "lend-lease" bill which Lord Halifax says is the last hope of the British—for the letter is a frank and clear picture of what war in England means. Especially significant is the letter to U. V. M. students who this week are being asked to cooperate with the newly-formed War Relief Committee who are sponsoring the "Joe College" dance on Saturday.

An eye-witness picture of this war and suggestions for means by which we at Vermont can effectivey do our part in helping Britain are included in the following interesting letter:

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

"In one of last month's CYNICS the Co-chairman of the U. V. M. War Relief Committee wrote a letter about aid to Britain. I would like to add some words to his comments, as I think that we have to do more than we are doing now in our aid.

"Before I came to the United States in April, 1940, I stayed in England for some months and during the last months of my stay there I saw the people slowly realize that they had to sacrifice in order to win this year. Sacrifies which not only meant less bread and butter, but sacrifices which meant death and destructnon. They found out very soon that it was not just a struggle for some colonies in Africa or India but a battle of two systems of thought and that a victor for Germany would impede the progress in science, in philosophy, art, and democracy. They know that half of them might perish but that the remnants of the nation would rise again, free men in a free world.

"The flames of the burning houses in England are not only signs of destruction, they are torches shining to America which show that freedom still prevails in one corner of Europe; however, these flames are more significant—they ask for help. Victory cannot be won without the help of the United States.

"We have to realize—and realize quickly—that England is fighting our war, too, and that our help can only be effective if it will be real help and not just some bundles. Of course, we in Vermont, will not be able to contribute too much toward the sums needed; however, we can show the colleges, universities, and the whole people of the United States that we are willing to make sacrifices for a great cause.

"How about putting big boxes in the University buildings with the call for '1 cent every day for Britain'? (It would mean $14 a day.)

"How about staying at home one Saturday evening every two months and giving the money saved to Britain?

"How about holding a dance—the proceeds of which would go to the British Relief Fund?

"I am sure that there are thousands of other ways yet. However, many students will laugh at proposals that would interfere with their personal enjoyment. Sit down and realize what this war is being fought for—then I am sure you will cooperate.

"Remember that in a democracy everyone is responsible for what happens. Europe is looking today at every one of you and is praying that you will help to brighten up the sky again—a sky now filled with bombs and bullets—messengers of death.

"Remember, you are responsible." JAKOB KATZ '44.

Student Opinion

By Student Opinion Surveys

Austin, Texas, January.—Parents who worry about their college sons and daughters not getting enough sleep will find comfort in the figures compiled in this study of Student Opinion Surveys of America. Collegians who say they sleep less than seven hours each night constitute only one-fifth of the national student body. The other four-fifths get at least seven hours, and of the total 7 percent say they spend nine or more hours under the covers.

Turning from the field of attitude measurements, the Surveys through its national polling machinery has asked a sampling of all types of students, "How many hours a night do you usually sleep?"

It was found that women, by their own admission, sleep more than do men. Lowerclassmen (freshmen and sophomores) spend more time in bed than do upperclassmen (juniors, seniors, and graduates).

Note in the following breakdown how the percentages tend to increase among the longer sleeping periods for women, while they tend to decrease in the column for men:

Sleep per night	All	Men	Women
5 or less hours...	4	4	3
6 hours	17	19	15
7 hours	37	38	35
8 hours	33	31	36
9 hours	7	6	10
10 or more	2	2	1

The table below shows how added activity or longer study on the schedules of upperclassmen cut down sleep. But the survey revealed no evidence that during the normal college day there is any wholesale studying in the "wee small hours." The majority of students, the cross-sortings bring to light, sleep seven or eight hours daily.

Sleep per night	Lower-classmen	Upper-classmen
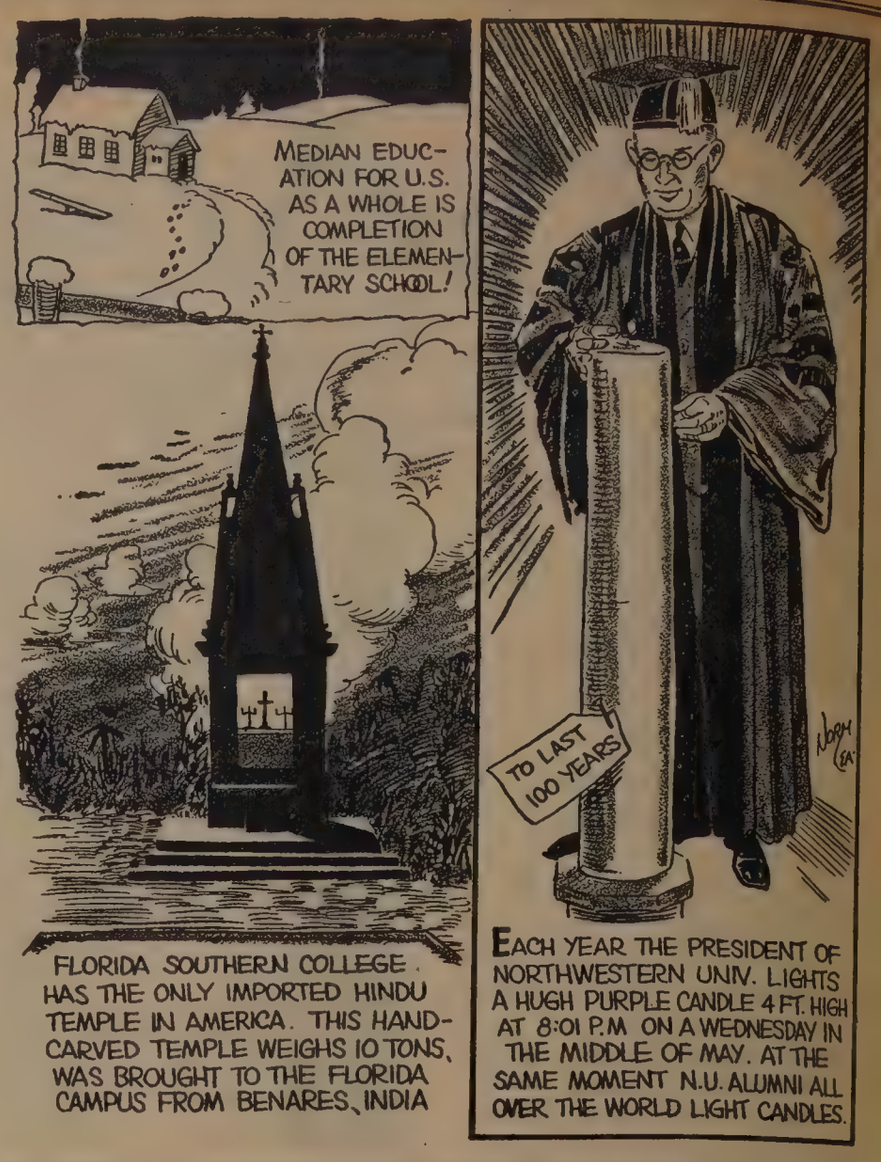
5 or less hours...	4	5
6 hours	16	19
7 hours	34	41
8 hours	35	30
9 hours	9	5
10 or more	2	1

Youth Congress Opposes Warfare

American youth from factory and field, from campus and community, assembled at Madison, Wis., on December 27 to 30, for the Fourth Annual Youth Anti-war Congress, sponsored by the Youth Committee Against War, affiliate of the Keep America Out of War Congress.

Confronted by the Second World War, which has engulfed the youth of many lands, the young people of America had the opportunity to gather at the Anti-war Congress to work out a dynamic program which will be an answer to threatening war and dictatorship and reaffirmation of their belief in democracy and their opposition to war.



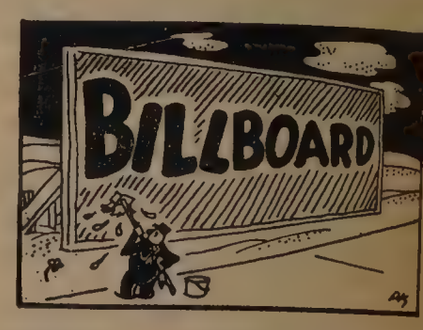
In the call to the congress, this challenge is issued to young people everywhere in America.

"To meet to help turn the tidal wave of war and dictatorship, to ally ourselves with the forces that usually can build and defend democracy, the Youth Committee Against War calls upon all young people who are opposed to America's participation in the war and who are against totalitarianism all over the world to meet together during this Christmas season of 1940.

"No greater responsibility or higher duty can call us together. We dare spare no efforts to attend and to make this congress an unmistakable demonstration of our determination to extend our liberties, to repeal conscription, to improve our living standards, and to keep America out of war."

The congress schedule includes commission sessions with eminent resource leaders on the following questions: Conscription, "national unity," and democratic rights, democracy, armaments and foreign policy, internationalism, and making democracy work. On Saturday evening, a special program entitled, "Living Voices," was presented, and on Sunday evening a mass meeting was held. Throughout the conference there was ample opportunity for recreation and informal gatherings.

Among the prominent sponsors of the congress were Warren K. Billings, famous anti-war labor prisoner, Duerr Allen, editor of North Frontier News Service; Lawrence Rogin, educational director, American Federation of Hosiery Workers; Dr. Charles F. Boss, Jr., executive secretary of the Methodist Church's World Peace Commission; Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, writer and columnist; Norman Thomas, national chairman of the Socialist party; and A. J. Muste, executive secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation.



Why Don't We Use The Carnegie Room

The newshound was snooping around the Music Building the other day looking for something to tell you about when he suddenly decided to stop in at the Carnegie Room and do a little reading to get a background for Saturday's opera broadcast. As he went in the student supervisor very courteously asked him to sign his name in the register and what he would like to listen to. Replying that he wished only to do some reading from the Carnegie Library, he opened the register. To his amazement, here was his story. There were entirely too few names listed, on the average about five a day. "Now," he thought, "something ought to be done about this." But what? Here is a large investment in the world's greatest music and books on music; scores to follow, if you like, while listening, student supervisors to play the records for you, and a very attractve room with easy chairs and pretty view out the window. But so few are using it. A further look at the directory showed who came to the room. The snooper noticed names from all classes and from all the colleges of the University; names of Mortar Board and Boulder members, basketball players, and many of the fraternities and sororities. One type of name in particular was missing—faculty.

Now what the snooper wants to know is—what is the sense of having a room which could be used for other purposes with a huge investment placed there and supervisors keeping it open if its not going to be used. America today has as its challenge to keep the culture of the world alive. Won't you do your part?

This one is told on a Middlebury prof. No one from Vermont would do it.

This prof yearly recreates his "regular" pun in this manner: After passing out papers for his final examination he sits back and slyly waits for some nervous co-ed to touch a puff to her nose. Then, all haughtiness, he arises, bends an accusing finger, and dryly remarks: "Young lady, this is not a make-up examination!"

After the Battle

With the blitzkrieg over, the victims counted and things back to normal again, we're back at the old desk again, staring into the inkwell for ideas. Somewhere way back in the dim past, we know people were playing some kind of a game called basketball but such a blank interlude has occurred since then that it is rather hard to think so far back. Ah mid-years—swift as a thunderbolt and mind-numbing as opium—"a plague on thee." (Shakespeare—"That Ham Hamlet.")

Since we can't remember the past, let's have a look at the future. Holy Cross comes here Thursday night. The Catamounts will have to jump right back into harness after a tussle with the books. According to all reports Holy Cross doesn't boast a world-beating quintet. In fact many sources have them labled as inexperienced. But it wouldn't do to take them too lightly.

New Deal

Of course, the Cats stopped short at mid-years with a decisive win over Middlebury. In case you didn't see the papers at the time, Bob Doherty with twenty points was the big gun in the Catamounts offense. But Thursday night the Cats will probably have a full evening. Getting back on the old merry-go-round is a plenty hard job. One thing we definitely would like to see is some more of that fancy playing used against Norwich and Middlebury. Shifting to a less intricate offense and the use of a man-for-man style seems to have worked well. With state title battles in the offing it ought to keep clicking. We hardly think the Cats are in any mood for their former habit of dropping games.

Rumour Department

The way the administration has been economizing lately, some people are beginning to wonder whether or not the baseball trip will be shortened this spring. Or is that too far away to worry about?

Dean Swift Tells Why Freshmen Flunk Out

Seated quietly at his desk I found Dean Swift very cordial to an interviewer, although very pressed for time. Dean Swift is a very affable and dignified gentleman and he has a good sense of humor. He did not relish the thought, however, of having his everyday life interests stressed upon, but assented to helping the freshman reporter by answering her more informative questions.

Dean Swift revealed that in a great number of cases the average high school preparation was not sufficient and adequate enough for the average pupil entering Vermont. That is only partly the reason, however, that there is such a large number of failures with freshmen at the end of the first semester. Dean Swift believes that perhaps it is a deficiency in character training. High school students have not been made to do work of high enough quality to train them to know how to do a hard task well and how to express a lesson properly.

Dean Elijah Swift has been dean of the College of Arts and Sciences since 1931, although he has been in the Dean's Office for twenty-two years.

Dave Collins---Ski Team Captain, Phi Bete, Chemist

Dave Collins of Burlington, who captains the University of Vermont ski team this year, seems to tackle by preference the tough jobs, whether he is pursuing his favorite sport, skiing, or what he hopes will be his life work—chemistry. Dave, who is a Phi Beta Kappa man, takes the chemistry course at the University of Vermont, and his ambition is to be a research chemist. He expects to put in a year's graduate study in the chemistry field after he graduates from the University of Vermont next June. He will graduate with scholastic honors as well as with a praiseworthy record in ski competition.

DAVE "RIP" COLLINS

As captain of the Vermont ski team, with two years' experience skiing down the snowy slopes of Vermont and other sections of New England in intercollegiate competition, his specialty is cross-country racing. But he's a four-event man and also takes part in downhill, slalom and jumping contests. It's a well-known fact that cross-country is not a sissy sport, and Dave is willing to admit that cross-country skiing is no snap, either. Cross-country ski courses may be eight or nine miles in length, which is about the distance Dave expects will be set up for the Intercollegiate Ski Union Meet, most important collegiate ski event in the East this winter, to be held in Burlington and Underhill with the University of Vermont, as host to the top ski outfits of Eastern United States colleges, February 20-22. But even the shorter five-mile course charted by the University of Vermont last winter, when Dave won the Vermont Intercollegiate Meet, cross-country division, at Burlington, is strenuous to cover ahead of an eager pack of young skiers all straining to be first.

Dave also won the cross-country race at last year's Waterbury Carnival.

Dave predicts a better University of Vermont ski team next year and in other years to come. He refused to venture a prophecy as to this year's team's chances, but was ready to forecast a bright future for the present ski squad in another year or two. The squad is large and made up predominantly of sophomores and freshmen, several of them schoolboy skiers of considerable reputation. This year will probably give these younger skiers the experience they need, and their number should provide a large and steadily improving nucleus for future Vermont ski outfits.

Dave and the other ski candidates have been working out since before snow fell last fall. They started cross-country running about November 1, interspersing this conditioning practice with games of touch football, an innovation introduced by the new ski coach, Ev Bailey, who had been until this year a ski team regular. The boys prefer touch football to straight running for their conditioning practice, Dave said, adding that it was much more interesting for the would-be skiers. Dave likes most sports, but he has time for only skiing now. He is a member of the Outing Club Council, University organization especially interested in furthering winter sports.

U. V. M. Represented At Slalom Meets

Vermont "A" Team Attends Pico Peak Meet

Sunday, January 26, was a big day for the skiers. A U. V. M. team consisting of Dave Collins of Burlington and Floyd Rising of White River Junction, plus several others, represented the University of Vermont at the Vermont Slalom Championships at the Mt. Pico ski area in Rutland. Coach "Ev" Bailey was also present.

University of Vermont ski coach Everett Bailey named eleven men to the "A" squad for the men's ski team, just before the onslaught of mid-years. The squad, headed by Capt. Dave Collins of Burlington, is made up of the following men: Arthur Paterson, Barre; "Brud" Sutton, Burlington; Ernie St. Mary, Springfield; "Goody" Goodell, Wells River; "Bob" Goss, Wilder; C. P. Smith 3rd, Burlington; Franklin Pierce, Montpelier; Johnny Hurst, Pennsburg, Pa.; Don Marburg, Montclair, N. J.; and "Sabe" Rising, White River Junction. Eight more skiers make up the "B" squad, and positions may change if these improve their performance, or "A" skiers slow down, states Coach Bailey.

Only three of the skiers are seniors; that makes it a young squad this year, and promises well for next year, judging by the number of freshmen.

The first competition after the halt of activities brought on by mid-years was the Vermont Downhill Championship Meet on the Nose Dive at Stowe, which was February 2. The University downhill team was entered in this.

The final squad, which will compete in the important meets of the winter, especially the big Intercollegiate Ski Union event February 20-22, at which the University of Vermont will be host to the top ski teams of the Eastern United States, will be chosen at time trials preparatory to the Dartmouth Winter Carnival on the week-end of February 7-8 the first meet in which the whole University of Vermont will be engaged.

Badminton

With the passing of mid-years into the background, once again we turn our attention to the sport pages—and here we find an item reading thus:

Badminton Club starts Tuesday, February 11 and all women on campus are invited to attend. The courts will be ready at 7.15 and there will be partners for all.

If you wish to become a member of W. A. A., attend three-fourths of the Badminton Club meetings.

Within the next couple of weeks an exhibition match is to be scheduled and everyone is invited to come to Southwick and witness these for they will be well worth your while. Watch the CYNIC and bulletin boards for further announcements.

Plans have been started for a mixed tournament soon. The boys who came to Southwick last year and the girls who participated will well remember the fun shared by everyone.

Basketball

The basketball tournament is beginning immediately, and it is hoped that the games will be played off without delay. The schedule for this week is: Tuesday, Grassmount and Roberts' vs. Robinson. Thursday, Allen House vs. Sanders Hall.

All girls are invited to come to the gym on Tuesday and Thursday at 4.15 to play basketball and practice. This time is not restricted to club members.

Bowling

The following girls were high scorers in first semester bowling: Jane Wray, 88; Theresa Coderre, 84.4; Temaly Yett, 81; Joyce Bone, 79; Hortense Leduc, 79; Roxanna Wilmoth, 79; Faye Lipman, 78; Patty Page 78.

Independent men and women at the University of Denver stage a "penny carnival" to finance their activities.

Vermont Engages Holy Cross Raiders In Thursday Game

After Two Week Layoff Red Raiders First Foe Since Midd. Victory

Having ridden the crest of a two-week exam deluge, the U. V. M. cagers are limbering up their cramped muscles and tendons for the tussle with the Purple Crusaders of Holy Cross, whose record this season has been none too impressive.

Vermont, suddenly coming to life after a very slow start, will be gunning for its third consecutive victory, augmenting to the list of recently vanquished foes, Norwich and Middlebury. The Cats' offensive and defensive prowess which was clearly manifested in these two encounters adds to the belief that they should not have too much trouble in bowling the Crusaders over.

Hank Beauchemin, now playing more like his 1938-39 brand of ball, is expected to give a good account of himself in his center berth.

Ed Doherty, who came through with banners aflying in the Middlebury tilt, comprises another factor to be considered seriously by Coach Ed Krause's Purplemen.

Capt. Paul Corley, stellar forward, in all probability will hammer the strings to his best advantage.

Ed Krause will bring to Burlington the high-scoring guard, Capt. Vin Holland, Bill Connally, also strong scoring threat, Chet Gustowski, the idol of Worcester, Bones Hamilton, and the formidable guard, Joe Ruggiero.

The Cross reserve list includes apt basketeers as Jim Scondras, three-letter man, Ed Swan and Tom Murphy.

The probable line-ups will be:

HOLY CROSS	VERMONT
Bill Connally, f.	f., Paul Corley
Chet Gustowski, f.	f., Ace Healy
Bones Hamilton, c.	c., Hank Beauchemin
Vin Holland, g.	g., Frankie Taylor
Joe Ruggiero, g.	g., Don Maley

Calamity was the keynote of Coach Larry Gardner's 1931 baseball hopes when its captain-elect Edward L. "Pie" Traynor, was fatally injured in an automobile accident during Christmas vacation. His untimely death will leave gaping vacancy in the infield, where "Pie" has performed two years previously.

The initial match of the season with Colgate having been called off due to poor ice conditions, Coach Hy Abraham's latest edition of puck chasers have been working very hard in preparation for their clash with the Hamilton sextet on the New Yorkers' rink on Wednesday. The hopes of a successful season have been considerably dimmed with the announcement that "Bob" Hendrick, a veteran goalie of three years, will not be available until after mid-year exams.

Rev. J. G. Gilkey Speaker at Vespers

Springfield Pastor Spoke Wednesday

The vesper speaker at the Ira Allen Chapel last Sunday was the Rev. James Gordon Gilkey, pastor of the South Congregational Church in Springfield, Mass. He is the author of a number of inspirational religious books, has received honorary degrees from several educational institutions, and has had a great deal of experience in almost every field of religion.

The Rev. Mr. Gilkey started his church career as assistant minister at the Bryn Mawr, Pa., church, which position he held from 1916 to 1917. After this he became pastor of the South Church in Springfield, Mass., which duty he still discharges. He was professor of Biblical literature at Amherst College from 1923-30, and is now a trustee and professor of religion at the International Y. M. C. A. College in Springfield. He also directs an elaborate program of institutional church work, while carrying on these various activities.

His books on religion are numerous. Among them are: "A Faith for the New Generation," "Secrets of Effective Living," "Solving Life's Everyday Problems," "Meeting the Challenge of Modern Doubt," "Managing One's Self," "What Can We Believe?" "You Can Master Life," and "Getting Help from Religion."

The Rev. Mr. Gilkey was born in Watertown, Mass., and was graduated from Harvard, later taking his Master of Arts there. After study at the Universities of Berlin and Marburg, he took his Bachelor of Divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary. He has received honorary degrees from Colgate, Colby, the University of Vermont, American International College, and Marietta College.

Prof. Bennett to Direct Concert

After the excitement of Kake Walk has subsided and everyone has resumed his natural mode of life, the Eastern concert will take the center of the stage. This annual event, sponsored by the department of music, will be presented on Sunday, March 23, in the chapel.

Rehearsals have been under way now for several weeks on the well-known oratorio by Handel, "Judas Maccabaeus." A hundred-voice chorus, the University choir assisted by members of the glee clubs, and interested faculty, students and townspeople, accompanied by the chapel orchestra will be under the direction of Professor Howard Bennett. Mr. Michael Anselmo will be concert master and Miss Miriam Marston, organist.

For the benefit of those who are singing in the chorus, it is announced that there will be no more breaks in the Thursday evening rehearsals between now and the concert.

Champaign, Ill.—(ACP)—Two new courses in transportation are being offered this year for the first time by the college of engineering at the University of Illinois.

They deal with the historical development of all forms of transportation in the United States, together with present and future problems of these agencies.

The history and development of highways, waterways, railroads and airways form the underlying basis of the courses. The services, organization and interrelations of transportation lines with present-day finances and ownership also are considered.

Seismographic Instruments on Display at Fleming Museum

Fleming Museum has arranged a special display in the entrance hall which attempts to explain the operation of the seismograph, or earthquake-recording instrument, which is located in an underground vault east of the museum. The frequency of earthquakes in the past two months has stimulated an interest in the whys and wherefores of earthquakes.

The exhibit is arranged in two cases. The first is a photograph of a seismograph, one of two Milne-Shaw components at the University, with an enlarged diagram of the instrument and a detailed explanation of the essential points in its operation. A cord, fastened to the top of a tower-like brass framework holds up a steel boom, whose needle-like end rests in a depression in the framework under the tower. Weights are attached to the boom, giving it sensitivity. Thus the slightest disturbance will cause the boom to swing. Magnets help bring the boom to rest after the disturbance has ceased. Connected very delicately to the boom is a concave mirror. A small beam of light shines from a bulb into this mirror, and from there is reflected to a cylinder on which has been rolled a piece of sensitive photographic paper on which the record is made. This cylinder continuously revolves, making one revolution every hour. At the same time it moves along a track from left to right about a half inch every hour. This produces the seismogram, which, when unrolled and developed shows a series of nearly parallel lines crossing the record horizontally. A flag electrically controlled by a master clock cuts out the light from the bulb for a few seconds every minute and for a slightly longer time every hour, causing the breaks in the lines on the seismogram indicating time.

In the second case is displayed a seismogram, or record sheet, upon which is recorded an earthquake which took place in the Celebees Sea, south of the Philippine Islands, back in 1936. Under ordinary conditions when the earth's crust is not being disturbed, the beam of light exposes only a very slightly oscillating line on the moving paper. When an earthquake is occurring, however, the sensitive beam is disturbed, resulting in a very zigzag line on the paper. Where the recording of the earthquake begins and ends can be clearly seen on the seismogram displayed in the museum.

When an earthquake is recorded by the museum seismograph, Professor Jacobs, head of the geology department and state geologist, sends the record to the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, which is a part of the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C. Here the record is studied by expert seismologists and the records received from three or more different seismograph stations are recorded, and in this way the center of the quake, the time of its origin, its duration, and roughly its intensity may be determined. When an earthquake occurs here, Professor Jacobs is not able to give out much information about the quake until he has received the calculations from the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Kake Walk Rules

2. The ten fraternities and Independents are required to submit a complete plot in detail together with a complete statement of all proposed properties and lighting with an explanation of their use to a committee composed of three judges on or before February 6 at 12.00 o'clock noon. No changes in the original stunt as written will be allowed without the approval of the committee, nor will any fraternity be eligible to compete who has not submitted their plot in detail as stated above.

3. Six stunts will be chosen from the detailed plots submitted not later than Saturday, February 8.

4. One fraternity will be eliminated from the six selected at a dress rehearsal with all properties and lighting in effect on Thursday, February 13. The five remaining fraternities will be the final entrants for Kake Walk on Saturday evening, February 22.

5. The six fraternities originally selected will be reimbursed up to an amount of $30 for expense of properties and any other expense incident to the perfection of the stunt. Payment will be made only for actual expense as established by receipted vouchers.

6. The fraternity or group having the winning stunt will receive an additional prize of $50.

"I certainly cut up monkey shines that time," exulted the veterinary student, as he finished hacking at the ape's eyes.

"I'll pass the bar after this," expostulated the law student while he signed the temperance pledge.

"I'm taking only evening courses," rasped the student working the night-shift in the restaurant as he picked up a tray.

Dr. Dam Addresses Osler Society

The Osler Clinical Society of the College of Medicine listened to a discussion of the newly discovered vitamin K, on the evening of February 3. Dr. Henrik Dam, the Danish biochemist who made the discovery of the newest of the vitamin family, gave a survey of present knowledge of the new vitamin. Vitamin K plays an important part in the clotting of blood. Absence of this vitamin is thought to be directly associated with the cause of hemorrhagic diseases. Although that has not been proved, the vitamin has proved of use in preventing and arresting hemorrhage in jaundiced individuals.

Doctor Dam was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, and graduated from the Copenhagen Institute of Technology. He took his Ph.D. from the University of Copenhagen and studied in Austria, Germany and Switzerland. Doctor Dam had received several grants from the Rockefeller Foundation to support his research. He is now on leave of absence from the University of Copenhagen, where he is associate professor in the Biochemical Institute.

Successful "Whoopee" Dance Held Saturday

The Champlain Sabers held a "Whoopee" dance at Southwick last Saturday night to drive away the general fog brought on by exams. The ballroom was jammed from wall to wall by those who seemed to think they were in need of having the fog cleared. Not two, but four stag lines made up of both males and females helped fill the room.

Music was supplied by a recording machine, aided by two amplifiers.

Co-ed: The light of love is in my eyes, darling.

Sandy: Then now's the time to save on electricity.

English Dept. Lists New Type of Book

"How To Read A Book" Now Required Reading

Something new in requirement readings for junior readers in English 26 in this book by Mortimer J. Adler put in to contrast with "Sesame Lilies" by John Ruskin of an earlier period. By next spring, when exam time comes, course enrollees will have used or neglected many of the points on how ideally to read a book.

Knowing how to read a book students impatiently begin selections from the six remaining groups for spring comes early. Even novels, ancient and modern, for contrast are included besides groups of essays, poetry, history, biography, drama and verses from the Bible. Where else would we find such a well-prepared conglomeration of literary matter exhibited to meet our interests? Each selection consists of two works, well planned to have contrasting elements in style, form, point of view and thought with the life of the people featured in the stories. The people's thoughts are conditioned by the contemporary society of the author.

So here's an opportunity to read for enjoyment as well as information. Reading is an intellectual and emotional entertainment. Remember, reading is supposed to make better "social creatures" of us.

U. V. M. Students to Direct Glee Clubs In Concert Feb. 11

University Orchestra to Present Entire Symphony Michael Anselmo, Soloist

Have you often wondered what the students in the Music Department learn? Do you like to see people of your own acquaintance performing in public? Next Tuesday evening, February 11, at 8.15, in Southwick, you will have your opportunity. Assisted by the Glee Clubs, under the baton of three music students, the University Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis will present a free concert to the public.

The main feature of the program will be the presentation of an entire symphony; this is the first time a complete symphony has been presented on the campus. When one thinks of Haydn, he nearly always thinks of joyousness and laughter, and childish pranks in music. The orchestra will play the Haydn Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Soloist of the concert will be Mr. Michael Anselmo whose concert last fall brought much deserved favorable criticism. It is truly delightful to hear Mr. Anselmo play; accompanied by the orchestra he will be heard in a number by Saint-Saëns.

The three conductors of the glee clubs will be Paul Poulin '41, Louis Pichierri '41 and Eleanor Lewis '41, all students in Mr. Pappoutsakis' class in orchestration and conducting. Mr. Poulin and Mr. Pichierri are both well known on the campus. Miss Lewis, a graduate of Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia, is doing special work here this year.

The orchestra is comprised of twenty members: Violins, Mr. Michael Anselmo, concert master, Hiram Bevins '41, Sarah Bingham '41, Ruth Cooley '43, Gerald Haines '42, Nellie Herrmann '44, Mary Lessor '43, Alison Ryan '44, Rosemary Thayer '44, and Effie Winn Sp.; viola, Dorothy Mosley '42; violoncellos, John Goss '43, Robert Goss '44, Margaret Wishart '43; flutes, Jean Vogler '44, Mary Davis '43; clarinets, Saul Boyarsky '44, John Thayer '43, Med.; trombones, Ernest Rockwell '44, Oliver Swift '43.

The Women's Glee Club is made up of twenty-three first sopranos, twenty-one second sopranos, sixteen first altos, and five second altos. The Men's Glee Club consists of five first tenors, seven second tenors, six first basses, and eight second basses.

Independents to Hold Dance Feb. 10

The Vermont Independents at their meeting on Monday evening laid final plans for the monthly meeting with the Women's Independents at Southwick to be held Monday evening, February 10. The Men's Independents will meet in the South Lounge at 7.00, the Women's Independents in North Lounge.

At 7.30 the groups will join in the social hall for an evening of fun. There will be dancing, polkas, and square dances during the evening. Open to all Independents on the campus, this party promises to be a big time for all. The committee in charge, F. H. Webster '42, J. N. Dana '44 and K. W. Calkins '44, promises fun for everyone—and eats!

The fun will end at 10.00; Prof. and Mrs. Rowell will chaperone. It is emphasized that all Independent men and women on campus are invited whether they have had any previous connections with the organization.

Joe College Dance To Aid War Relief

Prizes Offered For Best Costumes

Everyone out to the Joe College benefit dance Saturday night, February 8, at the gym!

This novel dance replaces the P. O. T. C. party which was originally planned, and it is the first event sponsored by the new War Relief Committee of the University. Even though the boys will ask the girls, it is to be strictly a "Dutch treat" affair with each member of the couple paying a quarter, fifteen cents of which will go for war relief.

The Catamounts will provide the rhythm and everyone must come decked in his or her idea of Joe College and Betty Co-ed. There will be prizes for the most original costume and a jitterbug contest for those who really want to swing it.

Dean Simpson, Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Marvin, and Mr. George L. Millikan will chaperone the informal "Joe College" dance which will be the first of its kind to be staged on the U. V. M. campus.

Everyone who attends will not only have a grand evening of entertainment but will also be doing his bit for the war relief—fifteen cents out of every quarter will go to a worthy cause.

Professor Nuquist Speaks on China

Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, national honorary education fraternity, met in an open meeting Wednesday evening in the education office. There were twenty-three members and guests present.

H. K. Riggs opened the meeting and explained the aims and ideals of the fraternity. Professor Douglass described the organization of the Vermont Chapter and pointed out the significance of that chapter on the Vermont campus. Since its organization in 1926 every fraternity and every men's honorary society has been represented in Alpha Gamma Chapter, he said.

R. O. Slack '41 introduced the speaker of the evening, Prof. A. E. Nuquist of the political science department. Professor Nuquist's vivid description of life in China—years which he spent as a teacher of English there, following his graduation from college—will long be remembered by those present.

The meeting closed with refreshments and a social hour. H. F. Wood '42 and A. Maltbie '41 were in charge of the evening's program.

Collegium to Hold Racial Discussion

The Collegium meeting Sunday evening will be in the form of a racial discussion, led by three members of the group. The discussion will be concerned mainly with the Negro, Hebrew, and Oriental, and their part in our American Christian life.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting. Everyone is cordially invited.

Jean Young '42 Hurt In Skiing Accident

While skiing on the Underhill practice slope last week, Jean Young '42 struck an icy spot and fell, suffering a serious fractured vertebra.

Miss Young, a Tri-Delt, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Young of Elmhurst, L. I., N. Y.

Immediately after her accident, Jean was brought to the road on a Ski Patrol toboggan and from there rushed to the Mary Fletcher Hospital in a Burlington ambulance.

Dr. Albert G. Mackay, Burlington physician, following examination, said that her condition was not too critical.

At press time, we were informed that Jean Young was resting comfortably and that she is slowly recovering.

V. C. A. Conference To Be Campus-wide

Religious Problems To Be Discussed Feb. 14-16

Under the direction of A. F. Amee '43 the Vermont Christian Association will sponsor a campus-wide religious conference for all denominations next weekend, February 14, 15 and 16. The purpose of this conference is to develop a spirit and ideals which are worthy of a group of Christian students among the members of this University.
